At $150, from $300—Natural Hudson Bay sable collarette; 12 inches deep.

Fur Scarfs—

At $3, from $5 and $6.50—Alaska sable cluster scarfs, trimmed with 8 tails.
At $3.50, from $6—Near-seal cluster scarfs, trimmed with tails.
At $7.50, from $12.50—Sable dyed imitation lynx cluster scarfs.
At $7.50, from $15—Round boas of Manchuria bear; extra full.
At $10, from $20—Sable fox boas, with two large brush tails.
At 12.50, from $17.50—Stone marten cluster scarfs, trimmed with wolverine tails.
At $25, from $35 and $50—Dyed blue fox and natural lynx boas.

CAPES and Jackets

This offering includes our finest cloth capes from Paris—the garments that we are always proud to show and well-dressed women to possess. They are not only beautiful, but the styles are exclusive. They are suitable for street or evening wear; some being in delicate pastel colorings; others in blue, brown and black.

Prices have been $42 to $75; to-day marked at

$28 to $50

The other special offerings of the day are

$75 to $100 Velour Jackets at $40 and $60
$18 to $43 Cloth Jackets at $10 to $25

All stylish, handsomely made garments, that will be claimed quickly at to-day's prices.

Second floor, Broadway.

Girls' COATS

Summary dismissal of the entire stock. Their term is ended here. There's a long period of usefulness for them still, in other hands. And there are many girls of 6 to 16 years that will gladly welcome these handsome, stylish garments.

They're Half Price Now

All the usual materials are represented. All the various lengths. All the best shades. $7.50 for the $15 coats. $10 for those that sold at $20. And $15 for all the high grade coats that were low priced until to-day at $30.

Second floor, Ninth street.

Flannel WAISTS

This is a collection of odd lots of twelve styles of Flannel Waists, in solid colors, plaited, corded, or trimmed with braid. Prices were $1.50 to $2.25. All marked to-day at

$1 each

All sizes in the lot, but not complete in any one style.

Also a small lot of Eiderdown Dressing Sacques, in solid colors—mostly in red, a few gray; fitted back, full front; crocheted edge of zephyr; ribbon at neck; were 50c; now

35c each

Second floor.

The Muslin UNDERWEAR

Home-done neatness, refined, tasteful decoration; sizes cut as generously as if you had made them yourself. Variety broader than any other store's regular stock. Prices a quarter to a third below fair values in good stores.

These are a few of the reasons for buying now. There are many others. Perhaps your own reason is still better.

Night Gowns—

75c—Of muslin; square neck; yoke of fine plaits; trimmed with insertion and neat embroidery.
$1—Of cambric; yoke of cluster of plaits; square neck, front; high back trimmed with torchon lace, insertion and ribbon.
$1.25—Of cambric; square neck; yoke of fine plaits and insertion; neck and sleeves trimmed with neat embroidery.
Others at 38c to $9.

Petticoats—

85c—Of muslin; deep cambric ruffle trimmed with embroidery ruffle.
$1—Of cambric; deep ruffle of lawn hemstitched plaits; plain hem.
$1.25—Of muslin; deep ruffle of cambric trimmed with torchon lace and 2 rows of insertions. Others at 35c to $15.

Chemises—

25c—Of cambric; round neck trimmed with lace.
35c—Of cambric; round neck trimmed with hemstitched lawn ruffle and insertion.
50c—Of cambric; round neck trimmed with neat embroidery and cambric ruffle on skirt.
Others up to $4.50.

Drawers—

18c—Of muslin, with hemstitched cambric ruffle.
25c—Of muslin, with cambric ruffle and plaits.
30c—Of cambric, with cambric ruffle trimmed with torchon lace.
Others at 15c to $4.50.

Second floor.

Among the Books

Still better bargains. The reduced prices on the remaining "hurt" books have again been reduced. Now they're next door to gifts. Mostly 10c, 15c, 20c and 25c.

Then there's the Library of Standard Reading, that's just been made a part of this important book event. These books are all neatly bound in cloth, and have gold tops. Size 5½x7½ in. Price, 15c a vol.; regularly 25c. Here are some of them:

Scarlet Letter	George Washington, Life of
Twice-told Tales	Mosses from an Old Manse
Abraham Lincoln, Life of	Plain Tales
Sign of the Four	Haunted Chamber
Study in Scarlet	Her Second Love
Three Men in a Boat	Makers of Florence
Tillyloss Scandal	Makers of Venice
Vicar of Wakefield	My Lady Nicotine
White Company	Old Curiosity Shop
Alice	Our Mutual Friend
Beyond the City	Pickwick Papers
Bleak House	Rienzi
Bracebridge Hall	Royal Edinburgh
Caxtons	Phantom Rickshaw
Crown of Wild Olives	Wing and Wing
Engene Aram	Round the World
Great Expectations	in 80 Days.

Book Store, Ninth street.

Good choosing, too, in the 16mo class. They're 10c.

Book Store, Ninth street.

Sale of TROUSERS And Overcoats

It's just about time for new Trousers, isn't it? And that is all that many winter suits need to make them smart and snappy again.

Time, of course, with so little to pay as this sale offers.

Three hundred all-wool Trousers (our guarantee for that); some of black cheviot, left from suits; others of neat striped worsteds that will go with any coat and vest—all excellent $5 values. To-day choose for—and that is less than part-cotton goods are worth. The 300 pairs will likely go in a jiffy.

Three Dollars and a Half

Then* OVERCOATS—

About a hundred winter Overcoats and Raglans, of all-wool Oxford-mixed, rough-faced cheviots, and some in brown mixtures—superb coats, that have been $20 and $25; to-day at

Fifteen Dollars Each

Have you made last year's coat do until now? You're lucky.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

The UNDERWEAR And Hosiery

This was a meteoric sale. Many a big store does not sell so much in a month as we sold in a single day. But no other store can afford to lose so much to make a clean sweep. Big as was the loss, it is a small speck against our year's business; and it gives us clean stocks every season and prevents later losses.

There is still good picking in the various lots—fragmentary, of course, but the prices make amends. Fair variety in the sorts named below:

Women's Underwear—
15c each, were 25c—Ribbed cotton vests.
50c each, were 75c to $1.25—Vests, drawers, tights and suits.
$1.50 each, were $2.25 to $3.50—Merino union suits.
$2 each, were $3 to $4.50—Vests and union suits.

Children's Underwear—
25c each, were 50c—Boys' shirts and drawers.
50c each, were 95c to $1.70—Merino vests, pantalettes, drawers and suits.

Men's Underwear—
50c each, seconds of our $1 quality—Shirts and drawers.

Men's Half Hose—
25c a pair, were 50c—Fancy cotton.
$1 a pair, were $2—English bicycle hose, with or without feet.
$2.50 a pair, were $3.75 to $6—Fancy French silk.

Children's Stockings—
25c a pair, were 45c to 70c—French black ribbed cotton; sizes 7 to 8½.

MILLINERY

This of winter hats and bonnets: Busy with our plans for spring headwear, but not so deeply engaged as to neglect the seasonable sorts. New ideas still continue to arrive from our work-rooms. Handsome hats for street wear—felt, velvet and fur—and elegant evening bonnets, in newest, most tasteful styles. An unmatched gathering, and all of it at unmatched prices. They begin at $5. It may interest you to see the excellent values at that little price.

Second floor, Tenth street.

PERFUMES

"Queen Mary" and the other well-known brands, in bulk. The extracts and toilet waters, grouped under the name of Queen Mary, are of our own manufacture. Excellent goods, though far from expensive:

Carnation Pink, Stephanotis, White Heliotrope, Jockey Club, Lily-of-the-Valley, White Rose, Lilac, Crab Apple, Opoponax and Violette—2 f Queen Mary extracts, at 25c an ounce.

Queen Mary Toilet Waters, including Crab Apple, Jockey Club, Violette and Lilac, at 10c an ounce.

Other makes:

Houbigant's Musc, at 60c an ounce.
Guerlain's Eau de Cologne, 50c an ounce.
Crown Crab Apple Blossom Extract, 50c an ounce.
YANE'S—Jonquille, 50c ounce; Lilas, $1 ounce; Verviene, 50c ounce; Lavande, 85c ounce; Genet d'Espagne, $1 ounce; La Grande Violette Oriza, in bulk, $1 an ounce.

Tenth street.

Under-price Store

Rich choosing among the Silverware still. Sterling and silver-plated ware. Very little prices on all desirable goods. Good supplies of Women's Muslin Underwear, of a high order of excellence, at less-than-usual prices. These are leading basement store features. Here are others:

Girls' $6 to $8.50 Reefers at $4.50—
Box style; of boucle and pebble cheviots, red, navy blue and black; some with neat velvet collar; others braid trimmed; sizes 6 to 12 years.

Boys' Waists—Low-priced Lots—
One of these groups consists of madras and percale waists; sizes 6 to 13 years. They're 50c to $1 values, and the price is now 25c.
The other is a lot of flannel blouses, for boys of 3 to 12 years. They are the usual 75c and $1 kinds. Now 50c.

$6 Reception Lamps at $4—
Handsomely decorated lamps; various floral designs on light and dark grounds; massive bodies, in squat shapes, mounted on large gold-plated base; fancy cast crown. Complete, with 11-in. globes, at this two-thirds price.

Men's and Women's Umbrellas—
Choose of a very excellent collection at $1.75. It comprises $2.50 to $3.25 kinds. The women's umbrellas are of pure silk, in navy blue and garnet, and of fine union taffeta, in black; natural wood handles. The men's are all of union taffeta, with silver-trimmed wood handles.

Boys' Unlaundered Shirts—
All white. Sizes 13, 13½ and 14. Values 35 and 50c. Price, 25c.

JOHN WANAMAKER

Formerly
A. T. Stewart & Co.

Broadway. Fourth Avenue.
Ninth and Tenth Streets.

NO DATE FOR CANAL BILL

Republican Senators Determine to Postpone Its Consideration.

DECISION REACHED IN CAUCUS

Opinion Expressed that Bill Should Not Be Taken Up While Great Britain's Attitude Is Undefined.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The Republican Senators decided to-day not to set a date, at least for the present, for taking up the Nicaragua Canal bill. The decision was reached after an hour and a half spent in caucus, and was unanimous. The caucus was called largely because of Senator Morgan's importunities on behalf of the bill, and an earnest effort was made to find a satisfactory solution of the problem.

There was a general exchange of views, and many speeches were made, but after all had been said the Senators concluded that so long as Great Britain's attitude toward the amendments to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty is undefined it would not be wise or expedient to agitate the question of the construction of the proposed canal.

After the conclusion of the caucus Senator Allison, as its Chairman, gave out the following official statement concerning the object of the caucus and the result of its deliberations:

"Senator Morgan of Alabama, Chairman of the Committee on Inter-oceanic Canals, made a request of the Republicans of the Senate that a day be fixed by order of the Senate for the consideration of the Nicaragua Canal bill. This request was made to the Committee on the Order of Business, and this committee considered the request and made the recommendation to the Republican conference this morning that at this time it is not expedient or wise to fix a day for the consideration of the bill in view of the pendency of consideration by Great Britain of the amendments proposed by the Senate to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. This view was approved by the Republican caucus without division. There was a universal sentiment expressed in favor of the construction of the canal by the United States at the earliest practicable time."

The decision of the caucus was embodied in a resolution presented by Senator Lodge, who stated that the conclusion as there set forth was the result of the best deliberations of the Committee on Order of Business. He expressed his own firm conviction that at least for the present it would be out of place to press the canal question, while the treaty is still a subject of negotiation and Great Britain's attitude is not completely defined.

Notwithstanding the formal decision to leave the canal question in abeyance for the time, several Senators gave notice that in case there should be a motion to take up the Canal bill they would not be bound by the resolution adopted, but would vote for a motion to consider. In this expression of independence Senator Platt of New York was the leader. He said he considered the proposed canal of prime importance, and would not refrain from voting to take it up whenever a motion to that effect was made. Senators Simon, Foster, and Bard followed with similar declarations. They did not, however, express determination to themselves initiate a movement on behalf of the Canal bill, and it was suggested that Senator Morgan could be prevailed upon to allow the present status to remain.

BRITISH ATTITUDE ON CANAL.

Cabinet Council Discusses the Amended Treaty—Decision Kept Secret—The Spectator's Views.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The amended Hay-Pauncefote treaty was discussed at a lengthy Cabinet council yesterday. The Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, the Marquis of Lansdowne, has taken no action so far. He will probably embody the result of the deliberations in a dispatch or in an interview with United States Ambassador Choate on Monday or later.

The exact decision arrived at is strictly guarded. An impression exists that the Cabinet confined itself to authorizing Lord Lansdowne to have further conferences with Mr. Choate, the lines of which, naturally, are not given out.

The Spectator, in an article discussing the Nicaragua Canal question, says to-day:

"It is a matter of business, and not of manners. We hold that it is to the interest of the British Empire that the canal should be made, provided, of course, that it is a canal which shall be used on equal terms by all ships. We are the greatest maritime nation. Any and every increase in the waterways of the world must be to our profit. Whenever and wherever you facilitate ocean carriage you confer a benefit upon British carrying trade."

After referring to the Suez Canal and its advantages, The Spectator proceeds as follows:

"When once the Nicaragua Canal is made, we, the carriers of the world, will obtain a considerable part of the benefit. It seems pretty certain that the canal will never be made on a commercial basis. The toll would be too great. The failure of the Panama Canal has been due latterly to allow the Nicaragua Canal to be constructed by ordinary speculators.

"The United States Government is prepared for political and trade reasons to make the canal, provided America is allowed to control a waterway which is created at her cost, and by control America means the right not only of policing but of fortifying.

"We should allow military control. Neutrality could not be enforced in war unless there was some one in effective military control. The Spanish, when their fleet was intending to go to Manila by way of the Suez Canal, began to commit a breach of neutrality. What stopped them was not paper regulations, but the strong arm of the British military control of Egypt. In the same way, if the Nicaragua Canal were neutral only on paper, and we were at war with a first-class naval power, we may be sure the neutrality would be violated with apologies to the United States and other guaranteeing powers afterward. If America were on the spot in force, there would be no tamperings with the canal.

"After considering the case of a war between the United States and Great Britain, The Spectator concludes that "the predominant naval power could block both ends, and the Americans by manning the canal and policing it would be able to prevent England using it."

The Daily Telegraph in the course of a very temperate editorial on the Nicaragua Canal controversy, says:

"There is not the smallest reason to believe that the United States Senate intended to affront or slight the British Government. Yet, by injudicious utterances and unrestrained criticisms, an attempt has been made to breed ill feeling. Not all English politicians are discreet, neither are all English newspapers guarded in their criticisms.

"Happily there is but very slight ground to complain of the attitude of the respective Governments toward each other. It is quite possible that the United States may have a satisfactory equivalent to offer for fresh concessions such as the Senate desires, or that it may advance cogent arguments to justify our agreeing to the amendments without compensation.

"Evidently it is a case for further negotiations. Nothing can be gained by indulging in acrimonious recriminations. We have demonstrated our desire to go more than half way to meet American wishes; and, if the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty is demanded, the question will be discussed on its merits.

"British Ministers do not wish to hinder the construction of the canal, and they recognize the natural desire of the United States to be the custodian of the canal. They cannot, however, assent to the establishment of the dangerous precedent of the abrogation of the treaty by a stroke of the pen. Happily, this view appears to be rapidly gaining adherence in America."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—A dispatch from London, dated yesterday, says:

"There is high authority for the statement that Lord Pauncefote informed the Washington Government months ago that England would not object to either the fortification of the waterway or the suspension of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty."

The Secretary of State authorizes the absolute contradiction of this statement. He has never received any such assurances from Lord Pauncefote nor from any one else.

CRAMPS' CLAIM OF $1,367,244.

House Spends Entire Day on Bill to Refer It to the Court of Claims.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The House spent the entire day to-day on the bill to refer to the Court of Claims the claims of the William Cramp & Son Ship Building Company of Philadelphia, for alleged damages due to the delay of the Government in furnishing armor plate and material for the battleships Massachusetts and Indiana, and the cruisers New York and Columbia. The claims aggregate $1,367,244.

The bill has been conspicuous at every session of Congress for several years. It met with the strenuous and determined opposition of a portion of the minority under the leadership of Mr. McDermott (Dem., N. J.) and Mr. Robb, (Dem., Miss.) A filibuster was finally begun, but its advocates at length succeeded in having the previous question ordered upon the bill. The House then adjourned. The ordering of the previous question gives the bill a tactical advantage in a parliamentary way, which practically insures a vote upon it whenever it is called up again.

Mr. Robb, who is a member of the Committee on Claims, opposed the bill on the ground that the contract with the Cramps specified that no additional charges should be made on account of changes in plans, and also that the contractors had further expressly released the Government from every claim for loss or damage sustained by them by reason of the Government's failure to furnish armor and material. The Government held the contractors' receipt in full. Mr. McDermott opposed the bill, which he characterized as a "remarkable measure," in that it directed the court to render such judgment as would "fully, fairly, and equitably" compensate the company. That direction, he said, would include interest.

THE SCORPION AT LA GUAYRA.

Order to Proceed to Guanoco Countermanded—Protest to Venezuela Against Censorship.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The orders to the Scorpion to proceed from La Guayra to Guanoco have been countermanded and she will remain at La Guayra, where her presence is regarded as necessary.

By direction of the State Department Minister Loomis has protested to the Venezuelan Government against the exercise of censorship over any of his official communications, and it is understood that the protest has been effective.

It cannot be gathered that any very late advices have caused the change in the department's plans relative to the movements of the Scorpion. In fact, it is said that nothing has been received to show any marked change in the status in Venezuela since yesterday, when Minister Loomis spoke of the suppression of a rebellion among the troops in Caracas. The fact that such a movement could gain headway in Castro's own capital, however, is very significant, and this rebellion among the troops may have led to the decision to retain the Scorpion at La Guayra, the nearest port to Caracas.

The naval authorities were consulted during the day as to the feasibility of reinforcing the American naval force in Venezuela, but while some such thing is in prospect, it cannot be learned that any positive orders have yet gone out. The Hartford is not within reach of the cable, being on a cruise from Port of Spain to Barbados, at which place she is due in about two days. She may be turned back from that port unless the situation improves. The Lancaster sailed from Port of Spain Wednesday for the Cape Verde Islands, so she is entirely beyond reach.

There is no disposition on the part of the authorities here to go to any unusual length in dealing with this situation, and they say frankly that it is not a part of their purpose to browbeat or coerce the Venezuelans by any formidable naval demonstration unless such course is absolutely forced upon them, which is not believed to be at all likely. But it is quite certain that Admiral Farquhar will shape the movements of the North Atlantic Squadron so as to keep in close touch with the Navy Department, and he will not be far away from a cable end for many days at a time after he leaves Florida.

Mr. Loomis's protest against any censorship of his official mail on the part of the Venezuelan Government was not idly lodged, and he acted by the department's direction only upon a well-grounded suspicion that his cables were being tampered with or unreasonably delayed. His protest was made several days ago, and principally from the character of the exchanges that have taken place since between the State Department and its Minister at Caracas the officials are satisfied that the censorship over Mr. Loomis's communications has ceased. Although aware of the restrictions imposed by the Venezuelan Government upon private cable communications, the State Department has not felt itself able to interfere at this stage to prevent this practice, which is said to be common in South and Central American countries when the Government is getting the worst of a revolutionary movement.

The United States and Haiti Cable Company, which controls the lines to Venezuela, confirms the statement that a censorship has been established on all dispatches from Venezuela to the United States. This censorship went into operation on Dec. 9 of last year.

WAR REVENUE REDUCTION BILL.

Senator Aldrich Says It Must Go Through This Session.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Senator Aldrich explained to the Republican Senatorial caucus to-day the necessity of getting the war Revenue Reduction bill through during this session of Congress, and he stated that he hoped to be able to report it from the committee on Finance during the early part of next week. Mr. Aldrich also said that he hoped to secure a unanimous agreement from the committee, and that if successful he hoped the Senate would not require a great deal of time for the consideration of the measure.

He stated that in order to get the bill through promptly it was necessary that there should be no effort to amend it by putting on tariff amendments. To attempt anything in that line would, he said, open up the entire tariff question, and that the only safe course was to leave the bill as it now is, an internal revenue measure only. There was general assent to this proposition, and assurance was given that the caucus would sustain him in that position.

THE NEW BATTLESHIPS' BIDS.

Board of Naval Construction Completes the Revision of the Specifications.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The Board on Naval Construction to-day completed the revision of the specifications of the battleships, with a view to bringing their total cost within the figures of the bidders. The electric light plants have been retained in the specifications, but by making numerous small cuts and considerably reducing the fund reserved from the total cost of the ship on account of superintendence and inspection, the desired result has been obtained, and President Olcott and Judge Payson, representing both the Newport News and Bath companies, are prepared to accept the contracts for the ships on the board's terms.

Moran Brothers of Seattle already have verbally notified Secretary Long of their purpose to accept the award in their case, so that, although some technicalities remain to be disposed of in connection with the contracts, the Navy Department practically has concluded the task of allotting the greatest contract for naval construction work ever let in the history of the American Navy.

If Congress adopts the department's suggestion for new construction in the pending Naval Appropriation bill and provides for two more battleships and two armored cruisers, it is the purpose of the Navy Department not to prepare new plans, but to invite bids upon the plans used for the ships just contracted for. In this case, a long step will be taken toward recovering the ground lost during the past year and a half in the effort to secure satisfactory designs for the big ships.

The next step in order in the matter of construction is the opening of proposals for the building of six protected cruisers of the improved Olympia type, which will take place on Feb. 1. These vessels being of a smaller pattern than the big ships just disposed of, it is the expectation of the department that some of the smaller shipbuilding concerns, and those new to the business, who failed to secure awards for battleships and armored cruisers, may secure contracts within their abilities, for it is doubtful if the larger concerns will be in position to bid low for any of these craft in view of the amount of naval work they already have on hand.

PHILIPPINE MUNICIPAL CODE.

Tax on Real Estate Instead of Occupations—Authority Given to License Cockfights.

MANILA, Jan. 18.—The public discussion of the General Code of Government for Municipalities began to-day. Commissioner Dean C. Worcester outlined the bill and explained the changes from the general orders of the Military Governor, under which many local Governments were operating. Commissioner Worcester offered two amendments, disqualifying from voting and holding office men who violate their oath of American allegiance or who remain in armed opposition after February.

The Commissioner elucidated the taxation features, referring to the benefits of taxing lands and buildings as against the present special taxes on occupations and industries.

One-fourth of 1 per cent. of the proceeds of real estate assessments will be devoted to public schools.

Municipal Councils are authorized to license theatres, places for liquor selling, public conveyances, hotels, and cock fighting, or to prohibit cock fighting, for the first year, until the tax collections are available.

Half of the internal revenue of each municipality will be paid into the municipal treasuries.

Commissioner Worcester did not enlarge on the section confining the exemption of church property to properties used exclusively for religious, charitable, or educational purposes. This much-discussed feature received the approval of the Administration at Washington previous to making the bill public.

The bill fixes considerable responsibility on the Provincial Governments, for the establishment of which another bill is being prepared.

The public discussion which is taking place in the Municipal Hall is proceeding by sections, the natives participating.

Aguinaldo's Narrow Escape.

MANILA, Jan. 18.—It is rumored that Aguinaldo visited his mother in Cavite Province and narrowly escaped capture during the recent round-up of one of the villages in Cavite.

SITUATION IN PORTO RICO.

Gov. Allen Enthusiastic as to the Future Outlook.

SAN JUAN DE PORTO RICO, Jan. 18.—Gov. Allen has returned here from his trip to Ponce, Coamo, and their vicinity, where for four days past he has been inspecting the road work.

In an interview in The News the Governor is quoted as being enthusiastic as to the future. The crop outlook everywhere is excellent, particularly in the case of tobacco and sugar. Some of the sugar planters are unable to grind their product, and more laborers will have to be put to work. The Governor praises the mountain scenery and climate, and predicts that in a few years Porto Rico will be a world-renowned Winter resort, rivaling Bermuda and Florida, and that there will be an influx of American capital to build hotels in the mountains. The Coamo Springs roads and the vicinity of that place are described as likely to be an earthly paradise for automobilers.

DECISION AGAINST DADY.

Administrative Council Rules He Has No Legal Right to Contract.

HAVANA, Jan. 18.—The Administrative Council has decided that Michael J. Dady, the contractor, has no "tanteo rights," or legal rights, to the contract for the sewering and paving of Havana, but that he has rights in equity, which the Council recommends the Military Government to consider.

FOR THE MARSHALL CENTENNIAL.

Arrangements for Celebration at Albany on Feb. 4.

ALBANY, Jan. 18.—The centennial of the installation of John Marshall as Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court will be celebrated in this city by appropriate exercises under the auspices of the New York State Bar Association and the New York City Bar Association on Feb. 4.

In the afternoon ex-Judge John F. Dillon of New York will deliver a commemorative address in the Assembly Chamber, and a reception will be given by the joint associations in the evening at the Fort Orange Club. The Court of Appeals will take a recess on that day in honor of the event, and Chief Judge Parker will preside at the meeting in the Assembly Chamber.

THE UNITED SERVICE.

Army.

Major John J. O'Connell, First Infantry, is detailed as a member of the examining board to meet at Fort Riley, Kan., for the examination of officers for promotion. Vice Capt. Charles W. Farber, Eighth United States Cavalry, who is relieved as a member of the board when officers who are senior to him in rank are being examined.

Second Lieut. Ward Dabney, First Infantry, is relieved from duty with the home battalion of his regiment at Fort Leavenworth and will join his company in the Philippine Islands.

First Lieut. William Lassiter, First Artillery, will report to Lieut. Col. Otto L. Hein, Commandant of Cadets, President of the examining board appointed to meet at the United States Military Academy for examination as to his fitness for promotion.

First Lieut. Sidney S. Jordan, Second Artillery, will report to Col. William A. Rafferty, Fifth Cavalry, President of the examining board appointed to meet at Fort Myer, Va., for examination as to his fitness for promotion.

First Lieut. Warren S. Barlow, Fifteenth Infantry, is detailed for recruiting duty at Los Angeles, Cal.

Acting Assistant Surgeon Frank A. E. Disney will proceed to San Francisco and report to the commanding General, Department of California, for assignment to temporary duty at the General Hospital at the Presidio of San Francisco.

Second Lieut. William F. Hase, Fourth Artillery, will report to Col. William A. Rafferty, Fifth Cavalry, President of the examining board appointed to meet at Fort Myer, Va., for examination as to his fitness for promotion.

Col. Peter D. Vroom, Inspector General, is detailed as a member of the board of officers appointed to meet at Governors Island, New York City, for the examination of officers for promotion, vice Capt. Albert C. Blunt, Fifth Artillery, relieved. The following-named officers will report to Col. Vroom for examination as to their fitness for promotion: Capt. Elbridge R. Hills, Fifth Artillery; Capt. Luigi Lomia, Fifth Artillery; Second Lieuts. Henry J. Hatch, (Fourth Artillery,) David McCoach, (Fifth Artillery,) William Doores, (Fifth Artillery,) John C. Goodfellow, (Fourth Artillery,) John T. Geary, (Fifth Artillery,) Morrill M. Mills, (Fifth Artillery,) Harry P. Wilbury, (Fifth Artillery.

Navy.

Changes of officers on the Asiatic Station:

Lieut. C. H. Mathews is ordered from the Culgoa to the Solace.

Capt. N. H. Hall, Marine Corps, is ordered from the Newark to the Marine Brigade at Cavite.

Lieut. N. Mansfield (junior grade) is ordered from the Solace to the Newark.

Capt. C. S. Hill, Marine Corps, is ordered from the Marine Brigade at Cavite to the Newark.

First Lieut. George Van Orden, Marine Corps, is ordered from Cavite to Guam.

Capt. C. S. Hatch, Marine Corps, is ordered from the Marine Brigade at Cavite to the New Orleans.

Commander Harry Knox is ordered from Yokohama Hospital to command the Princeton.

Lieut. John L. Purcell is ordered from Yokohama Hospital to the Culgoa.

Capt. T. H. Low, Marine Corps, is ordered from Cavite to the Marine Brigade at Cavite.

Capt. C. G. Andresen is ordered from Yokohama Hospital to the Mare Island Hospital via the Solace.

Second Lieut. D. W. Blake, Marine Corps, is ordered from Yokohama Hospital to the Mare Island Hospital via the Solace.

Cadet W. V. Tomb is ordered from Cavite Hospital to the General Alava.

Lieut. A. N. Mayer is ordered home from Cavite Hospital via the Solace.

Chaplain W. H. I. Reaney is ordered home from Cavite Hospital via the Solace.

First Lieut. C. H. Lyman is ordered from the Monocacy to Yokohama Hospital.

Lieut. J. H. L. Holcombe is ordered to additional duty on the Glacier.

Movements of Naval Vessels.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The Wheeling will go out of commission about Jan. 22, and the Mohican, which is to replace her, will be put in commission about the same date.

The Vicksburg, en route to the Asiatic station, arrived at Singapore to-day.

The Leonidas left Lambert's Point yesterday for Pensacola.

The training ship Topeka has left Funchal for Barbados.

Admiral Remey has reported to the Navy Department the following distribution of vessels in Philippine waters: Isla de Cuba and Samar at Cavite, Don Juan de Austria on the coast of Samar, Concord at Kagayan, Mandanao; Arayat at Cebu, Petrel at Legaspi.

The Iowa left Acapulco to-day for San Diego.

Nominations by the President.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The President to-day sent the following nominations to the Senate:

Franklin Mores of Alaska, to be Register of the Land Office at St. Michael, Alaska.

Marine Corps: First Lieutenants to be Captains—Henry Leonard and Henry W. Carpenter. Second Lieutenants to be First Lieutenants—R. G. McConnell, John W. Wadleigh, William R. Coyle, and R. S. Hooker.

CONGRESSMEN SCORE WEST POINT HAZERS

Mr. Driggs Sorry He Did Not Send Terry McGovern to the Academy.

MATTER OF RELIGIOUS BELIEF

Witness Corrected for Saying He Did Not Consider a Jew an American.

WEST POINT, Jan. 18.—To-day's sessions of the Congressional committee which is investigating hazing at the Military Academy were extremely interesting.

Considerable testimony came out relating to the matter of religious tolerance. This topic was introduced while the committee was examining Cadet Leo Israel Samuelson of Texas, who came to the Academy in June, 1899. A portion of the testimony was as follows:

What is your religious belief?

I am a Hebrew, Sir.

Were you ever interfered with on account of your religion?

No, Sir.

Did you make any concealment of your religion when you came here?

No, Sir.

Were you ever annoyed, or do you know of any other cadet having been interfered with on account of religion?

No, Sir

Cadet Samuel Frankenberger of West Virginia corroborated the testimony of the previous witness.

The Rev. Herbert Shipman, Protestant Episcopal Chaplain to the cadets, who was called next, said that there was absolutely no religious intolerance among the cadets. He said that after Albert had resigned several cadets came to him and stated that Albert had not been persecuted on account of religion and his resignation was not caused on that account.

"What is your opinion during your stay here in the last five years of the moral tone of the cadet corps?" asked Judge Smith.

"I believe it compares favorably with that of any other institution that I know of," replied the Chaplain.

Cadet Henry A. Meyer, Jr., of Arkansas also was examined with reference to the question of religious tolerance. He said that he had no recollection of calling former Cadet Albert a —— Jew.

RELIGION AND NATIONALITY.

Mr. Driggs questioned the witness as to the difference between the religion and nationality of a man.

If you asked Albert what his nationality was, and he answered that he was an American, what would you do?

I would tell him he was a Jew.

He could not be here if he was not an American. No matter where a man is born, if he becomes a citizen of the United States he is an American. Now, what is your idea of a man's nationality?

I consider if a man's parents were born in Germany that he is a German.

If you called Albert a Jew, were you reflecting on his religion?

No, Sir. I would just call a Jew a Jew, the same as I would call an Irishman an Irishman.

Do you respect the Jewish religion?

I don't know much about it, but certainly I respect it, Sir.

Cadet Carrithers told of a fight he had the first month after his arrival at the academy. He was called out for disobeying orders given him by upper classmen.

In the first round we hit each other, and it was about even at the end of it.

Tell us about the second round.

I don't remember much about that. Sir. Shannon hit me a couple of times on the jaw and I was knocked down. I don't remember anything more until I came to lying on the ground. My seconds told me the fight was over and Shannon had won. Then I dressed myself and returned to camp. My jaw was sore and swollen. I could not eat anything at breakfast, and I went to the hospital. The surgeon there examined me and said my jaw was broken. I was in hospital for two weeks, and had not quite recovered when I left, on account of scarlet fever breaking out.

In reply to Gen. Dick the witness said that he was called before the Superintendent and asked several questions in regard to the manner in which he had his jaw broken. He declined to answer the questions on the ground that they were incriminating in character, and he told the Superintendent so.

Cadet Caples of Missouri also told of his experience as a fighter.

Did you ever take a part in a fight?

Yes, Sir; when I was a third class man I fought Cadet Clark, a fourth class man.

What was the cause?

He swore at me in the barrack area, and I called him out.

Who won on that occasion?

He did; I was whipped.

That's strange, an upper class man whipped by a plebe!

He was a good boxer, I could have got a better man than I was to fight him, but I chose to do my own fighting.

Was he a bigger man?

No, Sir, he did not have any decided advantage.

Mr. Driggs—You say Clark swore at you?

Yes, Sir.

Then, in my opinion, you were perfectly justified in calling him out.

Judge Smith—That is not necessarily the opinion of the rest of the committee, I hope.

Gen. Dick—Now, before you are excused, Mr. Caples, is there anything else you would wish to say to the committee?

I should like to say, Sir, that no class ought to be judged on its record until it reaches the first-class stage. It seems to me that you are taking testimony against my class on the strength of its record in the first two years. It should be remembered that up to its first-class year a class is always under the tutelage of the first class. I think our last camp was remarkably free from hazing and exercising of every kind.

The committee recognizes the fact that last Summer's camp showed a marked improvement in that respect.

But don't you think that if all kinds of hazing and fagging were wiped out totally it would be very much better for every one concerned and for the academy?

Yes, Sir, I do.

Gen. Dick examined Cadet Lynch of New York, who said he had been on his class's scrapping committee for two years. He testified that during that period the committee had refused on three occasions to allow fourth-class men to be called out on the ground that the offenses were not of sufficient gravity.

When a man is called out by the committee, can he get out of fighting?

Yes, Sir; he can simply refuse to go into it.

Gen. Dick shook his finger at the witness and said slowly:

"Don't you know that if he did so he would be cut and ostracized by the whole corps?"

"Yes, Sir," said the witness, in an argumentative tone, at the same time shaking his finger at the General, "and rightly so."

You think so?

Yes; the man who would refuse to fight a man of his own size and weight has no business in the army. Give me a man of my own size and weight and I'll fight him.

The witness then went on to tell of fighting, either with fists or weapons, and said that the French code gave a man a chance of defending his honor. Gen. Dick reminded the young man that United States authorities had not sent him to France for his military education, and gave him some friendly advice to obey the laws and regulations of the Academy, give up fighting, and also to discourage its continuance.

PRIZE FIGHTERS AS CADETS.

Cadet Meyer, who was examined by Mr. Driggs, told how a cadet he was hazing fell off a box on which he was sitting holding out Indian clubs, after doing about 100 eagles and other exercises.

He did not faint. I sent him to his tent, and told him to shake down his bed.

Did he go?

I don't know, Sir.

Did you send for a doctor for him?

No, Sir.

Was he as big as you?

No, Sir; he was not as tall.

He was not a six-footer, then?

No, Sir.

Do you think it was fair of you to haze a smaller man into such a condition and not give him medical aid?

I don't know, Sir.

Suppose a man like Jim Jeffries hazed you into that condition with the threat that if you refused to do as directed you would have to fight him, do you think that fair?

No answer.

Do you think it conduct becoming a gentleman and an officer first to furnish the provocation by asking a fourth class man to do something that you have no right to, and pick out your own man to fight and beat him?

No, Sir; I don't think there is anything ungentlemanly about it.

You have a rule here that a fourth class man will have to fight any one picked out by the committee, even if that man is ten pounds heavier and in good physical trim?

Yes, Sir.

When Cadet Williams came here as a "plebe" he had one fight, and he did not have to go into another, because he was pretty handy and whipped the upper class man?

Well we had men in our class who were ten pounds heavier who could have beaten him.

But I notice none of them were anxious to go at him. I am sorry that I did not send Terry McGovern up here. He is one of my constituents. I think after the first fight no one would want to tackle him.

Oh, I don't know about that.

Well, I regret that I did not offer the appointment to him, as I think he would lick the whole corps from bottom to top.

There was an interesting passage in the examination of Cadet Louis C. Brinton, Jr., of Pennsylvania.

Did you ever know a man to go through this academy without being hazed?

I heard of one; I can't remember his name, but I think he was a "plebe" in 1898.

Why did he escape all hazing?

He whipped every man who was pitted against him, Sir. He fought five men in one day, and in all he licked about thirty.

Is there a monument erected at the post to his memory?

No, Sir.

Not even a tablet in Memoriam Hall?

No, Sir.

Well, then, there should be.

Cadet Francis W. Clark of Illinois testified that he was opposed to hazing and fighting. He had eagled a cadet once, but only gave him three eagles. In reply to Mr. Driggs, he said that there were others in the first class that held the same opinions as he did. He said the first class men could maintain their dignity and get the lower classmen to obey without subjecting them to hazing. Mr. Driggs said:

"Mr. Chairman, I desire to state right here that I am very glad that this young man was called upon to testify. He is certainly a credit to the academy."

Cadet Philip H. Sheridan, a cadet at large, who was examined by Congressman Wanger, said that he had been severely hazed by Cadets Bettison and Meyer. Mr. Wanger asked him about his having hazed others, and said:

Do you know that your illustrious father has said that hazing is a senseless custom which an improved civilization has eradicated?

He never said anything to me about it.

No, but he wrote it in his memoirs, and may I ask you is there any one in your class who is a better adviser than he?

No, Sir, there is not.

The committee hopes to conclude its investigation here to-morrow.

SUBSIDY BILL'S CHANCES.

Decision of Caucus Not Very Encouraging to Friends of the Measure—Important Amendments.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—In the Republican Senatorial caucus to-day Senator Hanna expressed his desire to have the Ship Subsidy bill passed upon during the present session of Congress, and said that with the Army bill out of the way he should ask that the decision arrived at early in the session to press the Subsidy bill be adhered to. There were several responses, and all were in accord with Mr. Hanna's request. He was reminded, however, of the necessity of giving first attention to the appropriation bills, and he said that he fully understood that, and only meant to ask that the Subsidy bill should receive attention when the appropriation bills were not up for consideration.

There was general assent to this proposition, but it was suggested that there were other subjects which should be passed upon before adjournment, but which, it was believed, would not require a great deal of time.

Many amendments have been suggested to the Subsidy bill since the effort to push the bill forward was begun by Senator Hanna, but while there is much talk intended to be encouraging to Senators Frye and Hanna, it lacks the prophetic tone. Every Senator who has obtained a concession to his prejudices against excessive subsidies has admitted that the bill is "less objectionable" than it was before. That is not assurance that the bill will be passed or that it will reach a vote.

The agreement that the Subsidy bill shall be considered without interruption "except for consideration of appropriation bills," does not mean much. With the slightest drag on the Subsidy bill the Legislative Appropriation bill will be taken up. It is a suggestive measure for debate. The House found it so, and the opponents of the Shipping bill are not likely to be less interested in the measure. With constant interruptions of the Subsidy bill debate the strength of the Populist and Democratic opponents of the measure will be promoted and the interest of its supporters will be diminished.

According to the bulletin of the subsidy press bureau to-night, the amendments that have been accepted at the suggestion of Senators McMillan, Spooner, Aldrich, and Allison will be very distasteful to those who made what Senator Frye says is "a well-considered and consistent measure." These amendments, it is stated, provide that: "No extra compensation is to be allowed vessels of over 18 knots, thus cutting off about $50,000 from each of the fast-going mail ships as provided under the original terms of the bill.

"No compensation to be allowed oil tank vessels.

"The length of time for which contracts are to be made is reduced from twenty years to fifteen years.

"The number of foreign vessels to be admitted to American registry, provided a like tonnage is built in the United States, is limited to four vessels to each firm for each class—that is, four vessels already built, and four vessels for which contracts have been made and not completed. The effect of this will be to reduce the amount of foreign tonnage that may be admitted to American registry under the terms of the bill from about 350,000 to 200,000.

"A modification of the clause (F) of the bill makes it necessary for any ship owner or builder to actually begin the work of construction before a contract will be entered into."

These amendments are not to come from or have the formal approval of the Commerce Committee. They are to be offered in the Senate, and of course must stand discussion, the attitude of the Commerce Committee remaining to be ascertained. It is admitted by the friends of the bill, who have eagerly accepted the proposed amendments in the hope that some sort of bill can be put through, that the friends of fast ships will fight the new stipulations. The agreement to cut out the Standard Oil Company's tanks is at once criticised as an admission that undue advantage would have been extended to oil ships under the bill as reported by Mr. Frye.

ONCE RICH; DIES A PAUPER.

Samuel H. Warwick Passes Away in a Philadelphia Almshouse.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 18.—Samuel H. Warwick, aged seventy years, inventor of a rootbeer, and whose wealth twelve years ago was estimated at more than $1,000,000, died penniless in the hospital attached to the Almshouse, in this city, and was buried to-day in Camden, N. J., by a relative who claimed the body. During his prosperity, it is said, he gave thousands of friends in need and entertained in a princely fashion. Men prominent in politics and in social affairs of the city, State, and Nation were his guests. All but two forsook him when his fortune dwindled away.

For the past three years, it is said, two Senators, friends of his palmy days, have supplied him with the necessaries of life. They finally got him a position in the hospital.

GEN. FREEMAN'S APPOINTMENT.

Odd Complication Which Resulted in Promotion of a Retired Officer.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The case of Col. Henry B. Freeman of the Twenty-fourth Infantry, who yesterday was nominated by the President to be a Brigadier General in the regular army, is without precedent in the history of the army. He was placed on the retired list of the army yesterday by operation of law on account of age, with the rank of Colonel.

This occurred before his nomination to the grade of Brigadier General on the active list had been sent to the Senate, so that it involved the nomination of a retired officer to increased rank on the active list. In order, however, to avert possible legal complications on that point the appointment to the grade of Brigadier General was made to take effect on the 16th inst., the day preceding the legal date of the officer's retirement. As the nomination was confirmed, and the officer has been retired with the higher rank, it practically makes no change in the situation.

The vacancy in the list of Brigadier Generals to which Col. Freeman was promoted was caused by the retirement of Gen. Joe Wheeler several monts ago, and Gen. Freeman's retirement still leaves a vacancy in that list.

Chess Player Pillsbury Married.

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—Harry N. Pillsbury, champion chess player of America, came to Chicago from Philadelphia yesterday and registered at the Morrison Hotel. He had been in town but a few hours when he reappeared at the desk and shyly penned an addition to the name on the register. The revised signature read, "Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Pillsbury." Marriage license records show that Mrs. Pillsbury was Miss Mary E. Bush, whose home was given as Philadelphia.

ADDICKS IN A DEAL WITH DEMOCRATS?

Alleged Scheme to Divide Delaware Senatorships with Them.

KENNEY TO BE RE-ELECTED

Regular Republicans Standing Firm by Their Candidates—Seven Pledged Never to Vote for Addicks.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., Jan. 18.—For several days United States District Attorney William Michael Byrne has been working among the legislators at Dover with a view of solving the deadlock over the election of two United States Senators. Mr. Byrne has been in favor of a plan to elect Col. Henry A. Dupont and John Edward Addicks as the two Senators. Mr. Byrne, it is understood, reflects the sentiment of the leaders among the Republicans at Washington. He stands high with the Administration.

Mr. Byrne has had several conferences with the Dupont Republicans in the Legislature, but he is unable to make the slightest impression on them. One of the Dupont leaders solemnly and with great emphasis informed Mr. Byrne that there were seven Republican members of General Assembly who had pledged themselves that in no circumstances would they vote for J. Edward Addicks for United States Senator, no matter what pressure might be brought to bear on them. They utterly refuse to consider any proposition that involves the election of Addicks.

Mr. Byrne this afternoon had a conference lasting for several hours with Mr. Addicks at the Union League Club, Philadelphia. Mr. Byrne found Mr. Addicks had not the slightest intention of withdrawing from the contest. Mr. Addicks informed Mr. Byrne that if he could not get sufficient Republican votes to elect him he would secure support among the Democrats. There already were enough Democrats, Mr. Addicks said, who had promised they would vote for him when they should be needed.

"Why, I can hardly keep them from doing so already," declared Mr. Addicks to Mr. Byrne; "they want to come in for me at once."

Mr. Byrne was asked whether Mr. Addicks said anything to him about an alleged deal with Senator Kenney by which Addicks is to be one Senator and Mr. Kenney the other. Mr. Byrne declined to discuss this point. It was learned, however, from an other and trustworthy source that Mr. Addicks declares if the Republicans will not elect him Senator he has a deal on foot by which it will be Addicks and Kenney.

Willard Saulsbury, Chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, when informed late to-night of Mr. Addicks's claims as to Democratic votes said: "It is an absolute shameless bluff of Addicks's, that's all."

DOVER, Del., Jan. 18.—The Delaware Legislature continued its voting for two United States Senators to-day with this result:

For the full term—Richard R. Kenney, (Dem.,) 23; J. Edward Addicks, (Union Rep.,) 16; Col. Henry A. Du Pont, (Reg. Rep.,) 8; William C. Spruance, Levi C. Bird, Anthony Higgins, and William S. Hilles, (Reg. Reps.,) 1 each. Total vote, 51; necessary to choice, 26; no election.

For the short term—Willard Saulsbury, (Dem.,) 22; J. Edward Addicks, (Union Rep.,) 16; Charles F. Richards, (Reg. Rep.,) 11; Benjamin Nields, (Reg. Rep.,) 1; John Gray, (Dem.,) 1. Total vote, 51; necessary to a choice, 26; no election.

Another Ballot in Nebraska.

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 18.—The vote in the Legislature on United States Senator to-day was without decisive result, as follows:

Allen, 53; Hitchcock, 53; Thompson, 32; Crounce, 10; Currie, 19; Hainer, 6; Kincaid, 4; Hinshaw, 16; Meiklejohn, 28; Rosewater, 15; scattering, 15.

MR. CHANDLER'S ATTACK.

Declares that Railroad Interests Prevented His Re-election as Senator.

"When a man bucks against the railroads, he must expect to be run over."

That was the remark made by Senator W. E. Chandler of New Hampshire to a NEW YORK TIMES reporter at the Fifth Avenue Hotel yesterday, when questioned regarding his defeat for re-election by Judge Burnham.

"I have noticed in the newspapers," continued Mr. Chandler, "that Alfred G. Vanderbilt, when asked his occupation, said he was a capitalist. That was proper and true. I shall be a United States Senator until March 4. After that I shall be a philosopher.

"Thirty-six hours before the Senatorial caucus I considered myself a certain winner. Then President Tuttle of the Boston and Maine Railroad Company made a personal fight against me, and by the use of money, passes, and influence secured a majority of votes against me.

"I do not attribute my def

MR. IVISON'S QUEER ACTS

Witnesses in Will Contest Tell of the Publisher's Eccentricities.

Quitted Barber's Chair to Drive Organ Grinder Away — Present of Left-Over Chicken to Mrs. Holt.

Mere testimony as to the eccentric actions of William B. Ivison, the publisher, was brought out at the hearing of the will contest yesterday before Justice O'Gorman and a jury in the Supreme Court. The contest is being made by Edward Ivison, a brother of the testator, and several other heirs at law, who allege that David B. Ivison, a nephew, who is the sole beneficiary under the will, with one exception, and will get over $900,000, used undue influence over his uncle, and, further, that the testator was insane.

Mrs. Anna M. Holt, wife of Charles Holt, a nephew of the late Mrs. Ivison, was on the stand again yesterday. Thursday she testified that the testator had wanted to marry her.

"Did you ever hear Mr. Ivison say anything about going to the poorhouse?" the witness was asked.

"Frequently, and then the next minute he would talk about his money lying idle, and wonder how he could invest it."

"Did you ever see David Ivison kiss him?"

"Yes, once."

Mrs. Holt then told of Mary Ann Sheridan, who had been employed as Mr. Ivison's secretary for many years, and who received $10,000 under the will. She went into detail of Mr. Ivison's treatment of Miss Sheridan. The witness said that at one time she was at the hotel where Mr. Ivison was living, and Miss Sheridan was dressing in an adjoining room. As soon as Mrs. Holt entered Mr. Ivison called out, "Mary Ann, come in here and show Mrs. Holt how nice you look in your short skirt."

"Did Miss Sheridan come out?"

"She did."

"How was she dressed?"

"She was only partly dressed."

"Did Mr. Ivison ever kiss you when you called?"

"Yes, every time I called, and he would always give me a twenty-five or fifty cent piece, with particular instructions not to tell his wife, but he always told her himself."

"Did Mr. Ivison ever call on you?"

"Yes, he came to see my husband and myself at our hotel one Sunday morning. He said he had come to bring me a present. He brought me some broiled chicken, left from his breakfast. I was in bed at the time, and he placed the chicken, wrapped up in greasy paper, on the covers."

Julius H. Schwartz, a barber at the Victoria Hotel when Mr. Ivison lived there was the next witness. He said he had been accustomed to shave Mr. Ivison.

"Did he ever do anything peculiar while you were shaving him?"

"Yes. Once while he was being shaved an organ grinder stopped in the street and began to play. Mr. Ivison had lather all over his face and a towel around his neck. He made me stop shaving him while he jumped out of the chair and ran to the street and drove the man away. When he came back he explained that he hated to see a poor man around."

"Did Mr. Ivison ever speak to you about his will?"

"Yes, once. He just mentioned the will and said to me, 'You have no right to be poor.' 'Well, leave me $50,000,' I said. Just then David Ivison came in, and the conversation stopped."

"Did you ever see the old man kiss Miss Sheridan?"

"No, Sir."

"Did you ever see Miss Sheridan kiss him?"

"Yes, often. Sometimes when I was shaving him he would say, 'One minute, Julius. Molly, come and kiss me.'"

Charles H. Holt, the husband of Anna M. Holt, was then called. He identified several memoranda of the testator's property which he had copied while Mr. Ivison and his wife were alive. The copying was done at the request of Mrs. Ivison.

"After Mrs. Ivison's death did you ever see Mr. Ivison do anything peculiar?"

"Yes. About ten days after her death I was at the hotel to visit him. After I entered the room he threw his arms up toward the ceiling and cried out, 'There is my Caroline!' and he began to throw kisses into the air."

"Did you ever hear him talk about getting married?"

"Yes, I heard him ask my wife to marry him, and when she said that she was married to me he told her that she could get a divorce. I interrupted him and said, 'Uncle William, I guess not.' He replied, 'Oh, it's easy to get a divorce.'"

"Did Mr. Ivison ever say anything to you about bicycle riding?"

"Yes. He said, 'I don't like men who ride bicycles. My nephews ride bicycles and I'm going to cut them off in my will.'"

After several other witnesses had given testimony the case was adjourned until Monday.

A COLONIZER CONVICTED.

Joseph Williams Found Guilty of Election Frauds.

Joseph Williams, said by Superintendent McCullagh to be "Scar-Faced Hennessy," a leader of the election colonizers alleged to have operated from Assemblyman Honeck's saloon and Raines law hotel, at Twenty-eighth Street and Third Avenue, during the recent election, was convicted of aiding and abetting illegal registration in General Sessions yesterday before Judge Newburger.

Williams was charged with persuading John and Edward Flanagan, Edward Coote and Jack Shepard, all of whom lived in a Bowery lodging house, to register from the hotel at 244 East Twenty-eighth Street, owned at that time, the prosecution claims, by Assemblyman Honeck. Williams was remanded for sentence.

Seven-Year Sentence for Mather.

Charles E. Mather, convicted of the larceny of a twenty-one-thousand-dollar rope of pearls obtained from a Maiden Lane jeweler on memorandum and pawned, was yesterday sentenced by Recorder Goff to seven years' imprisonment in State prison. Mather pleaded guilty to obtaining a thirty-five-hundred-dollar pearl necklace in the same manner. Three other indictments were hanging over him for similar offenses, and these were taken into consideration by the Recorder in pronouncing sentence. Nineteen other convicted prisoners were given sentences.

Pier Privileges Revoked.

The Dock Board at its meeting yesterday afternoon revoked the pier permits issued to the Manhattan Ice Company last December for non-payment of rent. President Jackson of the ice company contended that as the company was shipping no ice by boat at this season of the year, they had no use at present for the piers, and asked that the payment of the rentals should commence next May. This proposition did not meet with the board's approval, and they accordingly revoked the permit.

Dock Commissioners Let Contracts.

The Dock Commissioners at their meeting yesterday afternoon awarded contracts for the building of a freight shed on the pier at the foot of West Fifty-ninth Street and for the building of two wooden piers at the foot of Market Street, East River. The contract for building the shed was awarded to R. H. Hood of 229 Broadway for $113,940, and the contract for the piers to William H. Jenks of 130 Pearl Street, whose bid was $69,790.

Woman Falls to Her Death.

Raculia Laframo, fifty-five years old, fell from the rear window of her apartments on the fifth floor of the tenement house 318 East One Hundred and Twelfth Street yesterday and was killed. The woman was hanging out clothes when a sudden gust of wind caused the line to break, and in attempting to catch the clothes as they fell she lost her balance and pitched headlong from the window. An ambulance surgeon stated that she had been killed instantly.

For the Loss of a Leg, $10,000.

A jury in the Supreme Court yesterday returned a verdict for $10,000 in favor of William Castles, a boy of eight years, against the Metropolitan Street Railway for the loss of a leg. One day during the Summer of 1898 the lad was crossing Second Avenue at Twenty-third Street, when he was run down by one of the company's cars, and so badly injured that it became necessary to amputate his left leg. The case was tried before Justice MacLean.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

What Composers, Singers, and Others Are Doing.

Although the new theatre in course of construction at Munich is not intended to compete with the famous Baireuth "Temple"—the very Mecca of the Wagnerites—something akin to alarm has been felt by the powers that be.

Of late years the Baireuth pilgrimage has become more and more a fashionable function than anything else, and our fair American cousins are said to be most lacking in the all-pervading "art-worship."

Following Wagner's ideas as to the proper construction of a theatre for music-drama, the auditorium of the Munich house will consist almost entirely of amphitheatre seats, and the orchestra will not be visible. August and September are to be the festival months, and the Wagner representations are to be confined to this period, during which about twenty performances are to take place. The remainder of the year is to be devoted to other classics, not necessarily musical.

***

The Rubinstein Museum in the Royal Conservatoric at St. Petersburg was opened on Nov. 30, the anniversary of the birth of the great pianist. It contains, among other things, many portraits, the Becker pianoforte on which he played daily when at Peterhof, and a cast of his right hand modeled by Tschischow. The manuscript section is at present scantily filled. On the same day the Rubinstein mausoleum was unveiled at the cemetery of the Alexander Newsky Cloisters.

***

The German Bach festival will be held at Berlin next March. It will last for three days, and in addition to the performances there will be scientific and also social gatherings. The following bodies will take part in the music: The a capella choir and the orchestra of the Kaiserliche Akademische Hochschule für Musik, under the direction of Dr. Joachim; the Singakademie, under Herr Georg Schumann; the Philharmonic Choir, under Prof. Siegfried Oches, and the Philharmonic Orchestra.

***

According to London papers, Mme. Emma Eames has wholly recovered from her long illness and has been engaged for the Spring season at Covent Garden.

***

When the wise men of the East choose to let their real wisdom forth, they are wise indeed, as witness these words of Philip Hale in The Boston Journal anent the recent Sembrich season in the Hub:

"'Faust' is always popular. The people like to laugh at the sight of Mephistopheles and Martha, they delight, and with good reason, in the music of the garden scene, and they love—yes, they love with an undying passion—the soldiers' chorus. And they wait patiently for the prison trio, which in these days is simply an exhibition of lung power; the louder it is screamed, the more enthusiastic the audience. But the people yawn through the two finest scenes in the opera—the church scene and the death of Valentine.

"It is vain and foolish to scold a public because it likes this or dislikes that. The opera, born in the purple, has always been the plaything of the rich. It is an amusement that is intended to gratify the eye and the ear. Occasionally an operatic performance does more than this; it achieves a triumph in art, as when Marcella Sembrich moves the heart as Violetta, and, as Nordica shows that the traditions of supreme vocal art are not purely legendary."

***

Dr. William Pole recently died in London at the age of eighty-six. Dr. Pole was a high authority on the subject of musical pitch, upon which he wrote in Grove's Dictionary. He was also the author of many of the analytical programmes of the now defunct New Philharmonic Concerts during their palmy days, while among his most valuable contributions to musical literature were the "Philosophy of Music," issued in 1879, and reprinted by Messrs. Kegan Paul in 1895, and "The Story of Mozart's Requiem," which Messrs. Novello reissued in 1879.

***

Our old acquaintance of the operatic conductor's chair, Signor Arditi, has recently been alarmingly ill in London, but has recovered. Arditi is an old man, and must leave us ere many years. When he goes a delightful personality will be removed.

***

Some of our Boston contemporaries are making pitiable attempts to throw discredit on the statements of the newspapers in this city that Mr. Jean de Reszke is in possession of his vocal powers and is not a broken-down old wreck. The public of New York is not composed of fools, and the newspapers could only suffer by any attempt to deceive it. This paragraph from The Boston Journal is discreditable:

"The Jean de Reszke fever is still raging in New York. The eminent tenor is being worked for all he is worth. He is announced this week for three performances. How long can he stand the strain? But in New York it makes little difference in what or how he sings. Many of the most prominent citizens and citizenesses really believe he is the greatest tenor that ever lived, so he is not to be blamed for making hay during the open Winter."

It is quite possible that Mr. de Reszke is not the greatest tenor that ever lived, but people who dwell in the present and do not persistently turn their faces toward the past are satisfied that he is the greatest singer of this day. The implications of the above paragraph are false and misleading.

***

Wagner's "Tristan and Yseult" was the great feature of the Christmas musical season at La Scala, and the management further signalized the occasion by a complete revolution in stage meuntings and lighting. The scenic effects were managed on an entirely new system, and the footlights were replaced by a single light arrangement, which made the nearest approach possible to solar light. Toscanini is in charge of the new system, and most of the German managers have sent representatives to watch its working.

***

Eugen D'Albert, who recently conducted a performance of his opera, "Cain," at the Royal Opera, in Berlin, has just completed a three-act opera, which has been accepted by Geheimrath Pierson in the name of Count Hochberg, the Intendant General of the Prussian Theatres.

***

Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac" is to be converted into an opera by Signor Puccini, and the new work will be produced at the San Carlo, Naples, during the season of 1901-1902, with Signor De Lucia in the rôle of Cyrano.

***

"Halka," which is the most popular of all Polish operas, recently reached its five hundredth representation at Warsaw, and this was made the occasion of a national fête, a special performance being given for charity, and realizing 6,000 rubles. "Halka," which is from the pen of the Polish musician Stanislaw Moniuszko, who died in 1872, was originally produced at Warsaw in 1858. Another version was given ten years later at the National Theatre of Prague, the libretto being upon a Bohemian legend. At the recent revival a large number of national dances, such as the mazourka, polonaise, and others, adapted by the Polish musician Hadakowski, were introduced.

METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE.

Wagner's "Die Walkuere" Excellently Sung and Acted Last Night.

Wagner's "Die Walküre" was sung at the Metropolitan Opera House last night for the second time this season. The audience was one of good size, and its enthusiasm was commensurate with the merits of the performance. These were in advance of those discerned in the first representation. This was perhaps due to the bracing state of the weather, but it is more probable that a different distribution of parts had something to do with it. This is very frequently the case with an operatic performance, and it is so at times when the change signifies no discredit to those who took part in the less admirable performance. The peculiarities of the artistic temperament are numerous, and subtle influences often work for the edification of the operagoers. Whatever was the cause last night "Die Walküre" was sung and acted with great warmth, and the poetic content of the beautiful and symbolic drama had its usual influence on the musical part of the audience.

Mme. Nordica was the Brünnhilde last evening, singing the part for the first time this season. She wore dark-brown hair and the required red robe, which is so often omitted. The Valkyr maiden is generally represented as a blonde, but Mme. Nordica's make-up was very effective, and afforded a very pretty contrast to that of Mme. Schumann-Heink as Fricka. Mme. Nordica was in excellent voice, and she sang her music with splendid power and with perfect understanding. Her interpretation of the part was lovely, and her acting showed increased command of her resources. Miss Ternina was the Sieglinde, a vigorous, impassioned, lovable Sieglinde. In the second act her scene of distraction was notably well done, and her singing in the first act was thoroughly artistic. To hear two such artists as Mme. Nordica and Miss Ternina in "Die Walküre" is a rare treat.

Mme. Schumann-Heink, as usual, made a commanding figure of Fricka, and Mr. Blass was an uncommonly good Hunding. Mr. Van Dyck repeated an impersonation of Siegmund, which in plastic grace has never been equaled here, and in dramatic justice, intensity, and variety recalls Niemann's. The Belgian was in good voice last night. His intenation was unusually good, and he sang better than at any previous appearance on the local stage. His whole performance was full of feeling and influence. The choir of Valkyrs again showed the benefit of careful rehearsals. The orchestra, on the whole, played well. There was, of course, the unfailing false intonation among the tubas, and there were some slips in the wood, due, perhaps, to the forced absence of the first clarinet player. But the orchestra deserves commendation. Mr. Damrosch conducted with zeal, enthusiasm, and appreciation. This afternoon "Le Cid" will be repeated.

Patti Not Negotiating American Tour.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—Mme. Patti denies the cabled statement that an American agent is negotiating with her for a concert tour of the United States.

COWED WOMAN WITH REVOLVER

Then Thieves Leisurely Loot a Brooklyn Clothing Store.

The residents of Brooklyn are becoming greatly alarmed over the repeated burglaries which are being committed nightly, and last night there was talk of the formation of a Vigilance Committee. The clothing store of Samuel Ferrares, at 681 Grand Street, was entered early yesterday morning and stock valued at $250 carried off. The robbery was committed at the point of a revolver held at the head of Mrs. Mary Cornell, who, with her family, lives in apartments over the store.

Mrs. Cornell was awakened shortly after 2 o'clock by the crashing of glass. Jumping out of bed, the woman hurried to a front window which she threw open and looked out into the street. In a twinkling she saw something glisten. It was a revolver aimed at her head, and a voice shouted, "If you stir or make a noise I'll blow your head off."

Mrs. Cornell saw a short, thickset man who wore a brown alpine hat on the sidewalk. She was paralyzed with fright and feared to make an outcry. While she leaned on the window sill at the mercy of the robber she heard him say to his companion, "Hurry up, Jack. Get everything quick, and let's get out." "Jack" remained in the store about ten minutes longer, and when he finally appeared he had a large bundle. After threatening to kill Mrs. Cornell if she gave an alarm the burglars fled. Mrs. Cornell became insensible, and it was the strong draught from the open window that aroused the other members of the family and led to the discovery of Mrs. Cornell.

The woman was revived after some difficulty, and told of what had happened. The police were notified. The thieves had smashed a plate glass window with a brick covered with paper and smeared with molasses.

A new pair of trousers found near the entrance to a house at 72 Johnson Avenue led to the arrest of Phillip Molter, a young man who lives in the house. Young Molter denied all knowledge of the robbery, but the police decided to hold him, pending a further investigation.

LOST PAPERS WERE IN A DUMP.

Long Hunt in Rubbish Heaps for Hudson County's Vital Statistics.

Cornelius J. Rooney, Clerk of the Hudson County Health Board, at Jersey City, devoted nearly four weeks' labor to preparing a tabulated statement of the vital statistics of the county. He finished it on Thursday afternoon, and was so overjoyed that he neglected to place the document in his desk, but left it lying on a table. In some unexplained way it fell to the floor, and was swept up with the refuse and consigned to the garbage box early yesterday morning. When Clerk Rooney discovered his loss the garbage box had been emptied and the contents carried to the "dumps" on the meadows.

Mr. Rooney at once notified Henry Byrne, the county physician, and he sent all his available men to the scene to search for the missing document. The search lasted three hours, but the paper was finally found. The searchers were liberally rewarded, and Mr. Rooney began to make a clean copy of his report, which he will present to the County Health Board at its next meeting.

TO TAKE CHINESE TO MEXICO.

San Francisco Steamship Company to Establish Fisheries and Canneries.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 18.—The Call says:

"Back of a steamship company recently organized in this city, with a capital of $12,500,000, is a plan to colonize Mexico with Oriental laborers. The promoters of the scheme, it is asserted, have obtained from the Government of Mexico a vast concession of fishing privileges and lands adjacent to the fishing grounds. They propose to bring 1,000,000 Chinese to Mexico and establish fisheries, canneries, and warehouses along the Mexican coast.

"A circular has been issued in the Chinese language, stating that 'the Pacific Charter Company proposes, on behalf of the Mexican Government, to encourage Chinese, as well as Europeans, to come to Mexico, where they will have special privileges.'

"The circular adds that the company has made a contract with Mexico and China to admit free of duty for fifty years all Chinese necessaries, such as tea, rice, &c."

BOYS TRAPPED IN FIRE RUINS.

Policemen Capture Four Small Marauders in Burned Tarrant Building.

Policeman McIvor of the Church Street Station, with the assistance of several other policemen, captured four boys in a manhole under Warren Street yesterday. The police of the Church Street Station have been eagerly watching for small boys who have been stealing lead pipe, copper, and other material from the Tarrant ruins for many days.

In the early hours of yesterday morning Policeman McIvor heard suspicious sounds emanating from the basement of the ruins. Rapping for assistance, he endeavored to squeeze himself through the small opening leading to what used to be the cellar of the drug house. He could not make it by fourteen inches of superfluous waist measurement. Another policeman of smaller proportions crawled in with lighted torch and trapped the marauders in a corner of the cellar beneath the sidewalk. To this spot the officers could not penetrate. They were about to open a siege, when suddenly McIvor discovered a secret entrance to the boys' retreat. It was a manhole connecting with the cellar. Stealthily removing the cover, the boys were commanded in the name of the law to emerge. Clubs and revolvers were held ready. Slowly a head emerged from the manhole. A small body followed it.

Both belonged to fifteen-year-old Matthew Arno of 89 Thompson Street. Three companions of similar age and size followed. The police stowed away their weapons and calm was again restored to Warren Street. Each boy was fined $10 in the Centre Street Court.

Change of Venue for Nurses Asked.

Counsel for Marshall, Dean, and Davis, the three nurses who were indicted for manslaughter for causing the death of Louis C. Hilliard in the insane pavilion at Bellevue Hospital, applied to Justice Beach, in the Supreme Court yesterday, for a change of venue, alleging that popular feeling in the county was against the nurses. District Attorney Philbin and Assistant District Attorney Pierce were in court, and after some discussion it was agreed to have the motion come up for argument on Wednesday next.

Found Dead in His Chair.

Henry Wilcox, forty-five years old, who rented a furnished room in the apartments of Mrs. Lena Jaeger at 84 Suydam Street, Brooklyn, was found dead yesterday seated in a chair alongside of an open front window of his room. How long the man had been dead is not known. He was first noticed at the open window on Thursday evening staring into the street. No attention was paid to him until yesterday when Mrs. Jaeger went to the room to call him. Failing to get any response to repeated knocks at the door, Mrs. Jaeger opened the door and saw Wilcox seated in the chair dead.

NOTES ON MATTERS OF THE ARTS.

The Camera Club is making ready for its annual auction of photographic material, whereby the members exchange all sorts of articles belonging to the gentle art of the kodak and indulge at the same time in the luxury of bidding up one's own and knocking down the other fellow's contributions. The sale will occur on Feb. 15. It is odd that our older painters never hit on this device to make clearance of their bric-a-brac, old easels, and canvases, the paintings they are tired of and objects that they wish they had never bought. An auction in the big studio in the Tenth Street building formerly occupied by Mr. W. M. Chase, to which Academicians and society men should contribute the objects they could spare from their ateliers, would attract a crowd, particularly if one of the bright talkers among them, like Mr. Bruce Crane, and there are many such, should officiate as auctioneer. It would be a frolic with a useful side. Commissions charged on sales might be turned over to some beneficent foundation like the Artists' Fund.

***

The Archaeological Institute, in its New York chapter, met Thursday night at the school of Dr. Julius Sachs, 110 West Fifty-ninth Street, to listen to an illustrated lecture on the deserted cities of Syria by Mr. Howard Crosby Butler of Princeton University. Early in March there will be a lecture by Prof. d'Ooge on the French excavations on the site of Delphi, and on March 12 some account of the work of the French School of Archaeology at Athens will be given by M. Gaston Deschamps of Paris.

***

The annual meeting of the Sculpture Society took place Wednesday night at the rooms of the society, in the Fine Arts Building, on West Fifty-seventh Street. The sculptor members have been busy for the last three months on the sculpture for the Pan-American. The models for these works will be shown at the annual exhibit of the Architectural League in February.

***

A young Buffalonian named Charles Rumsey, who is an undergraduate at Harvard, has modeled an Indian on a pony which may find a place among the sculptures at the Pan-American Exposition, if it passes the final muster of the Director of Sculpture. Owing to the preminence of his family in Buffalo strong efforts will be made to obtain this honor for him. Harvard is duly proud of a junior who can model an equestrian statue, and looks forward with high hopes to a career in art for young Mr. Rumsey when he leaves Cambridge.

***

The Hanging Committee for the coming exhibition of the Society of American Artists consists of Messrs. John W. Alexander, Francis C. Jones, and Walter Palmer. The jury consists of twenty-six men and one woman. Mr. Andrew Carnegie has instituted an annual prize of $500 for oil paintings, exclusive of portraits. The founder of the prize reserves for two days the right to purchase the prize-winning canvas at the figure given in the catalogue. No artist may take the prize twice in succession, and becomes hors concours the second time he or she secures it. This is an eminently fair provision. The Webb Prize of $300 has no limit of age, as heretofore; the winner must be an American who has never received it before. The Carnegie and Webb prizes are awarded by the jury. Not so with the Shaw Prize. This is now a prize of $300 for the best oil painting of the figure by an American, (portraits excluded,) and will be awarded on Varnishing Day by a vote of the whole society, or, more definitely, by a plurality vote of all the members of the society who are present on that day. Thus the Society of American Artists begins the new century with a third prize, due to the generosity of Mr. Carnegie. Exhibits will be received on March 14 and 15; Varnishing Day is Thursday, March 28; the reception takes place March 29; Saturday, March 30, is opening day, and Saturday, May 4, sees the close of the exhibition.

***

The Fitzgerald pictures about to be sold by the American Art Association contain two by Carleton Wiggins, an example of D. W. Tryon, and one of H. W. Ranger, two specimens of George Inness, a William M. Chase, three Dolphs, and pictures by J. G. Brown, William Bliss Baker, Casilear, Dannat, Edward Gay, W. H. Howe, Arthur Hoeber, Francis C. Jones, J. P. Knight, Bolton Jones, Munger, Phelan, and Rehn. There are three Minors and six James Harts. Mr. Fitzgerald is a jeweler who began to buy pictures some years ago, and found that the competition of established dealers was too keen to warrant continuing in a branch that has nothing to do with his trade.

***

The Macbeth Gallery has two water colors by the late Homer D. Martin. One, dated 1883, shows a big barn in France, which is being repaired as to its thatch. The tones of thatch and plowed land in the foreground are very pleasing. Dated 1892 is a landscape with water from the Thousand Islands, which has all the charm of this marvelous landscape painter. An undated painting gives a bend of the Mohawk River, with a mountain rising all iliac in the distance, a calm stretch of river bottom pasture, and fleecy clouds in the sky; a quiet, grave, somewhat formal composition belonging to his earlier years. A little Wyant that suggests Martin through the richness of its coloring, its quiet gayety and vigor, shows russet Autumn trees against a greenish sky. The sky near the horizon is very Martin-like.

***

A tall canvas by Wyant has the melancholy note oftener found in him than in Martin, and something of his severity, too. A rough, rocky hill rises to the right, surmounted by billowy clouds; on the left is a grove of tall, bare trees. It is a view of Indian Summer in its still misty atmosphere. A George Inness of 1893 shows the Autumn woods of New Jersey with a muffled woman's figure in the foreground. One of the American masters of the past whose works appear seldom, William Morris Hunt, may be seen here in the "Roman Girl," painted at Rome in 1850. A contadina with a very characteristic profile is seated, her hands clasped on her lap. The bare feet, heavy gold earrings and necklace, ivory-colored headcloth, red cloak over the back of the chair, and greenish blue skirt form a charming combination of subdued tones. All these are beautiful pictures which speak well for the color sense and good taste of William Macbeth.

***

The American Numismatic Society has established a class in coin and medal designing and die cutting in the schools of the Academy of Design, under the direction of Mr. Charles J. Pike. Mr. Pike has studied under Falguière and St. Gaudens. A Woodbury G. Langdon prize of $100 will be awarded for the best work done in this class at the close of the school term in May, 1901. Class hours are from 9 to 12 in the morning.

***

The latest sculptor member to be elected to the National Sculpture Society is Solon H. Borglum, the modeler of broncos, cowboys, and Indians. One of his most attractive groups is that of a mare and colt turning tail to a blizzard, the colt rubbing itself against its mother to keep warm and the snow massing itself against the mare's hind legs. The group is very expressive of wind and low temperature, not to speak of the warmth of maternal love. A lame horse is trying to remove the bandage round its fetlock. "The Funeral on the Plains" shows two tragic figures hardly distinguishable in their blankets, the man erect, the woman thrown forward on her face at his feet. "On the Border of the White Man's Land" consists of horse and Indian peering over a cliff. Borglum's "Rough Rider," half on, half off a bucking bronco, is better known than the above. It is all suspended action, such as would be intolerable in large sculpture. The same may be said of "Lassoing Wild Horses," a violently agitated group of two cowboys, one of whom has caught his prey, and his horse in consequence sinks on its haunches with the strain on the rope, while the other cowboy has just galloped up and whirls his lasso for a throw. An amusing little sketch for bronze is "The Dance," representing a trick pony stepping out to the sound of music. Mr. Borglum is a Cincinnati man who has studied in New York and Paris.

***

Mrs. Elizabeth Burton of Santa Barbara, Cal., has been holding an exhibition of her leatherwork at No. 7 West Twenty-ninth Street, which was very successful in the matter of sales and commissions for further work. During the last three years Mrs. Burton has made so many clients in San Francisco and New York that she now employs a houseful of workmen and workwomen in Santa Barbara. Her specialty is leather applied on leather, forming floral and other designs in appliqué and reinforcing the designs by burning the leather.

NATIONAL ACADEMY OF DESIGN.

Annual Exhibition in the Galleries of the Fine Arts Building.

THIRD NOTICE.

Hidden away on the west wall of the little east room, an apartment only fit for paintings of small dimensions rather preciously wrought—like Mr. Carle J. Blenner's "Cup of Tea," the figure of a lady painted like a miniature—is a large, boldly brushed canvas by C. W. Hawtherne, called "Splitting Fish." There is a broad treatment of fishermen and fish, a richness of tone, and a naturalness in the foreign figures that make one ready to assail that much abused body, the Hanging Committee, for granting it no better place. Its merits warrant a removal from the purgatory of the east room to the paradise of the Vanderbilt Gallery, where its vigorous proportions might find the necessary elbow room.

Perhaps the Academy men are tired of the procession of young painters from abroad and feel no disposition to give them good places. During and since the Paris Exposition there was a strong feeling that the American colonizer of France was arrogating too much to himself, and not a little satisfaction has been expressed by artists that for the first time the home men had a chance to show Europe what they could do. Perhaps this feeling comes into play now and then to reject or to hang unfortunately the work of our budding masters in the fine arts.

The painter of "Splitting Fish" has fair reason to complain, but the same cannot be said of Mr. Elmer Schofield, whose work is strongly French. Yet has he received the first Halligarten Prize. Nor of Mr. Edward Willis Redfield, whose pictures are in the Vanderbilt and South Galleries. Yet Redfield makes the Seine the object of his pictures, and the Seine in Paris. Subject as well as manner are French. "The Last Boat, Evening," shows a flotilla of river passenger boats moored for the night, and through the dusk a bridge is discerned, while the surface of the Seine shimmers under the light from the night sky, with here and there a trail from a steamer lamp. "Twilight, Paris," and "Charenton Bridge" are further canvases very dexterously painted, and not without sentiment. Relegated to the East Gallery is Mr. Robert David Gauley's "Courmyeur, North Italy," a well-painted landscape with a bit of brown, not at all unlike a spot in Switzerland.

The Academy cannot afford to despise the youthful colorist who paints his France or his Italy, for a number of Academicians have been disporting themselves in the same artistic pastures, as witness Mr. W. H. Howe, N. A., with his "Evening, Laren, Holland," or "On the Dikes, Etables, France," witness Edward Gay, N. A., with his "Wheat Field, Bedfordshire, England," witness George H. McCord, N. A., with his "Street in Moret, France," and witness Carlton Chapman, A. N. A., with his "The Pert St. Malo" and "Windy Day Off St. Malo." The fact is that those artists who could manage it went to Europe last Summer to see the expesition and very properly improved their time by painting a little on the other side. Here are Kruseman van Elten, N. A., with an "Evening at Cernay, France," Mr. Nicoll, N. A., with "Corbière Light;" A. C. Howland, N. A., with "Old Village of Garne, France;" George Inness, Jr., N. A., with "From My Studio Windows, Paris," and R. W. van Boskerck, A. N. A., with a view "In the Forest of Fontainebleau."

Distinctly successful is Miss Elizabeth F. Bonsall of Philadelphia with "Two's Company, Three's None," a scene in which a small girl, two cats, and a blue bowl figure. The little girl is greedily drinking from the bowl as she lies in her bed, while the cats are watching the process with the utmost concern. Delightfully painted are bowl, cats, and child; perhaps the cats take the palm, so natural and eager are their attitudes and expressions. But they did not manage, between them, to capture the Norman Dodge Prize for woman's work. The element of humor is very nicely introduced without exaggeration. "Locked In," by J. G. Brown, will appeal to the lovers of animals, consisting as it does of studies of three calves stretching anxious heads through the crevices of a board fence. "In Royal Robes," by J. Carroll Beckwith, is a rosy-cheeked child engaged in the favorite pastime of little girls called "dressing up," a handsome, richly wrought canvas. Another sweet, artless phiz is his portrait of a girl, "Grey" is the name, by Frederick W. Kost's "Frosty Morning," with a man at work near a depleted haystack. "Olive Tone," by Joseph H. Boston, is a broadly painted figure. "In the Park" is a portrait of a young lady by Samuel Isham, more decorative than realistic, but finely managed as to light and shade.

"The Sea Serpent," by Frederick S. Church, is a procession of sea nymphs on dolphins, which simulate the fabled monster of the deep. Walter L. Palmer of Albany is here with a snow-clad landscape called "The Glowing West," in which the shadows are deeply purple. Walter Clark's "Mill at Brinton's Bridge" is charming for tones and registers a picturesque bit of the past. I. H. Caliga of Boston sends "Poppies" and "A Field of Poppies," very quiet as to color, but nice in sentiment. "The Truant," by Verplanck Birney, a Colonial interior, with three figures, is excellent for the relief of the figures against the dark background, their natural poses, and the placing of these figures in the scene. The inventiveness of Mr. C. C. Curran's mind is shown in "Building the Dam," but also the hardness of his hand when holding the brush; it shows two boys reveling in mud and water. "Evening," by Clara W. Van Parnegh, is a slender, upright panel, with a woman reading as she sits below a light shaded by a green lamp; a picture that shows individuality. Mrs. A. B. Sewell's "Portrait" is curiously pale and flat-tinted; its merits can be best seen in the photograph when the color is abstracted; then the excellent drawing and restful pose tell. "Moonrise—November," by Lockwood de Forest has a pale moon in the still, bright sky and cedars palely russet against the horizon—a fine landscape this. In "Autumn Clouds" Mr. William J. Whittemore has the rainy look to his clouds one notices at sea or at the eastern end of Long Island. There are good portraits by Kenneth Frazier, (Mrs. W. E. Rogers.) Benjamin C. Porter, (daughter of Isidor Wormser, Esq.,) and Augustus Lukeman, (profile sculptured relief of Miss Elizabeth Day.) Take it all in all, the present Academy offers a fairly high average of work—probably a higher average than it has presented for many years.

Gov. Odell to Address Alumni.

The fifth annual dinner of the Associate Alumni of the College of the City of New York will take place at the Hotel Savoy on Saturday evening, Jan. 26, at 7 o'clock. Ferdinand Shack, President of the association, will preside. Gov. Odell has promised to respond to the toast, "The State." Signor Campanari of the Metropolitan Opera Company will sing, by permission of Maurice Grau, a graduate of the university. Charles Murray, Treasurer of the Alumni, of 70 Broad Street will forward tickets on application.

SHIPPING AND FOREIGN MAILS.

Miniature Almanac—This Day.

A. M.	P. M.	A. M.
Sun rises...7:20	Sun sets...5:02	Moon rises..6:17

High Water This Day.

A. M.	A. M.	A. M.
S. Hook...6:21	Gov. Isl'd...6:44	H. Gate...8:40
P. M.	P. M.	P. M.
S. Hook...6:56	Gov. Isl'd...7:12	H. Gate...9:08

Outgoing Steamships.

TO-DAY, (SATURDAY,) JAN. 19.

	Mails Close.	Vessels Sail.
Alleghany, Jamaica, &c.	10:00 A. M.	12:00 M.
	*10:30 A. M.
Fontabelle, Demarara, &c	9:30 A. M.	12:00 M.
	*10:00 A. M.
Havana, Havana	10:00 A. M.	1:00 P. M.
Jamestown, Norfolk		3:00 P. M.
Lampasas, Galveston		3:00 P. M.
Louisiana, New Orleans		3:00 P. M.
Maracaibo, Curacao	9:00 A. M.	12:00 M.
	*9:30 A. M.
Marquette, London		9:00 A. M.
Norge, Denmark	12:00 M.	2:00 P. M.
Ohio, Hull
Phoenicia, Hamburg		3:00 P. M.
Ponce, San Juan	9:00 A. M.	11:00 A. M.
Seminole, Charleston		3:00 P. M.
Silvia, Newfoundland	9:00 A. M.	11:00 A. M.
Spaarndam, Rotterdam	8:00 A. M.	10:00 A. M.
Umbria, Queenstown	10:30 A. M.	2:00 P. M.
	*12:00 M.
Werra, Naples	8:00 A. M.	11:00 A. M.
Woodsworth, Brazil	5:30 A. M.	8:00 A. M.

MONDAY, JAN. 21.

Hyanthes, Argentina	9:00 A. M.	11:00 A. M.
Jefferson, Norfolk		3:00 P. M.
Pretoria, Bermuda	7:00 A. M.	9:00 A. M.

TUESDAY, JAN. 22.

Advance, Colon	9:30 A. M.	1:00 P. M.
	*10:30 A. M.
Columbia, Naples	9:00 A. M.	11:00 A. M.
Comanche, Charleston		3:00 P. M.
El Sud, New Orleans		3:00 P. M.
Hamilton, Norfolk		3:00 P. M.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 23.

Comal, Galveston		3:00 P. M.
Hubert, Northern Brazil	12:00 M.	2:00 P. M.
Majestic, Queenstown	8:30 A. M.	12:00 M.
	*10:00 A. M.
Mt. Vernon, Inagua and Haiti	9:30 A. M.	12:00 M.
Princess Anne, Norfolk		3:00 P. M.
Ravensdale, Yucatan via Progreso	12:30 P. M.	3:00 P. M.
Southwark, Antwerp via Southampton	8:30 A. M.	12:00 M.
	*10:00 A. M.

*SUPPLEMENTARY MAILS.—Additional supplementary mails are opened on the piers of the American, English, French, and German steamers and remain open until within ten minutes of the hour of sailing.

TRANSPACIFIC MAILS.

Mails for Australia, (except West Australia,) New Zealand, Hawaii, Fiji, and Samoan Islands, via San Francisco, close here daily at 6:30 P. M. after Jan. 86 and up to Jan. 819, inclusive, or on day of arrival of steamer Campania, due at New York Jan. 819, for dispatch per steamer Sonoma. Mails for China and Japan, via Vancouver, close here daily at 6:30 P. M. up to Jan. 822, in

RELIGIOUS NEWS AND VIEWS

Missionary Services for Children in Many Episcopal Churches.

Addresses to be Made by a Number of Out-of-Town Ecclesiastics.

To-morrow afternoon, at 4 o'clock, there will be held in many of the Episcopal churches of New York missionary services for children under the auspices of the Junior Department of the Woman's Auxiliary, of which Mrs. Henry S. Mottet, the wife of the rector of the Church of the Holy Communion, is leader. In many of the churches the children of several parishes will unite for the missionary service, although a great many will hold individual services.

Some of the speakers that will be heard to-morrow at these missionary meetings are: Bishop Dudley of Kentucky, at Calvary Church, Fourth Avenue and Twenty-first Street; the Rev. George B. Pratt of Porto Rico, at Christ Church, Seventy-first Street and Broadway; the Rev. Ambrose Gring of Japan, at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Fifth Avenue and Forty-fifth Street; Bishop Potter, at the Cathedral Crypt; the Rev. Dr. W. Dudley Powers, General Secretary of the American Church Missionary Society, at St. Mary's Church, Mott Haven; Dr. Mary Gates of China, at St. Paul's Church, Washington Avenue and One Hundred and Seventieth Street; Bishop Leonard of Salt Lake, at St. James's Church, Madison Avenue and Seventy-first Street, and Bishop Hare of South Dakota, at Trinity Church.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Notes of the International Series Selection for Jan. 27, 1901.

Copyright, 1900, by John H. Whitney.

SUBJECT.—Christ silences the Pharisees. (Matthew, xxii., 34-46.)

GOLDEN TEXT.—"What think ye of Christ?"—Matthew xxii., 42.

When Jesus closed His interview with the Greeks who desired "to see" Him it was late in the afternoon of our Sunday. Withdrawing from them, He left the Temple, and accompanied only by "the twelve," He went out of the city on foot to Bethany. There He lodged that night. The next morning—our Monday—He returned with "the twelve" and without any such demonstrations as marked the day before. The popular excitement had apparently completely died away. Like Jonah's gourd, it "came up in a night and perished in a night." John, iv., 10.)

When they left Bethany it was probably early, and before they reached the city Jesus felt the need of food. So, "when He saw a fig tree in the way," (Matthew, xxi., 19,) "having leaves" (Mark, xi., 13,)—perhaps it was when they were passing through Bethphage, the house of figs—He came to it, expecting surely to find abundance of fruit, for it was characteristic of the fig tree that its fruit was developed before it put forth its leaves. This particular tree probably stood in some very sheltered spot, and had leaved out much earlier than was common, "for the time of figs was not yet." (Mark, xi., 13.)

If it had been a productive tree during the preceding year some of the old fruit would have still been found under the leaves, and if it was then in a productive condition the new fruit would certainly have been there. But when Jesus came to it, "if haply He might find anything thereon, He found nothing but leaves." (Mark, xi., 13.) It was like the "fig tree" spoken of in one of His parables, to which the owner came "seeking fruit," but "found none," and because it was unprofitable, he unhesitatingly commanded, "Cut it down; why cumbereth it the ground?" (Luke, xiii., 6, 7.) So Jesus looked upon this tree. Therefore the sentence which He pronounced upon it: "Let no fruit grow on thee henceforth forever." (Matthew, xxi., 19,) was the judicial sentence of its true Owner, and not the vindictive wish of a disappointed man, as some have thoughtlessly interpreted it.

MONEY CHANGERS DRIVEN OUT.

Having paused long enough to pronounce this sentence, Jesus passed on with His Apostles into the city. When He entered the Temple He found its sacred courts desecrated by market stalls and bankers' tables. The same sights had grieved Him three years before, when He entered upon His public ministry. Then, "when He had made a scourge of small cords, He drove them all out of the Temple, and the sheep, and the oxen; and poured out the changers' money, and overthrew the tables," saying, "Take these things hence; make not my Father's house an house of merchandise." (John, ii., 14-21.)

So now, at the close of His ministry, He repeated the same emphatic cleansing, saying now, however, as if they well understood the wrong they were doing, "It is written—is it not? My house shall be called of all nations, the house of prayer, but ye have made it a den of thieves." (Mark, xi., 17.)

Having completed this process of purifying, which probably required the whole day, "when the even was come" Jesus "went out of the city" (Mark, xi., 19,) probably to Bethany, where He again spent the night. His act, however, had greatly disturbed the chief priests and scribes. So they met together to consider what they should do, and they "sought how they might destroy Him; for they feared Him, because all the people was astonished at His doctrine." (Mark, xi., 18.) So while Jesus slept peacefully in Bethany they plotted bitterly against Him in Jerusalem.

The next morning, however—Tuesday—He returned with "the twelve" to the city. On their way they again passed the unfruitful fig tree. Its leaves were all "withered away," (Matthew, xxi., 20,) and it was "dried up from the roots." (Mark, xi., 20.) Its blasted condition at once attracted the attention of all the disciples. They were particularly struck with the suddenness and the completeness of its destruction. "How soon is the fig tree withered away!" they exclaimed. Peter, in particular, called Jesus' attention to it, saying, "Master, behold the fig tree which Thou cursedst is withered away!" (Mark, xi., 21.)

THE LESSON TAUGHT.

The object lesson He had given them had been very impressive. What were they, and we, to learn from it? According to Jesus' reply it was simply—"Have faith in God." (Mark, xi., 22.) Many, however, have looked upon this destruction of the fig tree as only showing our Lord's reprobation of a mere profession of faith without any accompanying fruit of holiness, a profession which would

Lay down for golden sheaves
Nothing but leaves, nothing but leaves.

Doubtless such an application of it is very important. But our Lord's answer, evidently, had a far wider reach than this, and was intended more to strengthen all faith than to rebuke occasional insincerity. For the point of instruction in this parable was not in the fact that the fig tree failed to produce the desired fruit, but that it failed to produce the expected fruit. Its blasting thus applies to matters for which we long as well as to those which we dread. And our Lord's teaching for both cases is—"Have faith in God."

Such a strengthening of faith the disciples especially needed at this time, for their Master, instead of being crowned a King, would be crucified as an Impostor, and all the powers of darkness would seem to triumph. The "tree" which was full of such portentous [illegible] would surely yield its natural and expected fruit! How necessary then that they should be taught to "have faith in God!"

So with many other experiences in their after lives. So with all of us every day. However full the "trees" we meet may be of "leaves" awakening our expectations—for good or for evil—He can so destroy them that the "leaves" shall "wither away," and the "trees" themselves shall be "dried up from the roots." Many a dear child of His, loving Him with all the heart, and believingly committing himself to His care in prayer, has often found this to be a blessed reality. The great lesson, therefore, to all is: "Judge not according to the appearance" (John, vii., 24,) but "have faith in God."

Having impressed this lesson upon the disciples, Jesus came again into the city and entered into the Temple to teach the people and to preach the Gospel. (Luke, xx., 1.) Whilst thus engaged "the chief priests, and the scribes, and the elders" who had been so excited by His cleansing of the Temple the day before, and probably as a result of their deliberations over that act, came to Him and interrupting His teaching, they demanded "By what authority doest Thou these things?" And who gave Thee this authority to do these things? (Mark, xi., 27, 28.)

The consideration of this question, in some form or other, occupied the rest of the day. When it was asked He answered it by a counter question, "The baptism of John, was it from heaven, or of men? Answer me" (Mark, xi., 30.) If they would answer that question, He promised that He would answer theirs. So "they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say from heaven, He will say, Why, then, believed ye him not? But, and if we say of men, all the people will stone us." (Luke, xx., 5, 6.) They would not therefore, answer, "From heaven," and they dared not answer "Of men."

THEY TRY TO ENTANGLE HIM.

Our Lord, however, did not let the matter rest there, but He utterly confounded them before the people by His demonstration that their rejection of Him and His authority was not only unreasonable, but that it was wicked, and would surely be punished. This He illustrated by the parables of "The Two Sons." (Matthew, xxi., 28-32,) "The Wicked Husbandmen," (Matthew, xxi., 33-46; Mark, xii., 1-11; Luke, xx., 9-19,) and "The Marriage of the King's Son." (Matthew, xxii., 1-14.)

Unable "to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which He spake," (Acts, vi., 10,) "then went the Pharisees and took counsel how they might entangle Him in His talk." (Matthew, xxii., 15,) for there was no way by which His authority could be overthrown unless they could cause Him to commit some offense or make some claim for which they could turn Him over to the strong hand of the Government. That there might be no doubt of their success, "the chief priests and scribes," (Luke, xx., 19,) who were Pharisees, the strict religionists among the Jews, associated with themselves the Sadducees, the religious free-thinkers and who "say that there is no resurrection," (Acts, xxiii., 8,) and the Herodians, (Mark, xii., 13,) who were worldly politicians. Each party hated the others only a little less than they all hated Jesus. It was thus a triple alliance of very incongruous materials, but it promised to be very effective.

The first attack was made by the Herodians with a question which involved the loyalty of the Jews to the Roman Government. "Is it lawful for us," they said, "to give tribute unto Caesar, or no?" (Luke, xx., 22.) Shall we give or shall we not give?" (Mark, xii., 15.)

Now the unquestioned acceptance of the coin of any Government is always an open acknowledgment of its lawful authority. So Jesus quickly put them to confusion by a penny bearing the image and superscription of Caesar, which they freely received, and He said to them, "Render unto Caesar the things which be Caesar's." (Matthew, xxii., 21.) Every comfort and protection which came to them from Caesar's Government demanded from them a just return of obedience to Caesar's laws. But the principle applied far more forcibly to their relations to God than to Caesar. Therefore He added, "And unto God the things which are God's," for all the blessings received from Him, give back to Him the love and obedience that are His due.

When the Herodians were thus silenced, the Sadducees came to Him with a question which—to their minds—showed what absurd dilemmas were involved in the doctrine of a resurrection. But they were as easily and as effectually put to confusion as were the Herodians.

Then the Pharisees took their turn in pitting human wit against divine wisdom. "One of them, which was a lawyer, asked Him a question, tempting Him, and saying, 'Master, which is the great commandment in the law?' (Matthew, xxii., 35, 36.) 'Which is the first commandment of all?'" (Mark, xii., 28.) By "the law"—and by "all"—he had in mind a great deal more than the Ten Commandments. These terms included all of the additions made by their traditions, which amounted to more than 600, and which were considered, in many cases, as far more obligatory than anything given by Moses. (Mark, vii., 10-13.) And there were often great disputes among the rival schools as to which command the most strict obedience should be given.

THE FIRST COMMANDMENT.

Brushing aside all of their sophistries, Jesus summed up all of the Ten Commandments in the words of Moses himself, (Deut., vi., 4, 5, and Lev., xix., 18,) "The first of all the commandments," He said, "is hear, O Israel; the Lord, our God, is one Lord; and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength. And the second is like, namely this, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these." (Mark, xii., 29-31.) "On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets." (Matt., xxii., 40.)

When the law thus summarized was given to Moses on Sinai, the mount "burned with fire," and "there was" "blackness and darkness, and tempest, and the voices of words, which voice they that heard, entreated that the word should not be spoken any more. And so terrible was the sight that Moses said, I exceedingly fear and quake." (Heb., xii., 18-21.) This idea of dread is the one that sinful man always associates with God and His law. He can easily see why he should fear Him, but not why he should love Him.

That law, however, although given in the midst of such scenes of majesty and terror, was itself the very embodiment of love and mercy. Every command in it, like the very first commandment given to unfallen Adam (Genesis ii., 16, 17,) was not a heavy burden, but a blessed and needed safeguard. It marked God's abounding goodness and care for man, as the lighthouses on our coast mark the care of our Government for its seamen and its commerce. And the one return which He asks for His love is, "My son, give Me thine heart." (Prov. xxiii., 26.)

Even this questioning lawyer was impressed by the sublimity, the simplicity, and the power of Jesus's answer. So he said at once and frankly, "Well, Master, Thou hast said the truth, for there is one God; and there is none other but He. And to love Him with all the heart, and with all the understanding, and with all the soul, and with all the strength; and to love his neighbor as himself, is more than all whole-burnt offerings and sacrifices. And when Jesus saw that he answered discreetly, He said unto him, "Thou art not far from the Kingdom of God." (Mark xii., 32-34.)

"WHAT THINK YE OF CHRIST?"

Yet we do not read that he ever became a disciple of Jesus. Many have been like him in every age, admitting and admiring the truth, but not submitting themselves to it. For the root of all loyalty is simply—love. Simple, however, as this demand is, no man but One has ever been able to love God with all his heart and soul and mind and strength. Even unfallen Adam could not do it.

Thus Jesus confounded the Pharisees as completely as He had done the Sadducees and the Herodians, "and no man after that durst ask Him any questions." (Mark xii., 34.) But He immediately asked them a very important question: "What think ye of Christ? Whose Son is He?"

"The son of David," they replied.

Quoting then from the one hundred and tenth Psalm, "The Lord said unto my Lord, sit Thou on My right hand till I make Thine enemies Thy footstool," Jesus asked; "If David, then, call Him Lord, how is He his son?" (Matt., xxi., 43-46.)

There could be but one answer to this question, and they knew it, for the psalm from which Jesus quoted was universally recognized as a Messianic Psalm. He could be David's "Lord" only by being, as He claimed, God's Son.

The connection between this question of our Lord, and that of the Pharisaic lawyer, is thus very significant. It declares that "what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh. God sending His own Son—in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin—condemned sin in the flesh, that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." (Romans viii., 3, 4.) Thus when the law of God demanded the love of man, the love of God met the demand of His law in the person of His Son.

QUESTIONS ON THE LESSON.

What did Jesus do after His interview with the Greeks, and what occurred the next morning?

What was the condition of this "fig tree," and what is said of the sentence Jesus passed upon it?

What did Jesus do in the Temple, and what is said of it?

What happened the next morning—our Tuesday—and what was the lesson which Jesus drew from the withered fig tree?

Who came to Him in the Temple, and how did He answer their question?

What did they then do, and with whom did they associate themselves?

How did the Herodians approach Jesus, and what was His answer?

What is said of the Sadducees?

Who represented the Pharisees, and what was his question?

How did Jesus answer it, and what is said of the law given on Sinai?

How was this lawyer impressed by Jesus' answer, and what did he say?

What was the result, and what question did Jesus then ask?

What is the connection between Jesus' question, and that of this lawyer?

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH WORK.

What the Report of the Building Society Shows for the Year.

The report of the forty-eighth annual meeting of the Congregational Church Building Society shows that, with the single exception of 1897, in which the board was busy disbursing the Stickney Fund, more has been accomplished during the past twelve months than in any previous year in the history of the society, which extends back to 1853. Loans aggregating in all $109,000 have been voted to 49 churches, grants amounting to $76,972 have been voted to 97 churches, both loans and grants have been voted to 26 churches, loans amounting to $39,157 have been paid to 26 churches, grants amounting to $60,881 have been paid to 70 churches, both loans and grants have been paid to 15 churches, $28,810 has been voted to 50 churches on parsonage buildings, $24,195 has been paid to 43 churches on parsonages, 740 church building accounts have been closed and 444 parsonage building accounts. The sums returned by aided churches are: In the church building department, loans refunded, $241,215; in the grant department, $386,162, and in the parsonage building department, $207,995. Total, $835,373.

BABIES' HOSPITAL'S NEEDS.

Appeal for a Building Fund of $200,000 for a New Structure.

The twelfth annual report of the Babies' Hospital of the City of New York makes a strong appeal for aid in increasing the building and endowment fund to $200,000. It is desired to erect a new hospital in place of the old buildings at Fifty-fifth Street and Lexington Avenue. The buildings have become too small to accommodate all the patients seeking admission and the cost of maintaining them in good condition is growing every year. The fund now amounts to $88,000, of which $50,000 is conditional on the entire amount being raised by June 1, 1901.

The Babies' Hospital, which is the only institution in the city devoted entirely to the treatment of sick infants, last year received 388 patients, of whom 278 were cured and 30 improved; 22 remained unimproved, and 145 died. This unusually high death rate is explained by the fact that no case, however hopeless it may be, is refused unless it be a contagious disease. The out-patient department treated 1,000 new patients and paid 4,754 visits to applicants for relief.

The Treasurer's report shows that the hospital received from various sources, $38,813 for its current expenses, $6,246 for its permanent fund, and $1,920 for its building fund. The expenses amounted to $16,105.

Hugh McLaughlin Going South.

Ex-Register Hugh McLaughlin, the Democratic leader of Kings County, will leave for Florida to-day to spend the remainder of the Winter on the Indian River. He will be accompanied by Mrs. McLaughlin and a party of friends. Mr. McLaughlin expects to return to Brooklyn about April 1.

Religious Notices.

BAPTIST CHURCH OF THE EPIPHANY, Madison Av. and 64th St., Rev. Howard L. Jones, Pastor.—Services 11 A. M. and 8 P. M. All welcome.

CALVARY CHURCH, 1ST AND 57TH ST.—Dr. Ashmore preaches, 11, and Dr. MacArthur, 8. Evening, "Lao-tse, Philosopher and Founder of Lao-ism," third in course upon "The Ethnic Masters and the Divine Master."

CENTRAL BAPTIST CHURCH, 42D ST., WEST of Broadway, Frank M. Goodchild, Pastor.—11 A. M., "Perfect Through Suffering"; 7:45 P. M., "Lack of Feeling." Second in course on "Excuses." Baptism at night. Everybody welcome.

FIFTH AVENUE BAPTIST CHURCH, 6 WEST 46th St., Rev. W. S. Richardson, Assistant.—Services at 11 A. M. and 8 P. M. Preaching by Rev. R. J. Baville of New York. Prayer meetings Monday and Friday evenings at 8.

MADISON AV. BAPTIST CHURCH, Cor. 31st St., Rev. Henry M. Sanders, D. D., pastor.—Rev. Dr. Downie of India will preach at 11 A. M. Pastor at 8 P. M.

MEMORIAL BAPTIST, WASHINGTON Square.—Morning, Dr. Judson. Evening, Mr. MacMurray.

BROADWAY TABERNACLE CHURCH, Corner Broadway and 34th St.

SIXTIETH ANNIVERSARY. Special service at 11 A. M. Historical sermon by the pastor, Rev. CHARLES E. JEFFERSON, D. D. 3:30 P. M., Bible school celebration; special music. 7 P. M., Young People's Christian Endeavor Society. 8 P. M., Fellowship Meeting; addresses by prominent clergymen of New York.

MANHATTAN CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, S. W. Corner Broadway and 83d St., Rev. H. A. Stimson, D. D., Pastor.—Morning service at 11; Sunday school at 12:15.

ALL ANGELS' CHURCH, WEST END AV. and 81st St., Rev. S. De Lancey Townsend, Ph. D., Rector.—Services 8, 11, and 4.

ALL SOULS' CHURCH, MADISON AV. AND 66th St.—Rev. R. Heber Newton will preach at 11 A. M., topic "Phillips Brooks." Evensong 8 P. M., (seats free.) Rev. Walter E. Bentley will preach on "The First Miracle," followed by a brief organ recital.

AT SOUTH CHURCH, MADISON AV. AND 33d St., Rev. Roderick Terry, D. D., Pastor.—Services at 11 A. M. and 4 P. M.; the pastor will preach.

AT THE CHURCH OF THE DIVINE PATERNITY, Central Park West and 76th St., Charles H. Eaton, D. D. Pastor.—Services, 11 A. M. and 8 P. M.; morning subject, "An Argument for Church Membership"; evening sermon by Rev. Coleman Adams, D. D., Brooklyn, and ordination to the ministry of the Assistant Minister, Mr. C. F. Patterson; special music.

CHURCH OF ST. MARY THE VIRGIN, 130 West 46th St.—Masses for communion 7:30, 8:15, 9; solemn mass and sermon, 10:45; solemn evensong, 4.

CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION, FIFTH AV. & 10th St., Rev. Percy S. Grant, Rector.
Morning service 11 A. M.
Musical service 4 P. M.
Anthem: "O Lamb of God".....Dvorak
Offertory: "Hail Gladdening Light".....Martin
Evening service 8 P. M.
Sittings free at all services.

CHURCH OF THE HEAVENLY REST, FIFTH AV., Above 45th St., Rev. D. Parker Morgan, D. D., Rector.—8 A. M., holy communion; 11 A. M., morning prayer, sermon by the rector; 4 P. M., special missionary service; address by Rev. Joshua Kinaber.

CHURCH OF THE STRANGERS,

WEST 57TH ST., NEAR 8TH AVE.
Rev. D. ASA BLACKBURN, Pastor.
11 A. M., "A Bankrupt Sinner."
7:45 P. M., "Take Heed."
All Seats Free. Deems Bible Class, 10 A. M.

CHURCH OF THE TRANSFIGURATION, 5 East 29th St.—Communions, 7, 8, and 8 o'clock. Choral CELEBRATION, 10:30. Service on Christian Education by Rev. Dr. Cole, Warden of St. Stephen's College. Choral EVEN SONG, 4 o'clock. Rev. A. B. Conger delivers his THIRD CONFERENCE, 8 P. M.

CHURCH OF ZION AND ST. TIMOTHY, 57th Street, Between 8th and 9th Avenues.
8 A. M.—Holy Communion.
11 A. M.—Morning service: Sermon by the Rector, the Rev. Dr. Lubeck.
8 P. M.—Evening prayer: Sermon by Rev. J. U. Neifert, B. A.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHAPEL, Parish House, 211 and 213 East 42d St. Rev. LESLIE E. LEARNED, Pastor.
Morning service.....11:00 A. M.
Evening service.....8 P. M.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH, MADISON Avenue and 44th Street, the Rev. David H. Greer, D. D., Rector.—Service in the morning at 11 o'clock. Afternoon service 4 o'clock. Dr. Greer will preach.

ST. JOHN'S CHAPEL, TRINITY PARISH, Varick St., Below Canal.—Sunday services, 7:30, 10:30 A. M., 7:30 P. M. Seats free.

ST. MATTHEW'S CHURCH, 84TH ST., NEAR Central Park West, Rev. ARTHUR H. JUDGE, Rector.—8 A. M., Holy Communion; 11 A. M., morning prayer and sermon; 8 P. M., evening prayer and sermon.

ST STEPHEN'S CHURCH, 122-128 West 69th St. Rev. NATHAN A. SEAGLE, Rector.
Services 8, 11 A. M.; 4, 8 P. M.

ST. THOMAS'S CHURCH, 5TH AV. AND 53D St.—Holy communion at 8 o'clock; morning prayer, sermon, and holy communion at 11 o'clock; evening prayer and sermon, 4 o'clock; Rt. Rev. Thomas Underwood Dudley, D. D., LL. D., Bishop of Kentucky, will preach morning and evening.

EVANGELICAL LUTHERAN CHURCH OF the Advent, 2,307 Broadway, Above 83d St., Rev. G. F. Krotel, D. D., Pastor. Service 11 A. M. Sunday school, 9:30 A. M.

EVANGELICAL LUTHERAN CHURCH OF St. James, Madison Av. and 73d St., Rev. J. B. Remensnyder, D. D., Pastor.—Morning, 11; evening at 8.

EVANGELICAL LUTHERAN CHURCH OF the Holy Trinity, 21st St., Near 6th Av., Rev. C. Armand Miller, Pastor.—Services, 11 A. M. and 8 P. M.

At Metropolitan Temple, 7th Av. & 14th St.

Dr. Cadman, 11, 4, 8. Meetings every night. Illustrated lecture Tuesday evening. Prayer meeting Wednesday, Mr. Cornell, leader.

Concert To-Night with Special Talent.

JANE STREET CHURCH, near 8th Av.—Rev. T. S. Bond, 11 and 8.

PERRY STREET CHURCH, near Greenwich St.—Holy communion, 11. Preaching, 8, by Rev. Geo. Mayer.

People's Church

61st St., near 3d Av.
Rev. E. A. DENT, Pastor.
Services, 11 and 8.

ST. ANDREW'S METHODIST EPISCOPAL Church, West 76th St.—The pastor, Dr. J. O. Wilson, will preach at 11 A. M. and 8 P. M.

Religious Notices.

ST. JAMES METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, Madison Av. and 126th St., Rev. E. S. Tipple, D. D., Pastor.—10:30 A. M., sermon by the pastor; 7:45 P. M., sermon by Rev. Dr. W. F. McDowell.

ST. PAUL'S METHODIST EPISCOPAL Church, West End Av. and 86th St. Rev. GEORGE P. ECKMAN, Ph.D., Pastor. Preaching by pastor, 11 A. M. and 8 P. M. SPECIAL MUSIC AT EVENING SERVICE. Prayer service Wednesday evening, 8 o'clock.

ADAMS CHAPEL, UNION THEOLOGICAL Seminary, 700 Park Avenue.—Sunday afternoon service at 4:30 o'clock. Preacher, the Rev. Charles Cuthbert Hall, D. D. All are welcome.

AT SCOTCH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, Central Park West, 96th St., Rev. Dr. Wylie, pastor; Rev. Mr. Gantz, Assistant.—Services 11, 8. Sabbath school 2:45. Welcome.

BRICK CHURCH,
Fifth Avenue and 37th Street,
Rev. Maltbie D. Babcock, D. D., Pastor.
Services Sunday, January 20th.
Dr. Babcock will officiate at 11 A. M.
Mr. Booker T. Washington of Tuskegee, Alabama, will speak.
At 4:30 P. M. Dr. Babcock will preach.
Sunday school 9:45 A. M.
Young Men's Bible class 10 A. M.
Weekly evening service Wednesday at 8 o'clock.

CENTRAL PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, NO. 220 West 57th St., Near Broadway, Rev. Wilton Merle Smith, D. D., Pastor; Rev. Walter Lowrie, Assistant.—8 A. M., morning prayer; 11 A. M., morning service, Dr. Smith preaches; 4:30 P. M., afternoon service, Mr. Lowrie preaches; 8 P. M., evening service, preaching by Dr. Smith. Sunday school at 3 P. M.; Christian Endeavor Monday evening, 8; devotional meeting Wednesday evening at 8.

DR. J. WILBUR CHAPMAN, FOURTH Church, West End Av., 91st St.—Services, 11 and 8. Rev. Ford C. Ottman of Newark will preach morning and evening; subject, "The Second Coming of Christ." Sunday school, 9:45.

FIFTH AVENUE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, Fifth Avenue and 55th Street.

The pastor, Rev. George T. Purves, D. D., will conduct the services on Jan. 20th, at 11 A. M. and 4:30 P. M. Afternoon topic, "The Story of Judas Iscariot." Bible school at 9:30 A. M. Young People's Meeting at 8 P. M. The public is cordially invited.

MADISON AVENUE PRESBYTERIAN Church, Corner 58d St., Howard Agnew Johnson, D. D., Pastor.—11 A. M., sermon by Dr. Charles L. Thompson, Secretary Board of Home Missions, on "Our Island Possessions"; 8 P. M., the pastor will preach on "Caleb's Constancy."

MADISON SQUARE PRESBYTERIAN Church, Madison Avenue, Corner of Twenty-fourth Street.—Sabbath services at 11 A. M. and 8 P. M. The pastor, Rev. C. H. Parkhurst, D. D., will preach. Bible school in Chapel 10 A. M.; classes for adults.

OLD FIRST CHURCH,

Fifth Avenue and Twelfth Street.
Howard Duffield, D. D., Minister.
Rev. Franklin Dwight, D. D., will preach 11 A. M., 4 P. M.
Welcome.

RUTGERS PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, Broadway, Cor. 73d St.—Services at 11 A. M., preaching by Rev. Hebert Hall, D. D., LL. D., President Union Theological Seminary; and 8 P. M., preaching by the Rev. A. F. Schauffler, D. D. Weekly service Wednesday evg. at 8 o'clock, conducted by Dr. Schauffler.

UNIVERSITY PLACE PRESBYTERIAN Church, Corner 10th St.—Public worship tomorrow 11 A. M. and 8 P. M. The pastor, Rev. George Alexander, D. D., will preach. Wednesday evening service at 8 o'clock.

WEST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, 42D ST., Between 5th and 6th Ave.—The pastor, the Rev. Anthony H. Evans, D. D., will preach at 11 A. M. and 8 P. M.; subject, prayer meeting on Wednesday, 8 P. M. You are invited.

BLOOMINGDALE REFORMED CHURCH, Broadway, Cor. 68th St.—The pastor, Rev. Wm. C. Stinson, D. D., will preach 11 A. M., "Christ's Call to the Christians of To-day"; 8 P. M., "A Midnight Wrestle with an Angel." All are welcome.

GRACE REFORMED CHURCH, SEVENTH AV. and 54th St., Rev. J. R. Duryee, D. D., Minister.—Services 11 A. M. and 8 P. M.

MARBLE COLLEGIATE REFORMED Church, 29th St. and 5th Av.
Rev. David Jas. Burrell, D. D., Minister.
Morning worship, 11 o'c. Evening worship, 8 o'c.
Dr. Burrell will preach at both services.
Morning subject, "A Cloud of Light and Darkness."
Evening subject, "An Obscure Prophet and What Befell Him."

FIFTH AVENUE COLLEGIATE REFORMED Church, 48th St. and 5th Av.
Rev. Donald Sage Mackay, D. D., Minister.
Morning worship, 11 o'c. Evening worship, 8 o'c.
Dr. Mackay will preach at both services. Mid-week meeting Wednesday, 8:15 P. M. Lectures on the "Pilgrim's Progress."

WEST END COLLEGIATE REFORMED Church, West End Av. and 77th St.
Rev. Henry Evertson Cobb, Minister.
Morning worship, 11 o'c. Evening worship, 8 o'c.
Mr. Cobb will preach at both services.

MIDDLE COLLEGIATE REFORMED CHURCH, 2d Av. and 7th St.
Rev. John G. Fagg, Minister.
Morning worship, 11 o'c. Evening worship, 8 o'c.
Mr. Fagg will preach at 11 A. M.; Rev. Edward Niles, 8 P. M.

ALL SOULS' CHURCH, UNITARIAN, 4TH AV. and 20th St.—Sunday school, 10 A. M. The pastor, Rev. Thomas R. Slicer, will preach at 11 A. M. subject, "The Letter and the Spirit." The public cordially invited.

AT LENOX AV. UNITARIAN CHURCH, REV. Merle St. C. Wright, Pastor.—Rev. John W. Chadwick will preach at 11. Sunday school, 9:45 A. M.

CHURCH OF THE ETERNAL HOPE, 81st St., Between Columbus and Amsterdam Avs.
Dr. Cuyler preaches 11 A. M.
"Ruskin's Sesame and Lilies."
Lecture, on "Iago," at 8 P. M.

CHURCH OF THE MESSIAH, 34TH ST., CORner of Park Av.—Services, 11 A. M.; Rev. Minot J. Savage, D. D., will preach. Fourth sermon in series on "The Passing and the Permanent in Religion." Subject, "The Origin and Nature of Man." Sunday school, 10 o'clock, in chapel; entrance, Park Av. All are cordially invited.

CHURCH OF THE NEW JERUSALEM, 35TH St., Between Park and Lexington Avs., the Rev. Julius H. Ives, Pastor.—Sunday School, 9:45 A. M. Church service, 11 A. M. Preaching by the Pastor. Subject: "The Four Girdles." Chapel of Divine Providence, 356 West 44th St. Sunday School, 3 P. M. Evening service and administration of the Holy Supper, 8 o'clock.

A NEW COVENANT MADE WITH THE Church of the First Born, House of Israel, that they may enter into life eternal without the death of their mortal bodies. 108 1st St., 8:30 and 7:30 P. M.

AT TEMPLE BETH-EL, 5TH AV. AND 76TH St., Regular Sunday services at 11 A. M. Rev. Dr. S. Schulman will lecture.

TEMPLE EMANU-EL, 5TH AV. AND 43D Street.—Sunday services for the season will be resumed on Sunday next, the 20th inst., at 11:30 A. M. Dr. Silverman will lecture on "The Vices of Our Time." (1st, "The Lust for Money.")

AT REFORMED CATHOLIC SERVICES IN Christ's Mission, 142 West 21st Street, evening, 7:45, Rev. James O'Connor, pastor. Dr. Fassnotti speaks: "Reasons for Renouncing Romanism."

"CHRISTIANITY AND CONFUCIANISM"

A fair comment on the recent speech of the Chinese Minister, WU TING FANG, by

TALCOTT WILLIAMS Philadelphia,
West Side Auditorium, 57th St. and 8th Ave.
Sunday, 4:15. For men exclusively. All seats free.
GWILYM MILES Will Sing.

Disciples of Christ, 119th St., Bet. Lenox and Fifth Aves.
11 A. M., Rev. Lemuel Moss, D. D., will preach.
7:45 P. M., Rev. J. M. Philputt, D. D., pastor, will preach on "A Personal Question."

DISCIPLES OF CHRIST, (UNITARIAN,) Pastor,
REV. B. O. DENHAM, 323 W. 56th St.
10:45 A. M., Our Divine Friend Now on Earth.
8 P. M., Church Membership and Salvation.

DR. CARL E. DUFFT, Soloist.
FRANK L. SMITH, Speaker.
Association Hall, 4th Avenue and 23d Street, 3:45 P. M. Meeting for men only.

FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST, 137-143 West 48th St., Between 6th and 7th Avs.—Christian Science service Sundays, at 10:45 A. M. and 8 P. M. Wednesday evenings at 8 o'clock. Reading rooms open daily from 9 to 5.

FIVE POINTS HOUSE OF INDUSTRY, 155 Worth St., William F. Barnard, Superintendent.—Service of song on Sunday at 3:30 P. M. Singing by the choir of children of the institution. Public cordially invited. Donations of clothing and shoes solicited.

HENRY FRANK.

Carnegie Lyceum. Mornings, 11:15. Special Music. Subject,
"CRIMES AND CRUDITIES OF CONSCIENCE."

HUGH O. PENTECOST,
64 Madison Av., near 27th St., Sunday, 11 A. M.
"Talking With Mars."

METAPHYSICAL ALLIANCE.—Richard Ingalese speaks Sunday evening at 8:15 at the Chapter Room, Carnegie Hall. Subject, "Freedom." All are welcome.

MORAVIAN CHURCH, LEXINGTON AV. AND 30th St., Rev. H. A. Gerdson, Pastor.—Services, 11 A. M. Seats free.

SPIRITUALISM.—DIVINE CIRCLE, CHIMNEY Corner Hall, 25th St., 6th Av.; Sunday evenings, 8, wonderful tests to all; MANNA STRAFFORD, Christ's inspired medium; meetings, Brooklyn, 610 Lafayette Av., Sundays, 3; evenings, private sittings.

SPIRITUALISM.—FIRST ASSOCIATION, TUXedo, Madison Av., 59th St.—Sunday, 3 and 8. J. Homer Altemus, phenomenal psychic, will demonstrate immortality; good music.

THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY,

8 Grand Circle, West 59th.—Lectures Sunday evenings, 8.15, Jan'y 20th, "Theosophy, Music, Beethoven," Eduard Herrmann.

Brooklyn Churches.

CENTRAL PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, Jefferson and Marcy Avs., Brooklyn, Rev. J. F. Carson, D. D., Pastor.—Services to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock and evening at 7:30. Strangers cordially invited.

Referees' Notices.

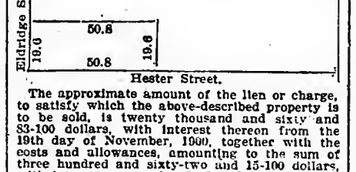
NEW YORK SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF New York.—ALFRED NEILSON, as executor of the last will and testament of Julia Mills, deceased, Plaintiff, against MATILDA MICHAELIS et al., Defendants.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, duly made and entered in the above-entitled action on the 26th day of December, 1900, I, the undersigned, the referee appointed therein, will sell at public auction on the 23rd day of January, 1901, at twelve o'clock noon, at the New York Real Estate Salesrooms, No. 111 Broadway, in the Borough of Manhattan, of the City of New York, by Herbert A. Sherman, auctioneer, the premises described in said judgment as follows:

All that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land, with the building thereon erected, situate, lying, and being in the Tenth Ward of the City of New York, and more particularly bounded and described as follows, viz.: Beginning at the corner formed by the intersection of the easterly side of Eldridge Street, with the northerly side of Hester Street; running thence northwardly along the easterly side of Eldridge Street nineteen feet and six inches; thence eastwardly parallel with the said northerly side of Hester Street and through a party wall fifty feet and eight inches; thence southwardly and parallel with the said easterly side of Eldridge Street nineteen feet and six inches to the said northerly side of Hester Street, and thence westwardly along the said northerly side of Hester Street fifty feet and eight inches to the point or place of beginning, be the same more or less. The premises above described being now known as number sixty-four Eldridge Street and number one hundred and five Hester Street.—Dated New York, December 29th, 1900. EMIL GOLDMARK, Referee.

PHILBIN, BEEKMAN & MENKEN, Attorneys for Plaintiff, No. 111 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York.

The following is a diagram of the premises referred to in the foregoing notice of sale:



The approximate amount of the lien or charge, to satisfy which the above-described property is to be sold, is twenty thousand and sixty and 83-100 dollars, with interest thereon from the 19th day of November, 1900, together with the costs and allowances, amounting to the sum of three hundred and sixty-two and 15-100 dollars, with interest on one hundred and sixty-two and 15-100 dollars from the 19th day of December, 1900, and the expenses of this sale. The approximate amount of taxes

The New York Times.

"All the News That's Fit to Print."

PUBLISHED EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.

NEW YORK, SATURDAY, JAN. 19, 1901.

OFFICES:

NEW YORK:
Publication Office.....41 Park Row
All American District Telegraph Offices.
WASHINGTON.....515 Fourteenth St.
SWITZERLAND, Geneva: P. Drehmann, Librairie Nouvelle, Rue du Mont Blanc.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

DAILY, per Month	$0.50
DAILY, per Year	6.00
DAILY AND SUNDAY, per Year	7.50
SUNDAY, per Year	1.50
MONDAY, with Financial Supplement, per Year	1.00
DAILY AND SUNDAY, per Month	0.65
THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW, per Year	1.00

For postage to foreign countries add 80 cents per month.

SIXTEEN PAGES.

AND REVIEW OF BOOKS AND ART.

UNTRIED PATHS.

No retired statesman ever gained reputation as a sage by such an utterance as that of ex-President CLEVELAND at the annual dinner of the Holland Society. We expect our wise men to tell us, not merely that we are in a bad way, but what we ought to do to set ourselves right. Mr. CLEVELAND solemnly assures us that "in this time of headlong National heedlessness" we have embarked upon "a strange voyage, without count of cost and without chart or compass," and there he leaves us. If he is right, we must be in imminent peril of destruction. This strange voyage, these unknown waters, without chart or compass—it is appalling. In alarm and mortal fear we ask what we shall do to be saved. Shall we put about? Shall we keep on? Shall we lie to and wait for help? What on earth shall we do? Mr. CLEVELAND does not give us a word of counsel. Mr. HARRISON did not give us a word of counsel.

Yet these are men of the very highest advisory qualification. They have held the office of President and sat at the head of the table in the chief National council. Their serious minds have deeply pondered the policies of the Nation. In times of doubt and apprehension people would naturally turn to them for guidance. They tell us we are in desperate need of guidance, but they offer none. They startle us with their dark pictures and gloomy forebodings, but we get no help.

Mr. BRYAN did offer specific remedies for the evils he pointed out. After thoughtful consideration the country rejected his treatment and threw away his prescription. There at least was a completed transaction. But what are we to do about Mr. CLEVELAND and Mr. HARRISON? They feel our pulse, take our temperature, and go away telling us that we are suffering from frightful maladies that we have brought upon ourselves by our own indiscretions. They leave no medicine, they offer no hope, save that Mr. CLEVELAND pauses at the door to say that he thinks we may pull through. "The Republic will in some sort be saved." That is pretty cold comfort. Does not this sterile utterance indicate that Mr. CLEVELAND really has nothing to say on this subject?

Analysis seems to show that it is the untried path that chiefly fills his mind with forebodings. He does allude to "the evasion of our Constitutional limitations," but that cannot be considered a substantive criticism until its author supports it with judicial decisions and other authoritative interpretations to show that we have disregarded the Constitution. He speaks of headstrong National heedlessness, of conservatism jauntily cast aside, and of reckless tumult. Surely this is mere rhetoric. Has any National policy been more faithfully considered by those who planned and executed it, or more thoroughly discussed by the people than the policy the Administration is now pursuing in the Philippines? What are these new conditions but the outcome of the Spanish war? Yet it was President CLEVELAND, in his last annual message to Congress, in December, 1896, who used this language:

> When the inability of Spain to deal successfully with the insurrection has become manifest, and it is demonstrated that her sovereignty is extinct in Cuba for all purposes of its rightful existence, and when a hopeless struggle for its re-establishment has degenerated into a strife that means nothing more than the useless sacrifice of human life and the utter destruction of the very subject matter of the conflict, a situation will have been presented in which our obligations to the sovereignty of Spain will be superseded by higher obligations which we can hardly hesitate to recognise and discharge.

This is not only a striking picture of a bad situation and the indication of a positive remedy, but it is a courageous assumption of responsibility. Mr. CLEVELAND points out war as a not improbable outcome of the situation then existing, and tells the people that it will be our high obligation to undertake that war and fight it to a just conclusion. The war was fought. We may say that it was CLEVELAND'S war almost as much as MCKINLEY'S war, since he clearly pointed out the conditions in which it would be inevitable, in which he would certainly have undertaken it himself. But now that the war has been fought and obligations have come of it, he seems to wish that we could shirk them, or at least to believe that they imperil our welfare, if not our existence. Either Mr. CLEVELAND was headstrong and heedless in 1896 or he is now much too faint-hearted.

There is not a word or a warning of Mr. CLEVELAND'S Holland Society speech that might not have been addressed to CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS by the spokesman of a mutinous fo'castle council two nights before his landfall on this side of the Atlantic. Must we sit in dumb inaction because we have not chart or compass? Must we turn back because we have not yet seen the end of the voyage? Must we refuse to take the next step because we do not see the whole path? Must we reject all suggestions to greatness made along an untried path? Must we sit in dumb content within the circle of the camp-fire light because beyond that is darkness? Not so was this Nation made, not so was any great nation ever made. Least of all is this fit matter for a feast of descendants of Dutchmen, who, without any fear, put into all the unknown seas and attained to national distinction because they were not afraid to do new things. It is too late now, in the face of all the examples, to deny that "the thoughts of men are widened with the process of the suns." The United States will not be stopped in the broader course upon which it has entered. Certainly it will not be stopped by vague alarms. Nor will public opinion be changed about by such blind miscomprehensions of current history as that from which proceeds Mr. CLEVELAND'S statement that in the Philippines we "are killing natives in an effort to possess their lands." It is evident that the mind that takes this view of our attempt to restore order and establish civil government in the islands has never pictured forth the consequences of our desisting from that effort, or weighed well the responsibilities we should assume by leaving the destinies of nine million people to be worked out by the two or three thousand who have armed themselves against us.

THE PRUSSIAN BI-CENTENARY.

Doubtless that was an impressive celebration of a memorable event that was celebrated in Berlin on Thursday with so much military pomp. The Prussian monarchy was a thing of small beginnings. Not till half a century after its establishment by the coronation of the first King of Prussia did the little kingdom cut much figure in the politics of Europe. It was only upon the sufferance of the Holy Roman Empire, that is to say of Austria, that the first King of Prussia was allowed to assume the monarchical title. There was no great man at the head of Prussian affairs between the Great Elector and the Great FREDERICK. It is this latter of whom his historian says that "able editors still vaguely account this man the founder of the Prussian monarchy." In spite of CARLYLE'S demonstration that the foundations were laid before his hero's time, the able editors were practically in the right. It was FREDERICK the Great who made his country a first-class power in Europe.

It is true that this position she afterward lost. The decline from Rossbach and Leuthen and Zornsdorf to Jena and Auerstadt was as marked as the advance to a greater position than ever that was affirmed and vindicated at Koeniggratz and Sadowa and Woerth and Sedan. It was another great Prussian, born a century after FREDERICK the Great, who was to rehabilitate and advance his Fatherland. By winning for Prussia, first the clear leadership of the German-speaking peoples, and then for Germany the military leadership of Europe, BISMARCK crowned the edifice which FREDERICK the Great had reared and of which FREDERICK the Great's predecessors had laid the cornerstone. And it is not creditable to the magnanimity of the present Kaiser that, in his solicitude for a great navy, he managed to make a speech about the development of Prussia without so much as mentioning BISMARCK'S name.

By the consent of all, even of those who most dislike and resent the facts, the most conspicuous facts of the close of the nineteenth century have been the growth of the German Empire and of the Republic of the United States, and the entry of each of them into world politics, as having outgrown "the home market" for its superabundant energy and efficiency. They are founded upon diametrically opposite principles. "The consent of the governed" is equally necessary to each, but in the Republic it is interpreted to mean that it is from this that the Government derives its power, and in the Empire that it is the business of the governed to consent, or, in default of that, of the Government to prevent any open or effective expression of their dissent. No American can doubt which of these theories is the true one, or that which is to command the future. No American, therefore, can fail to regard the present King of Prussia and German Emperor as a picturesque survival and anachronism, or doubt that the system he represents is doomed. And this belief must gain ground in Germany itself, in spite of any possible multiplication of prosecutions for lèse-majesté. The German Empire, set in modern daylight, must "mend or end." And, among its minor but inherent sources of weakness is that very "hegemony" of Prussia without which it could not have been brought into existence, and which was the occasion of the celebration at Berlin. The celebration is, therefore, necessarily viewed much askance by the circumambient Saxons and Bavarians and Wirtembergers.

COAL EXPORTS AND SHIPPING.

We have already pointed out the precariousness of the present European demand for American coal, for general industrial use. The greatest assurance of permanence in our coal exports to Europe seems to be in the grades especially adapted for distillation in gas retorts. Good gas coals are scarce in Europe, and will never be cheap. We know of one transaction in American gas coal involving a million tons, the carriage of which has, as yet, only been in part provided for. Much attention has lately been attracted by the shipment of a cargo of American coal to the South Metropolitan Gas Company of London. It was not, however, by any means the first shipment of the kind to gas coal, which surprised the English gas chemists by yielding 11,088 cubic feet of 17.66 candle-power gas per ton. Under the circumstances there might very well be a large and increasing export of gas coals to Europe, as there has been for years to Cuba and South America, without especial reference to the condition of general trade.

That the situation of the coal markets of every part of Europe is such that large quantities of American coal would now be eagerly absorbed at prices satisfactory to the exporters is undoubtedly true. This is shown by the fact that whereas the coal exports of the United States to Europe in 1899 were only 35,322 tons, those for the first eight months of 1900 were 375,761 tons. The exports of last August alone, 97,189 tons, exceeded the total of 1899 by 175 per cent. The opinion has been expressed by well-informed shipping authorities that, under existing conditions, ships built for the coal trade could earn a profit if they returned in ballast. This is undoubtedly true. Meanwhile, however, there are not enough ships available to permit our coal operators to take advantage of the opportunity offered, and no charters are obtainable at cheap rates. As the price of coal advanced in European markets there was a corresponding advance in the rates of ocean freight from this country, and these have been further stiffened by the exigency of the demand for coal-carrying capacity. The present price of first-class bituminous steam coal is from $2.10 to $2.35 per ton, free on board ship at Newport News, Norfolk, Baltimore, or Philadelphia. Recent charters for coal to Mediterranean ports have been made at $5.10 to $5.30 per ton and to English ports at $4.50 to $4.60 per ton. The costs of unloading and distributing go far toward wiping out the narrow margin remaining in the competition with Welsh coals, and the profit to the exporter is not great enough to warrant much enthusiasm. Thus far the carriers have had the largest benefit from the export movement.

Plans for the building of a great fleet of ocean colliers have been seriously considered, and a beginning may be made in that direction, but how far it will go depends upon many things which are extremely uncertain. It not only costs a great deal of money to build ships, but it takes a good deal of time. There are plenty of adventurous capitalists who would risk the investment if they could have the ships now. What induces deliberation is the fear that before the ships, if now ordered, could be launched, the European coal panic will have subsided and prices declined to a level at which profits would be at least unsatisfactory. If we had a monopoly of virgin coal resources and were alone able to increase our output, the case would be different. The undeveloped coal fields of the world are beyond estimate. Europe will not long be content to depend upon this country even for the fuel needed to supplement her own mine output. While perfectly willing to make a convenience of us at the moment, and buy our coal if it is cheaper than other coal, or even as cheap, the fact is perfectly well understood abroad that dependence upon this country for permanent supplies of fuel would be a serious handicap in international competition, and more than an embarrassment in diplomatic intrigue. We are too dangerously aggressive as it is, and however much coal the European powers may buy of us, they will not breathe freely until they see their way clear to dispense with American coal if the occasion arises. In view of these considerations, which practical men will be disposed to weigh very carefully, we do not see in the coal export movement the basis for as great and beneficial a revival of our merchant marine as some writers have discovered. This is a direction in which American business enterprise, never timid and not always conservative, moves slowly. It is not very long since freight steamers were tied up to docks waiting for anything that might offer in the way of a cargo. Just now they are all employed and more are needed. But in six months or a year we may again see them idle and unprofitable. Extensive ship building to meet the present exigencies of the coal and iron trades might pay, but it would be a gamble, and we doubt if much American capital would find that class of investment attractive.

OMINOUS FRENCH STATISTICS.

Recent French official statistics are attracting much attention among thoughtful students of social problems in that country. They show conclusively what has long been known in a general way, that at the present rate of artificially restricted increase of population, a death rate normally high and an infant mortality abnormally so, France is relatively losing ground, and that if existing conditions continue operative it must sink to insignificance among the nations. The Senate has directed an investigation of the subject by a committee, and requested that with its report on the facts suggestions be offered as to practicable remedies for the conditions noted. We fear that the latter part of the committee's task will be extremely difficult. Conditions due in large degree to the national temperament, and scarcely less so to a social organization, especially in the cities, which makes marriage a convenience and a large family extremely inconvenient, are not easily remediable by any agency, and least so by legislation. In stating the problem which the Senate committee had in hand, Figaro shows that a century ago, about the time of the great Revolution, France had a population of 25,000,000; to-day it has only 38,000,000, a gain of 50 per cent.; that of Great Britain, from 12,000,000 to 40,000,000, a gain of 240 per cent.; that of Germany, from 15,000,000 to 55,000,000, a gain of 270 per cent., and that of Russia, from 25,000,000 to 100,000,000, a gain of 300 per cent. The current annual increase in the population of France by excess of births over deaths is only about 80,000; that of Great Britain, 325,000; that of Germany, 500,000. The French census of 1899, just published, shows that the gain in the population is now only one-fifth of 1 per cent. per annum. The births for the census year exceed the deaths by only 31,000, against 33,000 in 1898, 108,000 in 1897, and 93,000 in 1896. From this it would appear that the causes operating to restrict the increase of population in France are becoming steadily, though not uniformly, more potent from year to year. Obviously this tendency cannot proceed much further without showing a preponderance of deaths over births. In 1893 the difference in favor of the births was only 7,000. A nation furnishing such statistical comparisons cannot long hold her place, industrially, commercially, or politically.

Figures gathered from trustworthy French sources show that the language of that country, which at one time seemed more likely to become the universal language than any other, is now spoken by only 60,000,000 of people, whereas German is habitually spoken by 80,000,000 and English by 120,000,000. The more conspicuous success which has attended French efforts at colonization is in getting the French language spoken in her colonies. This is largely due to systematic effort in that direction, and partly to the fact that it is an easy language to learn by ear—much more so than either German or English. Outside of France and her colonies French is regarded rather as an accomplishment than as a business or social necessity. English has become the language of trade and German the language of science. French is still the language of the polite intercourse, perhaps, but to a less extent than formerly. By some thoughtful French writers this is attributed to the fact that the intense hatreds which were the natural outgrowth of the Napoleonic campaigns produced a prejudice against France which will not be eradicated for centuries to come, and that this has tended to attach the nations more closely to their own language and literature. The very general study of French in England and Germany is not misunderstood. PIERRE FOUCIN says on this subject: "French is the language of the enemy to the German and the Englishman. He learns it for the purpose of rivalry."

Comment on the significance of these statistics would come with better grace from French than from American sources. The conclusions of the Senate committee, and especially its recommendations, will be of unusual interest to students of social problems in all countries.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—There appeared in THE TIMES of Tuesday last, among the items of minor local news, one which stated that Mrs. MARY FERRAND, an employé in an up-town department store, had been "forced to undergo vaccination," and that blood poisoning had followed, of so severe a character that amputation of the woman's leg might be necessary. That this statement should have been printed in THE TIMES, and especially that the head, "Blood Poisoning from Vaccination," should have stood above it, resulted from one of those lamentable mishaps which care cannot always prevent, and which it is easier to regret than to explain. The item read exactly like those which fill the anti-vaccination leaflets, and naturally the queer people who fight the prevention of smallpox, delighted that we should have provided them with ammunition, are hastening to write us letters with this absurd yarn of ours as a text. For, alas and alas! the yarn was absurd, and, what is still worse, it twisted the truth into absolute falsehood. Mrs. FERRAND was vaccinated, but she was not "forced" to undergo the operation, for the very good reason that compulsory vaccination is a thing utterly unknown in this State. She must have yielded voluntarily to arguments which she regarded as sufficient, and, having so yielded, she exercised her own judgment again and had herself vaccinated on the leg instead of the arm, therein making a choice which every physician condemns as unwise and in some degree dangerous for all those who cannot afford or do not care to remain perfectly quiet for a considerable number of days. The so-called blood poisoning which followed was in all probability nothing but the results to be expected from the constant and active use of muscles in a state of high inflammation. If there was any real blood poisoning—which the Health Board officials who have investigated the case deny—it did not come "from" the vaccination, but simply followed it—a very different thing. Any wound, large or small, if not properly protected, may admit pathogenic infection to the blood, but the distance between after and because is enormous.

—In comparing the work of the Congressional committee now at West Point with that of the military court of inquiry which traversed the same ground a few days ago, injustice will be done if the difference between the powers and the purposes of the two bodies is not taken into consideration. The army officers went to the academy, not in search of material for sensational speeches on the floor of the House, but to obey certain definite orders issued by the War Department. Their object, in the words of those orders, was that of "inquiring into and reporting upon the alleged treatment of former Cadet OSCAR L. BOOS at the United States Military Academy, upon the measures taken to prevent such treatment of new cadets at the academy, and the extent to which new cadets are now subjected to such treatment." These ends the court of inquiry certainly attained, and it even went beyond its instructions, for it brought to light many happenings, good and bad, in the years that have elapsed since Cadet BOOS resigned. It can fairly be claimed by the members of the court that they elicited every material fact, as distinguished from deductions, which the Congressional committee has made public, and that they are hardly to be condemned because they preserved their judicial dignity, kept their individual opinions for their report, and neglected to heap [illegible] adjectives upon the witnesses signal committee, and that the latter, therefore, can go straight and quickly to all the scandalous episodes in academy history. It is thus able to provide "copy" continuously interesting, and to avoid what it regards as waste of time on the merits of the institution, its officers, and its undergraduates. Mr. DRUGS and his associates carefully refrain from touching upon the fact that the doings they describe so eloquently are matters of somewhat ancient history, and that many of the abuses have already been remedied.

—Mr. ALEXIS E. FRYE, late Superintendent of Public Schools in Cuba, has talked much more freely in Boston than he did here in regard to his resignation, after only fifteen months, of an office to which he had originally intended to devote, without any pecuniary reward, five years of his life. The explanation is, he said in an interview published by The Boston Herald, that he was "written out of Cuba" by a new school law approved by Gen. WOOD just before the visit of the Cuban school teachers to the United States. The law it superseded was drawn up by Mr. FRYE himself, and two months after it went into force the school attendance rose from 10,000 to 140,000. Then certain unnamed military officers who had been ordered to investigate the workings of the system reported that they had been able to find only 2,000 schools, instead of the 3,000 a mistranslation of one of Mr. FRYE'S financial documents caused them to think he claimed to be in existence. His explanation that he had reported the number of schoolrooms, while his critics had enumerated only school houses, seemed to satisfy Gen. WOOD, but soon after a new system was established under a law the framing of which had been entirely without Mr. FRYE'S knowledge or advice. Under it he became simply a figurehead, with no authority, and with no duties except to preside twice a year at meetings of a board consisting of the School Superintendent in each of the six provinces. Mr. FRYE said that he protested against these changes, and Gen. WOOD promised that the new law should be repealed so far as it was obnoxious to him, but nothing was done, and Mr. FRYE determined to resign. He did not do so at once because all arrangements for the trip of the teachers had been made by him and he wanted to attend personally to the execution of a plan to which he attached great importance. Mr. FRYE denied that he had any quarrel with Gen. WOOD and said that their parting was amicable. A possibly significant paragraph in the interview is one in which Mr. FRYE referred to a nephew of Senator HANNA, who some months ago was made Acting Commissioner of Schools in Cuba. "I presume," remarked Mr. FRYE, "that he had a hand in drafting the new law, but I do not know."

—A bill, the passage of which seems to be something less than absolutely necessary, is that just introduced in the Assembly by Mr. KELLY of Albany, compelling the payment of funeral expenses out of the first moneys that reach the hands of an executor or administrator. Undertakers, as a class, are not noted either for the moderation of their charges or for their inability to secure payment for their services. Like other business men, they undoubtedly make bad debts now and then, and it is safe to admit that they are the victims of occasional fraud, but why they should not take their chances with other creditors it is more than difficult to see. The law proposed would be special legislation of a kind rarely to be commended. Everybody knows, of course, that surviving relatives, while possessed by a new sorrow, are often eager to incur debts which seem to them excessive after the passage of a few weeks or months has produced its calming effect on the emotions and revived a realizing sense of life's continuing demands. This change of sentiment is perilous to the undertaker in some cases, but doesn't he take account of the risk in his scale of prices, and don't his books at the end of the year usually show a satisfactory balance? Such is the general impression, and general, too, is the belief that the undertaker incites to extravagance in the disposition of the dead oftener than he exerts his influence in the interests of a wise economy. The attempt, therefore, to make him a highly preferred creditor, and to hasten the collection of his bills without regard to their size, will not excite a large amount of popular approval. The undertaker certainly should get his just dues, but so should everybody else, and the law that is good enough for other people is quite good enough for him.

PRAYER ON INAUGURATION DAY.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On March 4, 1897, in the North Baptist Church of Camden, N. J., an hour was given, from 12 to 1 noon, to prayer for the President and the Nation, and I suggest that similar services be held all over the land on March 4, 1901.

It will be the hour of the inauguration, of the taking of the oath of office, and hence a good time for such a service. Many cannot go to Washington, but many Christians can go to their places of worship to unite in prayer and conference for their Nation and its rulers.

Our service, one of many I have initiated, was at my request held by the Evangelical Alliance, and in every city where there is an Alliance I suggest that its officers issue the call. In cities where there is none, and where other union is not possible, let each pastor arrange for a service among his own people.

Whatever may be thought of or said about partisanship, or that we may or may not have voted for the President, certainly in a Republic Christian men and women will see that we are not likely to have too many such prayer meetings and that this day and hour afford a fitting occasion for such united prayer for all who are in authority.

ALBERT G. LAWSON,
Pastor North Baptist Church.
Camden, N. J., Jan. 14, 1901.

FUTURE FINANCIAL LEGISLATION.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the last Presidential campaign the possibilities under the Financial act—that is to say, its defects—were one of the issues of the election. And this position, whatever be the blame, by implication, attaching to the Republican Party for having made such a law and for pretending that it was complete and satisfactory, was unquestionably correct as to facts.

Although it seems almost unnecessary to dwell on any question now so universally understood, I may perhaps be excused for referring to a statement made by Mr. Gage, the Secretary of the Treasury, in an interview on Aug. 25, 1900. Mr. Gage stated that by "perverse ingenuity" the law might be so applied as to put the country on a silver basis in every respect, and that the effect on the credit of the Government would be "most disastrous."

Let us remember that "perverse ingenuity" can be exercised by a Republican as well as by a Democratic Secretary of the Treasury, according either to his interpretation of the act or his opinions concerning the necessities of the Government and its interests. Even under a Republican Administration, therefore, might we find ourselves practically on a silver basis.

Silver remains a legal tender for all debts, under any Administration; outstanding bonds of the Government payable in coin can be redeemed at maturity by the Treasury in silver or gold, at the option of the Secretary and in his discretion, be he Republican or Democrat, monometallist, or bimetallist. As regards a previous statement by Mr. Gage that if bonds of the Government were not to be provisions.

It does not "demonetize" silver, that nightmare of bimetallists, for it makes no discrimination, on its face, between the two metals, and, in its practical working, I think it would cause none in the future. For if a creditor knows that he can be paid in gold if he wishes, or even if he only knows that he has the right to be so paid, when the debt becomes due, and also that he has the right to insist upon gold at his bank, usually he feels no alarm and does not ask for it—it is an inconvenient currency in the case of considerable sums. At one time there was actually a premium on paper currency in the City of New York!

It has been the fear heretofore of being paid in silver, the legal inability to demand gold, that has caused so much alarm to all creditors, all interests. Remove this fear, insecurity, alarm, and you will probably remove the demand for gold as cash currency, the wild desire to obtain it, of the private creditor. Incidentally, also, I think that such a clause would obviate the necessity of these special, private contracts payable specifically in gold, which are of doubtful legality and naturally obnoxious to debtors who, even in making them, consider them a sort of usury.

In my humble opinion the nervousness of the private or quasi-private creditor is more of a factor in precipitating a financial crisis than the doubts of the holder of bonds of the Government. Certainly the deposits in banks, and other private loans and contracts, so to speak, enormously exceed the amount owed by the Government on its bonds.

It has been objected that my proposition would tend to create a premium on gold. For the reasons, however, which I have stated, I believe that, in its practical working, such an amendment would have exactly the opposite effect, that it would tend to obviate, avoid, a premium on gold, to insure—in a natural, not an arbitrary way—that great desideratum, the parity of the two metals. A premium on gold is caused by an unusual demand for it, and such demand for gold is usually caused by the fear of being unable to obtain it—perhaps more by the fact that one cannot legally demand it, to be precise.

The suggestion which I have made is tentative, but may contain the germ of an idea which might be useful to those authorities on finance who are more competent than I to pronounce on the subject. They might strengthen it and remedy any deficiencies caused by my oversight or ignorance.

At the climax of our prosperity, at present, it should not be forgotten that a "chain is no stronger than at its weakest link," and that the crucial test of the present law would occur in a moment of commercial depression or wild financial alarm. The fact, I think, has been established and generally recognized that at such a time the Financial act now in force would be found to be seriously defective.

CARROLL BRYCE.

London, Jan. 1, 1901.

TO PREVENT SHIPWRECK.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The sad plight of the Russie, ashore on the coast of France, which has called forth the sympathy and prayers of the many thousands cognizant of their suffering and peril, leads me to urge upon the Government to require all vessels, sailing from whatever port, to carry mortar lines and rockets, such as are in use in all the life-saving stations along our coast.

Living as I have for over fifty years on the south coast of Long Island, I can recall many instances where the lives of those stranded upon our beach could have been saved if the ship had been as well provided with life-saving apparatus as are the stations on the shore.

When we consider that the same gale which drives a ship ashore would also bring a line to land, the wonder is that Captains ever venture to sea without them.

We, who often see the ocean raging and tossing in the gales so frequent upon our coast, can realise the great difficulty experienced in trying to hit so small a target as a vessel off shore, without taking into consideration the necessary calculation required to allow for the deflection of aim against the raging wind.

Many can recall the loss of the Circassian some fifteen years or more ago, when so many lives were lost, the Shinnecock tribe of Indians losing nearly all their able-bodied men. A mortar and line would have put them in communication with the shore had they been so provided, while those on shore could make no headway firing into the teeth of such a gale.

The weight and space required on shipboard are not to be considered, and common sense and common caution demand a law requiring all vessels to be provided for such emergencies.

CONSTANT READER.
Centre Moriches, L. I., Jan. 11, 1901.

CANNOT DO WITHOUT THE TIMES.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There was a time, I have been told, when I could not go to sleep without my bottle; during a subsequent period of my youth I did not go to sleep before I had a licking; of late I have not been able to slumber peacefully before I have read THE NEW YORK TIMES. Somehow, THE TIMES has got a hold on all the members of my family, and when the postman brings the mail in the morning there is a scramble among them as to who shall read it first.

I do not get a chance to read it myself until I return from business in the evening. It frequently occurred that the last reader dropped it in some corner of the house, compelling me to lose valuable time in searching for the paper. This led to a peremptory order from the head of the family that THE TIMES must be kept at a fixed place, and whoever reads it must put it back to its place or suffer punishment by being barred from reading it thereafter.

The penalty made the mandate effective. On my birthday following the issuance of this order my daughter presented me with a beautifully carved paper rack, which was to be the receptacle of THE NEW YORK TIMES. I was pleased, and accepted the present with grateful smiles and words of commendation at my daughter's thoughtfulness. Alas! "The best-laid plans of men and mice," &c.

When I came home last night and looked for THE TIMES the rack was empty. A frown apepared on my brow, and, in a voice plainly showing my irritation, I called to my wife: "Why isn't THE TIMES in the rack?" "I'm sure I don't know; I haven't seen it to-day," she replied. I next addressed myself to my daughter, but she, too, protested that she had not seen THE TIMES. By that time my temperature had risen several degrees, and I was about to say something severe, when our cook appeared on the scene, saying: "Die New Yorker Zeitung is to-day not come." "What," said I, "THE NEW YORK TIMES did not come to-day? How is that? What can the reason be? Maybe there was no New York mail; perhaps storms, blockades—"

"Oh, no," said my daughter, "that cannot be the reason, for I received a letter with samples from Wanamaker's to-day."

"Then there must be some other cause. Is it possible that the Paris edition has superseded THE NEW YORK TIMES? Hard apostle of reform? Has vice ceased to exist in the metropolis? Has the office of THE TIMES, finding that he has nothing more to write about, resigned his place? Or—Heaven forbid!—is there no more news fit to print and has THE TIMES, its mission fulfilled, retired from business?"

While thus musing, it dawned upon my mind that there might be yet another cause. Perhaps my subscription has run out and the paper was stopped on that account. I have no data for this conclusion, but, if it be so, please find inclosed my check for $7.50 for the daily and Sunday TIMES, and kindly send me all back numbers.

We oftimes find fault with the world when something goes wrong with us, but upon close inquiry discover the fact that we are at fault ourselves. ERNST TROY.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 10, 1901.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITORS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Depositors in the savings banks of the State expected to have a little rest this year, but we find what is unusual, that the same fight for the surplus is to be continued this year. Gov. Odell, with his powerful influence, is to help the looters. Many of us are small depositors. We are getting now only 3½ per cent., and in a few years probably we shall have the interest cut down to 2½ or 3 per cent. How much the State will demand we cannot tell.

The savings banks are not too strong now, as any one can see by examining the recent reports. In the report of the savings banks of New York County for the year ended Dec. 31, 1899, the amount due to depositors was $473,970,215, and the surplus $60,894,814. One will see that the surplus is about 13 per cent. of the amount over what is due to the depositors.

Kings County savings banks show amount due depositors $134,618,639, and surplus $20,043,537, which is nearly 15 per cent. Westchester County had due depositors $14,836,205, surplus $1,314,167, only a little over 9 per cent. over what is due depositors. It will be seen by examining the statements in detail that the surplus is furnished by a few very strong banks. Here let the present writer state what is a fact, that the securities are inventoried at the market value. It is no doubt a true statement that there is a depreciation going on steadily in all the securities which they hold. If one will read the daily papers, it will be seen that the mortgages which are put at par are being foreclosed at a great loss. Too large an amount has been placed on real estate in some parts of the city.

The State should not permit any of the savings banks to declare dividends unless there was at least 12 per cent. surplus. Let us say a word to Gov. Odell, as he reads THE TIMES, and it is as follows: Let us poor depositors have a little peace this year of prosperity. He will find, if he carries out some of the plans outlined in his message, that there will be enough money in the State Treasury without robbing us.

IV.

New York, Jan. 14, 1901.

Boxing at Church Functions.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Some years ago, in my native city, I heard they were to put in a gymnasium at the Young Men's Christian Association rooms, where the boys could use the boxing gloves. I said to one of the Directors, "You will bring up a Nation of prizefighters." He laughed at the prediction. His son went to Yale that Fall, and came home soon on a vacation with a broken nose from boxing. When I read THE TIMES this morning and the account of the church athletic games at St. Bartholomew's Chapel and clubroom, and the boxing exhibition between two young lads, fourteen and sixteen years of age, in the presence of Drs. Greer, Bolton, and Sturgis, I was pained. Then, to read of our Vice President-elect indorsing prizefighting up to the twenty-third round, I said THE TIMES will certainly have an editorial condemning this horrible business, but no, I read on the same page, "Another Boxing Match Ends Seriously." At Atlantic City, after a ten-round match, Louis Megane, a local pugilist, fell to the floor in a faint. To-day he is in the City Hospital at the point of death, and his opponent in jail, awaiting the result of the former's injuries.

This and the hazing at Colby, whereby a young athlete who was "bucked" by the goat in his initiation to Delta Upsilon, is now suffering nightly from convulsions, is it not high time for you to speak out? T.

New York, Jan. 11, 1901.

Flogging for Kidnappers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mere death has no terrors for the hardened criminal, especially the easy one of "electrocution," for it means no punishment at all, there being in such minds the settled conviction that there is "no hereafter." Punishment, therefore, to mean anything to such minds, must be inflicted on the living man; he must be made to realize it, and in the most quivering shape.

It is a false humanity which spares the guilty at the expense of the innocent, and the welfare of the general public. English common sense nipped garroting in the bud during the time of terror in London, when pedestrians were afraid to stir out of their houses after dark. The newspapers of the country cannot do a better service than to urgently recommend flogging for what will soon be a worse epidemic than the "grip" if not checked at once.

T. H.

New York, Jan. 12, 1901.

NUGGETS.

No Friends of His.

Housewife—Shame! You are going to the dogs.

Tramp Caller—Not at all, lady! I'm tryin' to keep out o' dere way.—Chicago News.

Consoling Thought.

A medical journal says that man's little toe is disappearing. This is comforting news. There will be that much less for the conductor to tread on in a crowded street car.—Washington Star.

Seeking a Clue.

Bobbs—But, even if we could communicate with Mars, what would we ask the people there, anyway?

Dobbs—Might ask them if they had seen Pat Crowe.—Baltimore American.

Impending Social Rivalries.

"Mars can boast a much older civilization than ours."

"Say, how their first families will look down on ours when we begin to get chummy!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Not to be Outdone.

"Has your wife much social ambition?"

"Social ambition! When she read about Lady Curzon's elephant party in India she said if she knew where she could rent some whales she'd give a whale party."—Detroit Free Press.

A HUNDRED YEARS AGO.

S. E. Kiser in Chicago Times-Herald.

Men couldn't steam across the sea,
A hundred years ago,
And money wasn't all they thought
Worth having here below;
They had no elevators then
To hoist them through the air,
And yet they thought, the poor old guys,
That they were wonderful and wise,
And that the world was fair.

Men couldn't talk by telephone,
A hundred years ago;
They sowed and reaped and thrashed by hand
And when the streams were low
They had to stop the mills and wait
For God's good rain to fall,
And yet they proudly went about
With heads held high and chests pushed out,
And thought they knew it all.

Their battleships were made of wood,
A hundred years ago,
And oh, the weak old ways they had
For laying people low!
They had no lightning trains on which
To flit athwart the scene,
And yet those poor, benighted men
Supposed that things were perfect then—
Alas! but they were green!

Men had to load each time they shot,
A hundred years ago,
And then, alas! they had no gas
To light things here below!
There were no trolley cars to dodge,
No horseless things to tame,
And yet, poor fools, they thought that they
Had all the blessings, in their day,
That men might ever claim!

But they had pessimists around
A hundred years ago,
Who mourned because their sons could ne'er
Obtain a proper show!
And they predicted dire things—
Alas! they were not slow!
And yet they proudly went about
With heads held high and chests pushed out,
And thought they knew it all.

AMERICANS IN THE LEGION OF HONOR

Decorations Made in Connection with the Paris Exposition.

SEVENTY-ONE ARE HONORED

List Includes Almost Every One of Prominence Connected with the United States Exhibit.

PARIS, Jan. 18.—The list of decoratioos of the Legion of Honor bestowed on Americans in connection with the Paris Exposition was published this evening. The Government has been profuse in the decorations bestowed upon Americans. An examination of the list shows all the officers of the United States Commission to the exposition, all the Directors, two women members, and Mr. De Young, President of the National Commissioners, as well as thirteen American representatives of various juries and twenty-one exhibitors.

Ferdinand W. Peck had already been made a Grand Officer. Mr. Tuck is now made a Commander, while the ten officers named to-day make eleven in all, as Benjamin D. Woodward received the honor last August.

The decoration of Mrs. Daniel Manning and Mrs. Potter Palmer is quite a distinction, as the honor is seldom bestowed upon women. The list is as follows:

Promotion to Commander—Somerville Pickney Tuck, President of the International Court at Cairo.

To Be Officers—Frederick Brackett, James H. Cauldwell, Charles T. Cook, William Deering of the Harvester Company, James H. Gore, Cyrus H. McCormick, J. Pierpont Morgan, Augustus St. Gaudens, John La Farge, and Frederick J. V. Skiff of Chicago.

To Be Chevaliers—Millward Adams of Chicago, Lieut. Comamnder A. C. Baker, Tarleton H. Bean, Paul Blackmar, Sylvanie Block, Alexander S. Capehart, George M. Chartier, Frank Wigglesworth Clarke, Charles A. Coolidge, Edward W. Dayton, and Charles R. Dodge.

Francis E. Drake, James W. Dundley, George W. Easman, Thomas B. Egan, Daniel C. French, John Getz, George W. Ochs, Alexander Gordon, Clement A. Griscom, Thomas Hastings, Franklin H. Head, Carl Hering, Edward Holbrook, James W. Howard, Henry M. Howe, Louis M. Howland, Mylan H. Hulbert, B. E. Huntley, William G. Irwin of Hawaii, Lazare Kuhn, H. E. Krehbiel, Robert S. MacGurdy, John H. MacGibbons, Mrs. Daniel Manning, Mrs. Potter Palmer, Michel De Young, Charles Miller of the Pennsylvania Commission, Francis D. Millet, William J. P. Moore, Charles A. Moore of New York, Norton P. Otis of the New York Commission.

John S. Patterson, George B. Post, Francis C. Pratt of Hartford, Gonzalo de Quesada of Cuba, John K. Rees, a professor of columbia University; E. S. Rice, Howard J. Rogers, Charles T. Schoen of Pittsburg, Lyman C. Smith, Willard A. Smith, A. G. Spalding, Ambrose Swasey, William M. Taylor, Louis C. Tiffany, George Westinghouse, George S. Wilking, William F. Willoughby of Washington, and Lucien Wulfin.

GEORGE W. OCHS DECORATED.

Manager of the Paris Edition of The New York Times Gets the Legion of Honor.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 18.—George W. Ochs was today decorated by the French Government with the Legion of Honor. The decoration was conferred on account of the notable success achieved by Mr. Ochs in publishing the Exposition Edition of THE NEW YORK TIMES. This is the first time such an honor has been conferred on an American journalist.

George W. Ochs, a brother of the publisher of THE NEW YORK TIMES, is the manager of The Times and The Tradesman of Chattanooga, Tenn. He is President of the Chamber of Commerce of that city, and was for four years Mayor of Chattanooga. Mr. Ochs was general manager of the Paris Exposition edition of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

In an interview with the Washington correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES last Saturday, M. Jules Cambon, the French Ambassador to the United States, said:

The great value of the publication of THE NEW YORK TIMES in Paris was that it was so thoroughly American, and therefore afforded readers in Europe an excellent idea of American thought and feeling. The French and English papers contain only brief telegrams about American affairs, giving only the general news. THE NEW YORK TIMES in Paris gave a full idea of American events, and very important and interesting glimpses of the life of America.

M. Cambon added that he hoped the Paris edition would be continued, saying:

It would create a demand which would grow, and in my opinion it is only to such an enterprise that we can look for a complete understanding between the two countries.

I say the two countries, because American knowledge of the real France is also very limited. The two countries have the same aims and are united by a bond of sympathy and affection. But full knowledge of each other they have not, and no greater public service can be performed by an American newspaper than in conducting an enterprise which will infallibly strengthen the ties between them by leading each to a clearer understanding and hence to a fuller sympathy with the other. Better knowledge will lead to this, and the work can best be done by the interchange of news between the two countries through such a medium as the excellent paper which was published in Paris last year.

LONG QUESTION FOR EXPERTS.

One of Over 4,000 Words in the Winters Will Contest.

One question asked of two witnesses took up the entire day in Part X. of the Supreme Court yesterday where the Winters will contest is on trial before Justice Bischoff and a jury. It was one of the longest hypothetical questions that has been put to experts in the Supreme Court for some time. It was just 4,200 words in length.

This question was practically an entire review of the life of Anna Maria Dooley Winters, the woman who, when she was seventy-four years old, married Byram L. Winters, a law clerk earning $15 a week. Mrs. Winters at her death left her husband all her property, supposed to be worth over a million dollars. Every bit of the testimony as to the woman's eccentric actions was brought out in the question, but at no time was her name mentioned. The first reading came when the lawyers on both sides wanted the Court to determine just how the question should be framed. After some twenty corrections were made it was read to Dr. Carlos F. MacDonald. This took nearly half an hour. The answer came in half a second, being the single word, "insane," as the question in effect meant, "If Mrs. Winters acted in the way that has been described, was she sane or insane?"

The reading was then repeated to Dr. Austin Flint, and he gave the same answer. One other expert will be called on Monday morning, and the same question will be put to him.

Jury Out in the Blinn Case.

After a lengthy charge by Justice Truax in the Supreme Court yesterday afternoon the jury in the case of Christian Blinn, the builder, against Mrs. Julia Schwartz, to recover property valued at $120,000, which he claims was secured from him by fraud while he was in an asylum, retired, and at a late hour had shown no signs of returning a verdict. Justice Truax ordered that a sealed verdict be returned if the jury should return during the night.

Guardian for Heirs of Mr. Duryea.

Justice Dickey, in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, yesterday, appointed William McArthur of 150 Nassau Street, Manhattan, guardian of James C. Sprigg and Julia Duryea Sprigg, infants, in the contest of

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

There were many receptions yesterday, and these entertainments kept society busy the entire afternoon. Mrs. H. Mason Rabourg gave the first of two days, with music, and others who had "days" were Mrs. James Henry Parker, 18 East Sixty-ninth Street; Mrs. Maitland Armstrong, Mrs. Clarence Winthrop Bowen, Mrs. W. Storrs Wells and Miss Nathalie Wells, Mrs. Louis Vaughan Clark, Mrs. Beekman and Miss Beekman, 55 Fifth Avenue; Mrs. Henry A. Crosby, and Mrs. Edward H. Landon.

***

Mrs. Louis Casimir De Coppet held the second of two receptions at her residence, 35 East Fiftieth Street. In the evening there were the meetings of two small dancing classes, and the entertainment given by Mr. Howard Constable at his studio, 22 East Sixteenth Street, and the large dance at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. H. McK. Twombly.

***

To-day there will be but few receptions, as Saturday is not a favorite occasion for "at homes." The evening, however, will have the meeting of the Saturday Evening Dancing Class at Delmonico's, and the small dinner dance given by Mrs. Lucius K. Wilmerding for her daughter, Miss Caroline Wilmerding. Mrs. Dallas Bache Pratt's class of debutantes also meets at Sherry's. Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Harriman, 1 East Fifty-first Street, and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred P. Dix, 822 Madison Avenue, will give dinners.

***

The sudden death of Mrs. George Henry Warren, which took place yesterday at her residence, 520 Fifth Avenue, will have the effect of throwing a large family connection into mourning. Mrs. Warren was a daughter of the late Phillips Phoenix. She was in consequence related to the Phoenix, the Remsen, and other old New York families. She was the mother of Mrs. Robert Goelet, Mrs. W. Starr Miller, Mr. George Henry Warren, Jr., Whitney Warren, and Lloyd Warren, and the aunt of Lloyd Phoenix. Her death is the third in the family within a year. She lost a married daughter about a year ago, and an unmarried daughter died last Autumn. Mrs. Robert Goelet and her daughter will go abroad shortly after the funeral. They have been here this Winter for the first time in several years.

***

It was learned yesterday that Capt. Fitz-Herbert had died in South Africa. Capt. Fitz-Herbert was an Englishman and a non-resident member of the Calumet Club in this city, where he had many friends. He went to South Africa at the commencement of the war to join his regiment.

***

Mr. and Mrs. George Vanderbilt are at present in Dresden. They will not return to this country for some time. Eugene Higgins and party have been at Nice and along the Riviera. Mr. Higgins has just been enrolled as a member of the new golf club at Nice, which is quite a rendezvous for the Americans and the English residents.

***

One of the largest balls of the season was given last evening in Philadelphia by Mr. Paul, who married Miss Drexel. It is for his daughter, who made her début in New York last Winter at a dance given by Mr. and Mrs. John R. Drexel. She is a niece of the late Mrs. William Waldorf Astor. Among the New York guests are Mr. and Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse, who were given precedence at a dinner by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Moore Robinson.

***

Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton McK. Twombly (Miss Florence A. Vanderbilt) gave a large dance last night at their town house, 684 Fifth Avenue, for their elder daughter, Miss Florence Vanderbilt Twombly, who recently made her début. The house, which has a superb interior, was simply decorated with palms and flowering shrubs and a few roses. Mrs. Twombly and her daughter received. Mrs. Twombly was gowned in white satin, with trimmings of lace, and wore a tiara, necklace, and stomacher of diamonds, and Miss Twombly's frock was pale yellow satin, veiled with tulle, and trimmed with white roses. The dancing before supper was general, and Franko's orchestra played throughout the evening. After supper, which was served at small tables about midnight by Sherry in the dining room and halls of the Webb house—the two houses being thrown into one by means of the archway connecting the Twombly and Webb residences—the cotillion was danced in the dining and drawing rooms of the hostess' house, the Webb residence being used for the supper only. Alexander Hadden led, dancing with Miss Twombly, and Munson Morris assisted by leading the double cotillion from the other end, dancing with Miss Frederica V. Webb. There were about sixty-five couples in the cotillion, and four favor figures were danced, the favors for which were flowered fans, silk opera bags, silver pencils, penholders, cigar-cutters, etc., and silk orders, wands trimmed with flowers, catch-alls, canes, and whips, and in one figure bouquets and boutonnieres of natural flowers. There were about 200 guests, and these included Mrs. Astor, Col. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund L. Baylies, Gen. Lloyd Bryce and Mrs. Bryce, Mr. and Mrs. W. Bayard Cutting, Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Burton Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mackay, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Mortimer, Mr. and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Parsons, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Sloane, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Schieffelin, Mr. and Mrs. Lucius K. Wilmerding, Mr. and Mrs. W. Seward Webb, W. K. Vanderbilt, Sr., the Misses Olin, Mary Harriman, Nathalie Henderson, Helen Barney, M. C. Bishop, Helen Kountze, Sydney S. Henop, Gladys Brooks, Kathleen Neilson, Bryce, Evelyn Burden, Justine Cutting, Sybil Douglas, Marion Fish, May Gallatin, Nora Iselin, Lila Sloane, Pauline Robinson, Natalie Schenck, Evelyn Sloane, Rosamond Street, Sarah Wilmerding, Therese Iselin, Sarah Van Alen, Natalie Wells, Pauline Whittier, Eleanor Jay, Marion Whitaker, Anne Potter, Edith Post, Helen Parish, the Misses Draper, Gurnee, Hewitt, Hunt, and Baron Aliotti, and Messrs. Barbay, S. D. R. Baldwin, David Bishop, Reginald Brooks, Francis Bishop, Milton Barger, I. Townsend Burden, Jr., Samuel P. Blagden, Jr., Paul W. Bull, Ashbel Barney, Henry De Voeux, H. Melvill Lewis, Jr., F. T. Martin, Bayard Cutting, Jr., Creighton Webb, Redmond Cross, Col. George Dyer, F. V. G. D'Hauteville, Baucroft Davis, Goelet Gallatin, Gilbert Francklyn, Don Enrico Ruspoli, John Gray, George Griswold, second, Alexander H. Hadden, Meredith Howland, Jr., Archibald Cary Harrison, John Hone, Jr., Edwin C. Hoyt, Ernest Iselin, Bradish Johnson, Jr., Barclay Kountze, Francis and Herman H. Kinnicutt, De Lancey Kane, Jr., Frederick Kernochan, Barton Willing, Harry Lehr, Charles Munn, Eliot Gregory, Francis Otis, Thomas Cushing, Stephen Olin, Ricard Peters, Arden Robbins, and J. G. and Rudolph Neeser.

***

Mr. and Mrs. J. Hooker Hamersley of 1,030 Fifth Avenue, gave a dinner at their residence last evening. The table was decorated with ferns and pink roses, and Petruccio's mandolin quartet played ragtime music during the evening. Mr. and Mrs. Hamersley's guests included Mr. and Mrs. Philip Rhinelander, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Abercrombie, Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Stickney, Mr. and Mrs. Richard S. Dana, Mrs. H. de B. Parsons, Miss Cornelia Beekman, Miss Helen de Peyster, Philip Livingston, Alexander Bruen, Alexander M. Hadden, and James W. Beekman. Mr. and Mrs. Hamersley have cards out for another dinner, to be given on Wednesday evening next.

***

Miss Effie Vanderbilt Caesar, daughter of Mrs. Hermann D. Diedrich, who was Miss Ellen Vanderbilt, gave a small and informal tea at her mother's apartment, in the Kensington apartment, 102 East Fifty-seventh Street, yesterday afternoon. The tea was given in honor of her cousin, Miss Jessie V. McNamee, who is to be married to Charles D. Simons, Jr., on Feb. 12. Miss McNamee assisted in receiving, and her sister, Mrs. Bekout, poured tea. Among those invited to the tea were Miss Simons, Miss Twombly, Mr. and Mrs. Dave Hennen Morris, Miss Duffield, and those who are to be the attendants of Mr. Simons and Miss McNamee on their wedding day, and whose names were published yesterday in this column.

Gertrude Herrick, Martha Hall, Cornelia H. Merrill, Elsie Ladd, Helen Ludington, Elsie Knapp, Helen Rogers, Ethel Ward, Marguerite Richardson, Ruth Walker, Constance Wheeler, and Leavitt B. Hunt, Stanfield Arnold, Howland Brown, Francis Boardman, Henry M. Brookfield, Jr., Henry Britton, Howard Bayles, Ambrose Clark, Shepard Dillingham, Starr Giddings, G. B. Hatch, and George Hartley.

***

Mr. Howard Constable gave a very original entertainment last evening at his studio, 22 East Sixteenth Street. It was fashioned somewhat after the vaudeville affair which he gives usually in mid-Lent. Last evening it was a congress of "Fifth Avenue Denizens and Independent Bowery Philanthropists." About 100 guests were invited, and half arrived in evening dress. The other half were made up as Bowery girls and boys. The large drafting room was changed into a club and old-fashioned restaurant, such as used to exist near Washington Square. There were a chef of grill and griddle, head waiter, barkeeper, bouncer, cash girl, waitresses, and frequenters in the costume of "star boarders," "dead game sports," shop girls, actors, laborers, &c. There were songs and dances, and many of those who took part in this portion of the programme were members of The Strollers, who appeared in "The Cruise of the Summer Girl."

Among those present were Gen. and Mrs. Frederic Pierson, Mr. James R. Pierson, Mrs. Henry Burnett, Mr. Otho Cushing, Miss Morgan, Mrs. Lindley Hoffman Chapin, Miss Chapin, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. E. Blashfield, Mr. and Mrs. Jules Vatable, Miss Angelica Schuyler Church, Mr. Louis Fitzgerald, Mr. Gerald Benkard, Mr. and Mrs. Auguste Montant, Mr. and Mrs. Gillespie, Mr. and Mrs. Fales Coward, Erskine Hewitt, Mr. and Mrs. Thayer Robb, the Misses Shippen, and Mrs. Wilber Bloodgood.

***

Mrs. J. J. Emery of 5 East Sixty-eighth Street gave a luncheon yesterday in honor of the Countess de Laugier Villars. Among the women who were Mrs. Emery's guests were Mrs. Richard Irvin, Mrs. E. Livingston Ludlow, Mrs. Frederick Neilson, Mrs. Frederic J. de Peyster, Mrs. Hitchcock, Mrs. Nicholas Fish, and Mrs. Gouverneur Morris.

***

Mr. and Mrs. Hugo R. Roelker of 43 West Ninety-seventh Street will be "at home" on Wednesday evenings until Lent. Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Gould are to give a number of dinners in the near future. Mrs. J. Hood Wright will give a reception this afternoon at her residence, 613 Fifth Avenue. This will be her first reception in six or seven years, as she has been in mourning for a long period.

***

The original Evening Badminton Club, in which Mrs. Lewis Livingston Delafield, Mrs. Alexander S. D. Shaw, Mrs. George Crocker, Mrs. George R. Schieffelin, Mrs. S. R. Roosevelt, and other women, as well as J. Montgomery Strong, Paul Gibert Thebaud, George L. Myers, E. Gibert Schermerhorn, Howard Willets, René A. de Russy, George G. Ward, Jr., and Howard Willets are interested, is to meet on Friday evenings during Lent at the Berkeley Armory, 25 East Forty-ninth Street. This club has a large membership and a long waiting list.

***

Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., has been ill with the influenza, and she is still confined to her room. The rumor that she and her husband were to go to Aiken immediately is therefore without foundation.

SOCIETY IN WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The Attorney General and Mrs. Griggs gave their first formal dinner party of the year this evening, when they entertained the Chief Justice and Mrs. Fuller, Justice and Mrs. Harlan, Justice and Mrs. Shiras, Justice and Mrs. White, Justice McKenna, Senator and Mrs. McMillan, Mrs. Audenried, Miss McKenna, Assistant Postmaster General Johnson, and Assistant Attorney General Beck.

The Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Hill entertained at dinner this evening the French Ambassador, the Russian Ambassador, the Japanese Minister, the Portuguese Minister and Viscountess De Santo-Thyrso, the Peruvian Minister, and Mme. Calderon, the Secretary of the German Embassy and Countess De Quadt, Senator and Mrs. Elkins, Mrs. Robert McCormick, Miss Louise Foraker, Mrs. Steele, and Gen. Corbin.

Senator Kean and Miss Kean entertained a distinguished dinner company, which included Justice and Mrs. Gray, Justice Brewer, Bishop and Mrs. Satterlee, Senator Hale, Senator Sewell, Senator Morgan and Miss Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne MacVeagh, Mrs. Sheridan, Mr. and Mrs. George B. McClellan, the Hon. Maud Pauncefote, the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and Chauncey McKeever.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald De Koven entertained at a dinner of twelve covers this evening. Their guests of honor were the Spanish Minister and the Duchess de Arcos. Invited to meet them were the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Gage, Senator Allison, Mrs. Slater, Representative and Mrs. Wadsworth, and Representative and Mrs. Newlands.

The French Ambassador, M. Cambon, was the host at a tea this afternoon, when some two hundred friends were invited to meet Mme. Sarah Bernhardt at 5 o'clock. The tapestry-lined drawing room of the embassy was fragrant with American Beauty roses in honor of the distinguished guest, who received with the host and Mme. Vignal, the wife of the Military Attaché of the embassy. The reception was altogether informal, and very short, owing to the necessity of Mme. Bernhardt having to dine and rest before her evening performance. The guests were chiefly the host's colleagues and friends resident in Washington.

Mrs. Crowninshield gave a tea to-day at her home, in Eighteenth Street. She was assisted in welcoming her visitors by her son, Casper Schuyler Crowninshield, who has only recently returned from several years' residence in Paris. Admiral Crowninshield, who is one of the recent grip victims, was present during a part of the reception, which lasted from 4 to 7 o'clock. Mrs. Richard Mulligan, Mrs. Alexander Legare, the Hon. Maud Pauncefote, Miss Elizabeth Kean, and Miss Alice Ward received each other at the tea table, which was prettily adorned with pink roses. Other assistants of the afternoon were Mrs. David J. Hill, Mrs. William Cowles, Mrs. Gordon-Cumming, and Miss Paulding.

DEATHS ON STATEN ISLAND.

Many Old Persons Have Passed Away Within a Week.

The last week has been a record breaker for deaths of old residents of Staten Island. Michael Van Name, eighty-five years old, a lifelong resident of Mariner's Harbor, died from old age. Elizabeth Rintoul, aged seventy-six years, died at her home, in New Brighton. Catherine Smith, seventy years old, died at Port Richmond.

Mary Madden, seventy-four years old, died in the County Almshouse from old age. August Geissel, aged seventy-five years, one of the oldest residents of Castleton Corners, died, and Euphemia C. Reford of New Brighton passed away.

CITY NEWSBOYS ENCOURAGED.

Mr. Guggenheimer Gives Them Advice and Invites Them to Dinner.

President Guggenheimer delivered an address to newsboys last evening in the Newsboys' Lodging House, 9 Duane Street, and was listened to by about 200 boys who were on their best behavior. Before Mr. Guggenheimer was introduced a number of hymns were sung.

Mr. Guggenheimer began by saying that he had come to tell the newsboys some things which he thought would help them to make their way in the world and become useful men.

"I did not begin by selling newspapers," he continued, "because I went to work at the first thing I could get to do, for I had to earn my living; that was running errands for a lawyer and sweeping out the lawyer's office. I started out in life in New York City with no better chance than

ARNOLD BOECKLIN IS DEAD.

Great German Colorist and Painter of Romantic Subjects Expires at Fiesole.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—It is announced that Arnold Boecklin, the painter, died on Jan. 18 in Fiesole, Italy.

Arnold Boecklin, the greatest colorist and the leader among the romantic painters claimed by German-speaking people, was in his seventy-fifth year. Boecklin was by birth a Swiss, but since he was borne in Basle his native tongue was German, so that he has always been classed among the German painters. In purely technical matters he has been surpassed by living men, as, for instance, by Adolph von Menzel, who, as an illustrator of the times of the Great Frederick, has shown a cleverness and a realism which Boecklin never attained and certainly never desired to attain.

For more than half a century Boecklin has stood for romance in painting. True to his birthplace, he has been a European rather than a Swiss painter. His first training was at Dusseldorf, on the Rhine, where he learned landscape painting, and whence he removed to Brussels to study the figure. But at various times in his life Paris, Weimar, Rome, Munich, and Florence have been his places of residence. There was some reason therefore for the Germans to claim him as a compatriot, and certainly when they strove to do him honor a few years ago, they did it with a thoroughness and an enthusiasm truly Teutonic. His native town, Basel, has also honored him, and with excellent reason, since he has decorated its museum in a fashion which brings many visitors to the city.

As was natural with a man who was brought up during the liveliest period of the cult of Goethe, Boecklin felt a stronger attraction toward Italy than toward any other country of Europe, just as the old mercenary soldiers of Switzerland found Italy irresistible owing to its riches and the constant warfare going on between the various divisions of the peninsula, and just as the ordinary German of the present day, when he has time for a vacation, gravitates naturally to the passes of the Alps which lead to Italy. So the old painters of the past century, in whose ranks Boecklin belongs, felt their hearts drawn toward the land of the orange and the lemon. Even the stronger art life in Munich during the fifties could not hold him, nor was Weimar able to detain him, although he held the position of the Professor of Art in that literary centre for two years. In 1860 he was in Rome again.

The Franco-German war introduced such changes in France and Italy that the art students flocked to Munich. This might be the reason why Boecklin went thither in 1871 from a stay in Basel. He remained there until 1876, and since that time he had resided alternately at Florence or at Zurich, where his many friends and compatriots encouraged him to keep a charming home. One of his steadfast friends was Gottfried Keller, the Swiss writer, whose delightful short stories belong to the modern classics of Germany; for the complete edition of Keller's works Boecklin contributed a very interesting profile portrait.

Keller was famous for his taciturnity. A story is told of an evening in Munich spent by a young man at the same table with Gottfried Keller and Arnold Boecklin. The young man was very much impressed by the presence of two men so great in literature and art, and he did not dare to say a word after the first greeting. The two old friends sat absolutely silent, and only moved a finger when they wished their beer jugs replenished. After an hour had passed, Boecklin made a general remark which included the young man, who was too frightened to answer; his friend Keller responded to this remark by a mere movement of the head. At the end of the second hour Boecklin arose and left the place. The young man was rescued from his unfortunate predicament by a friend, who came in and insisted on extracting a word from the silent littérateur, hoping to rouse his latent powers of talk. This person spoke of Arnold Boecklin, his charm, and the beauty of his pictures; to which Keller replied with a grunt and the words, "too talkative!"

Without vouching for the absolute truth of this anecdote, it was a fact that these two men were very close friends and enjoyed nothing more than a silent companionship for hours at a time.

Boecklin's work is scarcely known in the United States, save through reproductions of "The Isle of the Dead" and one or two other pictures which have been reproduced in colors. Franz Stuck of Munich is better known over here, although his method of painting and the subjects which he chooses are singularly influenced by the dead master. Like Boecklin, Franz Stuck enjoys raids into the realm of mythology, and, like him, he is a symbolist, but the work of the older master has much more simplicity and directness. There is a suggestion of a pose in Franz Stuck which is entirely lacking in Boecklin. The older man is often defective from the side of pure painting. His drawing is not always impeccable and his coloring is sometimes turbid, while one often notices an absence of certain tricks of proportion and contrast which a great many men who amount to nothing in the fine arts have at their finger ends. To speak brutally, Boecklin is often a clumsy painter; but then he was a painter of ideas, and as a general rule those ideas were worth painting. Indeed, from this point of view, one may say that Boecklin was a living protest against the breeze of realism that has blown through Europe and America during the closing quarter of the past century, under the influence of which ideas have pretty much disappeared from the painted canvas, and technical deftness or pyrotechnical charlatanry have had their fling. Nevertheless Boecklin lived long enough to see a change in the popular taste which brought people back again to a decent recognition of the right of a painter to have ideas and to express them. It was a realization of this, as much as a natural pride in an old and distinguished artist, which led the art lovers of Berlin and Munich and Basel to decree to him the very distinguishing honors he received a few years ago.

It would have been more in keeping with the career of this distinguished man if he had died in his native Switzerland, but the pull toward Italy mentioned caused him to seek refuge in his villa on the Arno when he was stricken with grief at the death of his son. Unhappily, it was not an ordinary death that prostrated him, but a very sad kind of death, for his son went mad and died insane. Here is another of the old frequenters of Florence gone forever from the large and small circles which they illustrated.

It is not generally known even in Germany that an early work of Boecklin exists in Berlin. It was ordered by a Mr. Wedekind of Hanover when the young Boecklin was in straits for money, and the order was largely a piece of kindness. Boecklin went to Hanover and decorated the dining room of Mr. Wedekind, whose son, Consul General Wedekind, now resident in Berlin, when fitting up his new house there, caused his own dining room to be arranged exactly like that of his father, in Hanover, so that the Boecklin paintings could be transferred to his own walls. They represent the discovery of fire, and, while in the main, the walls are covered with landscapes, yet, as one moves about the room, one sees groups of men and women, which carry on the idea of the discovery of fire, partly in a realistic way, partly in the line of mythology.

A picture known to all Germany is that which hangs in the Museum at Leipzig, the famous "Castle by the Sea Surprised by Pirates." The figures in this picture have a certain classical look, but the subject is original and the poses and action of pirates and victims are intensely dramatic. Another famous picture by Boecklin is the "Elysian Fields," and still another "Prometheus Bound," a suggestion for which could be found in the early wall paintings made for Mr. Wedekind.

Count von Schack, the art amateur, of Munich, who presented his house and collections to the Bavarian people, was an admirer of Boecklin, and among the pictures bequeathed by him are the "Tavern in the Days of Old Rome," "Panic Terror," "The Murderers," "The Furies," "The Cave of the Dragon," "Ride to Death," "The Shepherd's Love Song," and the "Villa by the Sea." It was during the years 1866 to 1871 that Boecklin revisited from time to time his native town and worked on the frescoes in the museum which visitors see. During this time he also painted frescoes for a rich Basel gentleman with artistic tendencies, named Sarrasin. Other more or less celebrated pictures show either the sea serpent of fable or a Pan who has cast a net by the seashore and drawn up a pretty mermaid, or some similar page, humorous or sombre, from the myths; centaurs, satyrs, furies, dragons, sirens, and other inhabitants of the world of folklore and classic mythology pass beneath the artist's brush with astonishing facility and power. Boecklin's work is full of color, and his landscapes are full of sunlight and shadow, and his figures are full of life and movement.

CARRIER PIGEON RESCUED.

Fell Exhausted on Incoming Vessel—Tabbed "0516, U. S. N."

If Secretary Long, Admiral Barker, or any other person connected with the navy is at all concerned as to what has become of Carrier Pigeon 0516, United States Navy, they can have their doubts set at rest by communicating with or calling on Capt. Meyer of the Norwegian steamer Prima. The Prima arrived at this port from Progreso yesterday and has on board the little winged messenger, which came aboard the ship last Sunday, falling in an exhausted condition.

A little metal ring attached to one of its legs disclosed its identity. As to whether it was returning from an errand to one of America's fighting ships now cruising on the Atlantic, or had been "lost, strayed, or stolen," the skipper does not know. He does know, though, that there are several persons who have been spending most of their time of late aboard the Prima who will not remember very kindly the person who reclaims the bird.

BOATMEN MOURN A CHILD.

Drowned While Playing on Her Father's Scow—Her Pet's Grief.

Every one of the Captains, their wives, and helpers on the twenty or more stone scows, coal and brick boats lying in the North River at Fifty-first Street, gathered last night in the cabin of Stone Scow No. 30 and mourned with Capt. Edward Hansen and his wife for the death of their little daughter, Helen, who was drowned on Thursday at Hastings-on-the-Hudson. Hansen and his wife have two remaining children.

When Helen was two years old she wanted a dog, and her father purchased a pug dog from a friend. The child became very much attached to the animal and they became inseparable.

Hansen was waiting Thursday afternoon at Hastings for a tow to bring him back to the city, and had gone into the cabin to get a cup of coffee, leaving the little girl on deck. A few minutes later the Captain's wife went on deck and found her daughter missing. The faithful little pug dog was standing on the side of the boat, apparently greatly distressed. Hansen was summoned, and, with Andrew Everson of Stone Scow No. 17, dragged for the body, which was found. It was brought to this city on the scow.

Hansen and his wife are prostrated. "She was too good to live," says the father. The pet dog lies under the little white coffin in the cabin of the scow.

MONEY FOR THE HOSPITALS.

Charles Lanier, Treasurer of the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association, reports the following additional contributions to the collection now in progress:

FROM CHURCHES AND SYNAGOGUES.

St. Bartholomew's, Episcopal	$3,110.08	Temple Israel of Harlem	$104.50
Grace, Episcopal	2,102.90	Kehilath Jeshurun	84.31
St. Thomas's, Episcopal	1,526.60	All Souls', Episcopal, additional	53.31
Temple Emanu-El	1,035,65	Lenox Avenue, Unitarian, (in part)	42.82
St. George's, Episcopal	538.68	St. Michael's, Episcopal	37.33
Trinity Chapel, Episcopal	473.00	St. John's Chapel, Episcopal	32.89
Riverdale, Presbyterian	197.45	St. Luke's, Episcopal	23.71
Holy Trinity, Lutheran	189.85	St. Matthew's, Episcopal	23.20
St. Agnes's Chapel, Episcopal	167.00
St. Andrew's, Episcopal	165.11

FROM THE WINE AND SPIRIT TRADERS' SOCIETY AUXILIARY.

H. A. Batjer & Co.	$25.00	Bouche Fils & Co.	$10.00
F. O. De Luze & Co.	25.00	Chas. McK. Leoser's Sons	10.00
Charles Graef & Co.	25.00	Nicholas Rath & Co.	10.00
George A. Kessler & Co.	25.00	P. Harmony's Nephew & Co.	10.00
Edward Blackburn	25.00	Reinauld & Niederstadt	10.00
Charles F. Schmidt & Peters	25.00	Peter McQuade	10.00
E. L. Montagne & Sons	25.00	Alex. B. Shaw & Co.	10.00
W. A. Taylor & Co.	25.00	John Osborn & Co.	10.00
Paris, Allen & Co.	25.00	C. H. Arnold & Co.	10.00
Luyties Brothers	25.00	Hartman, Goldsmith & Co.	10.00
H. L. Kirk & Co.	25.00	Barrett Company	10.00
Henry E. Gourd	25.00	Samuel Streit & Co.	10.00
G. S. Nicholas	25.00	Wittemann Brothers	10.00
Frederick de Bary & Co.	25.00	J. W. Wupperman	5.00
Du Pont & Co.	25.00	Total	$560.00
California Wine Association	25.00
Thomas McMullen & Co.	25.00

FROM THE PAINT AND VARNISH TRADE.

National Lead Co.	$50.00	The S. P. Wetherill Co.	$15.00
A. B. Ansbacher & Co.	50.00	M. Ewing, Fox & Co.	10.00
John W. Masury & Co.	25.00	Adler Color and Chemical Works	10.00
D. F. Tiemann & Co.	25.00	Morris Herrmann & Co.	10.00
Mayer & Lowenstein	25.00	Hammill & Gillespie	10.00
Emil Caiman & Co.	25.00	Fred. L. Lavanburg	10.00
R. J. Waddell & Co.	25.00	J. M. Huber	10.00
The New Jersey Zinc Co.	25.00	Finney & Smith	10.00
Standard Varnish Works	25.00	Lewis Berger & Sons	10.00
Dinges, Weinmann & Co.	25.00	Chilton Manufacturing Co.	10.00
Harrison Brothers & Co.	25.00	Berry Brothers	10.00
H. W. Everett & Co.	20.00	Edward Smith & Co.	10.00
Gabriel & Schall	20.00	Henry M. Polhemus	5.00
I. Pfeiffer	15.00	Total	$540.00
A. Keppelmann	15.00
H. Kohnstamm & Co.	15.00

International Exhibition at Ostend.

An international health, maritime safety, and fishery exhibition will be held at Ostend, Belgium, in August and September next, under the patronage of the city authorities. In connection with the exhibition a congress will meet, at which the above subjects will be discussed. The programme and all particulars can be obtained on application to the General Secretary, 18 Rue des Soeurs Blanches, Ostend.

WEDDINGS OF A DAY.

Proctor—Jones.

Charles Edward Proctor, an artist with a studio in the Carnegie Building, and Miss Nina Gregory Jones of Brooklyn were married on Wednesday at noon, in the Plaza Hotel, where the bridegroom's father, W. F. Proctor, Vice President of the Singer Manufacturing Company, resides. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Graham Williams of Inwood. The bride is a daughter of William Gregory Jones, a traveling salesman, of Brooklyn. Only the members of the family were present at the wedding.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Gen. Andrew J. Mackay.

Gen. Andrew J. Mackay, a veteran of the civil war, died after a few days' illness in his room, at 205 Greenwich Street, yesterday morning. He was Quartermaster General on the staff of Gen. George H. Thomas, who at one time commanded the Army of the Cumberland.

Gen. Mackay was born at Caledonia, N. Y., and went West before the war. He owned a ranch in Texas, which promised him great wealth until the war began. Then, to avoid the Confederate forces he tried to find a place of safety for his cattle in the hill country, but the herds were lost and his fortune gone.

He enlisted in Washington when the first call for volunteers came, and rose to the rank of General after serving throughout the five years of strife. He was with Gen. Thomas in all the battles of the Cumberland Division, and his executive ability won high praise from both Thomas and Sherman.

After the close of hostilities, Gen. Mackay formed a business partnership with his old associate, Gen. E. D. Hayes. They were together in the brokerage business at 74 Broad Street. Gen. Mackay worked at his office last Tuesday, but complained of a chill when he returned Tuesday night to his room, at Mrs. Harty's lodging house. She sent for Dr. Sweeney of 162 Greenwich Street, who attended the old soldier until his death.

Gen. Adair of 45 Wall Street is a brother-in-law of Gen. Mackay according to Mrs. Harty. Mrs. Harty says Gen. Mackay

CYCLES ATTRACT CROWDS

Competition Already Growing Keen in Motor Cycles.

JUVENILE WHEELS SCARCE

This Style of Bicycle and Tandems Have Had Their Day—Exhibit Will Close To-night.

There is only one more day for the bicycle show in the Madison Square Garden, and this evening the exhibit of bicycles and, to some extent, automobiles, will be over. The attendance yesterday exceeded all previous days, and there was not an exhibitor who was not kept busy explaining new things and giving, if necessary, practical demonstrations. This latter phase was particularly noticeable in regard to motor cycles and tricycles. These interesting and speedy machines were going constantly on the cement track in the basement, and they never lacked an audience. Some of the dealers have engaged special riders, and if a man shows a critical interest in their motor cycle, the demonstrator politely invites him to step down below and see for himself. Among these riders last night were Miss Marguerite Gast and Peter Fisher, the trick rider, and they kept their wheels spinning at a merry pace.

While the bicycle has passed beyond the state of a fad into that of an every-day necessity, the motor cycle is surely the wheel fad of the present day. This machine and its possibilities are yet in an embryonic stage. Several prominent bicycle dealers do not believe that the motor cycle is destined to a wide popularity. Others hesitate to express a firm opinion, for a great deal depends upon the future evolution of the wheel and reduction in price. With the latter, and a corresponding reduction in noise, vibration, and odor, the popularity may attain fair proportions.

The prevailing price for a first-class motor cycle now is $200. One petition is already asserting itself, and a motor cycle was shown yesterday which is offered for $175. It is the lowest-priced motor cycle in the market, and presents a very trim appearance. All the machinery, motor, gasoline tank, and appurtenances are within the diamond frame. About two quarts of gasoline are carried, and that will last for about fifty to seventy-five miles.

The motor tricycles attract some attention, but not to the extent of the motor bicycles. In France the famous De Dion motor tricycles have been wonderfully popular for half a dozen years or more, but American riders have never shown that enthusiasm, and there is no evidence that the motor tricycle is making any rapid growth to favor. They cost $250, and when a man begins to think of paying that sum for an automobile contrivance, he looks higher, toward something on the carriage style, where he will have a more convenient seat for a long journey than a bicycle saddle, with the addition of a companion.

Comparatively few children's wheels are seen in the show, as compared with a few years ago. Scarcely any 20-inch wheels for boys between five and eight years of age are now called for, and it is not until the 26-inch wheel is reached that any appreciable demand is noticed. When the higher prices for bicycles obtained, the 24-inch wheel was the popular juvenile mount. It cost $25 less. Now it is only $3 cheaper. The 28-inch wheel is the smallest adult's machine, and that has now come to be the popular juvenile wheel, fitted to 20 and 26-inch frames. A lad of twelve to fourteen years can ride it comfortably, and it has the advantage of lasting him longer than one of the purely child's wheels would.

Tandems are also practically out. One of the dealers said a few were always kept, but the demand was practically nil. The triplet machines are scarcely made, unless especially ordered.

There will evidently be a close struggle with the final vote is announced to-day for the Tribune triplet, to be given to the winning wheelmen's club. The vote last night was: Greenwich Wheelmen, 2,183; Knights of Columbus, 2,083; Hackensack Wheelmen, 1,462; Westchester Wheelmen, 1,316; Harrison Wheelmen, 887; Sterling Wheelmen, 689.

The winner of the Featherstone chainless wheel, to be given to the school teacher, and the winner of the chain wheel to be given to the scholar, boy or girl, who receives the greatest number of votes, will be announced and the wheel presented at 9 o'clock to-night.

ATHLETICS AT INDIAN SCHOOL.

Schedule of Baseball Games Arranged—Warner to Coach Carlisle.

Special to The New York Times.

CARLISLE, Penn., Jan. 18.—The Carlisle Indian baseball team has arranged its schedule for this year, and the list of her opponents includes Princeton, Yale, Columbia, Fordham, Cornell, Harvard, University of Pennsylvania, University of Rochester, Washington and Jefferson, Albright, Pennsylvania State College, Dickinson, Mercersburg, Lebanon Valley, Gettysburg, Susquehanna, and Bucknell, and runs from April 6 until June 19.

Last night James Johnson, the plucky quarter back, was elected Baseball Captain and during the week arrangements were made for organizing the team. The new baseball cage, probably the finest in the country, is finished and will be occupied next week for practice. Made of frame, it is painted white inside and lighted electrically and heated by steam.

Coach Warner of the football team has settled the controversy as to his future whereabouts by signing a contract for another year with the Carlisle School.

Lentz, last year's pitcher, has returned in condition as has Pratt, who developed ability last year. Chatfield, a new heavyweight from Michigan, comes with a reputation, and Kelly Lay, a new man, is said to be a very good fielder.

Arrangements are now being made to have the Carlisle Indian football team play Cornell during the middle of the Summer, in the Stadium at the Pan-American Exhibition. The new cage here will be used for other outdoor sports as well as for baseball.

ROPE VAULTING AS A SPORT.

Rochester Athletes Claim the Record in This Branch of Athletics.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—Rope vaulting is a game similar to pole vaulting, the only difference being that instead of a pole a rope hung from a ceiling is used. It was introduced into the Young Men's Christian Association here some time ago. T. A. Edwards, a member of the organization, formerly held the only record. It is indulged in but little by the association now. The bar and standards used in pole vaulting are also used in the game and the points of winning are marked the same.

A. B. Wegner, physical director of the Young Men's Christian Association in Rochester, and two of the athletes in his classes in his department, P. D. Jennings and J. Robinson, claim to have beaten the world's record in that branch of athletics, 8 feet 6 inches, made by Edwards of this city. The Rochester men claim this honor now, as they have cleared the bar at 9 feet.

Results on Winter Tracks.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 18.—The stewards have concluded their investigation of the actions of the horse Toll Rainey, and it has been proven to their satisfaction that he is a quitter. The owner and trainer recently suspended are, therefore, reinstated, and the stewards recommend that the further entry of the horse be refused. The weather was clear, and the track good on the outside half to-day. Dejonan and Prince Real were the winning favorites. Summaries: Seven furlongs—Dejonan, 130, (Walsh,) 1; Heroics, 133, 2; Locust Blossom, 131, 3. Time—1:32. Mile and a sixteenth—Fairy Prince, 95, (Wonderly,) 1; Dick Doyle, 106, 2; Bramble Bush, 97, 3. Time—1:54½. Mile and an eighth—Donna Rita, 94, (O'Brien,) 1; Sarilla, 101, 2; Frangible, 100, 3. Time—1:59. Six and a half furlongs, handicap—Boomerack, 97, (Weber,) 1; Senator Beveridge, 114, 2; Azim, 102, 3. Time—1:25. Six furlongs—Lauretta, 95, (Slack,) 1; Dousterswivel, 103, 2; Juanetta, 98, 3. Time—1:17. One mile—Prince Real, 101, (Dale,) 1; Petit Maitre, 107, 2; Tom Gilmore, 107, 3. Time—1:45½.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 18.—Five and a half furlongs—Dr. Boyle, 103, (Matthews,) 1; Little Minch, Jr., 107, 2; Burdoc, 104, 3. Time—1:09. Six furlongs—Moon Bright, 107, (Buchanan,) 1; Strica, 100, 2; Tony Lepping, 112, 3. Time—1:10. Futurity course—St. Cuthbert, 107, (O'Connor,) 1; Mocorito, 105, 2; Saintly, 101, 3. Time—1:11. Our Climate Handicap, six furlongs—Maggie Davis, 99, (Dominick,) 1; Joe Frey, 115, 2; Isaline, 105, 3. Time—1:13⅘. Mile—Owensboro, 103, (Dominick,) 1; Wynnine, 105, 2; Herculean, 103, 3. Time—1:42. Six furlongs, purse—Dangerous Maid, 103, (Coburn,) 1; MacGyle, 105, 2; Socialist, 105, 3. Time—1:15¼.

WORK ON BOSTON YACHT.

Capt. Haff Confers with Designer Crowninshield About the Lawson Boat.

BOSTON, Jan. 18.—Capt. Hank Haff came to Boston to-day to talk over matters relating to the Lawson yacht, and with Capt. Watson was in conference at different times with Designer Crowninshield, Adrian Wilson, the sailmaker; George F. Lawley, C. F. Adams, second, and C. E. Hodges, the latter of the Board of Managers. The question of the head sails was pretty thoroughly gone over.

It was decided to change the plan of the clubtopsail. The one which Mr. Crowninshield had designed was not very lofty, but by the change it will be carried twenty-three feet above the topmast head.

Capt. Haff said that he had picked out a few men for the crew of the new boat, but that no articles had been signed. He has picked out for second mate, or boatswain, if a second mate is not carried, a man who was with Charles Francis Adams, second, on many of his races, and whom he thinks a very clever racing man.

During the day all the bulbed steel angle bars for the frames arrived at the Atlantic works. The steel was placed in the rolling mill, where the angles will be bent to their ultimate shape as soon as possible. The scrive board will be sent from Lawley's to the Atlantic works to-morrow. The shed in which the yacht is to be built is now completed, and everything is ready to lay the keel at any time. Blocks for the keel are laid in the trench which was dug in the centre of the building. The lead is still in the rolling mill and may not be used until the yacht is partly plated.

The pattern for the bottom of the keel was not sent to a foundry at East Braintree to-day on account of the weather.

Mr. Wilson says that he is at work upon the sails of the new boat. He has some of the light sails screwed together and turned in ready for cabling.

Joining Cup Defender's Deck Beams.

BRISTOL, R. I., Jan. 18.—The work of joining the deck beams to the frames of the cup defender is going on upon the floor of the south boatshop at Herreshoffs'. It is the intention of the designer to have a dozen or more ribs connected in such way before the first angle in the uprights are put in place. To-day much headway was made in punching and countersinking for rivet holes. On Tuesday, or at latest Wednesday, it is ascertained, there will be a sufficient number of frames joined up to warrant the ribbing to commence. Very little work is being done just now on the lead keel.

It is a matter of waiting until the steel uprights are hoisted into position. This job will be done by means of a crane and purchase which hits the steel bars from curved outline on the floor, and drops them into place on top of the lead keel.

Several platers are expected from New York to work in about two weeks to rush the plating on the defender. Metal workers in the boat-building line are very scare at present.

Seawanhaka B. C. Officers.

The Board of Governors of the Seawanhaka Boat Club of Brooklyn has elected the following officers and committees for the coming year:

President—R. S. Leighton; Vice President—A. E. Eagle; Secretary—James R. Brennen; Financial Secretary R. H. Pelton; Treasurer—W. H. Hamilton; Captain—Hobart Ahrens; Lieutenant—W. F. Koerner, M. D.; Yachting Director—H. R. Rankon; Press Agent—R. H. Pelton. House Committee—J. J. Boerner, R. H. Pelton, and A. E. Eagle; Auditing Committee—H. R. Rankon, C. Mulrahill, and H. Ahrens; Membership Committee—W. F. Koerner, T. Vosseler, and W. Hamilton; Delegates to National Association of Amateur Oarsmen—H. R. Rankon, T. Vosseler, and H. Ahrens; Delegates to Long Island Regatta Association—R. H. Pelton, H. Ahrens, and W. F. Koerner; Delegates to Middle States Regatta Association—Frank Adee, H. Ahrens, and W. F. Koerner.

The club has purchased an eight-oared shell, and if the season opens early enough will have a junior eight-oared crew in the Harlem regatta. It will in any event be ready for the Long Island regatta in July.

Rowing Controversy Postponed.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 18.—On account of the illness of Manager Richardson of the Yale crew, the meeting which was to have been held to-morrow at Cambridge to discuss the Harvard-Yale boat race has been postponed until Jan. 26. The challenge recently received from Cornell for a quadrangular race between the second crews of Cornell, Columbia, and University of Pennsylvania and a crew from the Weld and Newell Boat Clubs of Harvard is now being considered. The race will have to be held later than Cornell proposed, if Harvard is to enter it. The only reason that Harvard has for not accepting at once the challenge is the cost of transporting the crew to Ithaca. When once the consent of the Athletic Committee has been gained for this, Harvard will accept the challenge, as all Harvard men are anxious to meet as many challenges as possible on the water.

Intercollegiate Rowing Regattas.

ITHACA, N. Y., Jan. 18.—The report today to the effect that the University of Wisconsin was making arrangements for an intercollegiate regatta in Chicago for July and that Cornell and Pennsylvania had been asked to enter crews, was brought to the attention of Prof. H. T. White, advisory member of the Rowing Committee. He said Cornell has heard nothing relative to such a regatta, and he has good reason to believe that Pennsylvania has not. Two regattas have already been arranged—one for her second Varsity crew with the second eight from Pennsylvania and Columbia, on Lake Cayuga May 30, and second Varsity regatta, to be held at Poughkeepsie July 3. To the latter, Cornell expects Wisconsin to send Varsity and freshman eights.

Pan-American Irish Sports.

The complete list of Irish sports which have been arranged by the Committee on Sports for the Buffalo Pan-American Exposition, which is to open in May, has been announced. The Irish sports will be held on Aug. 28, 29, 30, and 31. The events will be as follows:

Aug. 28—100-yard run, putting 42-pound stone, running two lops and jump, 440-yard hurdle race, Irish jig competition, hurling match.

Aug. 29—220-yard run, three standing jumps, throwing 14-pound winding weight, half-mile run, Irish hornpipe competition, Gaelic football match.

Aug. 30—One-mile run, running high jump, putting 16-pound shot, throwing fifty-six-pound weight, unlimited run and following; rising and striking hurling ball, hurling match.

Aug. 31—120-yard hurdle race, running long jump, throwing 16-pound hammer, unlimited run and follow; medley foot race, throwing fifty-six-pound weight for height over bar, Gaelic football match.

Entries close on Aug. 20, with James E. Sullivan, 16-18 Park Place.

Polo Tournament in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 18.—A polo tournament of a somewhat international character is soon to be held in the vicinity of this city. Four English players of the famous Hurlingham team are here now with ten ponies purchased in Austin, Texas. The mounts have been quartered at Burlingame, where they will be trained for the proposed games. The team is composed of Walter McCreery, Lawrence McCreery, Charles Menges, and J. R. Mackey. The McCreerys were members of a Buffalo, N. Y., club. Mackey is a member of the Onwentsia Polo Club.

George Gould has been invited to take part in the tournament. Visiting polo men who are unable to bring their own mounts from any great distance will be furnished with ponies by the local polo and hunt clubs.

Golf Notes of Interest.

The engagement has just been announced at Lakewood of Dr. Paul T. Kimball and Miss Clarissa Cooper, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederic E. Coudert of this city. Dr. Kimball is well-known as an enthusiastic golfer, and for three or four years he was Captain of the Lakewood Golf Club's team. He has won several prizes himself, but during the past year his practice has not permitted him to take so active a part in golf matches as formerly.

The Lakewood golf fraternity has recently been somewhat depleted by the departure for Florida of W. H. Davis, one of the cracks, and A. W. Black, both of whom are now at Palm Beach. Others may follow when the Southern tournament season reaches its Winter activity.

The West Point Golf Club is the first one in the metropolitan district to announce its delegate to the coming annual meeting of the United States Golf Association, which will convene next month. John D. Crimmins, who has just been re-elected President, will represent his club in the National meeting. Mrs. Harvey L. Williams, who will be one of the two delegates to the meeting this month of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association, was, before her marriage, Miss Willis of Morristown, and she was one of the strong players in the Morris County Golf Club. She is a frequent and successful competitor on the Wee Burn links.

The Fox Hills Golf Club of Staten Island, which sent a large delegation to Atlantic City on New Year's Day for a team match, is now arranging to hold the return game on its own links on Lincoln's birthday, Feb. 12. The Fox Hills members won the first game.

To Repeal Prizefight Law.

DENVER, Col., Jan. 18.—A bill was passed to-day by the State Senate repealing the Cannon prizefight law, which permits ten-round glove contests. Should it pass the House and be favorably acted upon by the Governor, it will put an end to prizefighting in this State.

BASEBALL LEAGUE FORMED

American Association Organized at Yesterday's Meeeting.

NEW YORK-CHICAGO DEAL

Doyle for Three Players—Action of National League Owners Not Encouraging to New Body.

The meeting announced for yesterday afternoon by the promoters of professional baseball between representatives of the newly formed American Association and a committee from the National League, when it was said that the moral support and recognition of the League would be extended to the American Association, formed to fight Ban Johnson's American League, was robbed of much of its importance by the failure of Col. John I. Rogers of the Philadelphia Baseball Club to put in an appearance.

Col. Rogers's absence was regarded as significant, as it is proposed by the new baseball body to put a club into that city of the National League circuit and where Col. Rogers's baseball interests are situated. From 12:30 o'clock until 5:30 the League committee, composed of Andrew Freedman for New York, James Hart of Chicago, F. de Haas Robison of St. Louis, and A. H. Soden of Boston, waited for Col. Rogers to come, the American Association committee in the meantime being in attendance ready for the call from the representatives of the League. At the last hour a statement, coming from an unknown source, was made that Col. Rogers was suffering from influenza and could not be present.

In the meantime, however, it was said, Manager Hart of the Chicago Club had been very busy talking over a long-distance telephone with some one in Philadelphia, and rumor stated that he was conversing with Col. Rogers. The conclusion reached by patrons of baseball who were in the lobby of the Fifth Avenue Hotel, where the meeting was to have been held, was that Col. Rogers was not particularly anxious to encourage the coming of the American Association to Philadelphia, as he preferred taking his chances with his own club against any rivals that might enter the field.

Though the expected indorsement of the American Association by the full league committee did not take place, the baseball managers present refused to be absolutely idle. Two changes were made in the proposed organization of the American Association, the first being that the proposition to have a club in Chicago was altered and Detroit decided on instead of Chicago. The next was that Hezekiah K. Niles, who has a legal claim on the Philadelphia baseball grounds, under the charter of the old Philadelphia Athletic Association, which he bought and which has three years to run, was authorized to be the controlling spirit in the new association's Philadelphia club, this end being brought about by the fact that Ban Johnson had opened negotiations with Niles for the sub-lease of the Philadelphia park for the American League club. Niles has agreed to terms offered by yesterday's meeting, and so the park in question has been removed from the reach of Ban Johnson. A. H. Kock, who under the former arrangement was to have had the Philadelphia club, now will be placated with the franchise for the Detroit club.

Disheartened by the failure of Col. Rogers to appear, the changes ordered in their arrangements, and the absence of the official action of the National League officially approving their organization and plans, Messrs. Watkins, Irwin, Koch, and Havemeyer returned to the headquarters of the American Association, the Marlborough Hotel, about 7 o'clock, and at 8 o'clock the meeting of the American Association was resumed. This night meeting, it was said, was for the purpose of framing a constitution and by-laws.

Later the following statement was announced as official:

"The American Association met at the Hotel Marlborough to-night and effected permanent organization. Permission to use the name American Association was granted by the National League.

"The following circuit was decided upon: Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, and Boston in the East, and Detroit, Milwaukee, Louisville, and Indianapolis in the West.

"After effecting permanent organization the members got to work on a constitution. They will then elect officers. To-morrow the Association will go before the National Board of Arbitration and sign the National agreement and ask for protection."

With the statement went the announcement that, as far as the new association is able to tell at the present time, the circuit will be made up surely of Detroit, which place is to have an American League club; Indianapolis, Louisville, and Milwaukee. Other cities will be added, but what these other cities will be is far from decided as yet, though the arrangements include Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, and perhaps Boston.

Early in the day William Clark, at present a baseball player on the reserve list of the Boston Club, made his appearance at the Hotel Marlborough in response to a call from the American Association. Later Clark admitted that he had been offered the franchise and management of the American Association Club in Baltimore, and said that he had agreed to take it and find men with capital who would furnish the necessary money.

This agreement, Clark said, had been reached after he had consulted with Manager Soden of the Boston Club, and Mr. Soden had agreed to get a release for Clark. It was also said that Arthur Irwin, who has a part interest in the control of Charles River Park, Boston, would manage the American Association's Boston club, if it was agreed that a club should be placed there. W. C. Bryan, it was said, has been promised the management of the Washington Club, and on a guarantee from the association, had enlisted T. F. Noyes as the backer of the enterprise.

With all the meetings that have been held, the new American Association has not yet received from the National League a guarantee of protection. This guarantee will not be extended until the American Association has produced its backers and made it evident positively that the money backing its members claim to have is ready and available. The new association also has secured only a few players so far.

While the new baseball body was worrying with details, the managers of the New York Baseball Club were busy taking advantage of the gathering of baseball managers to make trades for players to strengthen the metropolitan team. One important deal that was made by the New York Club was the trading of First Baseman Jack Doyle to Chicago for three men. The exchange will bring to New York Virgil Garvin, a fairly good pitcher; William Strong, a clever infielder, and John Ganzel, a first-base man, who is not markedly inferior to Doyle. The trade was considered a markedly advantageous one for New York.

The managers of the New York team also drafted three players who promise to be more than useful. These are "Joe" Cannon of the Bridgeport club, "Jimmy" Casey of the Detroit club, and Will Crishom of the Cleveland club. The American Association meeting will be continued to-day.

A. A. U. CHAMPIONSHIPS.

New York Amateur Boxers and Wrestlers Win in Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, Penn., Jan. 18.—Seven boxing bouts and ten wrestling contests took place at the second night's session of the Amateur Athletic Union championship tournament. The majority of the contests were rather clever, but the out-of-town contestants again carried off the honors. Summaries:

Boxing.—145-pound Class—John Mumford, New West Side A. C., New York, 135-pound champion of New York State, defeated John McConville, D. C. and A. C., in three fast slugging rounds.

158-Pound Class.—Frank Bruk, D. C. and A. C., won from Frank Hsley, East Pittsburg A. C., in the third round of a very amateurish performance.

135-Pound Class, (Semi-finals)—Frank J. Keensn, Hatfield A. C., was defeated rather easily in three rounds by J. Leavey, Pastime A. C., New York.

135-Pound Class, Semi Final.—James Connors, D. C. and A. C., knocked out by Frank McAvoy, D. C. and A. C., in the third round of rough and tumble work, by a chance blow in the jaw.

135-Pound Class, Semi-Final.—John F. Mumford, N. W. S. A. C., New York, defeated Edward Schevien, D. C. and A. C., in 53 seconds, Schevien wns woefully outclassed.

115-Pound Class.—George Young, Hatfield A. C., got the decision over Bartley Dorsey, D. C. & A. C., after three good rounds.

145-Pound Class, (Semi-final.)—John Halpin, American A. C., lasted only a round and a half before John F. Mumford. Halpin was knocked flat, his head almost splitting the stage.

Wrestling, 125-Pound Class.—Harry McDonald, South Side Turners, won the fall from Peter Rice, D. C. & A. C., in 1:35.

125-Pound Class.—Ernest Meanwell, Rochester A. C., put William Nelson, St. George A. C., New York, to the mat in 2 minutes 22 seconds.

158-Pound Class.—Joa Schmucker, Verner A. C., defeated Fred Lugenbuhl, New West Side A. C., New York, in 4 minutes 17 seconds.

145-Pound Class.—N. Nelson, Pastime A. C., New York, and Max Wiley, (champion,) Rochester A. C., went six minutes without a fall. In the three minutes' extra work, Wiley was given the decision for the more aggressive work.

135-Pound Class—John McIntyre, D. C. & A. C., was downed by Peter Rice of same club in five minutes 13 seconds.

158-Pound Class—J. G. Schreiner, Rochester A. C., threw J. Seaman, D. C. & A. C., in 21 seconds.

125-Pound Class, (Semi-final)—Ernest Meanwell, Rochester A. C., and C. Niflot, Pastima A. C., New York, wrestled six minutes without decision. In the extra minutes Niflot was given the decision.

158-Pound Class—Max Wiley, Rochester A. C., defeated W. Brown in 2 minutes 12 seconds.

145-Pound Class, (Semi-final)—W. J. Hanson, W. U. P., and Fred Lugenbuhl had to go three minutes extra, the decision finally going to Lugenbuhl for aggressive work.

145-Pound Class, (Semi-final)—Max Wiley, Rochester A. C., made short work of J. Sanders, American A. C., in 1 minute 14 seconds.

NARROW BILLIARD VICTORY.

Townsend Defeats Gardner at the Hanover Club by Seventeen Points.

Arthur Townsend, the Hanover Club billiard champion, and Frank Gardner, the holder of similar honors in the Crescent Athletic Club, were the competitors last night at the Hanover Club, Brooklyn, in the fifth game for the championship of the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players. The contest was at 300 points, fourteen-inch balk line, and after a contest of sixty-one innings the victory went to Townsend, who scored his 300 points to 283 for Gardner. The victory of the local clubmen was received with universal favor by the crowd, a large proportion of which were Hanover members.

The game was a very close one, and for the greater part of the evening only the barest margin of points separated the contestants. Townsend made a run of 6 in the first inning, while Gardner only rolled 2. The latter was the first to pass the 100 mark, which he did in the twentieth inning, at the close of which he had 107. Townsend then was 12 points behind, but a good run of 22 a little later gave him foremost place, and he just managed to hold it through the game.

In the middle of the match the Crescent champion's play fell off badly, and he had a long stretch of low figures. It was revived toward the end by a run of 33, but it availed little against the more steady, if not so brilliant, play of Townsend. The latter's highest run was 26, but Gardner lost his victory through erratic streaks of play. The scores are.

Arthur Townsend—6 0 0 6 0 0 10 18 1 10 0 0 2 2 1 2 22 12 3 0 0 0 9 19 0 0 3 11 3 1 3 2 4 0 22 0 2 2 1 0 0 3 14 8 6 3 0 2 2 0 6 2 26 0 7 6 4 13 5 0 17 1 1. Total, 300; average, 4 56-61; high runs, 26 22 22 19 18 17 14 13 12 11 10 10.

Frank Gardner—2 1 4 12 0 31 1 2 4 3 0 2 0 0 0 15 6 9 0 1 10 1 1 9 1 2 6 0 8 11 4 0 0 24 0 7 9 1 1 0 5 3 8 0 0 4 10 0 3 1 33 0 0 2 5 0 10 3 6 4 1. Total, 283; average, 4 43-60; high runs, 33 31 15 12 12 10 10.

The players this evening will be Byron J. Stark and Frank Keeney.

Knickerbocker A. C. Billiards.

Two handicap billiard games were played last night in the members' tournament at the Knickerbocker Athletic Club. In Class X, F. W. Andrews and M. A. Diaz, both handicapped at 125, had a close match, Andrews winning in 125 points to 115. William Fraley and Joseph Steiner were the Class Y competitors. Each was handicapped at 100, and Steiner won in 100 to 87. The players to-night will be Dr. F. A. Braundis and C. M. Folsom, W. R. Bracken and M. A. Diaz, A. Bennett and F. W. Andrews.

SHOOTING ON ARMORY RANGES.

Company H Marksmen Contest for Kemp and Clark Trophies.

The teams of Company H of the Seventh Regiment competed for the Kemp and Clark Trophies on the armory ranges last night, making a total of 1,048 for the Kemp Trophy for teams of twenty-five men, and scoring 1,991 for the Clark Trophy for teams of fifty men, which gives them fourth place so far in both competitions. Two perfect scores of 25 at 500 yards were made by Corp. J. H. Ford and Private W. W. Heroy. Perfect scores at that distance have also been made in this series by Private F. Kahrs of Company F and by Private T. A. Johnson of Company K, while Private H. S. Barnes of Company K has made a perfect score at 200 yards.

Five of the ten companies of the regiment have now scored in the present competition, Company F leading with a score of 1,067 for the Kemp Trophy, and Company K leading for the Clark Trophy with a score of 2,007. Last night's scores and the standing to date follow:

COMPANY H—KEMP TROPHY.

Name.	200 Yds.	500 Yds.	Total.
Lieut. J. Wortherspoon	24	24	48
Lance Corp. W. C. Collins	22	24	46
Private H. A. Murphy	22	24	46
Lieut. L. J. Joselyn	22	24	46
Corp. J. H. Ford	21	24	45
Private T. Dwight	20	25	45
Corp. W. C. Relyea	22	22	44
Private W. Kell	22	22	44
Private H. A. Groesbeck, Jr.	21	23	44
Sergt. A. M. Pressinger	20	24	44
Corp. S. M. Richardson	22	21	43
Private C. H. Hencke	20	23	43
Private L. Ketcham	20	22	42
Private H. G. Wotherspoon	21	20	41
Private F. C. H. Buil	21	20	41
Private A. W. Taylor	21	19	40
Private M. S. Da Costa	20	20	40
Corp. G. E. Baldwin	20	20	40
Private M. K. Miller	21	18	39
Private J. A. Kell	18	21	39
Lance Corp. F. C. Maston	18	21	39
Private J. O. Swayne	19	19	38
First Sergt. W. B. Miles	18	20	38
Private C. J. Mitchell	20	17	37
Private J. Church	20	16	36
Team total	516	532	1,048

COL. EMMONS CLARK TROPHY.

	200 Yds.	500 Yds.	Total.
Private W. W. Heroy	22	25	47
Sergt. G. R. Martin	22	24	46
Private J. Ford	22	19	41
Private G. W. Hopkins	20	22	42
Private A. W. Stout	19	23	42
Private J. G. Gray	20	21	41
Corp. J. W. Salter, Jr.	20	20	40
Capt. C. E. Lydecker	19	21	40
Private C. Wells	19	21	40
Corp. R. S. Holt, Jr.	18	22	40
Private R. J. Malden	19	20	39
Private H. B. Thomas	20	18	38
Private L. M. Wilson	20	18	38
Private W. Hamlin	19	18	37
Private C. O. Baese	19	18	37
Private W. W. Gibbs	17	20	37
Private L. E. Turk	20	16	36
Private S. H. Walker	19	16	35
Private C. D. H. Brower	19	16	35
Private E. F. Hart	19	15	34
Sergt. F. H. Crary	15	19	34
Corp. E. C. Vanderbilt	17	16	33
Private M. S. Parker	15	16	31
Private J. P. Hayes	18	12	30
Private E. A. Cruikshank	14	13	27
Team totals	469	474	943
Kemp Trophy scores	516	532	1,048
Clark Trophy Scores	985	1,006	1,991

RECORDS TO DATE.

	Kemp Trophy.	Clark Trophy.
Best records	1,124	2,144
Winning scores last year, (Co. E.)	1,089	2,036
Company D	1,041	2,003
Company F	1,067	2,005
Company K	1,061	2,007
Company I	1,056	1,914
Company H	1,048	1,991

Sheepshead Bay Gunners.

Shooting in a gale of wind against a lot of good birds were the conditions that confronted the Sheepshead Bay Rod and Gun Club members yesterday on their grounds, just back of the Coney Island Jockey Club race course. Ira McKane and Henry J. Montanus killed straight in a field of twenty, and then on the shoot-off, McKane won, killing two straight, the conditions being miss and out. Summaries:

Sweepstakes, Five Live Birds Per Man.—Hans Kronika, (26 yards,) 5; Dr. O. T. Rouff, (30 yards,) 5; Philip Suss, (27 yards,) 5; H. Koch, (26 yards,) 4; J. S. Van Pelt, (26 yards,) 4; L. E. Allen, (26 yards,) 4; Judge James B. Voorhees, (26 yards,) 4; Daniel J. Heffner, (26 yards,) 4; David Sloan, (26 yards,) 4.

Renewal, same conditions.—Van Pelt, 5; Dr. Rouff, 5; Kronika, 3; Rauscher, 3; Koch, 3.

Club Competition, Seven Live Birds Per Man.—Ira McKane, (28 yards,) 7; Henry J. Montanus, (26 yards,) 7; Dr. O. N. Rouff, (30 yards,) 6; Hans Kronika, (26 yards,) 6; H. Koch, (26 yards.) 6; W. S. Van Pelt, (27 yards,) 6; John J. Pillion, (28 yards,) 6; Judge James M. Voorhees, (26 yards,) 6; Daniel J. Heffner, (25 yards,) 5; W. H. Lundey, (23 yards,) 5; M. Rauscher, (25 yards,) 5; E. J. Heffner, (26 yards,) 5; Philip Suss, (28 yards,) 5; L. E. Allen, (25 yards,) 5.

Shoot Off, Miss and Out.—Henry J. Montanus, (26 yards,) 1; Ira McKane, (28 yards,) 2.

Old Shooting Rule Still Stands.

Robert A. Welch, the amateur wing shot of the Carteret Gun Club, left town yesterday on a hunting and business trip in the South. Asked prior to his departure as to whether the Carteret Gun Club intended to enforce its rules stopping its members from shooting with professional wing shots or against manufacturers or dealers which would bar Louis T. Duryea, Daniel I. Bradley, Robert A. Welch, H. Yale Dolan, and many other shooters from the Grand American Handicap, Mr. Welch said: "You are about the thousandth man who has asked me that question. You will be surprised when I tell you that I know nothing in regard to it at all excepting what I have learned from the daily papers. I have received no notice from the Secretary, and do not know if any have been sent out, and I certainly should have if such a condition was contemplated."

Brooklyn Advertisements. | Brooklyn Advertisements. | Brooklyn Advertisements.

Frederick Loeser & Co.

BROOKLYN.

No Man Is Exempt.

Our Entire Stock of Men's Clothing at Exactly Half Price.

An Offer That's Never Been Equalled.

An opportunity in which every man can throw himself on the winning side—whether he needs an Overcoat, a Suit, a pair of Trousers for to-day or for next Winter. Doesn't the saving warrant anticipation? It's an offer (you can easily verify it) that's never been equalled in the clothing business.

Because we haven't a garment in stock over four months old—this season's up-to-date clothing.

Because half of our already low prices means a very much lower price than half the price of the ordinary clothier.

Because, though we haven't been long in the men's clothing business, we mean to stay in it—we mean to keep it unexcelled—we mean to make it very much to your selfish interest to keep coming here.

Because we mean to never carry over stock to another season—every season will start with absolutely fresh goods.

These are some of the reasons why we make this sweeping reduction of half—something never done before—Winter Overcoats, Raglans, Suits and Trousers—a splendid assortment from which to choose—

Suits.

6.25 for our 12.50 Suits.
7.50 for our 15.00 Suits.
10.00 for our 20.00 Suits.
11.25 for our 22.50 Suits.
12.50 for our 25.00 Suits.
15.00 for our 30.00 Suits.

Overcoats.

6.25 for our 12.50 Overcoats.
7.50 for our 15.00 Overcoats.
10.00 for our 20.00 Overcoats.
11.50 for our 23.00 Overcoats.
12.50 for our 25.00 Overcoats.
14.00 for our 28.00 Overcoats.
17.50 for our 35.00 Overcoats.
20.00 for our 40.00 Overcoats.

Trousers.

2.00 for our 4.00 Trousers.
2.50 for our 5.00 Trousers.
3.00 for our 6.00 Trousers.
3.50 for our 7.00 Trousers.
4.00 for our 8.00 Trousers.
4.50 for our 9.00 Trousers.

Vests.

2.00 for our 4.00 Vests.
2.25 for our 4.50 Vests.
2.50 for our 5.00 Vests.
2.75 for our 5.50 Vests.

ON LOCAL BOWLING ALLEYS.

Fordham Council Wins Three Games in Bronx Royal Arcanum Series.

Fordham Council won three straight games from Claremont Council in the Royal Arcanum tournament of the Borough of the Bronx on Pump's North Side Palace alleys last night. The scores:

CLAREMONT C'NCIL. Name.	1st.	2d.	3d.	FORDHAM COUNCIL. Name.	1st.	2d.	3d.
Kuber	150	134	138	McNulty	144	159	125
Sloane	100	122	84	Beekman	129	145	157
Fox	130	113	177	Loose	122
Ludwig	140	112	156	Schauvel	157	149	143
Schultz	163	128	161	Whitam	145	175	162
				Stocker	125	139
Total	683	609	695	Total	722	733	720

De Vinne Council defeated America and Lenox Councils in the New York Royal Arcanum League tournament on Starr's alleys last night and America beat Lenox. De Vinne Council made a new high team score for the tournament of 912. The scores:

FIRST GAME.—De Vinne Council—Frankle, 160; Barnett, 170; Haar, 222; Wichterman, 190; Detlef, 170. Total, 912.

America Council—C. Boettjer, 176; Schlussing, 172; Le Beau, 143; Johansmeyer, 189; Setzer, 181. Total, 861.

SECOND GAME.—America Council—C. Boettjer, 193; Schlussing, 201; A. Boettjer, 158; Johansmeyer, 208; Setzer, 138. Total, 898.

Lenox Council—Carter, 177

WEISBARD MURDER CASE

Police Continue the Search for Clues in Italian Quarter.

Trunk Mystery Apparently as Deep as Ever—Express Wagon Drivers Examined.

The mystery surrounding the murder of Meyer Weisbard, the jewelry salesman, whose body was found in a trunk on the stringers of Pier 11, East River, on Wednesday, baffled the police more than ever yesterday. When Chief of Detectives Titus gave an interview late last night he said that nothing practically, barring the running down of scores of rumors and stories, had been accomplished.

"Give the murderers a chance," he said. "If, as we still believe, robbery was the motive of the crime, the perpetrators will not fail to pawn their loot sooner or later, and when they do then it will be our time."

At this point Chief Titus was told that a police Captain, whose name could not be learned, asked to see him in an anteroom. The Chief of Detectives excused himself and left hurriedly. The exact conversation, which bore on the Weisbard murder, could not be learned, but the words "pawn" and "redeem" and "jewelry" were overheard, to which Capt. Titus said:

"Good, good. I'm glad of that." When he returned to the office he was asked:

"Have you found any jewelry which you know belonged to the murdered man?"

"That question I will not answer," he said.

It was learned from a reliable source later in the night that the Detective Bureau was in possession of more facts than it had given out. This suppression, it was said, was partly because of Chief Titus's policy to give out only facts and not mere clues that may fall flat in the end, but largely also it was because a premature disclosure of plans might defeat the ends of justice.

Said an old-time detective: "It is possible that this murder may remain unsolved even until public interest in it has died out. But it is of a peculiar type of murder, and, mark my words, if the men escape for the present, this is the kind of a case which will wind up in a cable dispatch to the newspapers in a year or two from now and the dispatch will say that Detective So-and-So of the New York Central Office has landed a man in Rome or Venice or Naples, and that the man is the murderer of Meyer Weisbard, found dead in a trunk on an East River pier in January, 1901."

Chief Titus was asked: "Is there any reason for supposing that Weisbard was murdered in the Italian quarter rather than by thugs in another quarter of the city?" Weisbard was last seen alive in the Italian quarter," was the answer.

"And you think the murder was premeditated?"

"I do not," Chief Titus answered.

These answers bear out the lines upon which the detectives were kept at work yesterday. All of the men were shifted around and another search of all the tenements was made. Owing to the shift each set of men covered the work of others done the day before. The police admit that they think the peddler was killed in a quarrel with one of his customers. The list of these customers the murdered man had in his pocket. It was not found there when the dead man's clothing was searched, and the detectives are therefore at sea as to the probable route which Weisbard would have taken.

This being the case, all of the houses in the side streets in the neighborhood of Mercer Street are being searched.

All day long detectives stood in the doorways of these tenements, while others inside searched the houses from top to bottom. Houses in the vicinity of 129 and 131 Mott Street, where Weisbard last visited, were particularly searched.

Several stories of wagons laden with trunks on the night of the murder were knocked in the head. Every express office in Manhattan and the Battery has been closely examined and all of the drivers who went out late with their wagons have been made to give an account of themselves.

CHILDREN'S GIFT TO CHILDREN.

Acknowledgment of New York Public School Contribution Sent to the Schools of Galveston.

President O'Brien of the Board of Education yesterday received an acknowledgment of the receipt of the check for $27,907.02 sent on Jan. 6 as a donation by the children of the public schools of New York to the children of the public schools of Galveston.

The money was collected in pennies, nickels, and dimes from the New York children, and the check for the amount, drawn on the Nineteenth Ward Bank, was an unusually ornate instrument, handsomely engraved, bearing the seal of the Board of Education and a scene depicting a group of merry school children, besides a suitable inscription.

The letter acknowledging the receipt of the check is signed by President M. R. Kicherg of the Board of Trustees of the public schools of Galveston, and is as follows:

Your esteemed letter of the 5th inst. inclosing your check on the Nineteenth Ward Bank for $27,907.02, being a donation by the children of the public schools of New York to the children of the public schools of Galveston, I have duly received.

In reply thereto I have the privilege to express to you and to the Board of Education of New York, and to the children of the public schools of New York, the measureless gratitude of the children of the public schools of Galveston, and of all the people of Galveston for this noble and generous gift. The broad and liberal spirit revealed by this free and splendid contribution cannot fail to exercise an ennobling influence upon the children of both cities, and will live enduringly in the hearts and affections of the people of Galveston.

In the name of the Board of Trustees of the public schools of this city, I earnestly request that you will return and present to the check so that we may permanently preserve it as a memento of the open handed charity of your great city.

In conclusion permit me to thank you for your kind wishes and to express the hope that the great public schools of the Empire City may ever be guided by the strong and munificent spirit which adorns their present administration.

FOUGHT WITH WIFE'S LAWYER.

Charles Wuest Lost Case and Is Charged with Provoking a Row.

There was a lively sequel to proceedings in a suit for separation in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, yesterday, when the defendant in the action met the plaintiff's lawyer upon leaving court, and assaulted him. Lawyer Hugo Wintner applied to Justice Dickey for alimony and counsel fee for Mrs. Charles Wuest, whose husband is a professor of music. Justice Dickey granted Mrs. Wuest $10 a week alimony and $50 counsel fee.

Mr. Wuest acted as his own lawyer in the proceedings. He had a sharp tilt with his wife's counsel in court, and when the two met outside in the corridor there was trouble. Wuest, it is alleged, struck Wintner, and the latter is said to have struck back. Policeman Nugent interfered and took both men back into court. They were later taken over to the Adams Street Police Court, where Wuest was fined $5.

Order in the Castellane Case.

Justice Fitzgerald, in the Supreme Court, yesterday granted the application of Samuel Untermyer, as counsel for Anton J. Dittmar, to serve a summons by publication on the Count and Countess Boni de Castellane. This is in the action in which Mr. Dittmar, as assignee of claims of Asher Wertheimer, a London bric-à-brac dealer, has obtained a temporary injunction restraining the trustees of the estate of Jay Gould from paying any of her income to Anna, Countess de Castellane.

Young Lawyer Will Defend City Cases.

James Prendergast, twenty-two years old, a lawyer employed in the offices of Bergen & Dykman, at 189 Montague Street, Brooklyn, has been appointed by Assistant Corporation Counsel Carr as special counsel to defend all of the suits brought by Long Island farmers against the city for damages because of the injury claimed to have been done their land by the operation of driven wells in connection with the Brooklyn water supply system. Mr. Prendergast has been practicing law only one year.

ROBERT ATKINS A SUICIDE.

Whitehouse & Porter's Managing Clerk Shoots Himself in a Hotel.

Robert Atkins of 2,432 Seventh Avenue, managing clerk for the real estate firm of Whitehouse & Porter, at 509 Fifth Avenue, committed suicide yesterday by shooting himself through the heart in a room at the Colonial Hotel, at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street and Eighth Avenue. Financial difficulties are said to have been the cause of the suicide.

Atkins had been with the firm of Whitehouse & Porter for four years, acting in the capacity of salesman, and had for some time been the managing clerk of the office at 509 Fifth Avenue. At a late hour on Wednesday night he left the office after a hard day's work. He did not put in an appearance as usual the next morning, but at about 11 o'clock he telephoned that he had some trouble and might not be down. Nothing further was thought of his absence, and the first intimation that anything was wrong came when a messenger from the Colonial Hotel called at the office of Whitehouse & Porter and said that a man who had been identified by letters and papers in his pockets as Robert Atkins had committed suicide there by shooting himself.

Clarence Porter, junior partner in the firm, at once went to the hotel and recognized the dead man. It appeared that Atkins had registered there late the previous night, and after taking a drink at the bar had gone direct to the room to which he had been assigned. About 10 o'clock yesterday morning he was found lying dead on the bed. An overcoat was hanging on the wall, and pinned to it was a note which read: "My name is Robert Atkins. I live at 2,432 Seventh Avenue." The note further asked that his wife be notified of his death.

Mrs. Atkins professed herself quite at a loss to explain the motive of the act. She did not, she said, know of any financial difficulties that were troubling her husband, and she had not noticed that he was feeling despondent.

Worthington Whitehouse, senior member of the firm in which Atkins was employed, said that he had learned that Atkins was in some little trouble over money matters, but he had not thought it amounted to much. Mr. Whitehouse would not say that Atkins was short in his accounts with the firm, but said that their relations were perfectly satisfactory and everything could have been arranged there without difficulty. It was said that Atkins was under considerable expense to maintain his home on Seventh Avenue in the style in which he lived, and that he had met with some speculative reverses. These are not thought to have been very serious, but Atkins evidently felt the position keenly.

TWINE KILLS A BABY.

Strangled as She Tries to Reach Her Twin Brother.

Becoming tired of her rubber nipple, which was hung about her neck with a piece of twine, and wishing to play on the floor with Edward, her twin brother, little Dora Damroch, fourteen months old, who lived on Ninth Street, between Avenues C and D, Unionport, started to climb down from her high chair where her mother had left her yesterday. As she clambered down, the nipple caught on the nob of the high chair, and the cord tightening about her neck as she hung there, the child was strangled.

The father, a market gardener, was away at his work at noon yesterday when the mother concluded to take her little boy and girl out for a walk. She left them in the kitchen while she ran across the street to the shoemaker's shop to have a hole in the toe of little Dora's shoe sewed up. She left the children in the kitchen, Edward on the floor playing with the spoon, and Dora perched up in her little chair with the nipple and a little tin rattle. When the mother returned she found her little daughter hanging suspendid from the nob of the chair by the piece of twine holding the nipple about her neck. The little tin rattle was lying on the floor. Baby Edward, who knew that something was wrong, was crying pitifully.

The distracted mother loosened the string and the baby settled limp into her arms. Realizing that there might yet be a spark of life in her child, Mrs. Damroch rushed out for a policeman, and soon an ambulance surgeon was on the scene. He said he could not do anything, however. The child was dead.

LEASE OF THE ASTOR HOUSE.

Report that Walter Hildreth Had Secured It Denied.

The rumor that Walter Hildreth, formerly proprietor of the Metropolitan Hotel, at Broadway and Prince Street, had secured the lease of the Astor House and would become its manager forthwith is denied by the heirs of Mr. Allen.

Alfred H. Thurston, who has been the manager of the hotel since June 1 last, said that the Allen heirs had no intention of disposing of the house or of making any change in the management. Mr. Hildreth, who was formerly business partner of Mr. Allen, will be at the hotel for a short time, Mr. Thurston said, to assist in straightening out certain matters, but will not manage it.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

New York City.

JOHN MCGOWAN.—John McGowan, grocer, at 583 Second Avenue, corner of Thirty-second Street; made an assignment yesterday to John McNichols without preference. He has been in the grocery business for the past five years, and at the above location since May 1, 1900.

DANTE'S INFERNO EXHIBITION COMPANY.—City Marshal Louis Levy said yesterday that he had placed a man in charge of the place of business of the Dante's Inferno Exhibition Company at 1,177 Broadway, and that he had foreclosed a chattel mortgage on the fixtures of $4,000 given by the company on July 18 last to the Karsch Brewing Company, the sale to take place next Tuesday. The Gilsey estate also has a mortgage on the place for rent. Deputy Sheriff Carey has also received an execution against the company for $511 in favor of Thomas Maguire and others, and has levied upon anything, as the place was closed and in the charge of the Marshal. The company was incorporated on July 14, 1898, with a capital stock of $50,000.

Out of Town.

ARIEL MARIA DA SILVA.—Abel Maria Da Silva, a merchant of Georgetown, British Guiana, confessed judgment in this city yesterday in favor of A. D. Straus & Co. for $30,256, for balance due for food products, glassware, and other general merchandise sold to him by the firm between Sept. 1 and Dec. 31, 1900.

PETITIONS IN BANKRUPTCY.

ROBERT ROHRACKER.—Robert Rohracker of Philadelphia was yesterday adjudged a voluntary bankrupt in the United States District Court. Liabilities $19,882.60; assets $11,142.

CLARENCE ALFRED SPOONER.—Clarence Alfred Spooner of Philadelphia was yesterday adjudged a voluntary bankrupt in the United States District Court. Liabilities $496,946.62, consisting of secured claims $272,638.60, unsecured claims $118,236.77, and accommodation paper $6,021.25.

JOHN DOYLE.—John Doyle of Southfield, Orange County, has filed a petition in bankruptcy here, with liabilities of $3,422 and nominal assets of $655, consisting of two lots at Southfield, valued at $500, mortgaged for $500, and horse and wagons, $155, for which he claims exemption.

KATHERINE H. HALL.—Katherine H. Hall, residing at 110 West Eighty-second Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $1,199, due to seventy-five creditors for goods purchased in July, 1900, and no assets. She was formerly a dealer in patent oilers and engineers' supplies at 40 Cortlandt Street. The business was established eighteen years ago by her husband, and she took charge of it eight years ago, on account of his illness.

BENJAMIN H. S. WOODFORD.—Benjamin H. S. Woodford, who resides at Bayside, L. I., and had places of business at 371 West End Avenue and at Ninety-eighth Street and the East River, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $14,118 and assets of $355, consisting of outstanding accounts, $235; note, $100; office stationery, $5, and interest in mining stock, $15. The liabilities are partly as a member of the Cross-Woodford Lumber Company and partly on his individual account. A large part of the liabilities were contracted in 1898 at Huntington and Dobbin, West Va., where he was formerly in the lumber trade. Since then he has been in this city selling lumber on commission and acting as bookkeeper for a lumber firm.

Partners at Loggerheads.

Judge Blanchard of the Supreme Court has appointed Ferdinand Eidman, Jr., receiver of the assets of the firm of Clinton E. Brush & Co., manufacturers of a paint solvent, whose office is at 4 Cedar Street, this city, and factory at 38 Henry Street, Brooklyn, in a suit brought by Clinton E. Brush against August Valdemar Kirkeby for a dissolution of the partnership on account of a disagreement between them. The firm was formed in July last, and Mr. Brush said that he had invested nearly $6,000 cash in the business, and that Mr. Kirkeby did not contribute any capital—only the formula making the paint solvent.

Bradstreet's Weekly Failure Report.

Bradstreet's reports 290 failures in the United States during the week, against 322 for the previous week and 255, 262, 309, and 429 for the corresponding weeks of 1900 to 1897. The Middle States had 70, New England 59, Southern 58, Western 67, Northwestern 19, Pacific 14, and Territories 3. Canada had 50, against 36 for the preceding week. About 90 per cent. of the total number of concerns failing had capital of $5,000 or less and 6 per cent. had from $5,000 to $20,000 capital.

Judgments.

The following judgments were filed yesterday, the first name being that of the debtor:

ALTIERI, Pasquale and Pietro—P. Capolighi	$2,282
ADAE, Charles P.—L. M. Adae, costs	151
ABRAMSON, Meyer and Abraham—V. Lolio	136
BURLINSON, Annie R.—L. R. Walton	82
BORROWE, Anna W. C.—H. M. Corbin and others, executors, &c., costs	125
BALMEISTER, Hattie—R. Kochmann	1,283
BRAUNSDORF, George W.—D. E. Adams	310
BERRY, John G.—Charles Berg	33
BUSCH, Paul M.—D. M. Koehler & Son Company	17
BALLEISEN, John, and James Wechsler—Hyman Ballenzweig	30
CURTIS, M. Edward—Tucker & Carter Rope Company	68
CANARY, Patrick, administrator, &c.—P. E. Bush, costs	92
COLT, Grace and Olcott C.—D. Sears	2,012
CHRISTMAS, William A.—G. H. Leonard	367
CLAUSEN, William, by guardian—C. Henneberger, costs	88
CURRAN, Thomas J.—D. M. Levy	90
CLARK, Margaret A.—C. M. Newton, administratrix, &c	415
CLARK, James T.—C. M. Newton, administratrix, &c	831
COHN, Solomon A.—M. J. McLaughlin and another	169
DALY, Hugh—D. M. Koehler	22
DODENHOFF, John, and John Sondheim—M. Arnheim	66
DA SILVA, Abel M.—A. D. Straus, and others	30,256
DILL, Annie—H. W. Rupprecht, costs	23
EDWARDS, Robert W. M. R. Palmer	172
FITZGERALD, Margaret—T. Hussey, administrator, &c	2,645
FRANKLIN NATIONAL BANK—J. A. Jarvis	1,655
FRIEDBERG, Max—T. E. Hergert	154
FOUNSYTH, James, and Emile Taylor, individually and as copartners—W. Mathews	666
GOODWYN, John W.—T. Barry, costs	113
GORDMAN, Jacob—Louise Schwab	229
GRIGG, David E.—The Armstrong Manufacturing Company	50
GILMOUR, John H.—M. D. Barr	283
GOODMAN, Urry—K. Mathiasen	957
GROSS, Max, as marshal, &c.—The Gansevoort Bank	528
HOBBS, Katherine B.—K. H. Wetmore	530
HIPPLER, Ernest A.—Ackcr, Merrall & Condit	761
HYLAND, James J.—J. S. Strahl	112
HUNT, Dwight B.—E. W. Hunt, costs	78
JOLLY, Marcus L., and Maurice H. Perret—$6,134 balance, receipts for week, 169	83
KELLY, Thomas P.—The Colonial Bank	86
KAPLAN, Elias or Ellice, and Samuel Barkin—K. Mathiasen	957
KUNZENMAN, Jacob—Herman Sulzer	137
LUTZ, Louisa M.—H. Koenig and another	104
MOWBRAY, Isaac H.—H. Porter	30
MURHEID, Benjamin D.—O. J. Wells, executor, &c	121
MAYER, Alex J.—H. Allen and another	4,300
MEYER, Abraham, Bernard, and Joseph—A. G. Steelman	51
MORSE, Charles A.—M. Kennedy	82
MELACH, Julius, and Jacob Marcus—United Electric Light and Power Company	96
MERKIN, Max—A. R. Conkling	215
MURRAY, Robert T.—D. M. Koehler	232
McLEAN, John J.—E. A. Ammon	116
McCLELLAND, William A.—Congdon & Carpenter Company	43
NEWCOMBE, Michael F.—M. M. Cohn	47
NEW YORK athletic CLUB—F. Kaiser	372
NIEDERMEYER, George—A. Werner and another	39
NIEUSTADT, William M.—D. M. Koehler	272
OUTTEN, Eleanor—A. J. Pratt	358
O'NEIL, Dr. Samuel J.—C. W. Becker and others	17
O'CONNOR, Edward J.—J. Mahoney	185
PATTERSON, Frances—Consolidated Gas Company	39
ROBINSON, Julius A.—T. Regan	46
RIESER, Henry J.—Review Publishing Company	601
ROSEN, Leon—Anna Sherwin	226
ROGERS, Florence—New York News Publishing Company	121
REILLY, John—D. M. Koehler	107
RICHTER, Anton—The George Bechtel Brewing Company	47
SAFE DEPOSIT AND TRUST COMPANY of Baltimore, trustee—H. C. Fahnestock, costs	116
SNOW, Edward R.—M. Neuber	1,011
SIRY, Emil—The George Bechtel Brewing Company	116
SANTACROCE, Nicola—James G. Lynch	1,011
STOLZ, George and Lena—Louis Bossert and another	499
SPEARS, Elizabeth M.—J. Hartmayer	419
STEVENSON, William—John H. Simons	494
SROKA, Louis—A. Bolognesi and another	148
STONE, Israel—J. Schattman and another	2,013
THE MAYOR, &c.—E. A. Demarest, executrix, &c	577
THE NEW YORK AND HARLEM RAILroad Company and the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company—John Kelrns	1,639
THE NEW YORK AND HARLEM RAILroad Company and the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company—Alice I. Birrell	4,483
ULRICH, John F.—City of New York, costs	67
WEINSTEIN, Moses—E. Collins	85
WHITE, Abraham—H. C. Strobel and another	342
WOLF, Berthold—G. White	223
WEAD, Charles K.—Connecticut Trust and Safe Deposit Company	1,717
ZWECK, Jacob, Amanda, and George; also Eliza and George H. Landt, Sarah Laundrie, and Kate and Samuel H. Jenny—S. Irvine	340

FEDERAL COURTS.

United State Supreme Court.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Supreme Court of the United States:

148—George H. Scott, plaintiff in error, vs. Parry L. Deweese, receiver, &c.—Leave granted to submit briefs on file in Nos. 179 and 180 in this case, on motion of A. B. Browne in behalf of counsel.

143—Jacob Gardner et al., plaintiffs in error, vs. Louis Bonestell, executor, &c.—Argument continued by George W. Monteith for the plaintiffs in error, and by C. K. Bonestell for the defendant in error, and concluded by George W. Monteith for the plaintiffs in error.

391—John T. Pirie et al., &c., appellants, vs. Chicago Title and Trust Company, trustee, &c.—Argument commenced by Henry Ach for the appellants and continued by E. B. Felsenthal for the appellee.

Adjourned until Monday.

Call for Monday: 391, 278, 126, 146, 7, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, (and 185.)

STATE COURTS.

Court of Appeals.

Calendar for Monday: 38, 42, 44, 46, 50, 719, 49, 52.

Decisions.

SUPREME COURT—Appellate Division—First Department.

Marietta Ludington vs. Mary G. Seaton.—Motion granted, with $10 costs.

Simeon M. Barber vs. James T. Lane.—Motion denied upon payment of $10 costs, and leave given to apply to open default upon payment of $10 costs.

People ex rel. Thomas J. White vs. Bird S. Coler, as Controller.—Motion granted.

Matter of Michael Doherty, James Burns, John J. White, George Goetting, Solomon Schwarz, Elizabeth D. De Lancey, Henry Rosenwald; Anna G. Keane, William S. Gleason, George Starrett, Ruth Livingston, Alexander M. White, George E. Miller, Ahrend Schierenbeck, John J. Carle, Sarah E. Sackett, Edward H. Landon, Harriet D. Potter, D. H. Jaques, Margaret E. Helz, William H. Flitner, Katharine C. Head, Bella Hirsch.—Motions to dismiss appeals granted without costs.

Matter of Ellis H. Elias.—Motion denied.

James A. Deering vs. John Schreyer and another.—Motion denied on payment of $10 costs.

Pauline Circus vs. Order Ahawas Israel.—Motion denied, with $10 costs.

Mary A. Baxter vs. William G. Lancaster.—Motion denied, with $10 costs.

H. & J. Steinerz vs. Thomas J. Dunn, as Sheriff.—Motion denied upon payment of $10 costs, and leave given to apply in court below to open default on payment of $10 costs.

People ex rel. Abendroth & Root vs. Thomas L. Feitner et al., Commissioners.—Motion granted, with $10 costs.

Mary J. Norwood vs. the Mayer, &c.—Motion granted, with $10 costs.

Otto H. Bauer vs. William C. Dewey.—Motion for leave to go to the Court of Appeals granted, and questions certified. Memorandum per curiam.

New York Calendars—This Day.

SUPREME COURT—Special Term—Part II.—Fitzgerald, J.—Opens at 10:30 A. M. Ex-parte business.

SURROGATES' COURT—Chambers, Fitzgerald, S.—Wills for probate at 10:30 A. M.—August Greff, Robert E. A. Dorr, Hugo Wesendonck, Clinton Ogilvie.

CITY COURT—Special Term—Hascall, J.—Opens at 10 A. M. Motions.

Receivers Appointed—New York.

SUPREME COURT—Blanchard, J.—Clinton E. Brush vs. August Waldamar Kirkeby—Ferdinand Eidman.

SUPREME COURT—Beach, J.—Georgie H. Buckbee vs. Barney Isaacs et al.—Robert McGill.

CITY COURT—Hascall, J.—David Kahn vs. Andrew Stroessel—John F. Whalen.

Referees Appointed—New York.

SUPREME COURT—Fitzgerald, J.—Matter of Burtis—W. Ogden Harrington. Matter of Folsom—Richard M. Henry. Hoyt vs. Donovan—George O. Frelinghuysen. Trimble vs. Burby—George M. Van Hoesen. Streng vs. Redfield—Charles H. Knox. Pease vs. Kilpatrick—Augustus Van Slyck. Vietor vs. Butler—Henry B. B. Stapler.

SUPREME COURT—Beach, J.—Matter of Bergen-Budenbach Company—Abram Kling. Moore vs. Richards—Sidney J. Cowen. Schley vs. Spaulding—Thomas F. Donnelly. Bulkley vs. Wallach—John V. Bouvier, J. Matter of Waldrom—Samuel S. Koenig.

SUPREME COURT—Freedman, J.—Dolon vs. Leslie—Arthur D. Truax.

SUPREME COURT—Blanchard, J.—United States Life Insurance Company vs. Ettinger—Charles S. Whitman.

SUPREME COURT—Lawrence, J.—Cea vs. Neuman—Charles W. West. Koezby vs. Koezby—George W. Ellis.

Queens County Court Calendar.

SUPREME COURT—Queens County—Trial Term—Garretson, J.—Court opens and calendar called at 10 A. M. Monday, Jan. 21.

678—Rott vs. Brooklyn Heights Railroad.
645—Vogetsky vs. B. H. R. R.
721—Coughlin vs. L. I. R. R.
479—Pruzina vs. Baker.
719—Berman vs. L. I. R. R.
744—Schrimpe vs. L. I. R. R.
582—Kenworthy vs. Bogert.
639—Schneider vs. Met. St. Ry.
457—Schmidt vs. Berthle et al.
528—McCourt vs. 42d St. R. R.
692—McMahon vs. Morning Journal Co.
524—Jaquinto vs. Bauer.
488—Shaw vs. B. H. R. R.
83—Wiedeman vs. L. I. R. R.
81—Schumacher vs. Brook. Heights R. R.
794—McCullen vs. N. Y. & North Shore R. R.
790—Russell vs. same.
577—McKeans vs. Brown et al.
389—Manzalielo vs. N. Y. & Queens Co. R. R.
668—Curry vs. same.
437—Askey vs. Bradley-Currier Co.
319—Bruce vs. N. Y. & Queens Co. R. R.
30—Foster vs. Durr and another.
156—Barto vs. Barto.

Highest number reached on regular call, 705.

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat, No. 2 red	.79
Corn, No. 2 mixed	.46¾
Oats, No. 2 mixed	.30½
Flour, Minneapolis patents	$4.15
Cotton, middling	.09⅞
Coffee, No. 7 Rio	.07¾
Sugar, granulated	5.50
Molasses, O. K., prime	.40
Beef, family	11.00
Beef hams	20.00
Tallow, prime	.05 3-16
Pork, mess	14.25
Hogs, dressed, 160-lb	.07
Lard, prime	7.80
Butter, Western creamery	22@22½

COTTON.—The cotton market opened at something of a bull flourish, which soon petered out, after which the market became easier and declined 1@3 points. Still later prices advanced on covering following predictions of better cables to-morrow, with the tone of the market finally steady, at a net advance of 6@10 points. The opening advance was the result of a better class of cables, which had been looked for. Meanwhile spot holders in the South are not inclined to press supplies for sale; yet the amount in sight for the week is about 225,371 bales against 193,741 bales last season. Interior receipts, 97,316 bales, against 98,134 bales; port receipts for week, 169,244 bales, against 164,341 bales last year, all of which points to a crop of 10,250,000 bales or more. Spot cotton closed dull, with quotations unchanged on the basis of 9¾c for middling upland and 10¼c for middling Gulf. Sales, 900 bales. Southern spot markets were telegraphed as follows: New Orleans steady, unchanged at 9½c; Mobile quiet, unchanged, at 9¼c; Savannah quiet and steady, unchanged, at 9⅝c; Charleston steady, unchanged, at 9¼c; Wilmington dull, unchangsd, at 9¼c; Norfolk steady, unchanged, at 9½c; Baltimore nominal, unchanged, at 10c; Augusta quiet and steady, 1-16c advance, at 9⅝c; St. Louis unchanged at 9½c.

Contract prices ranged as follows:

	Opening.	High.	Low.	Close.
January	9.65	9.70	9.65	9.69@9.70
February	9.39	9.40	9.37	9.40@9.41
March	9.36	9.40	9.34	9.37@9.38
April	9.33	9.33	9.33	9.36@9.38
May	9.33	9.38	9.33	9.37@9.38
June	9.34	9.34	9.34	9.35@9.37
July	9.33	9.36	9.30	9.35@9.37
August	9.07	9.09	9.04	9.08@9.09
September	8.53	8.56	8.53	8.55@8.57
October	8.25	8.28	8.25	8.28@8.30

LIVERPOOL, Jan. 18.—Spot cotton—Moderate business; prices 1-32d lower; American middling, fair, 5.27-32d; good middling, 5 9-16d; middling, 5 15-32d; low middling, 5 5-16d; good ordinary, 5 1-16d; ordinary, 4 13-32d. The sales of the day were 8,000 bales, of which 500 bales were for speculation and export, and included 7,400 bales American. Receipts, 10,000 bales, including 9,400 bales American. Futures opened and closed quiet; American, middling, low middling clause, January, 5 23-64@5 24-64d buyers; January and February, 5 22-64d sellers; February and March, 5 10-64d sellers; March and April, 5 17-64d sellers; April and May, 5 15-64d sellers; May and June, 5 13-64d sellers; June and July, 5 10-64@5 11-64d sellers; July and August, 5 7-64@5 8-64d buyers; August and September, 4 59-64d value; September and October, 4 59-64d value; October, good ordinary clause, 4 42-64d value; October and November, good ordinary clause, 4 33-64d nominal.

BREADSTUFFS.—WHEAT—Instead of making further response to the heavy export business of Thursday, the wheat market yesterday had a downward tendency under additional liquidation, which left final prices of the day ½c below the previous night. There seemed to be no disposition whatever to give the market any support, and local operators who the day before talked encouragingly of the market under such a large quantity of weak holdings had been disposed of, were among the chief sellers for short account during the session. Quotations of cash wheat, free on board afloat basis, were as follows; No. 1 hard, Duluth, 83½c, nominal; old No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 87c; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 85½c; No. 1 Northern, Chicago, 82½c; No. 2 red, New York, 70c, afloat; No. 2 hard, Chicago, 70¾c; prompt, No. 2 hard, New York, 78¾c, scarce.

DULUTH, Minn., Jan. 18.—Wheat—Cash, No. 1 hard, 73¼c; No. 1 Northern, 71½c; No. 2 Northern, 67½@67¾c; No. 3 Spring, 65¾@66¼c; to arrive, No. 1 hard, 74¾c; No. 1 Northern, 72¾c; May, 75½c; July, 76⅜c. Corn—36¼c. Oats —26@25¾c.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 18.—Wheat—No. 2 red, cash, 71¾c; January, 71¾c; May, 72¾c; July, 71¾c; No. 2 hard, 68¼@69½c. Corn—No. 2, cash, 36c; January, 36c; May, 37⅝c; July, 38c. Oats—No. 2, cash, 25¼c; January, 25¼c; May, 25¾@25½c; No. 2 white, 27½@28c.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 18.—Wheat—Cash, 73c; May, 74c; July, 74¾@74½c; on track, No. 1 hard, 74¾c; No. 1 Northern, 72¾c; No. 2 Northern, 69@70½c. Flour and Bran—Unchanged.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Jan. 18.—Wheat—Lower; No. 1 Northern, 74@74½c; No. 2 Northern, 71@73c. Rye—Steady; No. 1, 49c. Barley—Easier; No. 2, 59@60c; sample, 45@57c.

FLOUR AND MEAL—Spring patents were quoted at $4@$4.25; Winter straights, $3.40@$3.50; Winter patents, $3.65@$4; Spring clears, $3@$3.30; extra No. 1 Winter, $2.70@$2.90; extra No. 2 Winter, $2.50@$2.65; no grade, $18.00@$19.25, spot and to arrive. Buckwheat Flour—$2.10@$2.20. Rye Flour—Quiet; fair to good, $2.80@$3.15; choice to fancy, $3.15@$3.50. Cornmeal—Steady; kiln-dried, $2.35@$2.40, as to brand. Bag Meal—Steady; fine white and yellow, $1@$1.05; coarse, 91@92c. Feed—Quiet; Spring bran, spot, $16.75@$17; sacks to arrive, 200 lb, $17@$17.50; Spring bran, bulk, $16.25@$16.50; coarse Winter bran, $16@$18.50; city bran, $17.50@$18. Cornmeal—$25. Linseed oil cake, $27.75. Corn oil cake, $19. Hominy chop, $17. Oilmeal, $28.25.

FUTURES.

NEW YORK PRICES.

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.
Wheat—
January	70¾	70¾	70¾	77¾
March	78 15-16	80 3-16	78 15-16	70
May	80 7-16	80 3-16	79¼	79¼
July	79⅛	79¼	78¾	78⅝
Corn—
January	47	47	47	47
March	..	..	..	45½
May	44¼	44⅝	44¼	44½
July	44½	44½	44½	44½
Lard—
January	..	..	..	$7.80

CHICAGO PRICES.

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.
Wheat—
January	72 3-16	72 7-16	71 7-16	71⅞
February	72⅜	72⅝	71⅝	72
May	73⅛	73⅝	74⅛	74⅞
Corn—
January	37	37	36⅞	36⅞
February	37⅛	37⅛	37⅛	37⅛
May	38⅝	39¼	38⅝	38⅝
Oats—
January	23⅜	23⅞	21⅜	23⅝
May	25¼	25⅝	25⅛	25⅛
Lard—
January	..	..	..	$7.40
May	$7.52½	$7.52½	$7.50	7.50
Ribs—
January	..	..	..	7.05
May	7.22½	7.22½	7.17½	7.17½
Pork—
January	..	..	..	14.05
May	14.25	14.27½	14.17½	14.17½

PROVISIONS.—PORK—Mess, $13.75@$14.75; family, $15@$15.75; short clear, $14.50@$17. BEEF—Mess, $9@$9.50; family, $10@$12; packet, $10@$10.50; extra India mess, $14@$16. BEEF HAMS—$19.50@$20.50. DRESSED HOGS—Bacons, 6¾c; 180 lb, 7c; 160 lb, 7c; pigs, 7¾c. CUTMEATS—Smoking bellies, 8¼c; 10 lb, 8c; 12 lb, 7¾@8c; 14 lb, 7½c; pickled shoulders, 6¾@6c; pickled hams, 8¼@9¼c. TALLOW—City, 5¼@5¼c; country, 5¼@5½c. LARD—$7.80; city lard, $7.30; refined lard, South America, $8.65; Continent, $7.85; Brazil, kegs, $9.65; compound city and western, 6¼@6¾c. STEARINE—Oleo, 7½c; city lard stearine, 8@8¼c.

COFFEE.—Contract prices ranged as follows:

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.	Yesterday.
January	5.70	5.75	5.70	5.65@5.70	5.65
February	..	..	..	5.70@5.75	5.65
March	5.80	5.85	5.80	5.80@5.85	5.75
April	..	..	..	5.80@5.90	5.75
May	5.90	5.90	5.90	5.85@5.90	5.80
June	..	..	..	5.90@5.95	5.80
July	5.05	5.95	5.95	5.95@6.00	5.85
August	..	..	..	5.95@6.00	5.85
September	6.00	6.05	6.00	6.00@6.05	5.90
October	6.10	6.10	6.05	6.00@6.05	5.95
November	..	..	..	6.05@6.10	5.95
December	6.15	6.15	6.15	6.10@6.15	6.05

METALS.—Iron—Northern, No. 1 foundry, $16; Southern, No. 2 soft, $15.50; steel rails, $26; pig iron warrants, $10; lake copper, ingot, $17; tin, $28.37½; Exchange lead, $4.37½; spelter, $4.07½.

SUGAR.—Centrifugal, 4⅝c; muscovado,

FINANCIAL.

Hanover National Bank
Capital $3,000,000, Surplus and profits, $5,000,000.
9 and 11 Nassau St.

Colonial Trust Company
CAPITAL, SURPLUS, AND UNDIVIDED PROFITS, $2,000,000.00.
ST. PAUL BLD'G. 222 B'way.

Bankers' Cards.

Spencer Trask & Co.
BANKERS,
27 & 29 Pine Street, New York.
Transact a general banking business; act as Fiscal Agents for corporations, and negotiate security issues of railroads and other companies. Execute commission orders and deal in
INVESTMENT SECURITIES.
Members New York Stock Exchange.
Branch Office: 65 State St., Albany.

New York Telephone, 3790 John. Brooklyn Telephone, 3201 Brooklyn.
Geo. H. PRENTISS & CO.
DEALERS IN LOCAL SECURITIES,
48 Wall Street, New York. 208 Montague St. Brooklyn.
MEMBERS OF N. Y. STOCK EXCHANGE.

I. F. MEAD. T. H. CURTIS.
I. F. MEAD & CO.,
44 & 46 BROADWAY, N. Y.
Twenty-five years' membership in N. Y. Stock Exchange.
STOCKS AND BONDS
Bought and Sold for Cash or on Margin.

LEHMAN BROS.,
NOS. 16-22 WILLIAM ST., NEW YORK.
Deal in investment securities, and execute orders on New York Stock Exchange.
Members of the Stock, Cotton, Coffee, and Produce Exchanges, New York.

P. J. Goodhart & Co.,
Dealers in
Bank & Trust Co. Stocks
Members N. Y. Stock Exchange.
38 WALL STREET.

Dominick & Dominick,
BANKERS,
100 Broadway, New York.
BONDS AND INVESTMENTS.

FINANCIAL.

REDEMPTION OF
Duluth, Missabe & Northern Railway Co.
First Consolidated Mortgage Bonds, dated Jan. 1, 1893.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that seventy-nine (79) of the First Consolidated Mortgage Bonds of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern Railway Company were this day drawn for redemption in accordance with the requirements of Article Five of the Trust Mortgage, numbered as follows, viz:

11	1595	1808	2152	2624	2874	3176
20	1630	1875	2243	2633	2906	3201
1275	1646	1886	2244	2651	2909	3248
1277	1648	1905	2290	2716	2918	3277
1295	1689	1914	2292	2723	2962	3309
1341	1693	1920	2372	2787	3077	3362
1374	1744	1928	2387	2791	3110	3372
1378	1750	1938	2422	2813	3114	3430
1380	1781	1967	2435	2821	3124	3449
1387	1800	2020	2462	2827	3145	3462
1435	1808	2114	2591	2846	3162	3499
1441	1831

All future interest on any of the bonds so designated ceases January 29, 1901, in accordance with the terms of the mortgage.
CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK,
Trustee.
By G. SHERMAN, Vice President.
New York, January 17th, 1901.

We, the undersigned, hereby certify that the seventy-nine (79) bonds were designated by lot in our presence as above stated.
FRED C. RANDALL,
With Central Trust Company of New York.
E. V. D'ARY, Asst. Sec'y.
Of Duluth, Missabe & Northern R'y Co.
FRANK B. SMITH,
[Seal.] Notary Public, New York County.

In accordance with the foregoing certificate, said mentioned bonds will be paid at this office on or after the 29th of January, 1901, at 105 per centum and interest, say $1,054.67 per bond.
CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK,
Trustee.
By G. SHERMAN, Vice President.

CITY TRUST CO
OF NEW YORK.
36 WALL STREET.
CAPITAL $1,000,000
(Held in City of New York Bonds.)
SURPLUS $1,000,000
OFFICERS.
[illegible] Curran, President.
John D. Crimmins, Vice-President.
George R. Sheldon, 2d, Vice-President
Arthur Terry, Secretary.
Walter W. Lee, Asst. Secretary.
DIRECTORS.

John D. Crimmins,	Henry O. Havemeyer,
Frank H. Platt,	Hobart B. Parsons,
George R. Sheldon,	Albert G. Jennings,
Edward Eyre,	William H. Gelshenen,
Peter Doelger,	George W. Perkins,
William Balls, Jr.,	Eugene Kelly,
James D. Lange,	Edwin Warfield,
William R. Grace,	Liverius B. Chapman
Hugh Kelly,	Charles A. Peters,
Charles W. Morse,	Frank R. Lawrence,
	Jas. Ross Curran.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE Trustees in liquidation of the AMERICAN LIGHT AND FUEL COMPANY will sell at public auction, by Frank Stevens, Auctioneer, on Thursday, January 24th, 1901, at 12:30 P. M., in the Jersey City Board of Trade Room, No. 65 Montgomery Street, Jersey City, New Jersey:
200 shares Preferred Capital Stock of Sing Sing Gas Manufacturing Company.
700 shares Common Capital Stock of Sing Sing Gas Manufacturing Company.
1,281 shares Capital Stock Brockton Gaslight Company.
Terms and conditions of sale made known at time of sale, or may be had on application to the undersigned attorneys.
AMERICAN LIGHT AND FUEL COMPANY,
by SAMUEL B. LAWRENCE, President.
DAVIES, STONE & AUERBACH, Attorneys,
No. 32 Nassau Street, New York City.

Notice to Stockholders of New York & Western Coal Company.
Holders of preferred stock are invited to send to the undersigned, Secretary of the Company, at his office, 22 Broad Street, Boston, Mass., before two o'clock in the afternoon of the 1st day of February, 1901, in sealed envelopes tenders of sale of preferred stock. At the above time and place, or such adjournment thereof as may be had, all tenders will be opened. The tenders which will retire the greatest amount of stock for the sum of $5,000 will be accepted, unless the Directors reject all such tenders. All tenders of stock will be retired ex dividend.
WILLIAM E. STOWE, Secretary.

BROWN BROTHERS & CO.,
NO. 59 WALL ST.,
ISSUE INTERNATIONAL CHEQUES, COMMERCIAL and TRAVELERS' CREDITS AVAILABLE IN ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

Composite Type Bar Co. Stock.
DAVID PFEIFFER, 18 Wall St.

FINANCIAL. FINANCIAL.

M.40,000,000
Three Per Cent. Government Annuity Bonds
of the
KINGDOM OF SAXONY.

This issue will be offered for public subscription in Germany on January 22d next. The bonds will bear April and October coupons, the first coupon maturing April 1st, 1901.
SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, 83.60 PLUS INTEREST.

MESSRS. KNAUTH, NACHOD & KUHNE, LEIPZIG, HAVE BEEN OFFICIALLY appointed to receive subscriptions for the above issue. We shall, therefore, be pleased to receive applications here and to cable them to our Leipzig house free of charge. Such applications must be in our hands not later than Monday, January 21st next, P. M.

The right is reserved to reject applications and to allot smaller amounts than applied for.
NEW YORK, JANUARY 17TH, 1901.
KNAUTH, NACHOD & KUHNE,
11 WILLIAM STREET.

SAXONY (Germany) GOVERNMENT LOAN
40,000,000 Reichsmark
(ABOUT $10,000,000).
Subscription Price, 83.58.
These bonds bear 3% interest. Coupons payable semi-annually, April 1st and Oct. 1st.
COUPONS WILL BE PAID AT MATURITY AT OUR OFFICE.
Subscriptions will be received for the above loan until Saturday noon, JANUARY 19, 1901.
ZIMMERMANN & FORSHAY,
BANKERS,
9 AND 11 WALL STREET.

LOUIS MESIER, Auctioneer.
REGULAR AUCTION SALE OF
STOCKS AND BONDS
By ADRIAN H. MULLER & SON,
WEDNESDAY, JAN. 23D, 1901
at 12:30 o'clock, at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway.
BY ORDER OF EXECUTORS.
10 shs. Brooklyn Union Gas Co.
7 shs. Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.
30 shs. Pitts., Ft. Wayne & Chicago Ry.
100 shs. Pennsylvania R. R. Co.
10 shs. Chic., Mil & St. Paul Pref.
50 shs. Union Pacific Ry. Co. Pref.
1 shs. Northern Pacific Ry. Co. Pref.
1 shs. Peru & La Salle Gas Co.
32 shs. Louisville & Nashville Ry. Co.
82 shs. Brooklyn City R. R. Co.
32 shs. American Express Co.
20 shs. New York Dock Co.
40 shs. North & New Brunswick Hosiery Co.
16 shs. Savings Investment & Trust Co. of East Orange, N. J., 50 p. c. paid in.
22 shs. Chic., Bur. & Quincy Ry. Co.
$1,000 Canada So. Ry. 1st 5s, 1962.
$2,000 Cortland St. Ry. Co. of Kansas City 1st 5s, 1916.
$4,000 Reading Co. Genl. 4s, 1997.
$2,000 Evansville & Indianapolis Ry. 1st Cons. 6s, 1926.
$2,000 Grande & Western Ry. 1st 4s, 1939.
$2,000 Wisconsin Central R. R. 1st Series 5s, 1949.
$4,000 Newark Gas Co. 1st 6s, 1944.
$1,000 Peru & La Salle Gas 1st 6s, 1928.
$2,000 Rochester & Pitts. R. R. 1st 6s, 1921.
$2,000 Chic. & No. Western Consld. & Skg. Fund 6s, 1915.
$2,000 Chic., Bur. & Quincy R. R. Convt. 5s, 1903.
$3,000 N. Y. Rutherford & Suburban Gas Co. 1st 6s, 1911.
$2,000 Chic. & East. Illinois R. R. 1st Consld. 6s, 1934.
$2,000 Baltimore & Ohio, So. Western Div. 3½ p. c. Bds., 1925.
$240 Baltimore & Ohio, So. Western Div. scrip.
2 shs. Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co. Pfd.
$25 Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co. scrip.
$200 N. Y., New Haven & Hartford R. R. 4 p. c. Convt. Deb. Bds., 1905.
$9,000 St. Paul & Sioux City R. R. 1st 6s, 1919.
$2,000 Pennsylvania Central Brewing Co. 1st 6s, 1927.
$2,000 Pitts., Fort Wayne & Chicago R. R. 3d Mtge. Inc. Bds., 7s, 1912.
$2,000 Brooklyn Union Gas 1st Consld. 5s, 1945.
$2,000 Mil., Lake Shore & West. R. R. 1st Consld. 6s, 1907.
$7,000 St. Louis So. Western R. R. 1st 4s, 1989.
$2,000 Chic., St. Paul, Minn. & Omaha R. R. Cons. 6s, 1930.
$6,000 Chic. & East. Illinois R. R. 1st Skg. Fd. 6s, 1907.
$2,000 Mobile & Ohio R. R. 6s, 1927.
$6,000 Rochester & Pitts. R. R. 1st Consld. 6s, 1922.
$2,000 International Silver Co. 1st 6s, 1948.
$10,000 Hudson Co. Gas Co. 1st 5s, 1949.
$3,000 Chic., St. Paul & Minn. R. R. 1st 6s, 1918.
$5,000 Nashville, Chat. & St. Louis R. R. 1st 7s, 1913.
$3,000 Nashville, Chat. & St. Louis R. R. 1st 6s, 1913. (Coll., Wm. & Alm. Div.)
Membership Certf. Metropolitan Museum of Art. (Ceased to participate.)
300 shs. N. Y. & Texas Land Co.
150 shs. Texas Land Syndicate No. 1.
157 shs. Texas Land Syndicate No. 2.
BY ORDER OF EXECUTORS OF THOMAS EGLESTON, DECD.
10 shs. Market & Fulton Natl. Bank.
22 shs. Merchants' Natl. Bank.
2 shs. Bank of New York, N. B. A.
8 shs. Continental Insurance Co.
1 share N. Y. Society Library, (free from all dues.)
BY ORDER OF ADMINISTRATRIX.
17 shs. Scarsdale Water Co.
16 shs. Montauk Sanitary Improvement Co.
$170 Claim against Montauk Sanitary Impt. Co.
All right, title and interest of the Administratrix in and to the proceeds of a suit now pending in the Supreme Court of the State of New York between George M. Auten, plaintiff, and Henry Woram and ano., defendants.
BY ORDER OF TRUSTEE.
50 shs. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co.
FOR ACCT. OF WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.
$15,000 United States Flour Milling Co. 1st 6s, 1930, May, 1909, Coupons on.
6 shs. North American Trust Co.
10 shs. National City Bank.
10 shs. Kings County Trust Co.
5 shs. Bowery Bank.
25 shs. Natl. Butchers & Drovers' Bank.
$9,000 Middletown, Unionville & Water Gap R. R. 5s, 1910, Guar.
31 shs. Natl. Bank of North America.
50 shs. Shelter Island Heights Association, (Hyde.)
33 shs. Manhattan Co. Bank.
11 shs. Bank of the Metropolis.
150 shs. New York Packing & Provision Co.
5 shs. Ensz Branch Petroleum Co.
4 shs. British-American Coal Co.
1 share American Grocery Co. 1st Pfd.
5 shs. American Grocery Co. 2d Pfd.
$40 Atlas Mutual Ins. Co. Scrip.
$3,000 Berkeley Oval Swimming Bath & Gymnasium 1st 5s, 1905.
10 shs. Natl. Bank of North America.
25 shs. Pacific Bank.
50 shs. German-American Real Estate Title Guar. Co.
20 shs. Bond & Mortgage Guarantee Co.
10 shs. N. Y. & New Jersey Telephone Co.
2 shs. Guaranty Trust Co.
20 shs. Natl. Bank of Commerce.
100 shs. Inter-State Oil Co.
50 shs. Natl. Citizens' Bank.
25 shs. Phœnix Fire Insurance Co., B'klyn.
17 shs. Germania Fire Ins. Co.
10 shs. Home Fire Insurance Co.
66 shs. North American Trust Co.
$13,000 Ind. National & Illuminating Co. 1st 6s.
$40,000 Ohio & Ind. Gas Co. 6s, 1926.
$7,000 Logansport & Wabash Valley Gas Co. 1st 6s, 1925.
10 shs. National Park Bank.
30 shs. Bond & Mortgage Guarantee Co.
10 shs. Union Trust Co.
19 shs. Bowery Bank.
25 shs. Hanover Natl. Bank.
10 shs. Natl. City Bank.
$40,000 Detroit, Mackinac & Marquette R. R. Co. 5½ p. c. Land Grant Certfs., due Oct., 1911.
10 shs. Title Guar. & Trust Co.
1 share Bank of America.

To the Stockholders
OF THE
AMERICAN STEEL AND WIRE CO.
PROXIES.

At the request of the holders of a large amount of the preferred and common stocks of this company, we solicit the co-operation and support of all stockholders who desire the election of an efficient Board of Directors at the next annual meeting to be held on the 19th day of February, 1901. We are prepared to receive proxies entitling us to vote stock at said meeting.
Blank forms of proxies can be obtained at our office.
WELLES, HERRICK & HICKS,
15 Wall St., New York.

EXPERT
Accounting and auditing by an experienced bank clerk. Third Teller, Box 198 Times Office.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.
"All the News That's Fit to Print."

AMERICAN SMELTING AND REFINING CO.
Notice of Special Meeting of Stockholders.

A SPECIAL MEETING of the stockholders of the American Smelting and Refining Company will be held at its office, No. 83 Montgomery Street, Jersey City, New Jersey, on Saturday, the sixteenth day of February, 1901, at eleven o'clock in the forenoon, to take action upon an amendment to the Certificate of Incorporation of said Company, which has been declared advisable by its Board of Directors, increasing the capital stock of said Company from the present authorized capital of sixty-five million dollars ($65,000,000) to an authorized capital of one hundred million dollars, ($100,000,000,) one-half of such increase to be preferred stock and one-half thereof common stock.

The stock transfer books of the Company will be closed at twelve o'clock noon on January 26th, 1901, and reopened at ten o'clock A. M. on February 18th, 1901.

Dated New York City January 19th, 1901.
BY ORDER OF THE BOARD,
EDWARD RRUSH, Secretary.

Meetings and Elections.

New York, January 12th, 1901.
Election Notice.
Missouri Pacific Railway Co.

Notice is hereby given that the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Missouri Pacific Railway Company will be held at the general office of the company, in the City of St. Louis, Missouri, on Tuesday, March 12, 1901, at 9:00 o'clock A. M., for the election of thirteen Directors for the ensuing year, and for the transaction of any other business that may come before said meeting. The annual meeting of the Directors will be held at the same office on the same day, at 12:00 o'clock noon. The transfer books will be closed on Tuesday, Jan. 29th, 1901, at 3:00 o'clock P. M., and reopened on the day following the annual meeting of the stockholders or any adjournment thereof.
GEO. J. GOULD, President.
A. H. CALEF, Secretary.

New York, January 12, 1901.
Election Notice.
St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway Co.

Notice is hereby given that the annual meeting of the stockholders of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway Company will be held at the general office of the company, in the City of St. Louis, Missouri, on Tuesday, March 12th, 1901, at 9:00 o'clock A. M., for the election of thirteen Directors for the ensuing year, and for the transaction of any other business that may come before said meeting. The annual meeting of the Directors will be held at the same office on the same day, at 12:00 o'clock noon. The transfer books will be closed on Tuesday, January 29, 1901, at 3:00 o'clock P. M., and reopened on the day following the annual meeting of the stockholders or any adjournment thereof.
GEO. J. GOULD, President.
A. H. CALEF, Secretary.

MOBILE & OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY.
The Annual Meetings of the registered holders of the General Mortgage Bonds of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad Company, pursuant to the General Mortgage of May 15, 1888, and of the holders of the Preferred Income and Sinking Fund Debentures of said Company, pursuant to the Deed of Trust of May 1, 1879, will be held at the office of the Company, No. 11 Pine Street, in the City of New York, on Wednesday, February 6, 1901, at 12 o'clock noon and 2 o'clock P. M., respectively. The Voting Register of the said General Mortgage Bonds and the Transfer Books of the said Debentures will close at 3 o'clock P. M. on Wednesday, January 30, 1901, and reopen on Thursday, February 21, 1901.
HY. TACON, Secretary.
Mobile, Ala., January 14, 1901.

To the Stockholders of the Manaos Railway Company.

Notice is hereby given that the Annual Meeting of Stockholders of the Manaos Railway Company will be held at the office of the Company, in Room 1,510, 30 Broad Street, in the City of New York, on January 22d, 1901, at ten o'clock A. M., for the purpose of electing nine Directors for the ensuing year, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the meeting.
Polls will remain open from eleven A. M. to twelve M. Transfer books will be closed from the 12th day of January until the 23d day of January.
W. D. WALKER,
Secretary.

PRESSED STEEL CAR COMPANY.
NOTICE OF ANNUAL MEETING.

71 Broadway, New York, December 24th, 1900.
The annual meeting of the stockholders of Pressed Steel Car Company will be held on the 25d day of January, 1901, at 12 o'clock noon, at the office of the company, 243 Washington Street, Jersey City, New Jersey, for the purpose of electing a Board of Directors, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the meeting. The transfer books of the company, for both preferred and common stock, will be closed from three P. M. on December 29th, 1900, until 10 A. M., January 24th, 1901.
W. C. DE ARMOND, Secretary.

THE TRUST COMPANY OF AMERICA.
NEW YORK, January 10, 1901.
At the Annual Meeting of the Stockholders of the Trust Company of America, held January 10, 1901, the following-named gentlemen were unanimously re-elected Directors to serve three years ending the third Wednesday in January, 1904:

Edward C. Schaefer,	Philip Lehman,
Samuel A. Maxwell,	Charles I. Hudson,
Frank Jay Gould,	William A. Clark.

Hon. William Brown.
John W. Griggs was elected a Director to fill a vacancy. RAYMOND J. CHATRY, Secretary.

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE STOCKholders of the GENERAL CHEMICAL COMPANY will be held on WEDNESDAY, January 30th, 1901, and in accordance with the By-Laws the stock and transfer books will be closed against transfer of stock on Saturday, January 19th, 1901, at 12 o'clock noon, and will be reopened January 31st at 10 A. M.
J. HERBERT RAGG, Secretary.

CONSOLIDATED GAS COMPANY OF NEW YORK, 4 Irving Place.—December 31st, 1900.—The Annual Meeting of the stockholders of this Company for the election of the Trustees to serve during the ensuing year will be held at this office Monday, Jan. 21st, 1901. Polls open from 12 M. to 1 P. M. Transfer books will close Saturday, January 5th, at 12 M., and reopen Tuesday, Jan. 22d, 1901.
O. F. ZOLLIKOFFER, Secretary.

Insurance Company of the State of New York.
80-82 William St.,
New York City, Jan. 5, 1901.
The annual meeting of the stockholders of this company will be held at the office of the company, No. 80 William St., on TUESDAY, January 22d, 1901, at 3 P. M.
H. R. CHAMBERS, Secretary.

Jan. 17, 1901.
At the regular meeting of the Board of Directors of The Denver & Rio Grande R. R. Co., held this day, Mr. Jacob H. Schiff was unanimously elected a Director of the Company to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Chas. C. Beaman.
GEORGE COPPELL,
Chairman of the Board.

Meetings and Elections.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL R. R. CO.

Public notice is hereby given that a special meeting of the stockholders of the Illinois Central Railroad Company will be held at the Company's Office in Chicago, Illinois, on Saturday, January, 26, 1901, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, for the purpose of acting on these five propositions and transacting such other business as may, in connection therewith, come before the meeting.

FIRST—That in order to provide necessary moneys for the purchase of additional cars and locomotive engines needed for the accommodation of the growing traffic on the Company's lines of railway; the construction of additional second tracks, side tracks, and station and terminal facilities; the reduction of grades; the elimination of grade crossings at different places along said railway lines, and other improvements of a permanent character, some of which purchases, additions and improvements have already been undertaken, and for other corporate purposes, the capital stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company be increased by an issue of 60,000 new shares of $100 each, from 200,000 shares to 660,000 shares of $100 each, thus making the whole capital stock of the Company $60,000,000.

SECOND—That each shareholder shall have the privilege of subscribing at par on or before March 4, 1901, for one share of such new stock, for every ten shares of stock registered in his name on the transfer books of the Company at the close of business on December 26, 1900, and for fractions of shares in like proportion—payment for the new stock to be made in full at the Company's office in the City of New York, on or before Monday, March 4, 1901.

THIRD—That stockholders entitled to subscribe for fractions of shares shall, upon payment therefor, receive scrip convertible into full-paid stock when presented in sums of $100 or multiples thereof, but such scrip shall not draw dividends.

FOURTH—That the shares, or fractions of shares, of the new issue, if any, not subscribed and paid for on or before March 4, 1901, may be disposed of by the Board of Directors at such price, or prices, not less than par, as may be approved by them.

FIFTH—That the new shares shall be entitled to participate in all dividends which may be declared payable after March 4, 1901.

For the purposes of this meeting, the stock transfer books will be closed at 3 P. M. on Thursday, December 20, 1900, and remain closed until the morning of Monday, January 7, 1901.
By order of the Board of Directors.
A. G. HACKSTAFF, Secretary.
November 21, 1900.

Dividends.

NATIONAL SALT COMPANY.
26 Broadway, New York, N. Y., Jan. 16, 1901.
Preferred Stock Dividend No. 7.

Notice is hereby given that a quarterly dividend of ONE AND THREE-QUARTERS (1¾) PER CENT. has been declared, payable February 1st, 1901, to the holders of Preferred Stock of record Jan. 24th, 1901. Transfer books of the Preferred Stock will close at 3 P. M. Jan. 24th, and reopen at 9 A. M. Feb. 1st. Dividend checks will be mailed.

Common Stock Dividend No. 3.

Notice is hereby given that a quarterly dividend of ONE AND ONE-HALF (1½) PER CENT. has been declared, payable Feb. 1st, 1901, to the holders of Common Stock of record Jan. 24, 1901. Transfer books of the Common Stock will close at 3 P. M. Jan. 24, and reopen at 9 A. M. Feb. 1st. Dividend checks will be mailed.
C. L. PAAR, Asst. Secretary.

National Tube Company.
No. 26 Cortlandt St., New York.
COMMON STOCK DIVIDEND NO. 3.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors, held January 15th, 1901, a quarter-yearly dividend of ONE AND ONE-HALF PER CENTUM, upon the Common Capital Stock of the National Tube Company, was declared out of the net profits of the Company, payable February 15th, 1901, at the New York office of the Company, No. 26 Cortlandt St., New York City.

The Common Stock Transfer Books will be closed on Tuesday, January 29th, 1901, at 3 o'clock P. M., and will remain closed until Monday, February 18th, 1901, at 10 o'clock A. M.
A. F. LUKE, Treasurer.

OFFICE OF THE CONSOLIDATION COAL COMPANY,
No. 45 SOUTH STREET,
Baltimore, Md., Jan. 15th, 1901.

The Board of Directors of this company have this day declared a dividend of Two Dollars Per Share on the capital stock, payable at the office of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, No. 45 Cedar Street, New York, on and after February 1st, 1901. Dividend checks will be mailed to stockholders.

The transfer books will be closed at 3 o'clock P. M., January 25th, 1901, and reopen at 10 A. M., February 2d, 1901.
T. K. STUART,
Secretary.

The Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway Company,
Treasurer's Office, Grand Central Depot,
New York, December 20th, 1900.

The Board of Directors of this Company have declared a semi-annual dividend of THREE AND ONE-HALF PER CENT. on its Capital Stock, payable at this office on Monday, the 28th day of January next, to the stockholders of record at 3 o'clock P. M. on Monday, the 31st instant.

There will be no closing of the transfer books for the purposes of this dividend.
E. D. WORCESTER,
Treasurer.

DIVIDEND NOTICE.
American Tin Plate Company.

A dividend of Eight (8) Per Cent. has been declared upon the Common Stock of this Company, payable quarterly during 1901. The first quarterly payment of two per cent. (2) will be paid on February 15th, to Stockholders of record at close of business January 25th.

The transfer books will be closed as to the Common Stock from January 26th to February 15th, both days inclusive.
F. S. WHEELER, Treasurer.
New York, January 15th, 1901.

The Lawyers' Title Insurance Company of New York,
37 & 39 Liberty St., and 44½ & 46 Malden Lane.
New York, January 9, 1901.

The Board of Directors of this Company has this day declared a dividend of Two and One-half Per Cent. and an extra dividend of One-half Per Cent., payable at the Company's office on February 1st, 1901. The transfer books will be closed Monday, January 14th, and reopened on Saturday, February 2nd.
JOHN DUER, Treasurer.

The New York, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad Company,
GRAND CENTRAL STATION.
New York, Jan. 17, 1901.

The Board of Directors of this Company has this day declared a dividend of five per cent. upon the First Preferred Capital Stock, and a dividend of two per cent. upon the Second Preferred Capital Stock, payable at this office on the 1st of March next to stockholders of record at 3 o'clock P. M. on Thursday, the 24th of January. The transfer books will not be closed.
CHARLES F. COX, Treasurer.

Ninety-second Semi-annual Cash Dividend.
Illinois Central Railroad Co.

The Board of Directors has this day declared a dividend of THREE PER CENT. in cash, payable March 1st, 1901, to the holders of the Capital Stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company, as registered at the close of business February 1st, 1901.

The stock transfer books will be closed for the purpose of the above dividend from February 1st until February 23d, 1901.
A. G. HACKSTAFF, Secretary.
New York, January 16, 1901.

International Steam Pump Co.,
26 Broadway, New York, January 17th, 1901.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the International Steam Pump Co., held this day, a regular quarterly dividend of One and One-Half Per Cent. on the Preferred Stock was declared, payable February 1st. The transfer books of the Preferred Stock will close January 21st and open February 2d.
MAX NATHAN, Treasurer.

THE TRANSFER BOOKS OF THE GENERAL First Mtge. 4 Per Cent. Registered Bonds of the Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis & Chicago Ry. Co. will close at the office of the Central Trust Co. of N. Y., Monday, Jan. 21, 1901, at 3 o'clock, preparatory to the payment of the quarterly interest thereon due Feb. 1, 1901, and will reopen Feb. 1, at 10 A. M.
E. F. OSBORN, Secretary.
Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 15, 1901.

THE TRANSFER BOOKS OF THE GENERAL First Mtge. 7 Per Cent. registered bonds of the Columbus & Toledo R. R. Co. will close at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., N. Y., Monday, Jan. 21, 1901, at 3 o'clock, preparatory to the payment of the semi-annual interest thereon, due Feb. 1, 1901, and will open Feb. 1st, at 10 A. M.
WILLIAM N. COTT, Treasurer.
Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 15, 1901.

The German-American Bank.
New York, Jan. 18, 1901.

The Board of Directors have declared a dividend of THREE PER CENT., payable on and after February 1. The transfer books will be closed from January 25 to February 2.
J. F. FREDERICHS, Cashier.

NEW CORPORATIONS.

Dee Hive Hygienic Ice Company of Brooklyn; capital, $50,000. Directors—C. B. Wade, M. J. Senger, and Laurence Pfluger, Brooklyn.

Olmstead Corset Company of New York City; capital, $500. Directors—H. P. Olmstead, Julia B. Putnam, and E. W. Beebe, New York City.

Imperial Glass Company of New York City; capital, $10,000. Directors—E. M. Senglc, C. F. Harrison, and J. F. Harrison, Jr., New York City.

General Engineering and Construction Company of New York City; capital, $55,000. Directors—H. W. Ludlam, Bayonne, N. J.; H. K. Boch, and H. W. Showers, New York City.

Ledvina Multi-Expansion Motor Company of New York City; capital, $10,000. Directors—G. E. Ledvina, Stapleton, S. I.; Emanuel B. Ledvina, Princeton, Ind.; Albert Heynaud, New York City.

Incorporated in Delaware.
Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., Jan. 18.—The following charters have been secured at Dover:

Robinson Motor and Vehicle Company of New York, to manufacture, construct, and lease vehicles; capital, $100,000.

Reliance Mills Company, Wilmington, Del., to manufacture, sell, and deal in laces, silks, &c.; capital, $20,000.

C. C. White Toilet Paper Company of New York City, to manufacture toilet and fancy papers; capital, $100,000.

Dominion Mining Company of Baltimore, to engage in mining in the States of Delaware and Missouri, and elsewhere; capital, $500,000.

Howard W. Middleton, Jr., of Philadelphia, to buy steel and iron ore, &c.; capital, $125,000.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks weak.

STOCK TRANSACTIONS.

	Shares.
Jan. 18	1,242,800
To date this year	20,595,038
Corresponding date last year	7,657,042

BOND TRANSACTIONS.

Jan. 18	$1,910,000
To date this year	$47,356,250
Corresponding date last year	$24,600,600

Money rate: Collateral loans on call, 2@3 per cent.; at three months, 3¾ per cent.; at six months, 4 per cent. Commercial paper, sixty to ninety days, 3½@4 per cent.

***

Net changes in stocks of one-half of 1 per cent. or more were:

Stocks Advanced.

Am. Steel & Wire	1¼	Missouri Pacific	1
Am. S. & W. pf	1½	National Biscuit	⅝
Am. Sugar Ref	1¾	National Salt	¾
Balt. & Ohio	⅝	Pressed S. Car pf	1½
Federal Steel	½	Tenn. Coal & Iron	½
Great North. pf	½	Third Avenue	½
Int. Pump pf	1	Union B. & P. pf	¾

Stocks Declined.

Am. Car & Fdy	½	Iowa Central	½
Am. C. & F. pf	⅝	Iowa Cent. pf	1
Am. Cotton Oil pf	1	Kan. City South.	¼
Am. Ice pf	½	Kan. City South. pf	⅝
Am. Smelt. & R. pf	¼	Knick. Ice, Chi.	1
Am. Steel Hoop	1¾	Laclede Gas	2¾
Am. S. H. pf	1	Lake E. & W. pf	2
Am. Tin Plate pf	3	Manhattan	1¾
Anaconda Copper	1½	Met. Street Railway	1⅝
Balt. & Ohio pf	½	Mo., K. & T. pf	⅝
Brooklyn R. T.	1½	Mobile & Ohio	2
Brooklyn Union Gas	4	Nat. Steel	1¼
Brunswick	⅝	Nat. Steel pf	⅝
Buff., R. & P.	2	Nat. Tube pf	2
Canada South	⅝	N. J. Central	1½
Ches. & Ohio	½	N. Y. C. & St. L.	2
Chi. & Alton	1	N. Y. C. & St. L. 1st pf	3¾
Chi. & Alton pf	⅝	N. Y. C. & St. L. 2d pf	1
Chi., Bur. & Qy	½	N. Y., Ont. & W.	½
Chi. & East. Ill.	1	Norfolk & West	⅞
Chi., Ind. & L.	1	Northern Pacific	1½
Chi., M. & St. P.	1	North. Pac. pf	¾
Chi. & N. W.	2½	Pac. Coast 1st pf	2½
Chi., R. I. & Pac.	1¼	Penn. R.	⅝
Col. Fuel & Iron	1½	P., C., C. & St. L. pf	1
Col. Southern	2	Pressed Steel Car	1
Col. So. 1st pf	½	Pullman Co.	1
Col. & H. C. & I.	½	Reading 1st pf	½
Consol. Gas	1½	Reading 2d pf	¾
Cont. Tobacco	1	St. L. & S. F.	1½
Cont. Tob. pf	1½	St. L. & S. F. 1st pf	½
Del. & Hudson	2½	St. L. & S. F. 2d pf	1½
Del. Lack. & W.	1	St. L. S. West	1⅝
Den. & Rio Grande	¾	Southern Railway	1½
Den. & R. G. pf	1½	Southern Ry. pf	½
Erie 1st pf	1½	Union Bag & Paper	½
Erie 2d pf	⅝	Union Pacific pf	½
Federal Steel pf	⅝	U. S. Leather	⅝
Ft. W. & D. City	3	U. S. Rubber	½
General Electric	4	Wabash pf	⅝
Glucose Sugar	1	Wheel. & L. Erie	⅝
Hocking Valley	⅝	Wheel. & L. Erie 1st	4
Hock. Val. pf	⅝	Wis. Central	1½
Illinois Central	¾
Int. Paper pf	½

***

Net changes in bond quotations of 1 per cent. or more were:

Bonds Advanced.

Chi. & N. W. gold 7s, reg.	1	Cin., San. & C. 5s	2½

Bonds Declined.

C., M. & St. P. con. 7s	2½	St. L. S. W. 2d	1½
		Stand. R. & T. 6s	2½

MARKET MOVEMENT.

Irregularity and heaviness were again yesterday the features of the stock market. Bear pressure was in evidence throughout the day, and on two distinct occasions, once in the early forenoon and later, in the afternoon, concerted raids were made, causing in some instances material recessions. The vigor and the persistence of the drives caused some nervousness on the part of timid speculators and the holders of weakly margined stocks and to this was attributed the liquidation which appeared in many speculative lines. The larger interests, however, not only did not sell, but took advantage of the declines to increase their holdings, while short covering was noticeable in the steel stocks.

The suggestion of possible troubles growing out of the Venezuelan matters was made much of by the bears while the report from London of the illness of Queen Victoria was taken advantage of to sell the international list. Under the circumstances the market's power of resistance and absorption was regarded as remarkable—a fact, indeed, that the bears themselves apparently late in the day began to appreciate, when, endeavoring to cover, they found little stock offering and were forced to week as compared with the previous week and increase of $602,410 as compared with the corresponding week last year.

Earnings of the Glucose Sugar Refining Company said to have shown a 10 per cent. gain for the last quarter.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call, 2@3 per cent., closing at 2½ per cent.

Time money, 3½ per cent. for thirty days, 3¾@4 per cent. for sixty days to six months. Mercantile paper, 3¾@4 per cent. for sixty to ninety days' indorsements, 3¾@4¼ per cent. for choice four to six months' single names, and 5@5½ per cent. for others.

Clearing House statement: Exchanges, $282,017,220; balances, $16,300,724; Sub-Treasury debit balance, $1,758,296.

Money on call in London, ¾ per cent. Rate of discount in the open market, 3⅝@4 per cent. for short and 4@4⅛ per cent. for three months' bills.

Foreign exchange was firm. Nominal rates were $4.84 for sixty days and $4.88 for demand. Rates for actual business closed as follows: Sixty days, $4.83½; demand, $4.87⅛@$4.87⅜; cables, $4.88⅛@$4.88¼; commercial bills, $4.82⅝@$4.83¼.

Continental exchange was quoted as follows: Francs, 5.18 and 5.15 less 1-16@⅛ 5.15⅝; reichsmarks, 94 1-16@94⅜ and 95 7-16@95⅝, and guilders, 40⅜ and 40⅝.

Exchange on New York at domestic centres: Chicago—5c premium. Boston—Par@5c discount. New Orleans—Commercial, 50c premium; bank, 100c premium. San Francisco Sight, 15c premium; telegraphic, 20c premium. Charleston—Buying, par; selling, 1-10c premium. Savannah—Buying, ⅛c discount; selling, par. Cincinnati—Between banks, 14½@15c premium; over the counter, 50c premium.

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—Notwithstanding the Bank of England has reduced the floating supply of cash by nearly £2,000,000, it still continues so large that it is difficult to maintain rates. Though the Bank reserve was increased by a like amount, it is still more than £3,000,000 below that of a year ago, showing there is something needful to attract gold. Momentarily, there is little prospect of receiving considerable amounts from any quarter.

Business on the Stock Exchange to-day was dull, inactive, and nervous, pending developments in regard to the London and Globe Finance Corporation, Limited. The talk of more money being required for the prosecution of the war and the endeavors being made to raise a scare out of the Newfoundland shore question are causing depression in consols. Realizations in Americans predominate. At the opening to-day Americans were weak, but were afterward steadier, closing dull. Only Southern Pacific was firm. Operators in Canadian Pacifics were disappointed at the traffic returns.

Consols, for money, 96 9-16; consols, for the account, 96 11-16; Atchison, 45⅜; Canadian Pacific, 92; St. Paul, 133½; Illinois Central, 123½; Louisville, 105; Union Pacific preferred, 85⅜; New York Central, 144½; Erie, 28½; Pennsylvania, 75; Reading, 16⅝; Erie first preferred, 65½; Northern Pacific preferred, 88½; Grand Trunk, 7⅛; Anaconda, 9; Rand Mines, 36⅞.

Bar silver quiet at 29 1-16d per ounce.

Money, ¾ per cent. Rate of discount in the open market for short bills, 3⅞@¾ per cent., and for three months' bills, 4@4⅛ per cent.

Spanish 4s, 71¾.

The amount of bullion withdrawn from the Bank of England on balance to-day was £40,000. Gold premiums: Buenos Ayres, 132.10; Madrid, 35.15; Lisbon, 41; Rome, 5.80.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, Jan. 18.—Prices on the Bourse to-day opened dull. Spanish 4s were weak on the Carlist agitation and less favorable exchange. Later they hardened slightly, influenced by the firmness of Metropolitans and some tractions, and prices closed, all around, better.

Three per cent. rentes, 101f 97½c for the account. Exchange on London, 25f 12c for checks.

Spanish 4s closed at 71.72½.

BERLIN, Jan. 18.—There was a holiday on the Berlin Boerse to-day, the occasion being the celebration of the bi-centenary of the Kingdom of Prussia.

Exchange on London 20 marks 45½ pfennigs for checks. Discount rates. Short bills, 3 per cent.; three months' bills, 3¾ per cent.

MADRID, Jan. 18.—The gold quotation to-day was 35.75.

TREASURY BALANCES.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—To-day's statement of the Treasury balances in the general fund, exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the Division of Redemption, shows:

Available cash balance	$138,687,843
Gold	79,185,458
Silver	16,965,213
United States notes	12,779,586
Treasury notes of 1890	119,975
National banknotes	10,721,289
Total receipts this month	1,887,168
Total receipts this month	28,229,542
Total receipts this year	320,071,493
Total expenditures this day	1,680,000
Total expenditures this month	24,460,000
Total expenditures this year	297,554,155
Deposits in National banks	98,557,980
National banknotes received for redemption	1,108,285
Government receipts—
Internal revenue	935,856
Customs	922,229
Miscellaneous	28,103

The condition of the Treasury, Divisions of Issue and Redemption, at the beginning of business to-day was as follows.

RESERVE FUND.

Gold coin and bullion	$150,000,000

TRUST FUNDS, DIVISION OF REDEMPTION.

Gold coin	$248,605,579
Silver dollars	421,266,000
Silver dollars of 1890	5,068,260
Silver bullion of 1890	55,102,401
United States notes	11,220,120
Total	$739,062,370

DIVISION OF ISSUE.

Gold certificates outstanding	$248,605,310
Silver certificates outstanding	421,266,000
Treasury notes outstanding	29,871,000
Currency certificates outstanding	1,290,000
Total	$739,062,370

GENERAL FUND.

Gold coin and bullion	$62,129,768
Gold certificates	16,550,690
Silver coin and bullion	6,589,191
Silver certificates	7,216,050
United States notes	12,779,586
Other assets	17,061,302
Total in Treasury	$122,926,589
Deposits in National banks	98,557,980
Total	$222,481,570
Current liabilities	83,418,727
Available cash balance	$138,062,843

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE SALES.

Stocks.

Sales.		First.	High.	Low.	Close.
160	Amal. Copper	90½	90½	89¾	90¼
1u	Am. Steel Hoop	24¾	24¾	24¾	24¾
15,100	Am. Steel & W.	39¾	40	39½	39⅞
85,400	Am. Sugar Ref.	132⅝	134⅝	131¾	133⅝
880	Am. Tobacco	112⅝	112⅝	110⅞	112⅝
2,100	At., T. & S. F.	44⅝	44⅝	43⅝	43⅝
2,120	At., T. & S. F. pf.	84¼	84¼	84¼	85⅜
760	Balt. & Ohio	89	89	87¾	88
89,500	Brook. Rap. T.	81¾	81⅞	78⅝	79½
180	Ches. & Ohio	38⅜	38¼	37¾	38
17,430	Chi., Bur. & Q.	143¾	144	142¼	142⅝
90	Chi., Gt. West.	17¾	18¼	17⅝	17⅞
27,980	Chi., M. & St. P.	150¾	150¾	147	148⅝
800	C., R. I. & Pac.	122⅜	123⅛	120⅝	120⅝
30	C., C., C. & St. L.	78	78	78	78
2,220	Cont. Tobacco	41	43¼	41¾	42⅝
2,320	Erie	27⅝	28	26⅞	27⅝
3,180	Erie 1st pf.	67⅛	68¼	67	67⅝
12,210	Federal Steel	47⅝	49	46¼	47⅝
10	Federal Steel pf.	89⅛	89½	89⅛	89½
960	Louis. & Nash.	88⅛	88⅝	87¼	88
21,920	Manhattan	116¾	117⅛	114	115⅝
220	M., K. & T. pf.	46⅜	46⅞	45⅞	45⅞
15,450	Mo. Pacific	95½	95⅝	94	95¾
2,780	N. Y., O. & W.	31⅜	31⅝	29¾	30¼
8,870	Northern Pac.	82⅜	82⅝	79¼	80⅜
20	Pacific Mail	42¼	42½	42½	42½
20	Pennsylvania	146	146	146	146
9,850	People's Gas	99	99⅜	98¾	98¾
3,600	Reading	17⅛	17⅜	16¾	16⅞
1,170	Reading 1st pf.	70½	70⅝	69½	70½
100	Reading 2d pf.	42	42	41¾	41¾
6,750	Southern Pac.	43½	43½	42¾	42¾
1,010	Southern Ry.	19½	19½	18½	19
290	Southern Ry. pf.	70½	70½	69¼	69¾
100	Stand. R. & T.	6	6	6	6
790	Tenn. Coal & I.	54⅝	54⅞	53⅝	54¼
20	Texas Pacific	24⅞	25⅝	24⅞	25⅝
9,240	Union Pacific	83⅝	83⅞	81¾	82⅝
20	Union Pac. pf.	82½	82½	82½	82½
1,820	U. S. Leather	11¾	11⅞	11¼	11¼
130	U. S. Rubber	21½	21½	21¾	21¾
90	Wabash pf.	25⅝	25⅝	24½	24⅝
180	West. Union	83⅞	83⅞	83	83
284,600

Bonds.

$6,000	A., A. & S.F. adj.	88¾	88¾	88¾	88¾
2,000	St. R. & T. 6s	66½	66½	66½	66¾
5,000	Wabash deb B	41¼	41¼	41¼	41¼
$13,000

IMPORTS OF DRY GOODS.

The imports of dry goods at the Port of New York for the week were valued at $2,967,756, against $2,100,044 last week and $2,365,346 last year. The value of dry goods marketed was $2,737,774, against $2,020,120 last week and $2,790,302 last year.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

Trading was on a relatively large scale in the outside market yesterday, but the bulk of the day's business was supplied by some half dozen stocks, while the rest of the list continued as inactive as it has been for many days past. Prices were irregular most of the day, but during the last hour in sympathy with the strengthening of the Stock Exchange market quotations in many cases advanced sharply, and not a few issues closed with net gains. New York Transportation, which was decidedly weak on Thursday, rose sharply, and similarly other issues recovered from the depressing influence of the past day's dullness. Few developments of any importance occurred during the day, and most of the price movements were without specific explanation.

***

NEW YORK TRANSPORTATION, which earlier in the week had shown much weakness as the result of rumors of an approaching assessment, yesterday on the denial of these rumors showed decided strength. On transactions in over 2,000 shares the stock rose from 3 to 4½, and closed at 4¼ bid, showing a net gain of 1¼ points. The company is said to be in better condition than has generally been supposed. The fact that it is now making a small profit on the operation of its vehicles shows that it has made much progress and seems to indicate that it has a good chance to make a good showing during the present year. The strength of the stock, however, was chiefly due to the removal of doubt as to the policy of the company in the matter of further assessments.

***

ELECTRIC BOAT, after a period of dullness, came into some prominence yesterday. On the purchase of about 1,000 shares the common advanced from 20¾ to 28¾, and the preferred stock on smaller transactions closed with a net gain of 1 point, at 50½ bid.

***

CONSOLIDATED EQUIPMENT opened strong and sold up a full point, to 12½. Subsequently, the execution of selling orders forced the price back to 11, and it closed there, with a new loss of half a point. Trading in the stock was not very large.

***

BRITISH COLUMBIA COPPER was under selling pressure and sold down nearly 2 points, to 18⅞. The stock seemed to be given some support by insiders, but their buying was not sufficiently large to prevent this rather sharp decline on the execution of market orders in 1,000 shares or more of the stock. The highest sale of the day was at 20¾, which was a fractional advance over Thursday's closing price. Yesterday's close showed a net loss of 1¾ points. Some of the other copper stocks shared the weakness of British Columbia, but none of them was very active.

***

AMERICAN BRIDGE common was fairly active at 42. The price fluctuated very little, and at the close it was unchanged from the previous day's quotation. The preferred stock sold from 91½ down to 91, and closed at the latter figure.

***

SHEET STEEL preferred, after selling at 75, was offered down about a point and closed at 73½ bid, a net loss of 1 point. The transactions in the stock were small.

***

PITTSBURG, BESSEMER AND LAKE ERIE remained strong, and sold to the extent of 1,000 shares or more between 30 and 30½. It closed unchanged for the day at 30 bid. The Carnegie Company's guarantee of 3 per cent. has led to a fairly large demand for the stock.

***

DISTILLING OF AMERICA preferred was again weak, and, on trading in less than 1,000 shares, declined to 28. The common stock sold to the extent of a few hundred shares at 5½.

***

Closing quotations yesterday compared with those of the previous day were as follows:

Industrial and Miscellaneous.

	Jan. 18. Bid.	Asked.	Jan. 17. Bid.	Asked.
Am. Agricultural Chem.	29	30	29	30
Am. Agricult. Chem. pf.	80½	81½	80½	81½
American Banknote	50	53	50	53
American Bicycle	5½	6¼	5½	6¼
American Bicycle pf.	24	26	24	26
American Bicycle bonds	72	73	72	73
American Bridge	42	42⅜	42	42½
Am. Bridge pf.	91	91½	91	92
American Chicle	79	81	79	81
American Chicle pf.	77	82	77	82
Am. Hide & Leather	10	11	10	11
Am. Hide & Leather pf.	35½	39	35½	39
Am. Hide & Leather 6s	90	90½	90	90½
*American Thread pf.	4	5	4	5
Am. Typefounders pf.	57	62	57	62
Anthracite Coal	8	8½	8	8½
Arlington Copper	4	5	4	5
*British Columbia Copper	18¾	19	20½	20¾
British Exch. 3s	95½	99¼	98½	99
California Copper	¾	1¼	¾	1
Cast-Iron Pipe	4½	6	5	6
Cast-Iron Pipe pf.	32	35	32	35
Central & So. Am. Tel.	101	106	102	104
Central Fireworks	22	27	22	27
Central Fireworks pf.	70	75	70	75
Compressed Air	40	45	40	45
Consolidated Equipment	11	11½	11	12
Con. Rubber Tire	2½	4	2½	4
Con. Rubber Tire pf.	28	32	28	32
Continental Tobacco deb.	104	106	104	106
Crucible Steel	21½	22¼	22½	22⅝
Crucible Steel pf.	79	81	80	81
Cramps' Shipyard	81	83	81	83
Dist. Co. of Am. tr. rcts.	5½	5⅝	5½	6
Dist. Co. of Am. pf. tr. rcts.	28	28¼	28⅜	29¼
Electric Boat	28	28½	26¾	28
Electric Boat pf.	50½	53	49½	51
Electric Vehicle	14	17	15	17
Electric Vehicle pf.	30	40	40	44
Electric-Pneumatic	1½	1⅞	2	2½
Empire Steel	6	7	6	7
Empire Steel pf.	39	48	39	48
Flemington Coal & Coke	20	23	20	23
General Carriage	2¼	2⅝	2½	2⅝
General Chemical	60	65	60	62
General Chemical pf.	97	98½	97	98½
German Treasury 4s	100¾	100⅝	100¾	100⅝
Havana Commercial	9½	11	9½	10½
Havana Commercial pf.	45	48	45	48
Hudson River Tel.	117	119	117	119
Illinois Transportation	¾	1	¾	1
International Silver pf.	42	47	42	47
Inter-State Oil	3½	5½	3½	5½
Iron Steamboat	2	3	2	3
Iron Steamboat bonds	55	65	55	65
Jasenh Ladue Mining pf.	½	1	½	1
Lorillard pf.	100	105	100	105
Marconi Co.	1½	3	1¼	2
Mex. Nat. Construct. pf.	13½	14¾	13½	14¾
Nat. Enamel & Stamp	17	20	17	20
Nat. Enam. & Stamp. pr.	80	84	80	84
Nat. Sugar pf.	100	102	100	102
New England Transport.	3	3½	3	3¼
N. Y. Transportation	4¼	4½	3⅞	4¼
Otis Elevator	28½	29½	28½	29¼
Otis Elevator pf.	91	91⅝	91	91½
Peo., Dec. & Evans	½	1	¾	1
Pitts., Bess. & L. Erie	30	30⅜	29¼	29⅝
Retsof	32	32	32	32
Retsof bonds	78	85	78	85
Royal Baking Powder pf.	94	95	94	95
Royal Copper	11	12	11	12
Rubber Goods Mfg.	28	29	28½	29
Rubber Goods Mfg. pf.	78	80	78½	79½
Safety Car Heat & Light	121½	..	121	..
St. Louis Transit	19	19½	19½	20½
Seaboard Air Line 4s	70	71	69¾	70½
Seaboard Air Line	10	10¼	10	10½
Seaboard Air Line pf.	26	27	26	27
Sheet Steel pf.	73½	74½	73½	75½
Singer Mfg.	250	275	250	275
Southern Light & Trac.	32	35	32	35
Standard Coupler	35	38	33	38
Standard Coupler pf.	120	125½	120	125½
Standard Oil of N. J.	796	799	707	801
Sterling Copper	5¾	6	5¾	6
Storage Power	..	..	10	12
Tennessee Copper	..	..	..	18
Tel. Tel. & Co. of A., $15 paid	..	6	..	8
Trenton Potteries	5	8	5	8
Trenton Pot. pf.	55	60	55	60
Union Copper	4½	4⅝	4½	5
Union Typewriter	40½	41	40½	41
Union Typewriter 1st pf.	113	114	112	114
Union Typewriter 2d pf.	114	115	113	114
United Rys. of St. L. 4s	80½	80¾	80½	80¾
United Rys. of St. L. pf.	71½	72	70½	72
Va. Coal, I. & C.	3½	4½	3½	4½
Va. Coal, I. & C. bonds	33	35	33	35
Westinghouse Air Brake	370	380	370	380
Worthington Pump pf.	111	114	111	114

*Selling dollars per share. Par value $5.
†Selling dollars per share. Par value $100.

Street Railways.

Broadway & 7th Av.	230	235	230	235
Broadway & 7th Av. 1st	102½	102¾	102¼	..
Broadway & 7th Av. 2d	110	113	110	113
Broadway Surface 1st 5s	115	116	115	116
Broadway Surface 2d	102½	103½	102½	103½
Brooklyn City R. R.	233	235	232	234
Brooklyn B. & W. E. 5s	101½	102	101¼	102
Cent. Park, N. & E. R.	200	202	199½	201
Cent. Park, N. & E.R. 7s	104½	105¾	104½	10 ⅛
Columbus Railway pf.	36	37	34	37
Columbus Railway pf.	90	92	90	92
Con. Traction of N. J.	58	60	58	60
Con. Traction 5s	108	109	108	109
Eighth Avenue Railroad	390	400	390	400
42d St., M. & St. N. Av.	1st 113¾	115	113¾	115
42d St., M. & St. N.Av.	2d 99	100	99	100
Grand Rapids St. Ry.	28	31	27½	30
Grand Rapids St. Ry. pf.	80	82½	80	..
Jersey City, Hob. & Pat.	20	21¾	20	21¾
Jersey C., H. & P. 4s	82½	83	82¼	83
Nassau Electric 4s	95½	..	95¾	..
New Orleans Traction	22	..	22	..
New Orleans Traction pf.	94	98	94	98
9th Av. R. R.	198	205	198	205
North Jersey St. R. R. 4s	82½	83½	82½	84½
North Jersey St. R. R.	23	25	24	25
Second Av. R. R. consols	118	119	118	119
Sixth Av. R. R.	200	210	200	210
Steinway Ry. Co. 1st 6s	116½	118	116¾	118
Syracuse Rapid Transit	15	20	15	20
Syracuse Rap. Transit pf.	37	43	39	43
28th & 29th St. 5s, 1996	113¾	114½	113¾	114½
Union Ry. 1st 5s	113½	114	113½	113½
United Trac., Providence	109	111	109	111
United Traction bonds	118½	115	113¾	115
Worcester (Mass.) Trac.	34	36	34	36
Wor. (Mass.) Trac. pf.	106	108	106	108

Gas Companies.

Day State Gas	1¼	1¾	1¼	1¾
Buffalo (N. Y.) Stock	6	9	6	9
Buffalo (N. Y.) 1st	74	76	74	76
Central Union 5s, std.	108½	109½	108½	109½
Columbus Gas 5s	106	107	106	107
Con. Gas of Newark	..	55	..	55
Con. Gas of New'k bds.	104	106	104	106
Con. Gas of New Jersey	10	15	10	15
Con. Gas bonds of N. J.	80	85	80	85
Con's'rs Gas (J. C.) bds.	105½	106	105½	106
Denver Gas	23½	26	23½	26
Denver Gas 5s	63	68	63	68
Essex & Hudson Gas	35	40	35	40
Indianapolis Gas	..	45	..	45
Indianapolis Gas bds. 6s	93	95	93	95
Mutual Gas of N. Y.	295	299	295	299
Madison (Wis.) stock	70	75	70	75
New Amsterdam 5s	109	109½	109	109½
N. E. Gas & Coke	12	18	12	13
N. E. Gas & Coke 5s	65	66	65	68
N. Y. & E. R. Gas Co. 1st	112½	114	111	114
N. Y. & E. R. Gas Co. con.	106	109	106	109
Northern Union 5s	105½	106	105½	106
Nor. Hud. L., H. & P. Co.	55	56	55	56
Nor. H.L., H. & P. Co. bds.	107	109	107	109
Peo. Gas & El. (Oswego)	25	30	25	30
Peo. G. & E. (Os.) 5s, 1950	99	101	99	101
St. Joseph (Mo.)	31	38	31	38
St. Joseph (Mo.) 5s	91	93	91	93
St. Paul Gas stock	..	50	..	50
St. Paul Gas bonds	..	80	..	75
Standard Gas, New York	131	133	130	133
Standard Gas, N. Y., pf.	151	153	150	153
Standard Gas 1st	116	117	115	117
Syracuse Gas stock	8	10	8	10
Western Gas	96	100	96	100
Western Gas 1st 5s	106	107	105	107

Ferry Companies.

Brooklyn Ferry	17½	18½	19	21
East River Ferry	68	71	69	71
East River Ferry 5s	96	98	96	98
Hoboken Ferry con. 5s	94	95	94	95
Hoboken Ferry 1st	110¼	112½	110½	112½
Hoboken Ferry	80	81	80	81
Metropolitan Ferry 5s	108	110	108	110
Union Ferry	31	33	30	31½
Union Ferry bonds	91	92	91	92

BULLION AND MINING.

Silver bullion certificates were quoted on the Stock Exchange at 64½@65½. There were no sales.

Bar silver was quoted in London at 29 1-16d per ounce, and in New York at 63⅝c. Mexican silver dollars at 49½c.

On the Consolidated Exchange, 2,500 shares of Brunswick sold at .28@.27, 500 Dunkin at .15, 300 Isabella at .67, 500 Leadville at .07, 1,000 Mollie Gibson at .22, 100 Portland at 3.25, and 300 Sierra Nevada at .25.

***

Closing bids for mining stocks on the Consolidated Exchange were as follows:

Alice	.45	Occidental	.02
Adams Consol	.20	Phoenix G. M. Co.	.10
Belcher	.14	Potosi	.10
Best & Belcher	.25	Quicksilver	1.10
Breece	2.00	Quicksilver pf.	7.00
Bruns., Con	.27	Savage	.10
Caledonia, S. D. H.	.30	Sierra Nevada	.20
Challar	.10	Standard	4.15
Crown Point	.03	Silver King	.10
Chrysolite	.09	Small Hopes	.70
Con. Cal. & Va.	1.80	Union Consol	.24
Con. T. Co. stock	.01	Utah	.04
Con. T. Co. bonds	.03	Victor	.25
Con. T. Co. scrip	.04	Yellow Jacket	.14
Crescent	.08	Argentum Juanita	.28
Catalpa	.10	Alamo	.11
Dunkin	.42	Anaconda	.42
Deadwood Terra	.57	Crip. Creek Cons.	.11
Daly	1.10	Creede & Crip. Ck.	.10
Eureka Con	.15	Cable	.03½
Father De Smet	.35	Golden Fleece	.24
Gould & Curry	.48	Isabella	.05
Hale & Norcross	.20	Iolite	.22
Horn Silver	1.10	Mount Rosa	.40
Iron Silver	.65	Pharmacist	.08
Julia Consol	.02	Portland	3.20
Kingston & Pemb.	.10	Union	.08
La Crosse	.14	Work	.20
Leadville, Con	.06	Damon	.14
Little Chief	.16	Elkton	1.80
Mexican	.31	Findlay	.10
Moulton	.30	Garfield	.07
Ophir	6.50	Jack Pot	.05
	.13	Pinnacle	.14

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 18.—Boston had the dullest market since election. There was lessened activity and interest all around, with Sugar, Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, Federal Steel, and Erie Telephone leaders in volume of sales. American Telephone was off 2½, at 158; Erie held at .65; New England Gas and Coke was weak, falling 2½, to 10, later rallying to 11⅞; Gas and Coke 5s lost ½ more, to 65, later recovering to 66. Mining shares generally were dull and heavy in tendency. Osceola lost 1¼, to 81, and Tri-Mountain ½, to 21; Old Dominion gained ¼, to 31, later 30⅝; Copper Range was off 1½, at 30⅝, later rallying to 37½. Isle Royale lost 1, to 34, later 35; Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham stock rose 5, to 30, on purchases of 500 shares, Fort Scott and Memphis rising ¾, to 59¾; Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham incomes rose 2½, to 78½. Merchants' Linotype was off 17½, at 155. Père Marquette stocks were in good demand. Parrot sold ex dividend, losing ½, to 47, closing at 47¼; Centennial was ⅝ lower, at 22¼; Butte off 2, at 78; Montana closed at 310, ex dividend; United States Oil held at 12¾; Boston Elevated was up 1, at 161.

Money loaned between banks at the Clearing House to-day at 2½ per cent. and New York funds sold at par and 5 cents' discount.

Call money is mostly quoted at 3½ and 4 per cent., although a few loans have been made as low as 3 per cent.

Closing bid and asked:

Mining Stocks.

	Bid.	Asked.		Bid.	Asked.
Adventure	9½	9⅝	Mohawk	21¾	22
Allouez	2⅜	3¼	Old Colony	3	4½
Arcadian	17⅜	18	Old Domin.	30¾	31
Arnold	1½	5	Osceola	80½	81
Ash Bed	.25	.71½	Parrot	47	47⅜
Atlantic	27½	28½	Quincy	175½	..
Baltic	33¾	34	Rhode Island	4½	5
Butte & Bos.	78	70	Santa Fé	6	6½
Cal. & Hec.	850	860	Shoe	31½	32
Centennial	22	22½	Tamarack	320	..
Franklin	15½	16	Utah Cons.	32	32½
Humboldt	.50	1	Washington	.50	1
Isle Royale	34½	35½	Winona	5	5½
Miners	12¾	13½	Wolverine	48¼	48¾

Railroad Stocks.

Bost. & Alb.	254	254¾	Cent. M. pf.	62	..
Bost. & Law.	242	..	Fitchburg pf.	139½	140
Bost. & Me.	193	195	N. Y. & N. H.	..	..
Bost. & Prov.	300	..	N. Y. & N. H. 6s	109¼	..
Bost. Elev.	161	161½	N. Y. & N. H. 7s	..	..
Bost. G. 5s	..	..	E. 7s	113⅛	..
Cent. Mass.	15	16	West End	93	93¼

Miscellaneous Stocks.

A. T. & T.	157	158	Mex. Tele.	2½	2¾
Chi. Stk. Y.	144	145	N. Eng. Tel.	135	136
Dom. Coal	37	38	U. S. Oil	11	12½
Dom. C. pf.	108	109	W. Elec. pf.	70	71
Erie Tel.	65	66

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 18.—With a few exceptions, the Philadelphia list was inclined to heaviness to-day, and especially did this apply to Pennsylvania and the Readings. Pennsylvania was off 1½ at noon and sold at 73 during the afternoon, the decline being due to the proposed issue of new stock. Reading common fell to 13⅝ at noon, simultaneous with a decline to 29¾ in New York, but picked up again and crossed the 15 mark at closing. Lehigh Valley opened the day at 30½, rose dropped back again at noon, but gradually recovered to 31⅜. The steel shares were steady, Bethlehem advancing to 17½ after the low opening at 17, and Cambria selling actively at 10⅞@11. Philadelphia Electric sold at 5⅞, and United Gas Improvement at 124, a slight advance. Asphalt first 5s sold at 59¾. The company has bought in and canceled $40,000 of these bonds.

Shortly before 1 o'clock the market, in sympatny with New York, seemed to show signs of a turn for the better. It became lethargic, however, and most of the day, and this condition continued to the close, which was firm at the following bid and asked prices:

	Bid.	Asked.		Bid.	Asked.
Am. Ry. Lt.	33	34	Lehigh Nav.	64	65
Cambria	17¼	17⅜	Lehigh Val.	31⅝	31⅞
Citizens' Ry., Ind., 5s	108½	110	Marsden	6⅜	6⅝
Consol. Trac.	37½	38	North. Penn.	108	109
Chocta.	..	..	Penn. Steel.	67	70
Con. T., N. J.	60	61	Penn. Salt.	97	97
Con. T., N. J., 5s	109¼	109½	Peop. Tr. 4s	106½	110
Con. Tr., Pitt.	27	28	Phil. & Erie	33	34
El. & P. 4s	100¾	101	Phila. Trac.	99¾	100
El. 5s	77	80	Union Trac.	34⅛	34½
El. St. B. pf.	77	82	U. Cos.'s, N. J.	.274	276
El. Co. of A.	9	9¼	U. Gas Imp.	123	124
Hunt. & Bt.	17	20	Welsbach Lt.	40	46
H. & B. pf.	48	50

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—Biscuit common opened at 37¾, dropped ½ point, and closed at 37½. Northwestern Elevated preferred brought 76½, and West Chicago 99¾. There were scattering trades in Diamond Match at 133@134, City Railway at 255, Metropolitan Elevated common at 28½, Metropolitan Elevated preferred at 79@79½, and Linseed common at 6¼. West Chicago consolidated b

STATE TRUST COMPANIES

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 18.—Twenty-six of the trust companies whose principal offices are in New York and Kings Counties, according to their annual reports made to the State Superintendent of Banking on Jan. 1, this year, show total resources of $407,369,722. This is a gain over a year ago of the same companies, with one exception, of $106,110,208. The exception is the City Trust Company of New York, which was incorporated during 1900. The profits of these companies for the year 1900 were $16,471,808. This is an increase over the year 1899 of $2,129,258. The dividends paid by twenty-one of these companies amounted in the aggregate to $1,923,000, which is greater than that of a year ago by $188,000.

The Morton Trust Company merged the State Trust Company during 1900, and therefore the increase of its resources is not so phenomenal as they would seem to be. When compared with a year ago, they show an increase of $31,163,500, jumping up from $7,340,935 to $39,272,282. The greatest gain in the resources is that in the Union Trust Company, being over $12,000,000.

The New York Security and Trust shows an increase of $5,302,000, and the Knickerbocker of nearly $6,000,000. The Trust Company of America gained $5,882,400; the Atlantic Trust, $5,489,200; the Farmers' Loan and Trust, $5,000,000; the Standard Trust, $4,385,000; the Central Realty Bond and Trust, $3,024,400; the Merchants' Trust, $4,235,000; the Williamsburg Trust, $1,000,000; the Brooklyn Trust, $1,200,000, and the Metropolitan, $2,000,000. The United States Mortgage and Trust fell off $192,285 in resources and $11,500 in profits, and the Manhattan Trust $429,000 in resources and $17,200 in profits in 1900, but the Manhattan increased its dividend $5,000.

The greatest increase in profits is shown by the Trust Company of America, being $2,000,000, while the Central Realty and Bond is a good second at $250,534 increase. Other good-sized gains are in the Union, $1,075,000; Farmers' Loan and Trust, $180,000; City Trust of New York, $150,000; State Land Trust, $117,000; Merchants', $105,000; Knickerbocker Trust, $96,483, and Metropolitan Trust, $85,238. The New York Security and Trust increased its dividend by $50,000 and the Atlantic Trust its dividend $37,500 to $70,000. The Trust Company of America, which declared no dividend in 1899, paid one of $87,500 in 1900; the Atlantic Trust made one of $175,000, and the Merchants' Trust one of $21,000.

Below will be found abstracts of the reports of the twenty-six companies referred to above.

NEW YORK.

Atlantic Trust Company.

RESOURCES

Bonds and mortgages	$811,500
Stock investments (market value)	2,576,120
Amount loaned on collaterals	5,771,885
Amount loaned on personal securities	100,761
Real estate (estimated value)	75,830
Cash on hand	2,020
Cash on deposit	1,041,024
Other assets	148,646
Total	$11,087,014

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$1,500,000
Surplus fund	1,000,000
Undivided profits	10,854
Deposits in trust	52,228
General deposits payable on demand	8,502,932
Other liabilities	27,549
Total	$11,097,014

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Profits during the year	$304,290
Interest credited depositors	125,841
Expenses of institution	65,554
Dividends declared	15,000
Deposits on which interest is allowed	8,145,090
Rate of interest, per cent	1½ to 3½

Central Realty, Bond and Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Bonds and mortgages	$1,879,629
Stock investments (market value)	686,510
Amount loaned on collaterals	2,877,450
Real estate	741,466
Cash on hand	14,448
Cash on deposit	839,535
Other assets	52,507
Total	$7,091,363

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$1,000,000
Surplus fund	500,000
Undivided profits	273,360
Deposits in trust	1,916
General deposits payable on demand	5,395,535
Other liabilities	11,145
Total	$7,091,363

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Profits during the year	$372,641
Interest credited depositors	79,287
Expenses of institution	77,441
Deposits on which interest is allowed	5,295,524
Rate of interest, per cent	2 to 4

City Trust Company of New York.

RESOURCES.

Bonds and mortgages	$243,000
Stock investments (market value)	2,725,102
Amount loaned on collaterals	8,702,407
Amount loaned on personal securities	291,295
Overdrafts	459
Cash on hand	25,850
Cash on deposit	2,021,787
Due from banks	7,299
Other assets	61,546
Total	$14,074,727

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$1,500,000
Surplus fund	1,000,000
Undivided profits	399,095
Deposits in trust	235,419
General deposits payable on demand	11,277,074
Other liabilities	119,758
Total	$14,074,727

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Profits during the year	$595,205
Interest credited depositors	247,202
Expenses of institution	76,998
Deposits on which interest is allowed	11,146,716
Rate of interest per cent	2 to 3

Continental Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Bonds and mortgages	$25,000
Stock investments (market value)	1,585,625
Amount loaned on collaterals	5,019,749
Amount loaned on personal securities	332,700
Overdrafts	3,122
Cash on hand	103,500
Cash on deposit	11,541
Cash on deposit	1,139,422
Other assets	44,871
Total	$8,585,522

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$500,000
Surplus fund	500,000
Undivided profits	272,394
Deposits in trust	1,692,684
General deposits payable on demand	6,391,744
Other liabilities	8,820
Total	$8,585,522

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Profits during the year	$482,635
Interest credited depositors	158,401
Expenses of institution	72,348
Dividends declared	50,000
Deposits on which interest is allowed	6,394,419
Rate of interest, per cent	1 to 4

Farmers' Loan and Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Bonds and mortgages	$253,000
Stock investments (market value)	12,537,829
Amount loaned on collaterals	27,212,753
Real estate	1,030,000
Cash on hand	4,535
Cash on deposit	11,096,410
Other assets	1,170,911
Total	$53,277,568

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$1,000,000
Surplus fund	6,185,149
Deposits in trust	45,889,766
Other liabilities	202,652
Total	$53,277,568

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Profits during the year	$2,090,342
Interest credited depositors	1,068,020
Expenses of institution	180,337
Dividends declared	300,000
Deposits on which interest is allowed	42,740,428
Rate of interest, per cent	1 to 4

Hamilton Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Bonds and mortgages	$650,624
Stock investments, (market value)	1,581,550
Amount loaned on collaterals	3,130,335
Amount loaned on personal securities	152,589
Real estate	50,064
Cash on hand	41,417
Cash on deposit	1,190,071
Overdrafts	25
Other assets	164,932
Total	$6,917,618

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$500,000
Surplus fund	500,000
Undivided profits	277,859
Deposits in trust	153,586
General deposits payable on demand	5,471,148
Other liabilities	45,001
Total	$6,947,618

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Profits during the year	$287,879
Interest credited depositors	131,207
Expenses of institution	52,406
Dividends declared	40,000
Deposits on which interest is allowed	5,569,707
Rate of interest, per cent	2 to 4

Knickerbocker Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Bonds and mortgages	$479,100
Stock investments, (market value)	2,225,273
Amount loaned on collaterals	17,366,531
Amount loaned on personal securities	526,976
Cash on hand	174,534
Cash on deposit	3,272,520
Overdrafts	3,528
Other assets	205,136
Total	$24,317,618

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$1,000,000
Undivided profits	1,173,709
Deposits in trust	2,359,221
General deposits payable on demand	19,579,788
Other liabilities	204,891
Total	$24,317,618

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Profits during the year	$891,983
Interest credited depositors	439,223
Expenses of institution	142,759
Dividends declared	70,000
Deposits on which interest is allowed	17,824,076
Rate of interest, per cent	1 to 4

Manhattan Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Bonds and mortgages	$9,500
Stock investments, (market value)	3,325,052
Amount loaned on collaterals	4,270,843
Amount loaned on personal securities	500
Cash on hand	3,117,025
Cash on deposit	515,529
Other assets	117,511
Total	$11,256,460

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$1,000,000
Surplus fund	200,000
Undivided profits	1,282,500
Deposits in trust	643,708
General deposits payable on demand	8,101,252
Other liabilities	9,000
Total	$11,256,460

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Profits during the year	$759,115
Interest credited depositors	179,302
Expenses of institution	112,785
Dividends declared	60,000
Deposits on which interest is allowed	6,797,382
Rate of interest, per cent	1 to 4

Merchants' Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Stock investments, (market value)	$1,405,860
Amount loaned on collaterals	3,198,210
Cash on hand	32,113
Cash on deposit	1,377,326
Other assets	11,152
Total	$6,022,673

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$500,000
Surplus fund	1,000,000
Undivided profits	72,456
General deposits payable on demand	4,449,168
Other liabilities	1,050
Total	$6,022,673

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Profits during the year	$174,218
Interest credited depositors	80,375
Expenses of institution	24,225
Deposits on which interest is allowed	4,398,154
Rate of interest, per cent	1½ to 3½

Metropolitan Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Stock investments, (market value)	$2,024,862
Amount loaned on collaterals	15,163,653
Real estate	512,404
Cash on hand	6,926
Cash on deposit	1,815,746
Other assets	195,227
Total	$19,714,771

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$1,000,000
Surplus fund	1,000,000
Undivided profits	709,770
General deposits payable on demand	16,920,455
Other liabilities	84,546
Total	$19,714,771

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Profits during the year	$895,196
Interest credited depositors	402,276
Expenses of institution	83,541
Dividends declared	100,000
Deposits on which interest is allowed	16,920,455
Rate of interest, per cent	1 to 4

Morton Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Stock investments, (market value)	$7,692,541
Amount loaned on collaterals	19,269,234
Amount loaned on personal securities	5,610,000
Cash on hand	22,737
Cash on deposit	5,635,938
Due from banks	3,045
Other assets	1,038,966
Total	$39,272,282

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$500,000
Surplus fund	1,000,000
Undivided profits	46,116
Deposits in trust	9,881
General deposits payable on demand	4,239,125
Other liabilities	1,954
Total	$5,297,078

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Profits during the year	$148,298
Interest credited depositors	54,019
Expenses of institution	53,054
Deposits on which interest is allowed	4,211,704
Rate of interest, per cent	1 to 3½

New York Security and Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Bonds and mortgages	$1,003,538
Stock investments, (market value)	8,423,271
Amount loaned on collaterals	8,947,031
Amount loaned on personal securities	742,488
Cash on hand	2,742,328
Cash on deposit	5,515,811
Other assets	131,085
Total	$24,795,331

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$1,000,000
Surplus fund	2,250,000
Undivided profits	134,544
General deposits payable on demand	21,364,509
Other liabilities	46,277
Total	$24,795,331

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Profits during the year	$1,146,154
Interest credited depositors	407,488
Expenses of institution	89,785
Dividends declared	200,000
Deposits on which interest is allowed	20,278,781
Rate of interest, per cent	1 to 3

Standard Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Bonds and mortgages	$17,500
Stock investments, (market value)	2,097,672
Amount loaned on collaterals	4,739,474
Amount loaned on personal securities	146,414
Cash on hand	29,635
Cash on deposit	2,418,545
Other assets	44,468
Total	$9,474,711

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$1,000,000
Surplus fund	250,000
Undivided profits	156,127
Deposits in trust	133,346
General deposits payable on demand	7,079,151
Other liabilities	856,087
Total	$9,474,711

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Profits during the year	$366,159
Interest credited depositors	100,069
Expenses of institution	50,113
Deposits on which interest is allowed	6,234,542
Rate of interest, per cent	2 to 3

The Trust Company of New York.

RESOURCES.

Stock investments, (market value)	$2,256,558
Amount loaned on collaterals	2,841,121
Cash on hand	1,111
Cash on deposit	1,192,192
Other assets	7,045
Total	$6,297,078

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$1,000,000
Surplus fund	1,000,000
Undivided profits	46,116
General deposits payable on demand	4,239,125
Other liabilities	1,954
Total	$6,297,078

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Profits during the year	$148,298
Interest credited depositors	54,019
Expenses of institution	53,054
Deposits on which interest is allowed	4,211,704
Rate of interest, per cent	1 to 3½

Trust Company of America.

RESOURCES.

Bonds and mortgages	$182,500
Stock investments, (market value)	5,184,729
Amount loaned on collaterals	11,175,035
Amount loaned on personal securities	210,337
Cash on hand	16,852
Cash on deposit	939,220
Other assets	146,711
Total	$17,857,384

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$2,500,000
Surplus fund	2,500,000
Undivided profits	245,894
Deposits in trust	37,702
General deposits payable on demand	12,546,584
Other liabilities	27,203
Total	$17,857,384

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Profits during the year	$567,991
Interest credited depositors	199,275
Expenses of institution	110,640
Dividends declared	87,500
Deposits on which interest is allowed	12,431,559
Rate of interest, per cent	1½ to 4

United States Mortgage and Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Bonds and mortgages	$8,862,124
Stock investments (market value)	5,181,556
Amount loaned on collaterals	6,143,365
Amount loaned on personal securities	289,786
Real estate	170,262
Cash on hand	64,883
Cash on deposit	4,407,401
Overdrafts	10
Other assets	932,638
Total	$26,142,126

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$2,000,000
Surplus fund	2,500,000
Undivided profits	174,525
Deposits in trust	408,929
General deposits payable on demand	12,910,114
Other liabilities	8,088,557
Total	$26,142,126

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Profits during the year	$1,573,386
Interest credited depositors	613,215
Expenses of institution	209,674
Dividends declared	200,000
Deposits on which interest is allowed	12,486,685
Rate of interest, per cent	1 to 5

* This sum includes $8,000,000 mortgage trust bonds.

Union Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Bonds and mortgages	$1,200,447
Stock investments (market value)	13,544,954
Amount loaned on collaterals	33,440,755
Real estate	1,900,000
Cash on hand	2,040,806
Cash on deposit	3,075,648
Overdrafts	8
Other assets	1,340,827
Total	$56,549,441

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$1,000,000
Surplus fund	6,587,533
Deposits in trust	47,762,017
Other liabilities	1,199,891
Total	$56,549,441

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Profits during the year	$2,149,956
Interest credited depositors	1,171,925
Expenses of institution	239,360
Dividends declared	320,000
Deposits on which interest is allowed	46,365,659
Rate of interest, per cent	1 to 4

Washington Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Bonds and mortgages	$76,100
Stock investments (market value)	1,530,395
Amount loaned on collaterals	6,646,900
Amount loaned on personal securities	150,000
Cash on hand	2,456
Cash on deposit	642,361
Other assets	69,229
Total	$8,948,382

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$500,000
Surplus fund	500,000
Undivided profits	251,212
Deposits in trust and general deposits payable on demand	7,656,526
Other liabilities	40,643
Total	$8,948,382

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Profits during the year	$393,673
Interest credited depositors	263,442
Expenses of institution	52,541
Dividends declared	50,000
Deposits on which interest is allowed	7,568,837
Rate of interest, per cent	1 to 4

Williamsburg Trust Company.

RESOURCES.

Bonds and mortgages	$154,200
Stock investments, (market value)	1,269,162
Amount loaned on collaterals	2,544,897
Amount loaned on personal securities	308,410
Cash on hand	19,859
Cash on deposit	801,345
Overdrafts	27
Other assets	31,038
Total	$5,128,940

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock	$700,000
Surplus fund	350,000
Undivided profits	99,010
Deposits in trust	29,274
General deposits payable on demand	3,899,020
Other liabilities	79,735
Total	$5,128,940

SUPPLEMENTARY.

Profits during the year	$179,391
Interest credited depositors	64,032
Expenses of institution	37,827
Dividends declared	21,000
Deposits on which interest is allowed	3,844,020
Rate of interest, per cent	2 to 3½

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Site Acquired for New Office Building on Lower Broadway.

MAIDEN LANE PROPERTY SOLD

Another Deal Near Longacre Square—Other Sales of Dwellings and Vacant Property—Auction Results.

The property at the southeast corner of Broadway and Maiden Lane, known as 166 to 172 Broadway, together with 2 Maiden Lane, adjoining, have been sold, and will be the site of a new office building, probably sixteen stories in height, to be erected by the George A. Fuller Company.

Negotiations to this end have been concluded satisfactorily in all their principal details, and it is understood that work on the new structure will be begun on May 1. For the present, however, the parties to the deal decline to discuss any of its minor details. The large parcel, which is the greater part of the site for the proposed building, is sold by Ehrich Parmly. It has frontages of 76.7 feet on Broadway and 67.10 feet on Maiden Lane, and measures 81.4 feet and 68 feet on its easterly and southerly lines, respectively. The adjoining property, 2 Maiden Lane, is 21 by 88.4 feet in size, and last appeared in the records on Sept. 2, 1893, when it was transferred to Sydney J. Colford.

Another building operation, not far distant from that referred to above, is foreshadowed by the sale of 38, 40, and 42 Maiden Lane, on the south side of that street, about 100 feet east of Nassau Street. These properties have just changed hands at a figure said to be $220,000. They occupy a frontage of 63.5 feet, and have an average depth of 67 feet, with irregular rear lines. The purchaser's name could not be learned yesterday.

McVickar & Co. have sold for Catharine Bigley, Isabella Urban, and George F. Dewhurst the plot at the southeast corner of Seventh Avenue and Forty-ninth Street, 100.5 feet on the avenue by 100 feet on the street, now occupied by two four-story tenements and several old frame buildings. The purchaser's name is withheld for the present. The sellers were represented in the deal by Brokers J. Romaine Brown & Co.

Ranald H. Macdonald & Co. have sold for Nat C. Goodwin the four-story English basement dwelling 35 East Thirty-third Street, 18.9 by 65 by 98.9; also, for Mrs. Ella H. Browne, the similar property 39 East Thirty-third Street.

Joseph A. Farley has sold the new five-story American basement dwelling 351 West Eighty-sixth Street, 25 by 100.8.

Henry G. Trevor has sold the two four-story brownstone-front dwellings 33 and 35 East Seventy-fourth Street, on a plot 33.4 by 102.2.

Harris Sokolski & Son have sold for about $140,000 the new seven-story business building 357 Grand Street, southeast corner of Essex Street, 50.2 by 50.

Samuel C. Baum has sold to an investor the five-story double flat 316 East Ninety-fourth Street.

David Stewart has sold for John T. Farley the lot on the north side of One Hundred and Fifty-fourth Street, 166 feet east of Amsterdam Avenue, 25 by 99.11.

Max Marx has sold to Jessie Pritchard the three-story dwelling 120 East One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street, 20 by 99.11.

Charles E. Duross has sold for Gertrude Mygatt to Mary Tyghe for $15,000 the three-story dwelling 224 West Fifteenth Street, 24.9 by 80.6.

Mandelbaum & Lewine have resold to Leon Hirsch and George Kramer the five-story tenement at the southwest corner of Grand and Corlears Streets, 23.4 by 70, purchased by them at auction on Tuesday for $16,000.

Mandelbaum & Lewine have bought the two three-story brick dwellings 240 and 242 Clinton Street, on a plot 40.4 by 63.9, and have resold the property to builder, who will erect thereon five-story flats.

Herman M. Solomon and Harry M. Goldberg have sold the southwest corner of Jackson and Monroe Streets, known as 274 Monroe Street and 35 Jackson Street, to Mr. Arthur Berman, who gives in part payment a lot on the north side of One Hundred and Third Stret, 50 feet west of Second Avenue.

Post & Reese were the brokers in the sale of the dwelling 48 East Sixty-ninth Street.

Brokers Duff & Brown negotiated the sale of the three flats on the east side of Amsterdam Avenue, 25 feet north of One Hundred and Forty-sixth Street, for Niels Hansen to Mrs. Mary Van Cott. The same brokers recently sold the corner flat for Mr. Hansen.

James Van Dyck Card has sold for the estate of H. H. Schwieterling and others between 450 and 460 lots in the centre of the town of College Point, Borough of Queens, to a builder for improvement and development.

Results at Auction.

Yesterday's offerings in the Trinity Building Salesroom resulted as follows:

By Philip A. Smyth.
Partition Sale.

$20 Courtlandt Avenue, southeast corner of One Hundred and Fifty-ninth Street, 25 by 92, four-story brick flat, with stores; to Robert E. McDonnal.. $11,050

$18 Courtlandt Avenue, east side, adjoining the foregoing, 25 by 92, four-story brick flat, with store; to Robert E. McDonnal 10,100

$16, Courtlandt Avenue, east side, adjoining the foregoing, 48.6 by 92, old frame building; to Leopold Hutter 7,050

796 Courtlandt Avenue, southeast corner of One Hundred and Fifty-eighth Street, 24 by 91.11, four-story brick flat, with store; to Robert E. McDonnal 10,225

794 Courtlandt Avenue, east side, adjoining the foregoing, 24.6 by 91.11; four-story brick flat, with store; to Robert E. McDonnal 7,900

606 East One Hundred and Fifty-eighth Street, south side, 91.11 feet east of Courtlandt Avenue, at the rear of the foregoing, 25.1 by 98.6, unfinished four-story brick dwelling; to Leopold Hutter 4,100

East One Hundred and Fifty-eighth Street, south side, 117 feet east of Courtlandt Avenue, adjoining the foregoing, 25 by 98.6, vacant; to Leopold Hutter 2,800

By William M. Ryan

Prospect Avenue, southeast corner of One Hundred and Sixty-fourth Street, 37 by 85, four-story brick flat, with store; together with East One Hundred and Sixty-fifth Street, south side, 18.11 feet west of Stebbins Avenue, 54.9 by 91, three two-story frame dwellings; to L. L. Levy $20,000

By Charles A. Berrian.

28 and 30 West One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Street, south side, 310 feet west of Fifth Avenue, 75 by 99.11, two seven and eight story brick flats; foreclosure sale, to the plaintiff, Bertha Barth.... $105,270

THE BUILDING DEPARTMENT.

List of Plans Filed for New Structures and Alterations.

Madison Avenue, southeast corner of Ninety-ninth Street, for two seven-story brick flats, with stores, 50 by 90 by 95; C. M. Silverman of 2,012 Seventh Avenue, owner; Neville & Bagge of 217 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, architects; cost, $250,000.

Nos. 513 and 515 Seventh Avenue, for a two-story brick store and lofts, 49.4 by 99.11; Wendell estate of 175 Broadway, owner; H. C. Hollweded of 129 West Thirty-Eighth Street, architect; cost, $10,000.

No. 12 Goerck Street, for a six-story brick tenement, 25 by 87; Paul Hoffmann of 185 Delancey Street, owner; Kurtzer & Rohl of 190 Bowery, architects; cost, $17,000.

No. 200 Mott Street, for a seven-story brick tenement and store, 25 by 80.6; Kidansky & Levy of 206 East Broadway, owners; Horenburger & Straub of 122 Bowery, architects; cost, $20,000.

Minneford Avenue, west side, 175 feet south of Cross Street, for a two-story frame dwelling, 19 by 42; L. F. W. Selfert, owner; Gustav Schwarz of 554 East One Hundred and Fifty-eighth Street, architect; cost, $2,500.

One Hundred and Forty-first Street, south side, 80.9 feet east of Alexander Avenue, for a four-story brick dwelling, 19 by 44.6; Alexander Avenue Baptist Church, premises, owner; Frank F. Ward, architect; cost, $5,500.

One Hundred and First Street, north side, 65 feet west of Broadway, for a seven-story brick flat, 60 by 91; George Kelster of 1,133 Broadway, owner; Henry Acker of 1,295 Union Avenue, architect; cost, $80,000.

Alterations.

Fifth Avenue, northeast corner of Tenth Street, to a six-story brick and stone flat; Mutual Life Insurance Company of 32 Nassau Street, owner; Clinton & Russell of 32 Nassau Street, architects; cost, $25,000.

Nos. 31 and 33 North Moore Street, to a six-story brick warehouse; Merchants' Refrigerating Company of 161 Chambers Street, owner; Hugh Getty, builder; cost, $150.

No. 1 Chambers Street, to a one-story brick store and clubroom; Henry Bischoff of 257 Broadway, owner; John Hoyer of 19 Oliver Street, architect; cost, $100.

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

In the following list "mtg" stands for mortgage and "R. S" for revenue stamps. The war revenue law provides that stamps shall be placed on all conveyances at the rate of 50 cents for each $500 of consideration. This "consideration" has been held to mean only the equity above the mortgage, except in the rare cases where the purchaser assumes payment of the mortgage. The amount of the mortgage plus 1,000 times the value of the revenue stamps on the conveyance should therefore show the true consideration:

Friday, Jan. 18.

AMSTERDAM AV, s e corner of 190th St, 49.11x196.10x50.10x97; Charles Banks to Jacob Kassevitz, (R S $20) $26,000

BOWERY, 80 and 82, w s, 49.7x111.2x 49.9x111.2; Henry Stein to Herbert C. Smith, (R S $20, mtg $60,000) 80,000

EDGECOMBE AV, 112 and 114, e s, 34.4x 85x irregular; Meyer Grayhead to Hugh L. Grant, (R S $55) 1

FORSYTH ST, 103, s e corner of Broome St, 87.6x25; William Solomon to Hyman B. Goldberg, ½ part, (R S $10.50, 1 mtg $42,000) .....

FORSYTH ST, 174, e s, 20.10x100; East Side Spar Verein to Lippe Lunitz, (R S $9.50) 19,250

FULTON AV, n w s, 50 ft n e of public square, 30x210x50x310.2; Louise Georgi, legatee and devisee, to Leopold E. Georgi, all subs, &c. 4,000

JEROME AV, n e corner of 165th St, 87.4x224.4 to the centre line of Cromwell Av, x87.3x221.7, with land under water, &c.; Elbert O. Smith to William C. Dunne, ½ part, (correction deed) 3,000

LEXINGTON AV, 75, e s, 24.8x62; Catharine E. Ottiwell to Mary H. Elting, (R S $17.50) 100

LANE leading from Albany Post Road to Hudson River station at Riverdale, centre line, at s w corner of premises hereby described and adjoining land of Mrs. Petrullo, runs n e 290 to land of Mrs. Samler x e 400x s —x w —; Adelaide L. Butler to Nellie Sondheim, (R S $1.50) ... 1

NAGLE AV, n w s, 236 ft n e of Eilwood St, 100x350; Rudolph F. Emmerich to Frederick Vonderhehr, (R S $10) 1

NAGLE AV, n w s, 230 ft n e of Eilwood St, 100x350; Frederick Vonderhehr to Louis O. Emmerich, (R S $11.50) 1

PLEASANT AV, 275, w s, 12.8x74; Charles Reszek to Jennie Rosenthal, (R S 50c, mtg $3,500) 1

PRINCE ST, 26, 24x109.9x23.1x116.2; Charles C. Rubsam to Henry Kraus, correction deed, quitclaim 1

PRINCE ST, 24 and 26, 47.6x104x irregular; Henry Kraus to Antonino Maggio, (mtg $50,000, R S $55) 55,000

TRAVERS ST, n e s, 77.7 ft n w of Briggs Av, 25.11x104.1x25x91.5; John C. Bennett to William J. Gault, (R S $2).. 1,650

WALTON AV, e s, 142.2 ft s of 183d St, 50x98x50x98.4; Henry W. Bookstaver, referee, to Terence P. Smith and another, (R S $1.50) 1,125

WILLIAM ST, 112 and 114, e s, 27.6x 48.9x27.6x48.2; Samson Lachman, referee, to Blanche Weller, (R S $34.50, mtg $6,000) 40,400

WESTCHESTER AV, s e s, between Avenue B and Green Lane, adjoining the land of Phebe E. Holzapfel, 100x—; Sarah D. and Martha A. Munn to Phebe E. Holzapfel, (R S 50 cents) 1

5TH AV, s e corner of 111th St, 50.11x 100; Aaron M. Janpole and Louis Werner to J. Hooker Hamersly, (mtg $25,000, R S $35) .....

8TH AV, e s, 25 ft n of 140th St, 25x100; Sarah Baillin to Elizabeth A. Wilcox, (mtg $12,000, R S $7) 100

2D ST, s s, 100 ft e of 1st Av, 25x 105.11; William J. A. McKim, referee, to Henry Drucker, (R S $21.50) 29,450

3D ST, 58 East, 31x101.4x irregular; Leopold Kaufmann to Jonas Well and another, (mtg $40,000, R S $20) .....

11TH ST, 323 to 327 West, 73.6x95.4x irregular; 11th St, 329 West, 12.4x95; Edward Browne, referee, to Henry C. Lytton, (R S $8, mtg $86,250) 8,000

13TH ST, 607 East, 25x103.3; Zax K. Berlin to David J. Cohen and another, (R S 50c,) 1

13TH ST, 607 East, 25x103.3; David J. Cohen and another to Abraham Fine and another, (R S $5, mtg $28,000) 33,000

14TH ST, 304 East, 19.6x51.6; Philip Boyer to Henry H. Rexer, (R S $11, mtg $9,000) .....

17TH ST, 108 West, 25x92; Robert A. Sasseen to Sarah Baillin, (mtg $24,000, R S $6) 100

24TH ST, n s, 17.10 ft w of 2d Av, 58.6x 98.9; Jacob Kassewitz to Joseph L. Buttenwieser, (mtg $68,000, R S $33) 1

31ST ST, s s, 115 ft w of 4th Av, 17.6x 98.9; John C. Wilmerding to N. D. Lawton, (R S $30) .....

42D ST, 240 West, 16.8x100.4; Alice M. Parsons to Jeanie M. Fitch, (R S $2).. 1

55TH ST, s s, 105.10 ft w of Broadway, 40x100.5; Nelson D. Stilwell to Robert Ferguson, (R S $11, mtg $36,000) 100

102TH ST, 69 West, 22x100.11; Louis N. Narbonne to Nellie A. Murphy, recorded, (mtg $28,000, R S $10) 1

117TH ST, 52 West, 25x100.11; Frederick V. Haas to Nora A. Bradley, (mtg $23,000) .....

117TH ST, 52 West, 25x100.11; Charles H. Knox, referee, to Frederick V. Haas, (R S $3.50, mtg $21,000) .....

117TH ST, 48 West, 25x100.11; Frederick V. Haas to George M. Turner, (R S $3, mtg $21,000) .....

117TH ST, 48 West, 25x100.11; Charles H. Knox, referee, to Frederick V. Haas, (R S $3.50, mtg $21,000) 3,400

121ST ST, s w corner of Park Av, 20x 100.11; Adam Happel to Sophie Korfmann, (R S $15, mtg $15,000) .....

124TH ST, s s, 170.10 ft e of Columbus Av, 15.8x100.11x irregular; Sophie Korfmann to Adam Happel, (R S $5, mtg $25,300) 100

128TH ST, 3 East, 20x99.11; Emilie Hamburger to Emma Arnott, (R S $4, mtg $12,000) 1

131ST ST, s s, 272 ft e of Lenox Av, 32x 100.11; Thomas F. Donnelly, referee, to James V. Donvan, (mtg $14,500, R S $5) 4,800

136TH ST, 466 East, 25x100; Percival J. H. Whittaker to Amelia Runyon, (mtg $16,000, R S $5) 100

137TH ST, 246 West, 18x99.11; Charles E. Picken to Clara N. Karibe, (R S $10, mtg $15,000) 100

150TH ST, proposed, s s, 150 ft e of Brook Av, 25x100; Philip and Jerome Jung to William L. Saulpaugh, (mtg $11,500, R S $5) .....

150TH ST, proposed, s s, 175 ft e of Brook Av, 25x100; Philip and Jerome Jung to William L. Saulpaugh, (mtg $11,500, R S $5) 1

156TH ST, proposed, s s, 175 ft e of Brook Av, 25x100; Philip and Jerome Jung to William L. Saulpaugh, (mtg $11,500, R S $5) 1

156TH ST, centre line at centre of Findlay Av, runs w 260 ft to centre of College Av x n 380x e 130.2x s 50x e 130.2 to centre of Findlay Av x s 330; Louise C. Kinney to Jeremiah C. Lyons and another, (R

Real Estate at Auction.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

HERBERT A. SHERMAN, Auct'r,
WILL SELL AT AUCTION.
THURSDAY, FEB. 14, 1901,
At 12 o'clock noon, at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, 111 Broadway.
ABSOLUTE SALE WITHOUT RESERVE.
FOR PARTITION.
Estate of JOEL WOLFE, Deceased.

No. 305 Fifth Ave.
28.9 feet north of 31st Street; 4-story, basement and cellar brownstone store building, with one-story extension; 2-story stable on rear of lot. Lot 28x150 feet, together with right of way over alley to 31st Street.

No. 121 West Houston St.
Near Sullivan Street, 4-story building, with one-story extension; lot 25x95 feet.

No. 124 West Houston St.
Near Sullivan Street, 6-story building and lot 25x100 feet.

Village of Wakefield,
In the Borough of Bronx, 11th and 12th Avs., near 3d St.
SIX LOTS.

Staten Island.
Richmond County. Farm at Princes Bay, Town of Westfield, about
Eighty-one Acres.
All titles guaranteed by Title Guarantee and Trust Company, free of charge to purchaser.
Sixty per cent. of the purchase price may remain on bond and mortgage, for three years, at 4%, or seventy per cent. at 4½%.
SHEARMAN & STERLING, 44 Wall St.;
EDWARD W. SHELDON, No. 45 Wall Street;
GEORGE E. GARTLAND, 11 Wall Street;
A. E. ACKERMAN, 140 Nassau Street, Attorneys.
For Maps and further particulars apply to SHEARMAN & STERLING, Attys., 44 Wall St., or
HERBERT A. SHERMAN, Auctioneer, 9 Pine Street.

JAMES L. WELLS, Auctioneer,
111 Broadway, N. Y. Real Estate Salesroom,
TUESDAY, JANUARY 22, NOON,
Executors' Sale,
By order of Executors of
Estate of Bryan Lawrence, Deceased.

Choice Business Property,
BEING ENTIRE BLOCK BOUNDED BY
HARLEM RIVER,
SOUTHERN BOULEVARD,
3d & Lincoln Aves.
Together with
Water Front and Bulkheads.
70 PER CENT. CAN REMAIN ON MORTGAGE AT 4½ PER CENT.
Apply for maps to James L. Wells, Auctioneer, 141 Broadway, or to
WILLIAM C. ORR, ESQ.,
Attorney for Executors, 51 Chambers Street.

City Real Estate for Sale.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

$5,000 Cash and $4,500
mortgage will buy a beautiful Home and grounds; also a large variety of fruit trees. For further particulars address GEO. W. CAMPBELL, 122 West 103d St., or call between 9 A. M. and 9 P. M.

Corner plot on Manhattan Av
100.11 on the avenue by 145 ft. on the street. Terms to suit the buyer. For further particulars apply to GEO. W. CAMPBELL, 122 West 103d St. from 9 A. M. to 9 P. M.

I have a block of three family Houses, all well rented; my equity in these houses is $150,000; will exchange the same for some free and clear country Property or something free and clear in New York or Brooklyn, or I will sell the same for cash; whatever the deal may be, I must realize $60,000 in cash, as I need this money very much for my business; I will give all brokers full particulars of the property and will pay them full commission if they can carry this deal through for me; everything is kept strictly confidential. Address J. HAMER, P. O. Box 1941, New York City.

FOR SALE.
A very superior new 20-foot five-story American basement house at
NO. 312 WEST 107TH STREET.
Has large and handsome reception room and foyer hall, passenger elevator all the way up; three bathrooms and refrigerator built in. Is on the highest ground of the upper west side, close to Riverside, in a most quiet, select, and convenient location. Just the house for an invalid.
PRICE ONLY $36,000.
Three-quarters may remain at 4½ %.
CHARLES BUEK, Owner and Builder, No. 109 West 42d Street.

FOR SALE.
We are offering the following bargains in private houses:
In Eighties, a 20-foot brownstone house, suitable for altering, can be bought under $50,000
In 72d St., white stone Am. basement dwelling; owner anxious to sell under.. 100,000
In Seventies, nr. Mad. Av., 2 houses adjoining; grand site for extra wide house. 70,000
Full width house in Sixties, near 5th Av., belongs to an estate, about..... 105,000
In East 54th St., 20 feet..... 65,000
In Murray Hill, old house to alter..... 55,000
On Madison Av., 20 feet..... 42,500
Call or write for further particulars and permits.
S. OSGOOD PELL & CO.,
542 5th Av., S. W. cor. 45th St.

53D ST., NEAR 8TH AVE.,
4 and 5 story bldgs., 53 front, adapted for light manufacturing; carriage lift, driveway.
ASHFORTH & CO., 1,500 BROADWAY.

AGENTS AND BROKERS, NOTICE!
Nos. 51, 53, 55 East 129th St.,
Plot 75x99.11, with two good Dwellings, at value of land.
J. L. O'BRIEN, Owner, 217 West 125th St.

Madison Av., corner, below 42d St.; size 75x100; best site in the city for an apartment hotel. J. EDGAR LEAYCRAFT & CO., 1,507 Broadway.

Handsome high-stoop brown-stone residence on West 78th St., near West End Av., 18.9x60x102.2; first-class in every respect; $10,000 equity; principals only; no postal cards. Address Owner, 184 5th St., Jersey City, N. J.

A medium four-story basement dwelling, 21st St., between 5th and 6th Avs.; excellent for residence or investment; price, $27,000. S. B. GOODALE & SON, 9 West 24th St. Fifth Avenue Hotel.

Avenue C, near 12th St.—5-story store and tenement, free and clear; will sell at sacrifice or would trade. H. RAPP, 156 Broadway.

Exchange lot 25x100, Westchester Av., near Prospect Av.; also 2 brick flats, 148th St., near Willis Av., 6 rooms, bath; OWNER, 2,836 3d Av.

Lots: Bronx bargains; Tremont, Woodycrest, Aqueduct Avs., Fordham Road; cheap Woodlawn corner. George Purvis, 156 Broadway.

Bargain: handsome private dwelling, East 50th St., near 2d Av.; little cash needed. George Purvis, 156 Broadway.

Investors, Builders.—Plots on and near Broadway, 14th to 59th St. THEO. ROGERS BRILL, 324 West 50th St.

Jerome Av.—34 lots to close an estate; cheap; must be sold. THORN COMPANY, Fordham.

Builders.—Lot 26x92; good tenement location; $13,000. Duross, 242 West 14th St.

Staten Island Property.

COMMERCIAL WATER FRONTS, FACTORY property, houses, with large grounds, worth $75,000, free and clear; exchange for city property. D. CORNELL, Stapleton, S. I.

Long Island Real Estate for Sale.

6c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

Handsome shore front property, all sizes; easy terms. Write for particulars.
J. S. LEWIS, Northport, L. I.

Real Estate.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

Insure Your Title.
Don't carry the risk yourself.
Title insurance is cheaper than the old system of counsel's opinion, and protects better.
TITLE GUARANTEE AND TRUST COMPANY.
CAPITAL & SURPLUS - $5,000,000
146 Broadway, New York.
175 Remsen St., Brooklyn.

Brooklyn Real Estate for Sale.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

PROSPECT PARK SOUTH

Detached houses; large plots, asphalt streets; electric lights; hardwood finish; parquet floors, tiled baths, decorated in real silk tapestries; large boudoirs with open decorated plumbing and cheval mirrors built in; exclusive society; clubs, schools and churches. Plots 50 feet or more; prices $3,000 and up; with houses $12,000 and up. References required.

Two blocks south of Prospect Park. Twenty-eight minutes from Park Row, via Kings Co. "L," Flatbush Div. Get off at Church Avenue, on property.

Handsome book photographic illustrations on request.

DEAN ALVORD,
Owner,
257 Broadway, N. Y.
Or on property. Telephones.

Cheapest in Brooklyn; $3,300; easy terms; 722 Sackett St., near 5th Av. (Park Slope;) 2-story and basement; brick; 9 rooms; all improvements; decorated; cozy home; sacrifice. DEWSNAP, 150 Nassau St., Manhattan.

Several plots, fine lots, fronting on trolley in Jamaica, $60 to $125; street graded; fine cement sidewalks, electric lights; $5 down, $1 per week; Title Guarantee policy free. Edwards, 1,258 Broadway, Brooklyn.

$3,000, only $300 down, balance payments to suit, buys two-story brick dwelling, 25th Ward, near L and trolleys. Ketcham Bros., 1,565 Broadway.

Real Estate for Exchange.

$60,000 EQUITY IN THREE FINE
Apartment Houses; will trade for west side Lots or free and clear Country Place. Send full particulars to GEO. W. CAMPBELL, 122 West 103d st., or call between 9 A. M. and 9 P. M.

$15,000 FREE AND CLEAR LOT;
what can you offer in exchange for same? Send full particulars to GEO. W. CAMPBELL, 122 West 103d st., or call between 9 A. M. and 9 P. M.

$40,000 EQUITY IN A PIECE OF manufacturing Property, leased to one tenant, who does all repairs and pays the Croton water rent; what can you offer in exchange for the same? Send full particulars to GEO. W. CAMPBELL, 122 West 103d st., or call between 9 A.M. and 9 P.M.

$40,000 FREE AND CLEAR CORner Plot, on Park av., 100x80; what can you offer in exchange? Send full particulars to GEO. W. CAMPBELL, 122 West 103d st., or call between 9 A. M. and 9 P. M.

$22,000 EQUITY IN FINE FLAT
House, situated on 106th st., Central Park West; will trade for free and clear Country Place. Send full particulars to GEO. W. CAMPBELL, 122 West 103d st., or call between 9 A. M. and 9 P. M.

$250,000 FREE AND CLEAR
Apartment House; what can you offer in exchange for same? Send full particulars to GEO. W. CAMPBELL, 122 West 103d St., or call between 9 A. M. and 9 P. M.

$40,000 EQUITY IN FINE STORE
Property, near 28th St. and 6th Av.; will trade for private House and cash. For further particulars address GEO. W. CAMPBELL, 122 West 103d St., or call between 9 A. M. and 9 P. M.

$20,000 EQUITY IN FINE FLAT
House; will trade for free and clear private house; send full particulars. GEO. W. CAMPBELL, 122 West 103d St., or call between 9 A. M. and 9 P. M.

AT GREAT SACRIFICE,
beautiful Residence and Lots near New Haven, Ct., equity $35,000, for income or cash offer.
PERCY WINTHROP MEAD, 47 Cedar St.

Want Atlantic Highlands property in exchange for Harlem private house; good opportunity. WELLING, 2 West 125th St.

Country Real Estate for Sale.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display

FOR SALE,
A GENTLEMAN'S COUNTRY RESIDENCE
in a refined neighborhood, on the shore at Bryan Point, consisting of (2½) acres of high land on the open Sound, on the New Haven Railroad, (7) minutes' drive to station, and only (39) minutes from Grand Central Depot, with a Colonial Style house, built of yellow Nova Scotia stone and frame, handsomely decorated, all the latest improvements, open plumbing of the finest manufactured Stable for (4) horses and ample space for carriages.
An excellent Dock and a 50-foot Boathouse bathhouses, beach. The grounds are beautifully laid out. All in the best of order. For other particulars call or address THOMAS N. COOKE 1 O. Building, Greenwich, Conn.

FOR SALE—ESTATE OF 605 ACRES, RAPpahannock River, in sight of Chesapeake Bay, heavy timber, fine land, mill, hunting, fishing, sailing, oyster shore, elegant mansion 100 feet long, rooms wainscoted, oak paneling, stables, servants' quarters; steamers daily. Price $18,000, which is about cost of main building. Apply to owner, G. G. TEMPLE, Danville, Va.

At New Paltz, N. Y., adjoining college grounds, beautiful location; near depots; large house, 24 rooms, bath, closets, &c. J. COCHRANE, 2 West 125th St.

All country real estate a specialty; bargains and exchanges, all directions. Phillips & Wells, Tribune Building.

Country residence for sale or exchange for city lots or business property. D. A. Clarkson, Newburg, N. Y.

Real Estate Wanted.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display

Houses, farms, lots anywhere that are bargains. What have you? Investor, 846 Hancock St., Brooklyn.

To Let for Business Purposes.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

The BISHOP BUILDING
S. E. Cor. William & Liberty Sts.
OFFICES
Large and small, single or en suite. All light.
READY FOR OCCUPANCY APRIL 1ST, 1901.
Elevator now running.
For Plans, Rentals, &c., apply to
HORACE S. ELY & CO.,
64 Cedar Street, N. Y.

LOFTS TO LET,
135 WEST 41ST STREET,
NEAR BROADWAY.
5 light lofts in new building, size about 22x90, suitable for light manufacturing; will rent together or separately.
HORACE S. ELY & CO.,
27 West 30th St. 64 Cedar St.

UNION SQUARE NORTH,
ADJOINING BROADWAY.
LOFT 184 FEET DEEP.
Building has entrances on two streets.
Inquire at 31 East 17th St., or
J. EDGAR LEACRAFT & CO., B'way, cor. 44th.

Attractive, up-to-date three-story buildings, adjoining 3d Av., 206-208 East 56th St.; 35x100; finely lighted all sides; open plumbing; extra large elevator; suitable storage, automobile and wine warehouse, bottler, factory, express, stable, laundry, builder, undertaker, dyer, private stable; also, fine offices, stores; eight-room residence attached. Apply premises or 11A East 53d.

307 WEST BROADWAY.
STORE AND FIRST LOFT.
Strong building. Good light. Power, if required.

3D AV., NEAR 14TH ST.; FINE BUILDING; store has new double show windows; rent $1,700. J. EDGAR LEAYCRAFT & CO., B'way, cor. 44th.

CORNER 12TH ST. & THIRD AV.—Extra deep store, with large basement. J. EDGAR LEAYCRAFT & CO., B'way, cor. 44th.

STORES, LOFTS, AND OFFICES
TO LET AT LOWEST RATES.
JACOB A. KING, 491 B'WAY—81 E. 125TH ST.

Desk room, office facilities, separate room; outside windows. American Tract Building, 150 Nassau St., Room 2,020.

6th Av., 238.—Large floors, all modern improvements; will alter to suit tenants; ring janitor's bell.

326 Canal St.—Third and fourth lofts, 25x55; good light; $40 and $30. Apply to R. H. E. Elliott, 62 William St.

40th St., 438 and 440 West.—Large stores, with plate-glass fronts; two rooms; decorated; $15.

10th St., 423 West.—Large store, with three rooms and plate-glass front; newly decorated; $18.

New Jersey Property for Sale.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

$17.00 A LOT.
Adjoining Lakewood, N. J., the famous health and Winter resort, we offer plots containing five lots, $85.00. Small weekly payments. Particulars and tickets to visit the property, Sunday, January 20th, from R. HALLEY & CO., 2 East 125th St., N. Y.

TENAFLY!—$4,000 buys good modern house; large rooms and attic; wide porch; grounds 100 x140; station 10 minutes' easy walk.
H. WEATHERBY & CO., Englewood, N. J.

Business Property Wanted.

WANTED.
4,000 sq. ft. for automobile manufactnrer.
5,000 sq. ft., first floor, for lithographer.
5,000 sq. ft., top floor, for wire worker.
30,000 sq. ft. for lithographer.
30,000 sq. ft. for paper warehouse.
20,000 sq. ft., two lofts, furniture.
First Floor and Basement, 50x100, for laundry.
Ground Floor, 25x100, metal worker.
Ground Floor and Basement, 50 or 75x100, iron works.
We can supply good tenants on long lease for the above.
Have calls for many other Lofts.
Send full particulars to
CHAS. H. EASTON & CO.,
Tel. 795—38. 116 West 42d St.

Apartments to Let—Unfurnished.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

The Choicest and Cheapest Elevator Apartments in Harlem.
THE EMERSON
S. E. COR. LENOX AV. & 116th ST.
Six and seven large rooms and bath; all the latest improvements; hall service; rents $50 to $65. Small, select families will apply to Agents, on premises.

THE BROADWAY,
S. W. COR. BROADWAY & 101ST ST.
Select families with first-class references, are respectfully invited to inspect above premises.
Suites of 7 Rooms and Bath, with all the latest improvements; elevator all night; electric light, telephone; rent, $900 per annum; renting office on premises.

71st St. 342 West.
New apartments, overlooking the Hudson and Riverside Drive; 7, 8, and 9 extra large outside rooms, with pantry; two bathrooms each; parquette floors, elevator, electric light, telephones; $1,200 to $1,500. Superintendent.

BACHELOR AP'TS.
112 West 44th St.
2 large light rooms and bath.
ASHFORTH & CO., 1,509 Broadway.

ST. NICHOLAS AV., 167, near 117th St.—Beautiful single flat; 7 large, light rooms; bath; $32.00; steam heated. Janitor.

128th St., 63 West.—Upper floor, private house, to small family; 5 rooms and bath; $17.

Brooklyn.

Hicks St., 368—Desirable apartments of two and three rooms; prices, $7 and $8.

City Flats to Let—Unfurnished.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

New houses, all improvements, at 304 to 310 East 92d St.; $13 to $16; 4 rooms.
21 and 23 East 99th St., near 5th Av.—Six rooms and bath; private halls; from $23 to $26.
New buildings, s. e. cor. 118th and Madison Av., 4 and 5 rooms and baths; hot water supply, &c.; $15 to $23.

HALF MONTH'S RENT FREE.
234 West 122d St.; elegant apartments, 8 rooms newly papered and decorated; steam heat and hall service; $30 and upward. See janitor.

117th St., 300-306 West, Near Morningside Park.—Handsomely decorated, six rooms and bath; steam heat, hot water; private surroundings; conveniently located; rent, $27; references.

Elegant large flat, 7 light rooms and bath; open plumbing; steam heat; hardwood finish; hot water supply. 56 West 105th St. Janitor.

124th St., 230 West.—Large apartments; 6 rooms, bath; newly decorated; price, $16.

Jones St., 7, near West 4th St., 6th Av.—3-4 room apartments; decorated; $10-$14.50.

10th St., 224 East.—Three-room apartments; hot water, gas, and coal ranges; decorated; $12-$14.

Coal and Wood.

BUY YOUR COAL & WOOD AT THEDFORD'S
2000 lbs THE STANDARD TON
YARDS:
27TH ST. AND 9TH AVE., Tel. 386—18
79TH ST. & B'WAY., Tel. 717 Riverside.
223 W. 42D ST., Tel. 1715—38
55TH ST. & 10TH AVE., Tel. 166 Cols.
55TH ST. AND N. R., Tel. 249 Cols.
88TH ST. AND B'WAY, Tel. 125 River
MURRAY HILL WOOD YARD
36TH ST. AND FIRST AV. Tel. 279 Madison Sq.
Selected Pine and Oak for kindling. Pine Knots and extra dry Hickory for Grates and Andirons. Inspection solicited. Satisfaction guaranteed.

Hotels and Restaurants.

20c. per line $4.50 per line for 30 times.

WHERE TO DINE.
TRAVELLERS' INFORMATION CO., 3 Park Place (apply to) 25 Union Sq.
A, à la carte; T, Table d'hote; D, Dinner; L, Lunch.

Pompeian Room, Gilsey House, B'way & 29th, New, Original, Unique.
Rector's 44TH ST. AND BROADWAY. Service A La Carte.
Dutch Grill & Palm Court, Hotel Navarre, 38th St. & 7th Av. Orchestra. Alc.
Cafe Boulevard, Hungarian Orchestra. 2d Av. & 10th St. Tdh., Alc.
HEALY'S, 66th St. & Col. Av. Alc. Music 6:30-1.
Burn's World Renowned Rest. 45 St.& 6 Av. Terrapin, Game, Shellfish. Fine orchestra.
Dorlon's Oyster House, 6 & 7 East 23d St. Open for breakfast at 8 o'clock.
Hotel Metropole, 42d St., B'way. Rathskeller & Palm Garden. Alc. Music.
Dun Bld'g, Rest. Business Men's Dinner Alc Café. Lunch, B'way & Reade St.
Maryland Kitchen So. Cooking. Quaint music. Tdh., $1.25. 254 W. 34th.
Jack's 43d St. & 6th Av., & 74th & Columbus Noted for shell fish and game.
Wallace's Fifth Av. & 19th St. High-class Chop House & Ladies' Rest.
Ye Olde Tavern, 161 Duane. Quaint surroundings. Vidal & Thompson.
Hartmann's Business Men's Lunch. 1 B'way, Mills Building, 45 B'way.
Cavanagh's 258 W. 23d St. Chops, Steaks, Game, Sea Food. Banquet Rooms.
JACQUIN'S, 54 W. 24th St. Alc. Tdh. (wine) 55c.
Rogers' 6 PARK PLACE. A la Carte. Table d'Hote Dinner, 4 to 7, 50c.
Huber's WILHELMINA CAFE, 7 Av. & 116 St. Lunch & Table d'Hote. Alc. all hours.
West End Hotel, 125th St., near 7th Av. Tdh. 50c.; Sunday, 75c. MUSIC
NewArdin&Chaberty, 121-5W. 26. tdh. wine, 50
LEFRANCOIS, 17 E. 17th St. Tdh. (wine,) 50c.
J. PECK, French Tdh., (wine,) 50c. 140 Fulton St
GONFARONE'S, 36W. 8St. Tdh. (wine) 50c; lch, 40c

Au chat noir.

32 W. 28th St. Business Men's Lunch, (wine,) 50c.
Table d'Hote, (orchestra,) 75c. A la Carte at all hours.
And at 551 W. Broadway. Table d'Hote, with wine, 50c.

The...
Berkeley
Berkeley and Boylston Streets,
BOSTON.
The location is most desirable, being in close proximity to the Back Bay Stations of the New York, New Haven & Hartford and Boston & Albany Railroads, central to all places of amusement, and to the shopping district. Electric cars to all parts of the city and suburbs pass the door.
Special attention paid to the cuisine.
Restaurant open till midnight.
JOHN A. SHERLOCK.

Houses and Flats Wanted.

Large unfurnished house wanted; good order; 9th, 50th, 6th, Lexington Avs. Address Unquestionable References, Box 390 Times Office.

Instruction.

20c. per line $4.50 per line for 30 times.

SACRED HEART ACADEMY,
Select Catholic Boarding School; thorough academic and commercial course; athletics, military drill; terms moderate; 2nd term begins Feb'y 1st. Address BROTHER AUGUST, West Chester, N.Y.

REGENTS' Examinations. Central Preparatory School, 18 E. 42D ST. SEND FOR HANDBOOK.

ISAAC PITMAN SHORTHAND; PRIVATE and class lessons; best instruction; reasonable rates. METROPOLITAN SCHOOL, 259 4th Av.

FRENCH, SPANISH, ITALIAN INSTRUCTION; best method; expert teachers; terms moderate. Prof. J. M. PELLERIN, 207 West 25th.

Musical.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

AT 112 EAST 18TH ST.....The ONLY N. Y. CONSERVATORY, 112 East 18th,.....BETWEEN 4TH AV. and IRVING PLACE. The FAMOUS MUSIC SCHOOL.....The FIRST in the COUNTRY. Lessons DAY and EVENING...Years on 14th St. ....GRADUATES PROVIDED with POSITIONS.

VOCALIZATION AND PIANOFORTE. Highest instruction given by John E. Webster, English Song composer, at his Studios or pupils' residences in New York or Brooklyn. Fees extremely moderate. Salaried Positions guaranteed to clever Vocal pupils. Address 209 Carlton Av., Brooklyn.

VIOLIN ARTISTICALLY TAUGHT, EITHER residence; terms reasonable; not payable in advance; references exchanged. CHADWICK, 2 Chambers St.

VIOLIN INSTRUCTION BY JOSEPH GOLDstein, pupil of Cologne Conservatory, Germany. Terms moderate. 250 Sixth Av., Brooklyn.

GUSTAVE REHN, PIANIST.—Desires a few more pupils; thorough instruction; very moderate terms. 1 East 115th St.

PIANO; LADY, EXPERIENCED TEACHER, instructs at pupil's residence; 40 cents per lesson. TEACHER, Box 80, 1,242 Broadway.

JEANNE ARONE, AUTHORIZED BY FLORenza d'Arona to teach her method vocal instruction. 1,210 Madison Av.

Banjo, Mandolin instruction 10 weeks private lessons free, for annual concert. Dobson, 17 East 126th St.

Dancing.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

Remey's Central Park Dancing Academy, 915-918 8th Ave., (54th St.)—We guarantee the Waltz, Polka, Two-step, Schottische, and Lancers all for $5.00 in 5 private and 4 class lessons. Private lessons any hour. Classes daily. Circulars.

GEORGE W. WALLACE.
Leslie Rooms, 260 West 53d Street;
Ellicrelle Rooms, 80-82 West 126th St.
Class and private tuition. See circular.

Harvard Dancing Academy, 158-162 West 125th.—Waltz, schottische, two-step, polka, lancers, waltz quadrille guaranteed 5 private, 4 class lessons, $5; 4 class lessons, $1.

BRADY'S 1,408 Amsterdam Av., 135-137 West 125th St. WALTZ
COLUMBIA DANCING ACADEMY.
58th and 6th Av.—Classes forming; 4 lessons, $1; 24, $5; private, (any hour,) $1. Prof. S. Warner.

Lester's Colonial Academy, 101st and Columbus Av.—Class and private lessons daily; receptions Wednesday and Saturday.

Storage.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

LIBERTY STORAGE AND WAREHOUSE CO. FIREPROOF WAREHOUSE, SILVER VAULTS. PARK AV., 49TH TO 50TH ST. HARLEM WAREHOUSE, 301-303 WEST 125TH ST.
Private compartments in silver vaults; separate rooms; free fire insurance; storage for household goods, pianos, bric-a-brac and works of art; padded vans for household movings. Telephone or write for estimate on your work.

Universal Storage Warehouse Company, 202-208 East 88th St., near 3d Av.—Storage of furniture, pianos, &c.; separate compartments; estimates given for packing, shipping, moving; city or country. Telephone, 28-79th.

Dogs and Birds.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

DOG AND CAT HOSPITAL,
New York Canine Infirmary, 149 West 53d St., H. K. MILLER, Veterinarian.—Treatment, board, washing, clipping of Dogs; exercising grounds; accommodations for country Boarders; dogs called for and delivered. Telephone, 851—Columbus.

TOY BLACK AND TANS, MINIATURE KING Charles spaniel, female, $35. 381 E. 41st St., basement.

Setter dog; can do everything except talk; I wish to sell; price, $250. Josh Trayer, Hood's Mill, Md.

Purchase and Exchange.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

Books of every description bought, sold, and exchanged; small parcels or libraries purchased; highest cash prices paid; call at residences free; send postal. LOVERING'S NEW YORK BOOK EXCHANGE, 823 Broadway, near 12th St. Open evenings.

Household furniture, contents of houses and flats, pianos, carpets, &c. J. L., 113 University Place.

Business Opportunities.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

STATISTICS SHOW THAT THE SALE OF toilet articles in the United States amounts to MORE than $40,000,000.00 annually. Do you desire a fortune? Here is your opportunity! I want a partner with capital, or a person with capital to form a stock company for the purpose of increasing manufacture and exploit of seven Turkish Toilet articles, now on the market, for ladies. Highest recommendations; handsomest packages. Address, Col. J. F. MILLIKEN, 287 Broadway, N. Y. City.

MANUFACTURING SITE
NEAR NEW YORK, ON ADVANTAGEOUS TERMS; OWNER'S PLANT ADJOINING; CAN FURNISH LIGHT, HEAT, POWER, AND TRACK FACILITIES; CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED. MANUFACTURING, BOX 379, 1,269 BROADWAY.

Wanted—An associate in a going and well-established, paying manufacturing and supply business in Western Pennsylvania. Three to four hundred thousand dollars required to control. Senior partner retiring. Closest investigation. Deal only with principals. Address D., Box 194 Times Office.

$1,000.00 OR MORE INVESTED
In a novel manufacturing business can be doubled annually with good salary; bear investigation. AUTO. PIC. CO., 86 Wall St.

Incorporate Your Business.—Buy Organization and Management of Business Corporations. Gives Methods, Costs, Advantages, Details. Price, $1.50. Send for Announcement. Ronald Press, 52 Broadway.

WHY GO IDLE
When you can earn $2 a day selling an article that every woman needs? Send 10c. for sample. TONER, 433 W. 46th St., N. Y.

Sale or Rent.—Established Coal business; trestle, buildings to handle hay or grain; easy terms. E. C. Quarkenbush, Newark Av. and 7th St., Jersey City.

Music Boxes, 84 teeth, $24; 15 tunes free; other instruments. Prof. ADOLPH COHN, 157 West 23d St.

For Sale.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

IT WARMS THE LARGest room in five minutes. The Improved Fire Vase Gas Heater for warming rooms and light cooking; fits on ordinary gas burner as easily as a chimney on a lamp; requires no pipe or hose; the gas flame is increased 500 per cent.; no explosion, odor; economical. Introduction price, small size, $1.25; large, $1.60; money refunded within twenty-four hours if not found satisfactory. The KING INCANDESCENT STUDYING LAMP beats any lamp in the market; burner, 100 candle power; double strength mantle chimney and shade. Introduction price, 75c. Mail orders filled everywhere. Sole agents for the Improved Fire Vase Gas Heater, and distributers for the King Incandescent Lamp.

1,079 3d Av., Between 63d and 64th Sts.

I BUY OLD METAL.
Have you any old LEAD, BRASS, COPPER, ZINC, PEWTER, TEA LEAD, OLD TYPE, ELECTROTYPE, STEREOTYPE, OLD BOOKS, PAPERS? SEND POSTAL CARD. I WILL CALL.
BORNSTEIN, 84 Centre St.

CREDIT TO ALL
DIAMONDS and WATCHES on small weekly or monthly payments; lowest prices; best quality; goods guaranteed.
NATIONAL DIAMOND WATCH CO., 177-179 BROADWAY. Take Elevator.

Solid Black Walnut, Mahogany, and Oak Handmade Chairs and Revolving Chairs for Banks, Offices, Libraries, and Dining Rooms, to be closed out at less than cost, at the manufactory of
W. M. WATSON CO.,
71 Bowery.

We make wringers fit stationary tubs; allow something for your crippled wringer if it cannot be put in condition for use in our hospital; latest improved Bissell carpet sweepers. Send postal and our ambulance will call for wringers or sweepers needing repairs. American Wringer Co., 7-9 East 125th St.

TYPEWRITERS.—Remingtons, Smith Premiers, and all standard makes rented, kept in repair; stands and ribbons free. Sold 25% to 75% less than manufacturer's prices. No relics of past ages carried in stock. Every machine sold kept in repair for one year free. P. S. WEBSTER CO., 317 Broadway. Telephone, 1,338 Franklin.

IDEAL CLIP.—Have this clip attached to your eyeglasses and you will agree that it is the only one that gives entire satisfaction. MEYER & ELTING, Opticians, 617 Sixth Av., near 36th St., New York.

Giving up house, offer exceedingly low all elegant new furniture, brilliant upright piano, fine parlor, dining, bedroom sets, folding beds, mirrors, &c.; suitable entering housekeeping; house for sale cheap. 109 East 56th St.

TYPEWRITERS.—Remingtons, Smiths, Blickendorfers, Hammonds, Williamses, Jewetts, Franklins, Caligraphs, sold, rented, exchanged, repaired. GORMAN, 79 Nassau St.

TYPEWRITERS REPAIRED BY EXPERTS; rented, sold, exchanged. Telephone for estimate. DURRANT, McLEAN & CO., 265 Broadway.

BRITANNICA ENCYCLOPAEDIA, 25 VOLS., last edition, $22.50; Real Estate Insurance Atlas N. Y. City, 6 vols., $30; bargain; also old books bought. 147 6th Av.

Typewriter, (new,) $40; remodeled Remington, Smiths, $35; rentals reduced; repairing. (telephone.) CONSOLIDATED TYPEWRITER EXCHANGE, 241 Broadway.

At Eble's Art Gallery, 105 West 42d St., near 6th Av.—Antiques, curios, old jewels, silverware, rare fans, paintings, miniatures, and weapons. Old gold bought.

ONLY HEADQUARTERS FOR GENUINE Welsbach lights is now at 66 West 125th St., between 5th and Lenox Avs.; sell at reduced prices; put up free; satisfaction guaranteed.

Hektographs, refilled with newly invented composition, requiring no washing; 25c. lb., in 5-lb. packages; some used mimeographs, half price. C. BENSINGER, 123 Cedar St.

WM. SCHLINGLOFF'S PAPER-BOX MANUfacturing Co., established 1864; all machine boards and papers, 120 Fulton St., cash $600.

P. SORENSEN, UPHOLSTERER, DECORATOR, 2,071 7th Av., near 124th St.; slip covers cut, made; mattresses made over.

BRAATZ, NEW HAIR LIFE; LATEST DISCOVERY and finest ever compounded hair tonic; hairdressing parlors. 135 West 125th St.

Bicycle taken apart, thoroughly cleaned, for $1; repairing and enameling a specialty. TUXTO CYCLE COMPANY, 27 West 125th St.

Desks, Rolltops, Partitions, Railings, Tables, Counters, Shelvings, Safes, Stores, Offices fitted. FINN BROTHERS, 28-32 Centre St.

TYPEWRITERS RENTED, BOUGHT, SOLD; expert repairing, R. & G. TYPEWRITER CO., 202 Broadway. Telephone, 909 Cortlandt.

PHONOGRAPHS BOUGHT, SOLD, AND EXchanged; cash or $1.00 weekly; gramaphone records, $2.50 dozen. 148 East 58th St.

Typewriters sold and rented; expert repairing done. General Typewriter Exchange, 1 Park Place. 'Phone, 1573 Cortlandt.

Goodyear's Rubber Goods, Mackintoshes, Clothes Wringers, Carpet Sweepers, &c., at lowest prices. Call 106 West 125th St.

For Sale—Fully equipped machine works; down town, New York City; capacity, 25 men. Address 615 6th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

TYPEWRITERS.—All makes; guaranteed; rented $2, $3 monthly; ribbons, stands free. CENTRAL TYPEWRITER EXCHANGE, 203 Broadway.

HIGHEST CASH PRICES PAID FOR SECONDhand furniture, carpets, pianos, &c. Address LENOX, 81 West 125th St.

$10.00 BARGAINS THIS WEEK.—Domestic, New Home, Singer Sewing Machines. Cash buyers. BROWN, 39 West 125th St.

At 344 6th Av. and 172 West 23d St.—Foot Knitting Co.; stockings refooted; underwear repaired.

Plumbing shop, 203 East 118th St.; big stock and tools; 8 men; steady jobbing; fine fixtures.

COHEN BROTHERS.—Fine upholstering and cabinet making. 25 East 125th St.

The only Harlem Office for Genuine Welsbach Lights, 129 West 125th St., opposite Koch & Co.

Examine Stock. Reduced rates. Going out of business, at 231 Washington Street.

Teas.—Choice teas, 25c. per lb.; choice coffees, 15c. per lb. DUNCAN, 110 Wall St.

All kinds of moving picture machines and supplies at bargain prices. 117 Nassau St., Room 34.

Watches and Jewelry.

WEEKLY PAYMENTS; FINE DIAMONDS, watches; goods guaranteed; lowest prices; business confidential. WATCH SUPPLY, Three Maiden Lane.

EASY PAYMENTS.—Watches and diamonds; reliable goods only. AMERICAN WATCH AND DIAMOND CO., 19 Maiden Lane.

Credit, diamonds, watches, oil paintings, weekly payments, lowest prices, confidential. MANHATTAN DIAMOND CO., 87 Maiden Lane.

For best workmanship and reliable goods go to the leading Harlem jeweler, Otto Goldsmith, 114 West 125th St.

Good Will and Interest for Sale.

Candy Store, (opposite large school,) steady business; profits $18 weekly; moderate rent. 370 Amsterdam Av.

Boarders Wanted.

20c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

7th Av., 2,305.—One block from 6th Av. "L" station; gentlemen, $5; excellent board; large rooms.

21st St., 210 West.—Front parlor; single rooms; excellent board; moderate; table board.

33d St., 39 West.—Alcove room, private bath; one flight; other desirable rooms; parlor dining room.

95th St., 66 West.—Front hall room; large closet; excellent table; table board; reasonable; references.

122d St., 222 West.—Pleasant, sunny room, with board; well heated; alcove, bay window; private American family.

130th St., 161 West.—Convenient to "L"; large front sunny room, with board; also hall room; reasonable; references.

Charlton St., 33.—Fine rooms; excellent table; also table board; reasonable; references.

Private family, boarders wanted; very large finely furnished room, with first-class board for two ladies or two gentlemen, or married couple, in refined private family; $5.00 each; one week free. Mrs. Merrison, 102

BISHOP POTTER DEFENDS VIGILANCE COMMITTEE

Mr. Baldwin's Criticism Strikes Him as Being Rather Funny.

Hears About Two Policemen Who Get Paid for Leading Men Astray — Another Accused of Demanding Money.

Bishop Potter yesterday made a further defense of his proposed Vigilance Committee to combat vicious civic conditions, which has been attacked by Chairman William H. Baldwin, Jr., and other members of the Committee of Fifteen on the ground that young men working in such an organization would be subjected to temptations that might result in their moral injury.

"This criticism strikes me as rather funny," said Bishop Potter. "Soberly, I don't see how the young men of the city are likely to fall into any greater danger than now meets them all over the city. There are few men in this city who have not at one time or another been solicited to vice or seen it flaunted in the streets. How it is going to hurt them to make a record of that fact and report it to a central committee for investigation I can't see."

Bishop Potter said he had just received a letter telling of a disorderly house in Harlem which men are induced to enter by two policemen in plain clothes, who get paid for their services by the men thus led astray. He told of an acquaintance of his who was for days beset by a policeman at his home, asking him for money for finding the little son of this man, who had lost his way in Central Park. The policeman did not even bring the child home, but took him to a station house, where he was recovered by an older brother from whom he had become separated in the Park.

"I'm afraid it is only too true that indifference is at the bottom of a good deal of the trouble," the Bishop continued. "What we need most of all is a constant concentration of public attention upon the present conditions. That is what I believe to be essential to reform, and I see no better way of accomplishing it than through such a Vigilance Committee as I suggested in St. Paul's Church."

As to the present condition of the vigilantes the Bishop said nothing, except to repeat his declaration that he is not connected with the work of organizing them.

All was quiet on the surface about the headquarters of the Committee of Fifteen in the Park Row building yesterday. A railing has been built just inside the public entrance to the rooms, through which none may pass even to the ante-chamber, unless they have business which makes it necessary that they be admitted. Chairman Baldwin said that he had no further information for the public, and Robert Grier Monroe, the newly appointed counsel to the committee, said that he had not yet had time to enter actively upon his duties, as he had only been officially notified of his appointment in the morning.

"I understand the committee has a great deal of evidence," he said, "and I am now getting ready to take hold and sift it down."

Chairman Lewis Nixon of the Tammany Committee of Five was in Elizabethport all day yesterday, where he had his hands full with a small strike in his shipyards there, but M. Warley Platzek, counsel for the committee announced that the body had further evidence to lay before District Attorney Philbin, and said, as he has said almost daily for weeks, "In a few days there will be developments."

MR. COLER DEFENDS NEW YORK

What He Says About the Conditions Existing in This City.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Jan. 18.—Controller Bird S. Coler of New York spoke before the Outlook Club of this city to-night. His subject was "The City of New York." His address was a defense of what he called the greatest city in the world.

The prevailing opinion that New York was a wicked city, he said, was the result of the efforts of a few men whose intents are so good that to them everything beyond their own shadow is rottenness and black. From what was being said about New York it would appear she had a corrupt government, and an incompetent government, and that vice and crime flourished on the streets and everywhere. Every evil place, which flourished with or without police protection, each sink hole of crime, and moral degradation was being pointed out, and her own citizens seemed to vie with each other to see who could paint the fair city blackest.

But New York was growing and prospering. Her schools and her churches, her libraries and her charities, flourished and grew apace, faster than did vice. Every day and every hour brains and wealth poured into the city to help build up the city and enhance it. Her revenues aggregated three-quarters of a million each working day. She spent more for education, more for charity, more for public improvements, more for the benefit of the people than all the other cities of the county together. Her expenses approximated those of the National Government's, but nowhere in the world was so much good done and so many improvements obtained.

CONDITIONS IN NEW YORK.

Mr. Moss Discusses Them Before the Lafayette Literary Club.

Frank Moss made an address before the members of the Lafayette Literary Club connected with the Bethany Congregational Church, Tenth Avenue and Thirty-sixth Street, last night. The subject was "Civic Righteousness."

"Civic righteousness," said Mr. Moss, "does not mean blue laws and the unjust enforcement of the same. It means common sense. We should not leave it until election time to take interest in politics, but should at all times take interest in any movement for the better government of the city. There are many men in Tammany Hall now, not from choice, but because they have families to support.

"Among my visits to the east side I learned from people there that, in their opinion, there was no difference between the Government in Russia and in New York, except that it cost more here than there to bribe a police officer. Capt. Herlihy was put in a false position, because the real Captain of that district was Martin Engel. Six hours after W. S. Devery became Chief of Police, Herlihy was sent up to the 'goats' because he had tried to close a gambling house. It just happened that Herlihy had a 'run-in' with a minister who belonged to a powerful Church, and he complained to his Bishop."

If the city is ruled by a man three thousand miles away, Mr. Moss declared, it was because people are so much interested in earning their living that they do not attend to their duties as citizens, and leave it to the politicians.

YALE STUDENT A SUICIDE.

Body of Henry I. Root Discovered in New Haven.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 18.—The body of Henry I. Root, twenty years old, a sophomore in the academic department at Yale, was found in a vacant lot at the corner of Grove and Orange Streets this morning. He had been suffering from a nervous disorder. Last night he went out for a walk, and as he had not returned at midnight, searching parties of students who had learned of his disappearance started out. The police also assisted the missing man's brother, Dr. R. K. Root, an instructor in the university, in his search about the city. Early this morning the body was discovered on a sandheap not more than fifty feet from his brother's home. There was snow on the prostrate form, showing that the young man had fallen there in the evening before the snow began to fall.

Medical Examiner Bartlett examined the body and found a bottle of carbolic acid in a pocket. A small quantity had been removed, and there was the odor of the poison from the dead man's lips. Root was a student of exceptional ability, and ranked well in his classes. He was a graduate of Hillhouse High School, this city.

"It goes right to the spot" where the rasping cough hurts, and cures it—Joyne's Expectorant.—Adv.

PABST PORTICO STILL STANDS.

Commissioner Keating Does Not Carry Out His Threat.

James P. Keating, Commissioner of Highways, did not yesterday tear down and remove the portico and inclosed dining room balcony of the Pabst Hotel, which incumber the sidewalk in Forty-second Street, between Seventh Avenue and Broadway. Mr. Keating was not restrained by law from so acting in accordance with his ultimatum of Jan. 8. The time accorded to James B. Regan, the reputed proprietor of the hotel, to remove the portico, or to stipulate in writing that he would remove it, expired Thursday night. Mr. Keating, however, chose to regard a notice to show cause in Part I. of the Supreme Court next Wednesday why he should not be enjoined from interfering with the portico as a stay to any proceedings he may have threatened to take.

"I received the notice to show cause," said Mr. Keating, "and sent the papers to the Law Department, so that a Corporation Counsel may be in court on my behalf on Wednesday. I consider that the notice restrains me from acting in regard to the portico, and I shall not carry out my threat to take it down."

Corporation Counsel Whalen said that a member of his staff would be in court to represent the city on the hearing in the Regan injunction case.

"As to the order to show cause why Commissioner Keating should not be enjoined from interfering with the Pabst Hotel portico, the Commissioner has discretion and may regard it as a stay. I will not express an opinion on this. But I stand by my opinion, rendered the other day, as to his power to remove the incumbrance. Its illegality was established yesterday by the decision of Justice Martin."

Mr. Whalen said that he could not express an opinion on the bill introduced in the Legislature to legalize the Pabst Hotel portico, as he had not seen the bill. Assistant Corporation Counsel Thomas J. Creamer represents the Law Department at Albany. Mr. Whalen said he would be properly instructed in regard to the bill.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Adrian T. Kiernan, who is at the head of the Bureau of Penalties of the Law Department, did not yesterday receive notice of appeal by James B. Regan from the decision of Justice Martin in the Tenth District Municipal Court that the portico was an illegal incumbrance and imposing a fine of $5 for its maintenance on Aug. 3 last. This judgment establishes a precedent on which the Law Department may secure judgment for each day of maintenance since Aug. 3, 1900, or up to date 168 days and $840 penalties.

Judgment for only one day's violation was asked for on Thursday, so that the city might not be saddled with unnecessary costs in case of a reversal by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court.

MARRIED ON TOSS OF A COIN.

Two Justices Gamble for Privilege of Performing a Wedding Ceremony, Then Divide the Fee.

Justices of the Peace James K. Murphy and Charles P. Sweeney of Jersey City were standing at Erie and Thirteenth Streets Thursday night, when they were approached by a well-dressed couple, who asked to be directed to the nearest Justice.

"Well, you can take your choice between us," said Mr. Murphy, "for we are both Justices."

"Well, I guess we only need one," said the young woman.

"The fact is," said the man, "We merely wish to be married."

Then the Justices got into a wrangle as to which should perform the ceremony. Each claimed that he had been first addressed by the couple. Then the prospective bride proposed a compromise.

"As the proverb says marriage is a lottery," she said, "suppose you make it a matter of chance also, and toss a coin of some sort for the choice."

The Justices agreed, and the party adjourned to Justice Murphy's office, nearby, where the bridegroom tossed a half-dollar into the air.

"Head," cried Justice Murphy.

"All right," said Justice Sweeney. He had lost, as the coin fell head up.

The bride said she was Leoni Jones, and lived at the Navarro Hotel, Seventh Avenue and Thirty-eighth Street, Manhattan. The bridegroom described himself as Oscar P. Mills, formerly of Chicago, but said he had lived in Jersey City long enough to acquire a legal residence, so that a license would not be necessary. The ceremony was quickly performed, and Mills handed Murphy a roll of bills without counting them.

"Hold on," said Murphy, as he ran over the bills, "this is an unlucky fee. There's $13 here."

"Well," said Mills, "divide the money with your colleague. That will break the spell and make him as happy as you and the rest of us are."

This was done, and Mr. and Mrs. Mills boarded a trolley car and went to New York.

"TOMBS ANGEL" OVERCOME.

Mrs. Foster Faints After Securing a Girl Prisoner's Release.

Mrs. John A. Foster, the "Tombs Angel," after securing the release of Nora Donnelly, a girl charged with shoplifting, fainted in the corridor of the Court of General Sessions yesterday.

Mrs. Foster, whose attention was called to the prisoner by friends, made an earnest plea for clemency to Recorder Goff. The girl was charged with stealing two pairs of gold cuff buttons from a Twenty-third Street store just before Christmas. Her previous character was good. It was her first offense, and many friends interested themselves in her case. The cuff buttons were returned. The Recorder suspended sentence, and the girl, overjoyed, left the court.

Just without the door Mrs. Foster gave a little gasp and sank to the floor. The girl and Capt. Curry of the court squad took her to the matron's room, where she was revived and then sent to her home in a cab.

SOUGHT A COAT IN A WINDOW.

Detected by a Merchant, Sullivan Now Has Warmth in a Cell.

Thomas Sullivan's desire to be possessed of the best and warmest overcoat in the show window of Lambert & Co. of 41 Cortlandt Street landed him in the Tombs under bail of $2,000 yesterday, charged with attempted burglary. Thomas, overcoatless, was shivering in the chill Cortlandt Street breeze, eyeing the coats wistfully. He finally decided to obtain a coat marked $40. He furtively smashed the glass at the side and inserted a long stick with a hook at one end, reaching past coats of inferior quality for the highest priced article.

Henry Robinson, a Brooklyn merchant, who had suffered from similar depredations, on his way to business, perceived the peculiar actions of Sullivan and directed the attention of a policeman of the Church Street Station thereto. Sullivan's right hand was on the velvet collar of the silk-lined garment within the window when the left hand of the policeman reached the tagged collar of his own coat.

In the Centre Street Court he was recognized as an old offender. C. B. Chandler, representing the firm, which has been similarly robbed three times recently, appeared against Sullivan. Magistrate Mayo held the prisoner in $2,000 bail for trial.

Electrical World and Engineer.

The "twentieth century" initial number of The Electrical World and Engineer, a weekly paper published for several years past in this city, is made up of very many valuable and instructive articles devoted to its special subjects, not least attractive of which are contributions from fifteen able and intelligent representatives of electrical science and industry, giving in detail a history of the discoveries and the development of the science during the two centuries last past. The issue has over seventy pages devoted to general articles upon these and cognate subjects, but to the investigator into the recent development of electrical science the 160 pages of advertisements will not unlikely possess an even greater interest and convey quite as much valuable information. The advertisements should by no means be overlooked.

District Republican Club Dinner.

The third annual dinner of the Twenty-seventh Assembly District Republican Club will be held in the theatre of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club, Madison Avenue and Forty-fifth Street, Friday, March 15. The officers of the club are: President—Henry L. Stimson; Vice Presidents—Richard J. Lewis, J. Bayard Backus, and Otto T. Bannard; Treasurer—Henry W. Taft; Recording Secretary—Alderman Joseph Oatman; Corresponding Secretary—William C. Wilson.

What is made for this Winter is sold this Winter.

To sweep clean one must use new brooms—new prices.

Mostly $20, $22, $25 and $28 sack suits.

Out they go at $13 for sizes 32 to 34; $15 sizes 35 to 46.

BULLETIN NO. 1. More work for the $15 brooms: 300 dark blue cheviot suits—single and double breasted—were $25 and $27.

BULLETIN NO. 2. The price of some of our "Star" shirts is on the wane. $1.50 and $2 sort 85 cents.

BULLETIN NO. 3. Some ulsters, $15.

ROGERS, PEET & COMPANY.

258 Broadway, cor. Warren, and 7 and 9 Warren St.
569 Broadway, cor. Prince.
1260 Broadway, cor. 32d, and 54 West 33d St.

We fill orders by mail.

WHOLE TOWN TAKES HAND IN DRESSMAKER'S SUIT

Helena Residents Resent Aspersions Upon Their Climate.

Big Bundles of Laudatory Depositions Figure in Trial in This City for Damages Against an Arkansas Firm.

The action of Mrs. Susie A. Marshall against Simon Seelig of the firm of Seelig, Bruen & Co. of Helena, Ark., to recover $5,000 damages from him for having induced her to leave her business here and go to Helena, which is now on trial before Justice Blanchard and a jury in the Supreme Court, has developed from an ordinary action for damages into an effort of the citizens of Helena to defend the good name of their little town.

Great bundles of affidavits are now on file with the court, declaring Helena a perfect Garden of Eden. This all came about through one of the charges made in Mrs. Marshall's complaint.

After telling how little profit there was in the dressmaking business at Helena, she declared that the climate was "perfectly vile" and that malaria was prevalent. She further said that her health was injured by having to live there for three months in 1897. This complaint was served on the members of the firm at Helena, and that the citizens did not like this characterization of their town was shown when the defense began its answer to the charges yesterday.

"Mr. Clerk, let us have a bundle of those depositions," said the lawyer for the defense to the Clerk of Part IX. of the Supreme Court.

The Clerk picked up a roll about twelve inches in diameter and weighing several pounds and passed it over to the lawyer. Other bundles were still to come, but when Justice Blanchard saw the first one, he turned to the lawyer and said:

"Now, my good man, are you going to read all of those depositions?"

"Yes, if the court will allow us to do so," was the reply. "These are from the people of Helena, and will show that it is a wonderfully healthy city. There are only twenty or thirty in this bundle, and we have others, showing not only why the city is healthy, but also why the people there did not patronize Mrs. Marshall."

A compromise was finally made by which only a portion of each deposition will be read.

The first one produced was that of Mrs. Lena Becker. The deposition was in the form of answers to stipulated questions, which were answered according to numbers. One lawyer held the questions and read them, while the other read the corresponding number from the deposition. Mrs. Becker averred that Helena was the most healthful town in all Arkansas, if not in the entire United States, and, further, she did not know of a case of malaria there. As to Mrs. Marshall's dressmaking ability, she said that she had had Mrs. Marshall make her one dress, but that "it was such a failure that I never had her make another. The dress did not have any shape, fit, style, design, nor taste." A number of answers given by Mrs. Becker as to the healthfulness of Helena and as to dressmaking were ordered stricken out by the Justice, on the ground that she had not qualified as an expert.

The reading of the other depositions was postponed until Monday morning.

Prior to the reading of the depositions the husband of Mrs. Marshall, who had been to Arkansas with her, testified that Helena was very unhealthy, and, further, that his wife did not get the work agreed upon when Simon Seelig of the firm induced her to go to Arkansas.

Mrs. Alice M. Dowell told of Mrs. Marshall's ability as a dressmaker.

A number of New York dressmakers will be called on Monday to prove Mrs. Marshall's ability to make a certain number of dresses on an average in a certain time.

LAWYER CHANLER'S PROTEST.

Accuses Assistant District Attorney of Influencing His Prisoner Client.

Louis Stuyvesant Chanler made a vigorous protest to Recorder Goff yesterday when Samuel Johnson, charged with grand larceny, whom Mr. Chanler had been assigned to defend, entered a plea of guilty to petty larceny at the instance of the District Attorney, and without Mr. Chanler's knowledge.

"This is a most extraordinary proceeding," said Mr. Chanler. "I was assigned by the Court to defend this man. I talked with him and find that he has a good defense and stands a good chance of acquittal. Then, when I go away for a moment, an Assistant District Attorney visits the prisoner and tells him he had better enter a plea of guilty of petty larceny and get off with a light sentence. I request that the withdrawal of the plea be accepted and the case placed again on the calendar for trial."

Deputy Assistant District Attorney O'Connor stated to the Court that the prisoner had sent for him, and expressed a desire to plead guilty to petty larceny.

Recorder Goff directed the case to be placed on the calendar again.

For a Monument to Valley Forge Heroes

The Board of Managers of the New York State Daughters of the Revolution will give a card party at the Waldorf-Astoria on the 28th inst. In aid of a fund for a monument to the patriots who died at Valley Forge in the Winter of 1777-8. Major I. H. Todd of Port Kennedy, owner of a field at Valley Forge containing the grave of Capt. John Waterman, has offered the grave, with a sufficient amount of land surrounding, including an exit to the public road, to the General Society Daughters of the Revolution as a suitable site for the erection of the memorial.

BROADWAY AND 11TH ST.

JAMES McCREERY & CO.

Infant's Outfitting Dep't.

Nainsook and Cambric, LONG SLIPS and DRESSES. Flannel, Cambric or Nainsook SKIRTS. Flannel SACQUES, woolen SHAWLS and SHIRTS. BOOTEES, 65 cents.

All remaining stock at half price.

Cotton Sheets and Pillow Cases.

UTICA MILLS.

SHEETS.

Size,	54 x 90	Hemmed,	40c.	Hemstitched,	48c.
"	63 x 93 1-2	"	47c.	"	55c.
"	72 x 93 1-2	"	52c.	"	60c.
"	82 x 99	"	55c.	"	63c.
"	81 x 99	"	61c.	"	69c.
"	90 x 93 1-2	"	63c.	"	71c.
"	90 x 99	"	66c.	"	74c.

PILLOW CASES.

Size,	45 x 38 1-2	Hemmed,	14c.	Hemstitched,	18c
"	50 x 38 1-2	"	16c.	"	20c.
"	54 x 38 1-2	"	18c.	"	22c.

JAMES McCREERY & CO.,

BROADWAY AND 11TH STREET.

LEGAL NOTES.

ADVERSE POSSESSION.—George Stilwell, who owned a lot known as No. 39, on West Meadow Bank, in the late town of Gravesend, claimed that Francis Boyer and others, who owned Lot No. 38, adjoining, encroached upon his premises, and he brought suit in ejectment, in Kings County. The defense of adverse possession was interposed, and on the issue as to the true location of the division line, the jury on the first trial, over three years ago, gave judgment for the plaintiff. This was reversed because of the improper admission of evidence, and the defendants prevailed on the new trial. The Second Appellate Division unanimously upheld the verdict, holding that the defendant's proof that his predecessor in title had built a house upon the land in controversy more than twenty years before the commencement of the action, and that ever since that time until the commencement it had openly been used by him and his successor in title without question on the part of any one, was sufficient to require the issue of adverse possession to be submitted to the jury. The Court of Appeals has unanimously affirmed the judgment.

***

SHOCK FROM BROKEN OVERHEAD WIRE.—The Court of Appeals has recently, in several cases, upheld heavy judgments recovered in suits for damages for injuries resulting from electric shocks. One of these actions was brought by Rose T. O'Flaherty, who was awarded $7,500 from the Nassau Electric Railroad Company. She was passing along a street in Brooklyn, when she received a shock of electricity from a trolley wire used in connection with the railroad. The wire broke and fell to the ground, and the current from it shocked her person. The company, in addition to establishing the use of proper material and care in construction, showed it had a system of inspection; that the wire and supports were carefully examined at least every four days, and that the wire which broke, and its supports, were inspected the day before, and found to be in perfect order. The Appellate Division, in Brooklyn, which the Court of Appeals has unanimously affirmed, held that this did not overcome the presumption of negligence created by the falling of the wire, when the proof was by interested witnesses, and when it appeared that the company employed a device which, when properly constructed and in proper working order, would throw the current off the wire the moment it came in contact with the ground, as the jury would be authorized to find that this automatic device was at the time either not properly adjusted or not in proper working order. The Court held, also, that, while injuries resulting from fright alone did not authorize recovery, yet that physical injury accompanied with fright furnished a basis for recovery.

***

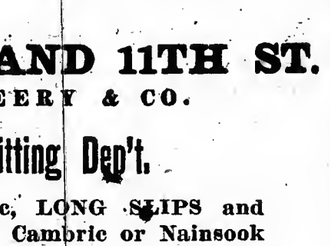
CITY MULCTED FOR DEATH FROM ELECTRIC SHOCK.—Edward A. Twist, nineteen years old, while crossing Mount Hope Avenue, in the City of Rochester, upon a dark evening, encountered a broken wire, hung within four feet of the ground, and was instantly killed. His father, Charles Twist, as administrator, in a suit against the City of Rochester, impleaded with the Rochester Gas and Electric Company, has secured an affirmance by the Court of Appeals of a judgment in his favor on a verdict for $5,000. Poles were maintained on this avenue by the Rochester Gas and Electric Company, on which wires were strung diagonally from one side to the other under a contract with the city by which the latter reserved the right to use one arm upon such poles "for any and all municipal purposes, and the placing of any and all telegraph, electric, or other wires owned or used by it," and to change or remove the poles where the public safety or convenience demanded it. After the erection of the poles the city authorized the Rochester Railroad Company to install the trolley system upon the avenue, the contract providing that the company should place guard wires to prevent the trolley wire coming into contact with electric, telephone, or other wires. More than a year before, the city had abandoned the patrol line for which its wire was used, and had left the wire disconnected and broken. Justice Ward, giving the unanimous opinion of the Appellate Division, which is sanctioned by the Court of Appeals, held that it could not be said the deceased was guilty of contributory negligence as matter of law because early in the evening he had been advised that there was a wire down at another point on the same street, in the absence of evidence that he knew that there was a loose or broken wire at the point where he was killed. The question of contributory negligence was one for the jury, and the evidence justified the verdict against the city. Although the act of an employe of the railroad company in pulling down the wire was doubtless a concurring cause of the accident, it could not be contended, the Court said, that the negligence of the city was not the proximate cause, as, had the patrol wire not fallen upon the trolley wire, the accident would not have occurred.

Mrs. Skatts's Public Bequests.

The will of Catherine Harsen Skatts, a cousin of John Harsen Rhoades, President of the Greenwich Savings Bank, was filed in the Surrogates' office yesterday. Under the will the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary receives $5,000; the Protestant Episcopal Church of Manchester Centre, Vt., $2,500; the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of New Jersey, $2,000, and the Home of St. Giles the Cripple, Brooklyn, $1,000. To her sisters, Eliza Ann Pratt and Joanna Henrietta Harsen Ten Broeck, the testatrix gives $20,000 each. The residue of the estate, the value of which is not mentioned, goes to her sister, Cornelia Augusta Benjamin. John Harsen and Lyman Rhoades are named as the executors.

The Woodburn's Maiden Trip.

The new steamship Woodburn, recently launched from the yards of the Blyth Shipbuilding Company, at Blyth, for the Tyne and Blyth Steamship Owning Company of Blyth and Newcastle, arrived from Huelva, Spain, yesterday. Her dimensions are: Length, 313 feet 6 inches; breadth, 43 feet 2 inches, and depth, 22 feet 4½ inches. Her tonnage, 1,448 net.



Comforting news for the low wardrobe and pocket.

Our well-fitting $22 to $42 Winter Raglans and Long Overcoats—newest Oxfords in all shades—now $15 and $22.50.

Men's Trousers "break" from $4.50 to $8, away down to $3, $4 and $5.

In All Our Stores.

Smith Gray & Co.,

NEW YORK STORE, BROADWAY, COR. 31ST ST. | BROOKLYN STORES. B'way & Bedford Av. Fulton St. & Flatbush Av.

HAMILTON COLLEGE ALUMNI.

Thirty-first Annual Reunion Held at the Savoy.

The thirty-first annual reunion and banquet of the New York Association of Hamilton College Alumni in commemoration of the one hundred and forty-third anniversary of the birth of Alexander Hamilton, was given last night in the Hotel Savoy, Fifty-ninth Street and Fifth Avenue. The banquet hall was tastefully decorated with American flags and the college colors.

George Seymour Hastings, '57, President of the alumni, presided, and around the board were gathered seventy-five members and invited guests. Among the latter were ex-School Commissioner Charles B. Hubbell, Supreme Court Judge Rumsey, Dr. Munn of Rochester, and W. A. Soper. At the right of Chairman Hastings sat Dr. W. W. Stryker, President of the college, and the Rev. Courtney H. Fenn, of the Class of '87, who was in Peking at the time of the outbreak of the Chinese troubles.

Russell Sage, to whom an invitation had been extended, sent word regretting his inability to be present owing to illness.

Chairman Hastings, in opening the after-dinner speechmaking, reviewed the history of the college from its starting point, he said, in 1850, down to the present time. The founder of our Alma Mater, Alexander Hamilton, was a far-seeing man," he said. "To-day it seems to be the habit of thought that the country is overstocked with colleges. In all, there are only 500 of them in all the States to supply the needs of higher education."

Dr. Stryker spoke of the pleasure it gave him to attend the dinners of the alumni and indulged in the hope that the fraternal feeling which exists between all Hamilton men will continue.

Dr. John Stewart White of Harvard University, who followed, told a number of funny stories and declared that to his personal knowledge Hamilton turns out the best teachers to be had anywhere.

The next speaker was the Rev. Dr. Bartlett of the class of '65. He said that Dr. Stryker was easily at the head of all college Presidents in the United States. He added that Gilliman and Elliot are at what he termed the "vanishing point" and that "Schurman is in the midway."

Short talks were delivered by the Rev. H. Courtney Fenn, Chauncey S. Truax, and Hamilton B. Tompkins. The following officers were elected for the current year:

President—John Henry Hewson; First Vice President—Henry Harper Benedict; Second Vice President—Charles A. Gardiner; Third Vice President—Chester S. Lord; Fourth Vice President—The Rev. James Hart Hoadley, D. D. All of the other officers were re-elected unanimously.

ACCUSED HUSBAND ASTONISHED.

Wife Had Free Access to His Money When He Drank.

According to testimony given in the Harlem Police Court yesterday the family of William McShane of 317 West One Hundred and Thirty-sixth Street lives very poorly indeed when the husband and father is sober. When McShane is handicapped with strong drink, however, the wife and children, it was learned, gained free access to his trousers pockets and lived on the fat of the land.

McShane was arraigned in court on the charge of beating his daughter Katherine. When asked what he had to say he replied:

"Your Honor, haven't I a right to chastise my own children?"

"No, you haven't, when they are girls and are over sixteen," replied Magistrate Zeller.

Then Mary Ann, another daughter, spoke up and said her father often beat her, and the mother, who was on the platform, said:

"Judge, he's a habitual drunkard."

"Does he support you properly?" asked the Magistrate.

"Not when he's sober, but when he's drunk he does as well as I want. When he's drunk I go through his pockets and spend all the money I find on myself and the family."

Magistrate Zeller, astonished, said:

"This is a case where it's better for a family when the father comes home drunk."

McShane was as much surprised as the Magistrate when he learned for the first time that his wife had been riding his pockets. Then he became indignant.

The Magistrate held the injured McShane in $300 bonds for his good behavior for a month.

"Yes, and I'll keep strictly sober, too," said the husband and father.

Your Golden Opportunity.

It means to you the chance to buy many of our this season's styles of Fine Overcoats and Suits at $15.00. Take advantage to-day of these great values.

$28.00, $25.00, and $22.00 Overcoats, $28.00, $25.00, $22.00 and $20.00 Suits, } $15.00.

Also some $18.00 and $16.00 Overcoats, at } $12.00.

And $7.00 and $6.00 Trousers, (fancy worsteds,) at } $5.00.

Boys' and Children's Suits and Overcoats in like proportion.

Our Furnishing Goods Department has 50-cent Half Hose—HALF PRICE, 25 cents.

Hackett, Carhart & Co.

3 BROADWAY Stores: Cor. 13th St. Cor. Canal St. Near Chambers St.

Stores Open This Evening.

FF FLINT'S FINE FURNITURE

COLONIAL DESIGNS

Express plainer than does tradition true-hearted ancestral hospitality. Our mahogany pieces give necessary warmth for Winter rooms; library tables with every writing convenience. Hall tables with compartments for wraps, etc., and so on might we cite our furnishings for dining-room, chamber, and parlor, and what is true of colonial may be said of our Flemish designs and those chaste conceptions of Masters Chippendale and Sheraton.

We offer especially low estimates now for cosey corners, dens, etc., besides Oriental rugs, cushions, bits of tapestry, and curtains, now greatly reduced to clear out before Spring stock arrives.

"BUY OF THE MAKER"

GEO. C. FLINT CO.

43 45 AND 47 WEST 23RD ST NEAR BROADWAY.

FACTORY 154 AND 156 WEST 19TH STREET

USE BRUMMELL'S

CELEBRATED COUGH DROPS.

Positively relieve Coughs and Colds and all irritation of the throat. Sold by Druggists everywhere.

Amusements.

METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE
GRAND OPERA SEASON 1900—1901
Under the direction of Mr. Maurice Grau.
This Afternoon, at 2—LE CID. (In French.) Mmes. Lucienne Bréval and Melba; MM. Jean and Ed. de Reszke, Sizes, and Plancon. Conductor, Mancinelli.
To-night, at 8, at Popular Prices—DER FLIEGENDE HOLLANDER. (The Flying Dutchman.) (In German.) Mmes. Gadski and Olitzka; MM. Dippel, Blass, Bars, and Bertram. Conductor, Damrosch.
Sun. Ev'g., Jan. 20, at 8:15.—Grand Popular Concert. In addition to a miscellaneous concert, Rossini's STABAT MATER will be performed. Soloists: Mmes. Nordica, Scheff, and Schumann-Heink; MM. Imbart de la Tour, Campanari, and Plancon, together with Entire Orchestra and Chorus. Conducter, Mr. Mancinelli.
Mon. Ev'g., Jan. 21, at 8:15—LA BOHEME. (In Italian.) Mmes. Melba and Scheff; MM. Saléza, Gilibert, Journet, and Campanari. Conductor, Mancinelli.
Wed. Ev'g, Jan. 23, at 8—DON GIOVANNI. (In Italian.) Mmes. Nordica, Scheff, and Gadski; MM. Ed. de Reszke, Salignac, Journet, and Scotti. Conductor, Mancinelli.
Fri. Ev'g, Jan. 25, at 8—TRISTAN UND ISOLDE. (In German.) Mmes. Ternina and Schumann-Heink; MM. Jean and Ed. de Reszke, Muhlmann, and Bispham. Conductor, Damrosch.
WEBER PIANOS USED.

DALY'S THEATRE. TUESDAY.
WALTER DAMROSCH
PIANO LECTURE RECITAL EXPLANATORY OF "DIE WALKURE".....AT 2:30.
Jan. 25—Siegfried. Jan. 29, Gotterdammerung.

CARNEGIE HALL
Boston Symphony Orchestra
Mr. Gericke Conductor.
This Afternoon at 2:30.
Programme:
TSCHAIKOWSKY, Symphony No. 5, in E minor, op. 64; CESAR FRANCK, Symphonic Variations for Piano and Orchestra; LISZT, Symphonic Poem, No. 3, "The Preludes." Soloist, Mr. Cortlandt Palmer
Tickets, $1.50 to 75c. On sale at box office and Tyson's (5th Av. Hotel) at reg. prices. Adm., 50c.

BROADWAY Theatre, 41st St. & B'way. Evgs., 8:15. Mat. To-day, 2:15.
JEFFERSON DE ANGELIS | LAST WEEK. A ROYAL ROGUE.
WEDNESDAY, JAN. 23RD.
JOHANN STRAUSS'S LATEST OPERETTA. VIENNA LIFE. (Wiener Blut.)
SEATS NOW ON SALE.

Hammerstein's VICTORIA 42d St., B'way and 7th Av. Evgs. 8:30. Matinee To-day 2:15. GENERAL ADMISSION, 50c.
LAST WEEK DRESSLER. Comedy Triumph. MISS PRINNT.
BEGINNING MONDAY, JAN. 21.
Mathews & Bulger In their Latest Vaudeville, "The Night of the 4th."
Big Musical Co., including WALTER JONES.

ST. NICHOLAS SKATING RINK
69 WEST 66TH ST.
Intercollegiate Hockey Championship
YALE VS. PRINCETON.
To-night, at 8:15 o'clock.
ADMISSION 50c. RESERVED SEATS 50c extra.
MUSIC. SKATES FREE.

MARQUIS DE SOUZA
The Phenomenal Portuguese Baritone. First appearance in N. Y. Carnegie Hall, Thur. Ev., Jan. 24 with SIEVEKING and Orchestra. Tickets at Schuberth's, Ty-son's, Ruliman's & box office. Management M. L. Pinkham & Gurney Thalberg.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN.
SIXTH NATIONAL EXHIBITION OF CYCLES, MOTOR CYCLES, LAST DAY.
Automobiles and Accessories.
Open 9 A. M. to 10:30 P. M. Adm., 50c.

CHILDREN'S THEATRE. THE NEW PLAY, The Clown & the Locket TO-DAY & EVERY WED. At. at 3, and Sat. Evg. at 8. CARNEGIE LYCEUM, 57th St. & 7th Av.

THE DEWEY E. 14th St. MATINEE TO-DAY. UTOPIAN BURLESQUERS. NEW LIVING PICTURES. To-morrow Night—Grand Concert, 25c., 50c.

WORLD IN WAX. EDEN MUSEE CINEMATOGRAPH. Xtra attractions. Charming Concerts.

14th Street Theatre, nr. 6th Av. Mts. Wed. & Sat.
MR. CHAUNCEY OLCOTT | GARRETT (all new songs) O'MAGH
In his greatest success.
MANHATTAN THEATRE. Evg., 8:15. Mats. 33d & B'way. Wed. & To-day.
THE BURGOMASTER.
GRAND Mat. To-day, 2:15. Next week Hearts are Trumps. Ward & Vokes.

Men's Cravats.

Made from imported silks,—rich heavy weaves,—numerous designs.
All fashionable shapes,—including large and small Four-in-Hands,—"Once Over" and Ascots.
Light and dark colors.
75 cents,
Value $1.50 to $2.00.

James McCreery & Co.,
Twenty-third Street.

Amusements.

EMPIRE THEATRE. B'way & 40th St. Evgs. 8:20. Matinées, 2:15.
"Decided success."—Herald. Mats. T'dy & Wed.
Empire Theatre Company in MRS. DANE'S DEFENSE

CHARLES FROHMAN'S CRITERION THEATRE, B'way and 44th St.
EVENINGS AT 8:15. MATINEE TO-DAY.
JULIA MARLOWE | WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER.

MADISON SQ. THEATRE, 24th St., nr. B'way. Mats. To-day and Wed. Evening, 8:30.
HERBERT KELCEY / EFFIE SHANNON | MY LADY DAINTY

GARRICK THEATRE, 35th St. & B'way. Evenings, 8:15. Mats., 2:15. Last 3 weeks. Mats. To-day and Wed.
WM. H. CRANE as DAVID HARUM.

GARDEN THEATRE—27th St. & Madison Av.
Mr. E. S. Willard | Mat T'dy—The Professor's Love Story | To-night—TOM PINCH.
Next Mon., Tues. & Wed. Evg.—The Middleman. Thurs. & Sat. Evgs.—Professor's Love Story.

BIJOU TO-NIGHT AT 8:15. Matinée To-day, 2:15.
AMELIA BINGHAM
Presents Her COMPANY in Clyde Fitch's Latest Success,
THE CLIMBERS
ENTHUSIASM OF THE PRESS.
TIMES—"Miss Bingham has gone first the right way to work to do something worth doing for the sake of Dramatic Art." "It is true to life, splendidly acted."
HERALD—"'The Climbers' is a success."
WORLD—"Thrilling modern play! None stronger has been written!"
EVE. SUN—"Amelia Bingham has covered herself with glory." "An American actress and an American dramatist scored a triumph."
SEATS NOW SELLING.

NATIONAL ACADEMY OF DESIGN.
76TH ANNUAL EXHIBITION.
American Fine Arts Galleries, 215 West 57th St., January 5 to February 2, inclusive.
9 A. M. to 6 P. M. 8 P. M. TO 10 P. M.
ADMISSION 25 CENTS.

DALY'S B'way & 30th, at 8:15. Dan'l Frohman, Mgr. Mats. Wed. & Sat. 2.
DANIEL FROHMAN'S COMPANY.
LADY HUNTWORTH'S EXPERIMENT.
Tuesday,

The New York Times.

SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS AND ART.

SUPPLEMENT TO THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Copyright, 1901.
THE NEW YORK TIMES COMPANY.

NEW YORK, SATURDAY, JANUARY 19, 1901. SIXTEEN PAGES.

CONTENTS.

Bentham and the Mills. Page.
The Influence They and the Other Utilitarians Had on English Life and Thought. Leslie Stephen's Book. Reviewed by JOSEPH JACOBS 33

Crawford.
His Volume on Sicily, Calabria, and Malta..... 42

"Old Ironsides."
Mr. Hollis's History of the Frigate Constitution 38

Stevenson.
His Ouida-like Romance "An Object of Pity" in a Limited Edition..... 37

Andre's Captors.
The Story as David Williams Told It.—Letters from Several Readers..... 36

Bismarck.
Extracts from Love Letters to His Fiancée and Wife 48

Municipal Art.
Criticisms from Gen. Rush C. Hawkins of the New Court House in Madison Square..... 34

Corinth.
Disclosures Which Recent Excavations Have Made 39

The Berbers.
Mr. Wilkin's Interesting Book of Travel..... 35

Professional Literature 40
"Higher" Schools Again..... 40
Colleges and Culture 40
Good and Bad Title Pages..... 40
London Punch Waking Up..... 40
Moses Coit Tyler's Death and the Needs of Cornell. 41
English Books Published Last Year 41
Emerson's Writings in "The Dial" 41
An Exhibition of William Morris's Work..... 38
Origin of New York Churches..... 42
Books That Are Never Written 35
Edward Everett Hale's Complete Works..... 43
Libraries of New York State..... 41
The Boston Authors' Club 42
Notes and News..... 44
Hints from the Mailbag 45
Topics of the Week..... 33
Queries and Answers 46
Books and Authors 44
Books Received 47

The New York Times
Saturday Review.

$1 Per Year.

Topics of the Week.

A series of importance to music lovers is in preparation at G. P. Putnam's Sons, under the general title of Musical Biographies. The subjects will be treated of by a coterie of writers, who, while authorities in regard to their respective themes, will avoid such technicalities and details as would only be intelligible to experts. The volumes so far arranged for are "The Life of Schumann," by Richard Aldrich, a musical critic whose work is better known to the music-loving public of this city than his name, and who is particularly well versed in the literature of music; "The Life of Wagner," by W. J. Henderson; "The Life of Schubert," by W. H. Hadow, and "The Life of Bach," by Sir Hubert Parry.

Beulah Marie Dix, author of "Hugh Gwyeth," has written a new novel of early Colonial life in New England, which will shortly be published by the Macmillan Company under the title of "The Making of Christopher Ferringham." The hero, from whom the story takes its title, is a dashing cavalier, who, for a twelvemonth diverts himself by shocking the sensitive feelings of the Puritan town of Meadowcreek, whose worthy inhabitants at length lose patience and divert themselves by putting Master Ferringham in the town stocks. It is then that the finer qualities in the man assert themselves, and he redeems himself in a way which brings into strong contrast the superior material of which he is made and the influences and motives which move his persecutors; in all of which there is a delicately conceived love story. It is a chronicle of the Massachusetts of John Endicott.

Most of the candid biographers of Capt. John Smith agree that, while his "True Relation of Such Occurrences and Accidents of Note as Hath Happened in Virginia" shows by the confirmation of contemporary documents, the writer to have been a really great colonizer, "The True Travels, Adventures, and Observations of Captain John Smith in Europe, Asia, Africa, and America from 1593 to 1629," prove him a writer of fiction of no mean order. But now comes an author who asserts that Smith was just what he represented himself to be, the greatest adventurer of his age, if not of all ages. Moreover, by an exhaustive examination of the archives of various historical so-her point. The name of this ardent rehabilitator of the mysterious yet ever-fascinating Captain is Miss Katherine Pearson Wood, and her book, which will embody the results of her investigations proving that truth is certainly as wonderful as fiction, in Smith's case, at least, will be published some time in March by Doubleday, Page & Co., under the undemonstrative title of "The Adventures of John Smith."

Something decidedly novel in the literature of the Philippines will be offered in March by Charles Scribner's Sons. It is neither history nor biography, nor is it controversial, but a simple tale of a most remarkable experience in which the commonplace has all the zest of romance. It will be entitled "A Prisoner Among the Filipinos," by Alfred Sonnichsen. The author, with a friend, was captured at Malolos, and for eleven months was kept a prisoner in the northern part of the island of Luzon. The daily experiences of prison life, the only relaxations of which were when new prisoners arrived or when attempts were made to escape, are set down with a simplicity and naïveté that are suggestive of an authentic Defoe.

The midwinter fiction number of The Century will be published in a fortnight, and, in addition to the serials, Miss Runkle's "Helmet of Navarre" and Hamlin Garland's "Her Mountain Lover," there will be nine short stories by such well-known writers as W. D. Howells, Ruth McEnery Stuart, Charles Battell Loomis, Chester Bailey Fernald, and Rebecca Harding Davis. Mr. Howells's tale, which will be entitled "At Third Hand," is a psychological inquiry. A feature of the number which will doubtless interest many is the story which won the prize in The Century's third annual competition among college graduates. This is entitled "An Old World Wooing," the scene of which is laid in Macedonia, by Adeline M. Jenney of the University of Wisconsin.

Following their work in ten volumes of "The World's Best Orations," Ferdinand P. Kaiser, whose New York representatives are J. F. Taylor & Co., have in preparation a series entitled "The World's Best Essays," which is very likely to have interest where the preceding work failed to captivate. As in the latter the editors of the forthcoming volumes are Justice David J. Brewer, assisted by Prof. Edward A. Allen, William Schuyler, and an advisory council, composed of well-known American and English men of letters. There will be at least one feature in the "Essays" which the "Orations" could hardly be said to possess, and that is the opportunity that will be offered for observing how the same problems were regarded at different periods by the great controversialists of the age.

Psychology is a science that has hardly as yet aroused popular interest, for the very reason that the line of demarkation between the pure scientist and the charlatan on this subject was never more finely drawn than it is to-day. But a further reason is found in the fact that there have been no really popular expositions of the science from a man of acknowledged authority, while the authoritative textbooks are couched in terms that have meaning only to the initiated. The latter condition was in part met by Prof. E. W. Scripture, Director of the Psychological Laboratory in Yale University, when he published not long ago, through G. P. Putnam's Sons, a volume entitled "Thinking, Feeling, Doing." With the new developments in the science, a new edition has become necessary, and the old book has been completely revised and enlarged, so that it is practically a new work. Concerning it the author says: "That it has been written specially for the people will, I hope, be taken as evidence of the attitude of the science in its desire to serve humanity."

In the Spring Charles Scribner's Sons will issue "The Old New York Frontier: Its Wars with Indians and Tories, Its Missionary Schools, Pioneers, and Land Titles, 1616-1800." The author, Francis W. Halsey of THE NEW YORK TIMES, through lectures on the subject, has shown that he has light to throw upon a most interesting period of Colonial and Revolutionary history, and at the same time has given to the red man of New York worthy attributes. Among the unpublished material which has been used in "The Old New York Frontier" are the Sir William Johnson manuscripts in the State Library, the Brant manuscripts in the Library of the Historical Society of Wisconsin, and extracts from George Clinton's papers in the State Library, now in course of publication by the State Historian, Mr. Hugh Hastings. These manuscripts comprise altogether about 100 volumes. A new map has also been prepared with due attention to the results of recent discoveries, together with fourteen full-page illustrations, including the reproduction of some rare Indian portraits in the Lenox Library. The volume will comprise 450 to 500 pages. The author began to write it nine years ago, but was not able to complete it until last Summer, when a personal visit to Wisconsin opened

BENTHAM AND THE MILLS.

The Influence They and the Other Utilitarians Had On English Life and Thought—

Leslie Stephen's Book.*

Reviewed for THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW by Joseph Jacobs.

Mr. Stephen's new book is a sequel to his "English Thought in the Eighteenth Century," one of the most solid contributions to English speculation made in the generation now passing away. This went over the whole range of ideas which were at the back of the different movements that constituted the "Age of Reason" and dealt with ethics and theology, economics and poetry, historiography and the natural sciences, so far as they contributed to the stream of thought and tendency in the eighteenth century. The present work in a measure is almost as wide in scope, but it does not profess to deal with the whole of English thought during the first two-thirds of the century just passed away. It only expounds and criticises that somewhat curious episode in English speculation dominated by the so-called Utilitarians.

This restriction of his subject has given a certain unity to his book lacking in the former production, which almost necessarily took the form of a series of nearly disconnected essays, reminding one of those "Hours in a Library" by which Mr. Leslie Stephen first became known to the English reading public. The Utilitarians may have been narrow, but their views were all the more definite and the more susceptible of detailed treatment. The episode connected with their name is forever closed, and therefore Mr. Stephen is enabled to give a more rounded survey of his subject than on the former occasion, where he left most of the threads of his discourse unfinished. Altogether his new book has more unity, consistency, and finish than his former work, and worthily crowns a life devoted in large measure to thought on the problems which engaged the attention of the English Utilitarians.

The fate of the Utilitarian school reminds one of the old Greek trilogies. It was in the main the creation of three men who dominated it for nearly a century. Jeremy Bentham founded the school, James Mill widened its scope, and John Stuart Mill made it for nearly a generation one of the predominant factors in English life and thought. Mr. Stephen, with a sense of almost dramatic propriety, devotes each of his three volumes to one of the protagonists in the Utilitarian trilogy. In each case he devotes considerable attention to the human side of his heroes, so far as they had a human side, and it is needless to say with what skill the former editor of the "Dictionary of National Biography" analyzes and criticises the somewhat bizarre specimens of humanity with which he has to deal. Mr. Stephen begins his exposition with an account of the social and political problems which the Utilitarians set themselves to solve. Here he sums up in luminous order the main conclusions reached in his former work, showing how the transition from an agricultural to a manufacturing condition had brought up problems which the aristocratic form of English government was incapable of meeting. The rationalism of the eighteenth century had undermined the traditional foundation of belief without supplying a substitute. Hume's destructive criticism had been transplanted to the Continent and had awakened Kant from his dogmatic slumber and led to the series of constructive philosophies culminating in Hegel. In England the Utilitarians attempted to found a new theory of things on the nihilism of Homer. Their efforts were foredoomed to failure. Mr. Stephen rather misses the insignificance of the affiliation of the Utilitarians to Hume, possibly because it does not become prominent until after the death of Bentham, the founder of the school, when his disciples, and especially James Mill, attempted to extend the principle made efficacious by Bentham in the sphere of law and morals to the whole of things knowable.

Jeremy Bentham was a scholastic born out of due time. He delighted in dichotomic distinctions, and was fortunate in having a field like that of English law, in which any system was better than the chaos into which it had fallen. His series of codifications formed a summa comparable in bulk and in a measure in intellectual grandeur to that of St. Thomas Aquinas in another field. But he would not have been of significance in the history of English thought merely because of his services in the philosophy of law. It was because he considered that all his legal work was the practical application of a great ethical principle that he became the leader of so influential a school. The phrase "The greatest happiness of the greatest number" was due to Beccaria, the Italian jurist, but the persistent application of it to ethical problems was due to Bentham. By it he became the father of both radicalism in politics and of individualism in ethology.

It was, however, James Mill who gave to Utilitarianism that wide scope which enables us to speak of it as a school of philosophy, first as Bentham's lieutenant, and afterward as a leader of a band of eager disciples, among whom the most eminent were George Grote, Ricardo, and his own son, John Stuart Mill. Mill was just the man to be the apostle of so narrow a creed as Utilitarianism. Clear-sighted, dogmatic, much of a prig, but a good deal of a man, he could say and state a truth so far as he saw it with vigor and effectiveness, and he may be regarded in a great measure as the father of English Radicalism. Mr. Stephen, in his second volume, gives a clear outline of James Mill's position with regard to the chief problems which were agitating Church, State, and Society at the early part of the nineteenth century. He makes his account more interesting by bringing in Mill's opponents, among whom Macaulay was by no means the least eminent, so that we have something of the excitement of watching an affray.

*ENGLISH UTILITARIANS. By Leslie Stephen. In three

But it is with John Stuart Mill in the third volume that Mr. Stephen comes closest to his subject. He himself was one of the band of young men who in the "sixties" came under Mill's influence, and helped for some time to shape English speculation on Utilitarian lines until the Scoto-Oxonian Hegel broke them down at the very centre of their position. In claiming that moral conduct aims at the "greatest happiness of the greatest number" Utilitarianism has to meet with two main difficulties known technically among the moralists as the Hedonic Calculus and the Hedonic Paradox. By the first is meant the difficulty of reckoning the happiness values of any particular course of conduct; each act has so many ramifications, influences the lives of others at so many points as well as one's own; and if we had to calculate the consequences of each act we should pass our life in a state of inertia. Besides this, there is the peculiar contrariety of human nature by which, if you aim at the pleasure of an act in and for itself, the pleasure vanishes in the grasping. John Stuart Mill saw these difficulties, and in attempting to meet them stepped beyond the narrow bounds of Utilitarian system and thus indirectly caused its downfall. By admitting a moral value to acts apart from consequences he gave so much away to the opposite school of intuitional moralists that the older Utilitarian position ceased to be effective.

But Mill's position in English speculation did not rest so much upon his ethical theories as upon their application in parts of his political economy and still more upon the intellectual foundation he attempted to give to Utilitarianism in his "Logic" and his "Examination of Hamilton." Here he took up, after centuries' interval, the old position of Hume, and by carrying it to its logical outcome prepared the way for the more recent attempt at constructive philosophy. Hume had proved that if we accept the somewhat crude analysis of mind made by Locke we do not exist. The two Mills, accepting this conclusion, attempted to lay down the laws by which we do not exist, and naturally their construction on these principles crumbled to the ground.

Meanwhile, however, their destructive criticism, as in Hume's case, was much more effective than their attempted construction, and the Utilitarian school did admirable work in clearing away the mass of traditional prejudice which had accumulated in Whiggish England. This practical work culminated in the career of the late Mr. Gladstone, and the present chaotic condition of Liberalism in England is in a large measure due to the fatal weakness of the Benthamite school—its want of constructive principle.

Such in brief outline was the career of the School of English Thought which Mr. Stephen has described with so much vigor in his weighty volumes. He himself would scarcely agree with such a summary as that sketched above. He is himself in a measure a disciple of the school, but Darwin and Herbert Spencer have intervened and given broader outlook to the problems of thought, and Mr. Stephen was one of the first to attempt to graft Darwinism upon the old Utilitarian stock. He himself recognizes that the Utilitarians failed in want of imaginative power and of historic sense. Some of the most interesting parts of his third volume are thus devoted to the opponents of the school, like Carlyle, Maurice, and Newman. It was on the field of theology that the Utilitarian methods were felt to fail most signally, and the sharp sarcasms of Carlyle were directed as much against Benthamites as against the Coleridgeans. Mr. Stephen's last pages deal with the unsatisfactory theology, if it can be so called, of the Utilitarians, and recognizes that religion must appeal to men's hearts and imagination in a manner which no school can do, appealing as the Utilitarians do only to men's interests. This is a weighty admission from a writer like Mr. Stephen, who has been first in the fight against dogmatic theology for the last thirty years, and may be taken as a sign of the times. Utilitarianism is dead and has no longer a prophet, but it has found an ideal historian in Mr. Leslie Stephen.

JOSEPH JACOBS.

MUNICIPAL ART.

Criticisms from Gen. Rush C. Hawkins of the New Court House in Madison Square.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

Ruskin, in a very few words, clearly defined the true value and uses of art when he wrote: "Every work of art states a true thing or adorns a serviceable one." The test embodied in this incisive statement applies to all manifestations of the artistic in their many and varied applications. Decorations, as a rule, are for the primary purpose of adorning the useful, and if they do not accomplish that purpose in a plainly intelligible and artistic manner they fall short of the object to be attained and have no honest right to exist. The useful is not dependent upon the ornamental, and can always fulfill its purpose without art accompaniments. And so it follows that decorations, occupying the position of unnecessary, luxurious adjuncts to the useful, must be truly artistic and expressive of an intelligible purpose.

A city is a useful aggregation of quantities and qualities which nations have recognized as necessities for carrying forward certain ideas and purposes involved in the promotion of commerce and civilization. And almost from the beginning of the historic period of each they have been ornamented with a variety of monuments intended to instruct, beautify, and attract. After public buildings of the more or less monumental sort, and massive monuments erected to commemorate historic incidents, came statues and groups in public places, and after them interior color decorations.

Many of the most notable works known to the history of the arts are purely decorative, and were so intended by the masters, who composed understandingly and worked with the skill of artists trained in the schools which produced accomplished workers in every department connected with the practice of the arts.

Our suddenly acquired enormous wealth has developed new conditions, and we no longer demand or care for the best, or even the good; anything in the way of the non-artistic will satisfy now, and, seemingly, the more wretched the "stuff" the better we like it. The demand is lively and the supply always equal to it. In the field of art we have raised up a new kind of workers, composed of men capable only of designing unpleasant-to-look-at structures, involved, inexpressive compositions in color without meaning, and pretended sculptural objects, of less value than the stone or metal used in their production. This is the sort of stuff which ignorant officials and committees of those who raise the money are ever on the alert to purchase.

In no country is the reign of materialism, the outgrowth of aggressive commercialism, more acutely oppressive than in our own. Its power is seen and felt in many directions, destroying the beautiful and encouraging the meretricious and glaringly ostentatious; and if we keep on the down grade at present speed for another quarter of a century the products of the arts will have become commercial commodities, to be delivered with as much advertising noise as possible after having been executed with special reference to time and dimensions. There will be less demand for artists to execute than now, and mechanics will be found equal to the supplying of all current demands for objects which will pass for works of art.

Formerly, we were more or less governed by intelligent desires demanding the artistic in compositions to be executed within the rules of directness, simplicity, and refined taste. Now the opposite has obtained, and too often resulted in absurd productions in every department of art, devoid of intelligent purpose, form, composition, or expression. In short we have encouraged into prominence a new industry, or rather developed to an unheard of extent a partially old one.

No sight for human observation could be more completely repulsive and discouraging than the general aspect of almost any one of our large cities. Their peace-destroying, lunacy promoting street railways; their ill-constructed, pile supported wharves; their huge inharmonious buildings, erected by piling upon each other expressionless masses of brick and mortar, stone and iron, which are often deluged with volcanic projections and overloaded with eruptions intended to be ornamental, which in a majority of instances were designed without reference to good taste or the simplest rules of art. These leading, malignantly odious features, together with a large assortment of lesser horrors, such as signboards of unprecedented abundance and vulgarity, sidewalks without uniformity, nerve-destroying pavements, lampposts of many varieties, all unpleasant to look upon, uneven front wall lines, filthy streets, inadequately shaded smaller parts, obtrusive and offensive letter boxes in inappropriate places, and scores of other unsightly objectives are far too numerous for cataloguing. All of these base qualities combined compose a maliciously beautyless whole not to be found in other countries, and prove conclusively the brutal power of great sums of money for the enforcement of vulgarity, want of honesty, and culture in municipal rule, and the absence of refinement and good taste on the part of entire municipal populations.

About thirty-five years ago the inflow of bad statues commenced in earnest and has continued with unabated force ever since. This new American industry was found to be profitable and has resulted in the erection of hundreds, and probably thousands, of single statues and groups of the pronounced foundryman sort which are to be seen in nearly all of our cities and in many of our villages and cemeteries throughout the whole country. Of these not more than one in fifty is in any respect artistic, and many all are positively inappropriate in their expression of a purpose and suggest only a want of knowledge on the part of committees, and total absence of artistic instinct on the part of the contractors who designed and executed them, and readiness of the sentimental well-intentioned patriotic to part with their money for objects which express no right to exist.

Unfortunately these obtrusive manifestations of bad taste have not stopped with the disfigurement of our streets and public places. The oncoming tide was destined to spread, and has reached the public building stage of which we possess at least one example well calculated to add despair to discouragement. The much praised Public Library at Washington, as to interior decoration, and the new Court House in New York, as to both exterior and interior work, must for many years to come remain unsurpassed for their bad eminence in the way of unartistic, inappropriate, and unharmonious decorations. A very large proportion of the interior color effects appear to be of the thoughtless ill-executed kind, often produced by men without adequate skill or power to compose, who were not able to distinguish between the purely decorative and the unrelated aesthetic, and throughout the whole there is no evidence of a well digested purpose, which ought to have enforced intelligible design and artistic execution. Fortunately there are a few exceptions to this sweeping charge.

The New York Court House would have been stronger in the partly monumental direction without its end columns, which are too ponderous for ornament and serve no useful purpose, having nothing of importance to support. Besides destroying symmetrical lines and simplicity of outline, their presence violates one of the elementary propositions which were so characteristic in monumental Greek architecture. But, unlike the large majority of our public structures, it does not disgrace us, and we ought to be grateful to its designer for not having added another palpable horror to those which already afflict our ill-fated city.

When we first behold that structure we begin to try to ascertain the object of its existence, and are soon driven to the conclusion that it was intended as an opportunity for a wholesale display of commercial images; which after mature observation we come to regard as the culmination of the viciously inartistic. Lower down in the scale of cheeky humbuggery of pretended art productions we can never descend. To assert that they are fair specimens of the stone cutter's work would be a libel upon the honest and unpretentious men who work in that field of useful industry. If they were fairly acceptable from an art standpoint, still there are more than twice as many as there ought to be; and there being a superabundance of statues, ought to have saved us the further infliction of the two groups which top off the walls and contribute more than their share to the general disturbance. The pediment group on the Twenty-fifth Street side is not less expressionless than the rest, but being larger is more bewildering. The chief figures in it are innocent of any appearance of flexible anatomy, and seem to bear no evidence of having been modeled from beings who had possessed life and power to move. To any kind of observer—ignorant or learned—it appears to be a meaningless collection of stone images.

We would advise the taxpayers who may desire to learn something about this municipal art outbreak to pay a visit to this "Temple of Justice," where they would come in immediate contact with two statues near the main entrance. One is labeled "Wisdom," and the other is intended to represent "Force." The former is so hopelessly outside of all that is artistic and so obtrusively inartistic as to place it beyond the power of criticism, and no words are capable of constructing an excuse for its existence. The calling of it "Wisdom" is sound without sense. It borders on the weak grotesque and represents confusion without force. The other is nothing more than a pretentious, expressionless, inoffensive irregular block of marble which might have been hodge-podged together from out of any book of engravings of monumental sculptural art. In quality it is fat, flabby, puffy, and expressionless, and suggests little else than beef and beer.

All that can be said of the many tons of wretched stuff which is supposed to adorn the outside of this unfortunate structure is, that the most of it is in no sense artistic or appropriately suggestive, but is essentially commercial and might properly be rated and quoted on the floor of an exchange devoted to dealings in stone.

As soon as we pass through the main entrance we discover upon the walls of the vestibule, where they meet the ceiling, a wide band of decorative work in color. It takes but little observation of this conspicuous manifestation to reveal a complicated mixture of colors and a confusion of ideas; the figures are numerous, and as to color scheme and drawing are of the Christmas toy book sort; and in their relations to correct anatomical expression only crude studies of inartistically arranged drapery, with but little indication of having even a semblance of the human figure within their folds. At its best this work is only in evidence as an attempt to do something, but that something, to the average observer, must remain a mystery. It is more inappropriate than some sort of stencil work would be; for that is often harmless and sometimes a little artistic.

From the vestibule, afflicted with its ponderous, vulgarly offensive, and ill-designed furniture, with its garish ceiling and puzzling decorations, we proceed to the courtroom, which, if considered collectively as to its make-up, may be set down as the grand piece de resistance of the whole of this mighty effort of the decorative monumental and decorative work. In this room the painters, gilders, glass workers, glassmakers and wood carvers have mounted high in their aspirations and left no vacant space on ceiling or wall for weary eyes to rest upon. Even the iron beams that support the floor above them are covered with gilding and ornamented with several different designs in moldings, all of the commonplace and every-day variety. The ceiling spaces between them are heavily gilt, and also ornamented with moldings and other meaningless designs in stucco. The side walls come in for their share of meretricious defacement, but in some respects are possibly not quite so glaringly offensive as the ceiling.

What has been written of this room is only a prelude—a sort of curtain-raiser—before the meat of the feast to come, which is to be found in the three large panels at the east end of the room. These are compositions in color which only the most learned in art matters, possibly, could understand. If they are intended to be allegorical, what is the allegory to be suggested or expressed? If meant to be symbolical, what do they symbolize? And if historical, what incidents or scenes do they represent? The right and left panels show two large wall spaces completely covered, even to the corners, with figures of men, women, and children, in confused groups, devoid of dignity and, seemingly, of intelligible purpose or design. In each the dominant idea seems to have been to cover space without regard to appropriateness of composition. In these works the proprieties involved could not have been consulted. A room for the higher courts, of all others, where momentous questions of grave importance are often considered, ought in all respects to be arranged with befitting essentials and, if decorated, with dignified object lessons suggesting appropriate historical events or character of uses. The middle panel is less "ambitious" than the others, is executed in a different scheme of color, and not so crowded with a confused mass of figures, and by some judges is regarded as an effort in the right direction. For rank inappropriateness of design, or rather want of design as to decoration, and for complete vulgarity of expression this unfortunate room, worked up, it is said, at an almost unprecedented cost, stands unrivaled as a monument of inartistic bad eminence.

If this building had been left as it came from the hands of the builders, it would have been exceptionally appropriate for the purpose for which it was designed; substantial as to construction and simple in outline, it possessed the satisfactory characteristics and was in no sense trifling or bordering on the fantastic. The attempt to adorn by overloading with these uncalled for images and paintings has completely changed its character, and to a considerable extent rendered a fairly good work ridiculous.

A few years ago, in accordance with the law, there was created a commission composed of sculptors, artists, and experts. This organization is clothed with absolute power to confirm or reject propositions connected with art productions for public use in Greater New York. It follows as a matter of course that this Court House art had to be passed upon by this honorable body of safety experts, and its existence proves official confirmation. This being a fact, of what use is this body of experts—as a preventive?

The seemingly self-evident objections to these Court House decorations may be formulated thus:

1. In quantity, outside and in, there is fully four times as much as the building ought to carry.

2. A very small proportion, if any, is of a high order of merit as to intelligible expression or artistic execution.

3. Neither the sculptural nor color parts show appreciation of the serious proprieties involved, nor do they to the average observer express the character and use of the structure.

4. Considered as a whole, the decorations detract from the dignity and all that is appropriately expressive in the building, and in some respects go far toward making the whole ridiculous.

5. The many thousands of dollars so uselessly wasted for meretricious and uncalled-for ornamentation was an inexcusable squandering of public money.

In all parts of our country we have adopted an original formula for application to the administration of our art affairs. It is like this: If Jacob wants a steamship and has to employ an expert to examine and purchase, he employs Jeremiah, the stocking weaver, to do the business. Of course Jacob knows absolutely nothing about steamships, may never have seen one, but Jeremiah, who is as ignorant as himself, purchases, and Jacob, who pays, gets the small end of the bargain. The committees appointed usually adopt the contract custom of advertising for bids to be based upon samples of work, instead of selecting a sculptor of ability and reputation and working with him to assist in making him understand what is wanted.

At this time we have in existence a singularly apt illustration to prove the truth of the foregoing. A large fund is to be appropriated for a monumental memorial to commemorate one of the saddest incidents in our history. At the head of the committee to pass upon the art value and the fitness of the proposed work is a conspicuous citizen who often boasts of the fact that he was responsible for a grotesque statue now in Central Park of a noted American, which is one of the worst specimens of our bronze images. As a work of art it is hopelessly intolerable. If the body of this committee is made up of such material as its head, we can easily foretell the sort of an art production there is in store for us.

This is only one example of our way of how not to do it, but twenty others could be easily recalled, if necessary, to prove the rule.

RUSH C. HAWKINS.

New York, Jan. 10, 1901.

THE BERBERS.

Mr. Wilkin's Interesting Book of Travel.*

The interest in this book of Anthony Wilkin among the Berbers of Algeria is largely in its being a record of travels in a comparatively unexplored region of Algeria and among a race measurably removed from the Arabs, Moors, Turks, and Jews, with whom we are more or less familiar. The Berbers call themselves "noble" and descendants of a mighty race, whose culture once spread from the Atlantic to the Red Sea. There are still to be found among them the vestiges of the arts, the spirit of conquest, and the capacity of self-government, which, if developed, would make them a great nation. They inhabit chiefly the fastnesses of Aurés, and are distinguished by a fair complexion, blue eyes, and light hair. Of this tribe, Mr. Wilkin observes, there is much good to be said. They are white men and in general act like white men. Among them the virtues of honesty, hospitality, and good nature are conspicuous. It is not their misfortune alone that the lowlands know them no more, nor their misfortune only that Mohammedanism has debarred them from entering, as they would otherwise have entered, on the path of European progress and liberality; it is the misfortune of the whole civilized world.

Since the occupation of the country by the French in 1830, through every change of Government and party, at a cost of much blood and money, the great work of cleansing one of the filthiest of Augean stables of the world has been steadily going on, unaided by any other power. No millions of money, no millions of sturdy colonists have rewarded these efforts. In return it enjoys simply a sense of possession, a colony, and the consciousness of a great task well begun. It is strange to find within forty-eight hours' ride of London a country into which few British tourists have entered and few Americans. Algiers they know, Tunis they know, Kabylia they possibly have heard of; of the rest they know nothing, indeed, remarks Mr. Wilkin; "in more than one village we find ourselves the first English visitors, while in many the women and children had rarely seen a European of any kind."

The nomad Arabs and Turks Mr. Wilkin found to be a different order of beings—vicious, dishonest, indolent, and unprogressive. They would burn a mile of forest to provide a few acres of bad pasturage for their flock.

The scenery through which they passed Mr. Wilkin describes as a cross between the most uninteresting tracts of Scotland and Spain, but from our point of view the description is not unlike Pueblo, Mexico, or the desert and mountain passes of Arizona, the flora, however, being more varied and beautiful. At Biskra they visited the Château Landon, with its salons. The garden was their delight. Here they found every kind of Algerian tree and shrub and flower which can stand a moderate amount of heat, lining walks smooth and hard and white, of the stamped, rolled mud of the oasis. Not a dead leaf is to be seen, scarcely a speck of dust. Masses of bangainvillea, purple and scarlet, climbed over a little pavilion in the centre of the garden, producing an effect more bizarre than one could have wished. Winding alleys dived beneath masses of tropical vegetation, out of whose cool shades came the merry tinkle and splash of running streams. Hedges of geraniums and cacti recalled Southern Europe. "Groves of New Guinea hibiscus showered their red blossoms at our feet; orange and lemon trees filled the air with delightful odors of the south of Spain. Bamboo thickets, interwoven with a thick undergrowth of fan palms and overtopped by date and even cocoanut trees, bordered patches of Javanese paddy and Alpine barley and wheat. South Sea bananas, Syrian figs, golden mamie apples, grew in profusion everywhere. Surely a more wonderful mixture of flora is scarcely to be found in any other single spot, indeed an earthly paradise."

Finally they reached Lambèsa, the seat of the Government of the mixed Commune of Aurés, and also an important Roman military station. The little township is full of Roman remains, the most important of which is the Praetorium. With the exception of the roof, it is little injured by the lapse of centuries. Inside are displayed many statues and fragments of statues. Close by are also found remains of extensive baths and one of the gates of the city. At Timegad, however, is seen the Algerian Pompeii, said to be the most complete Roman colonial town in existence. On approaching Timegad, a few miles further on, just outside of the town the travelers found a Byzantine font whose curtain walls and towers appeared to have suffered little from the hands of man or the gentler violence of nature. Soon they were ambling as the ancients ambled over a broad, roughly paved street, with sidewalks and chariot ruts just as they were 1,500 years ago. On the right were baths—an enormous building with floors still covered with mosaics and tiles; beneath, a labyrinth of furnaces, flues, and pipes.

On the highest part of the city stands the Temple of Jupiter, of which two great columns alone remain erect—admirable more for their size than for their beauty. A forest of smaller columns and pillars rises from the lower town. In the forum were some spiral Byzantine decorations. The theatre is almost perfect. Tiers of seats built on the hillside, stage doors—all are there. Unlike Pompeii, Timegad has yielded little which sheds any light on the life of its former inhabitants. The shops are there, the bodegas also are there, but no traces of the wares or the amphorae that delighted the hearts of the citizens; no frescoes and wall paintings, no worthy statues, no marble fountains and paintings speaking of wealth and refinement have been found.

Timegael seems to have been an eminently respectable bourgeois township. The museum, exceedingly poor and nothing in it demanding not more than a passing notice. We have enlarged and quoted freely from Mr. Wilkins's account of his visit to these relics of the Roman occupation of this environment, as they are new to the ordinary reader and add much to our information of the early history of the Dark Continent when overrun by the Romans, and the chief object of his exploration. Mr. Wilkins devotes his concluding chapter to the Algerian anti-Semitism, which is very marked. He observes that the Arabs with whom he came in contact were thieves, apparently incapable of an honest commercial transaction, and in most part fools. The Jews, for all we know, may be thieves, too, but those we met were not so, but it was obvious that whatever their commercial morality, it was not worse than the Arabs, and their commercial capacity one thousand times better. Under these circumstances the Arab goes to the wall, and is naturally incensed against the apparent author of his misfortunes. Add to jealousy the prejudice excited by religious differences and we have two very good reasons why the Arab and the worse class of French hate the Jews. But for the present it is a sorry sight to contemplate this reckless hatred, this contempt of a race, which, whatever its faults, is at least among the best elements of the country.

In this narrative of travel among the Berbers, Mr. Wilkins has imparted a vast amount of information, which cannot fail to awaken a deep interest in a country making greater strides in its civilization and material progress than at any time in its history, and to which the eyes of the world are now, in a peculiar manner, thoughtfully and hopefully directed. The volume is an octavo of 262 pages, profusely illustrated by photographic views taken on the spot by the author, which serves greatly to interest and elucidate the text.

J. W. H.

*AMONG THE BERBERS OF ALGERIA. By Anthony Wilkin, Author of "On the Nile With a Camera." New York: Cassell and Company, Limited. $4

Books That Are Never Written.

Could we but perpetuate them, those books that are never written, what a garden of culture we should have! What rare, sweet flowers of thought have been "born to blush unseen and waste their sweetness on the desert air."

O reader, had you in your mind
Such stores as silent thought can bring,
O gentle reader! you would find
A tale in everything.

And so found Wordsworth. And so may we all find, whose souls are only open to the beautiful in the earth about us. Why take other men's thought when you can have your own, in a first edition and the only copy to be had?

A book fulfills its true mission only when it leads to higher, rarer, more beautiful thoughts than those it contains, when it creates in our minds its sequel, too delicate, too subtle, too exquisitely beautiful to form itself into clumsy phrases and clauses. These are the books worth reading, worth studying, worth cherishing—for, with every fresh reference to their unwritten pages is added a wider, deeper joy in the birth of a new and more perfect thought. A withered rose is it? Ah,

To me the meanest flower that blows can give Thoughts that do often lie too deep for teors,

—and for words, too, one might add.

We are not all possessed of the gift of expression, but upon all who think and feel has been bestowed the exquisite pleasure of creating beautiful thoughts, which, like flowers, only require cultivation to give a rare exotic perfume. And so that book which has sown the seed for a single new thought-flower is the one that is most satisfying, the one that should most endear itself to us; and, we are inclined to think, the most beautiful thoughts are those tinged with melancholy.

Go, you may call it madness, folly—
You shall not chase my gloom away;
There's such a charm in melancholy,
I would not, if I could, be gay.

There is an oppression about real sorrow; but the gentle spirit of Melancholy, oval faced and pensive, holds the keys to beautiful thought-gardens, and the price of entrance is a tear. Not the salt tear of misery, not the scalding tear of anger, nor yet the bitter tears of heartaches; but the tender, gentle drops that overflow from a heart too full of joy for laughter, even as Barrie's "little wells of gladness," which shone so brightly in poor Grizel's eyes. And so we linger longest in that part of the thought-garden where blossom the pansy and the heartsease, the cypress and the lily, and the dark, passionate, tender, and loving rose.

Most poets have found this out for themselves. All of Wordsworth's work is tinged with a delicate undercurrent of sadness that sings itself into our souls with a persistence that defies lighter moods. Milton, too, learned the secret of melancholy when he wrote:

Sweet bird, that shun'st the noise of folly,
Most musical, most melancholy.

Surely Tennyson sang most sweetly when walking in the shadow, and what has Longfellow ever written more exquisitely beautiful than "The Day is Done." Hood's eyes shone brightest when a tear glistened in their corners, and we love him best for having discovered that

There is even a happiness
That makes the heart afraid.

And so, when the book drops idly from listless hands, and minds begin to grope about in the garden of thought, to dream the golden dreams that waking fancy weaves, the dim eye and quivering lip, the gentle sigh, and vague and melancholy smile, are not the tokens of "gnawing grief," but rather the signs of joy too deep for mirth.

Military Reminiscences of the Civil War

By JACOB DOLSON COX,

Formerly Major-General, 23d Army Corps.

In two volumes. Vol. I., pp. xvii., 549; Vol. II., pp. xvi., 596. 8vo. $6.00 net.

The N. Y. Evening Post.

considers Gen. Cox "easily the highest authority with reference to the events and the strategy of the Civil War. He maintained to the end the vigor of thought and expression which marked his prime. His fairness was remarkable for a nature so hearty as to be almost fervid."

From "The World's Work."

"Maj.-Gen. Jacob Dolson Cox had completed the preparation of this important contribution to our knowledge of the Civil War before his death last summer. His accurate, painstaking, just, and well-written narrative covers its whole period, and is of the first value to the student of its history."

From "The Chicago Tribune."

"The work is one of the most thoughtful and valuable of the many personal narratives which the active participants in the Civil War have produced. General Cox's book is good literature as well as true history. His narrative is by no means confined to his own experiences, though these run through it and furnish a strong element of personal interest."

Charles Scribner's Sons, N. Y.

McClure, Phillips & Co.

Beg to announce the Publication of

The Philippines: The War and the People

BEING A RECORD OF PERSONAL OBSERVATIONS AND EXPERIENCES

By Albert G. Robinson.

The auther spent several months among the people of the Philippines studying their conditions and manner of life. He visited many parts of the islands and has described in vigorous and vivid language the scenes in our new possessions and the character of the people living there. The book will appeal directly to Americans as being the best popular account of the recent history of the islands and of the present conditions existing there.

Cloth, 12mo, $2.00.

McClure, Phillips & Co. Publishers, New York.

QUINCY ADAMS SAWYER AND Mason's Corner Folks.

"The Village Gossips wondered who he was, what he was, what he came for, and how long he intended to stay."

The Book Everybody Is Reading and Talking About

"THE BEST NEW ENGLAND STORY EVER WRITTEN."

The First Edition Issued Nov. 5th last, and the Novel is already

IN ITS 65TH THOUSAND,

BEATING ALL RECORDS FOR QUICK SALES.

AT ALL BOOK SELLERS.

12mo. Bound in Cloth. Sent postpaid on receipt of $1.50.

In Preparation, "BLENNERHASSETT" by the same author, CHARLES FELTON PIDGIN.

C. M. CLARK PUB. CO., Boston, Mass.

MANUSCRIPTS CAREFULLY REVISED; errors of style and grammar corrected; accurate proof reading; typewriting. Alpha, Box 128 Times.

BOOKS—ALL OUT-OF-PRINT BOOKS supplied; state wants. BAKER'S GREAT BOOKSHOP, John Bright St., Birmingham, England.

BOOKS BOUGHT, SOLD, AND EXCHANGED.—Write for catalogue. DAVIS BOOKSTORE, 1,339 Broadway, near 35th St.

FOR SALE—Times Lit. Review, years '96, '97, '98. Review, Box 128 Times Office.

ANDRÉ'S CAPTORS.

The Story as David Williams Told It.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

In THE SATURDAY REVIEW of Jan. 2 Judge Dykman contributes a most interesting account of the main facts connected with the capture of Major André in the War of the Revolution.

In support of the claims of Judge Dykman, which harmonize with those of the principal American historians, that the chief credit of that arrest belongs to John Paulding, David Williams, and Isaac Van Wart, may I ask the favor of submitting the following account from one of the chief actors in the scene? In a book now in my possession, entitled "Historical Collections of the State of New York," published by Joseph Barbour, New Haven, in 1840, is the following on Page 588:

The annexed account or the taking of André, is from a manuscript in the possession of Isaac H. Tiffany of Fultonville, being the notes of a personal conversation which he had with David Williams, one of the actors in the scene, at Broome, Schoharie County, Feb. 13, 1817.

Williams, Van Wart, and Paulding (Williams, aged between twenty-two and twenty-three, and the other two being younger,) were going to see some relations twenty miles below. The three were seated beside the road in the bushes amusing themselves at cards, when their attention was arrested by the galloping of a horse. On approaching the road they saw a gentleman riding toward them seated on a large brown horse, which was afterward observed to have marked on the near shoulder the initials U. S. A. The rider was a light, trim-built man, about 5 feet 7 inches in height, with a bold military countenance and dark eyes, and was dressed in a round hat, blue surtout, crimson coat, with pantaloons and vest of nankeen. As he neared them the three cocked their muskets and aimed at the rider, who immediately checked his horse, and the following conversation ensued:

André—Gentlemen, I hope you are of our party!

Paulding—What party?

André—The lower party.

Paulding—We are.

André—I am a British officer; I have been up in the country on particular business, and would not wish to be detained a single moment.

He thereupon pulled out a gold watch and exhibited it as an evidence that he was a gentleman, and returned it again to his fob. Paulding thereupon remarked, "We are Americans."

André—God bless my soul! a man must do anything to get along. I am a Continental officer, going down to Dobbs Ferry to get information from below.

André then drew out and presented a pass from Gen. Arnold, in which was the assumed name of John Anderson. Seizing hold upon the reins of the horse, they ordered him to dismount. André exclaimed, "You will bring yourself into trouble!" "We care not for that," was the reply. They took him down ten or fifteen rods beside a run of water, and Williams proceeded to search the hat, coat, vest, shirt, and pantaloons, in which they found $80 in Continental money, and at last ordered him to take off his boots. At this he changed color. Williams drew off the left boot first, and Paulding, seizing it, exclaimed, "My God! here it is!" In it three half sheets of written paper were found enveloped by a half sheet, marked, "Contents West Point," Paulding again exclaimed, "My God! he's a spy!" On pulling off the other boot a similar package was found.

André was now allowed to dress, and they marched him across the road into the field about twenty rods. The young men winked to each other to make further discoveries, and inquired from whom he got the papers. "Of a man at Pine's Bridge, a stranger to me," replied André. He then offered them for his liberty his horse and equipage, watch, and 100 guineas. This they refused to take unless he informed them where he obtained the manuscript. He refused to comply, but again offered his horse, equipage, and 1,000 guineas. They were firm in their denial, and André increased his offer to 10,000 guineas and as many dry goods as they wished, which should be deposited in any place desired—that they might keep him and send some one to New York with his order, so that they could obtain them unmolested. To this they replied that "it did not signify for him to make any offer, for he should not go." They then proceeded to the nearest military station, which was at North Castle, about twelve miles distant. On the way André gave them his watch, telling them that "it was a prize." On delivering him to Col. Jamieson, the commanding officer, that gentleman enjoined the strictest secrecy, at the same time expressing an opinion that there were others doubtless concerned in the plot. Major Tallmadge, who had commanded a guard, received André at Col. Jamieson's quarters, and afterward, with about twenty men, conducted him to Col. Sheldon, at Salem. The three accompanied André part of the way, and then left. During the night Tallmadge caused André to be tied to a tree at Comyen Hill. From Salem he was conveyed to West Point, and from there to Tappan.

Williams, Paulding, and Van Wart stood within the ring when André was hung. When the officer informed him that his time had nearly expired, and inquired if he had anything to say, he answered, "Nothing but for them to witness to the world that he died like a brave man." The hangman, who was painted black, offered to put on the noose. "Take off your black hands!" said André; then, putting on the noose himself, took out his handkerchief, tied it on, drew it up, bowed with a smile to his acquaintances, and died.

David Williams, now (Feb. 13, 1817,) aged sixty-one, was born at Tarrytown of Dutch extraction, and speaks that language. Paulding and Van Wart were also Dutch; neither of the three spoke English well. Congress gave each a farm in Westchester County of the value of £500, an annuity of $200 through life, together with an elegant silver medal, on one side of which was the inscription, "Fidelity," and on the reverse the motto, "Amor patriae vincit," (the love of country conquers.)

This narrative, given by one of the principals thirty-seven years later, in which Mr. Williams with becoming modesty accords the leading place to John Paulding, is explicit and well connected, and was published and given to the public within the lifetime of many who were familiar with all the incidents connected with the event. It is an interesting item of our history, and bears the stamp of truthfulness in every line. It will doubtless be accepted as additional evidence that the substantial honors conferred upon the three patriots named by the Government, and confirmed on the well-deserved monument reared to their memory, were not misapplied, and that all attempts to detract from the glory of their deed is of comparatively recent date, and must end in failure.

My mother has often told the story of the capture of Major André as it was told to her by her mother, who was a daughter of John Paulding, and the account coincides with the facts given by Judge Dykman and those which I have quoted above.

LOUISE PAULDING BENEDICT.

Jersey City, N. J., Jan. 18, 1901.

Polly Reed's Part in the Capture.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

I have read with great interest in THE SATURDAY REVIEW of the 12th inst. the criticism of Judge Dykman of the new history of Westchester County, recently published by the New York History Company, regarding the account of the capture of Major John André. There seems to be a part in the capture of the ill-fated André which has never found its way into any history of that very important event of the American Revolution. The real captor of Major André, or, in other words, the person who put the three patriots, Paulding, Williams, and Van Wart, on the track of the Major, has never received any recognition of the very prominent part played by her in that affair, and, being a direct descendant of Polly Reed, she being my great-grandmother, I deem it but just and right (although at a very late day) that she should get full credit for her action in the matter.

Isaac Reed kept a small tavern at Sleepy Hollow, which the cowboys and others frequented; during the entire Revolution he was always in sympathy with the British, and made himself so unpopular in that section that whenever any of the cowboys caught him they would beat him dreadfully; the result was that whenever any of them appeared he would invariably hide himself away; on the other hand, his wife, Polly Reed, was intensely patriotic, to such an extent that she and her husband had frequent controversies over it.

On the morning of the day that André was captured, the three cowboys (Paulding, Williams, and Van Wart) appeared at the tavern and asked Polly Reed to furnish them with breakfast. She said, "All right, boys; if you will wait a little while I will go down to the village store [which I believe was kept by a person named Stormal] and get something for you," and then went into the cellar and drew them a pitcher of beer, and gave them also a pack of cards, with which to amuse themselves until her return. Mounting her horse, (astride, as she always rode,) with her infant son, Issac Reed, Jr., in front of her, she went to the village store, and while making her purchases a stranger entered, and his garb and general bearing were so different from anything that had ever been seen in the neighborhood that he interested her, and when he inquired the way to West Point she became convinced at once that he was an important personage. After hearing the owner of the store direct him the road to take to West Point, she at once remounted her horse and rode post haste to the tavern and told the boys of what had happened, and also informed them of the road he was to take. The story of the capture is well known, and it is not necessary to repeat it here. After the war was over a bill was introduced in Congress to grant a pension to Paulding, Williams, and Van Wart for their services in the matter. Polly Reed, hearing of this, went at once to them and demanded to be included in the pension bill; they told her that if she insisted on having her name inserted in the bill it would jeopardize its passage, and that if she would keep quiet they would agree to give her a portion of their pension during her life, which she accepted, remarking, "Oh, well, that will keep me in tea and sugar for the rest of my life, and I am satisfied with that," and they kept their word. After peace was declared, the glorious Fourth of July was celebrated in the City of New York, and for many years Grandmother Polly Reed was always an attractive feature in the parade, riding, with her long, flowing gray hair, on horseback, her usual way.

MRS. THOMAS BARRINGTON.

New York, Jan. 15, 1901.

Dean One of Andre's Captors.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

I have been much interested in Judge Dykman's letter about André's captors, published in THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW of Jan. 12. The statement contained in my "Crisis of the Revolution" (Page 27) that the captors numbered eight, instead of seven, is based on, first, the evidence of Samuel Youngs, a former Surrogate of Westchester County. In 1832 he indorsed the pension application of Ensign John Dean's widow to this effect: In 1780 he himself was employed as a guide for Sheldon's regiment, and as such was at Mile Square (the present Armonk) on the 23d of September, and there witnessed the arrival of the eight, whom he mentions by name, (See Page 35.) Secondly, I had the testimony of Dean's descendants, his grandson, Mr. William Dean of Tarrytown, and great-grandson, Prof. Bashford Dean of Columbia College, to the effect that Ensign (then Sergeant) Dean was of the party, and in charge of it, as the only one not a private soldier. It is true, as Judge Dykman says, that I consulted with him on the story of André, but the Dean matter was probably discovered afterward.

Lossing was doubtless the first writer to give Dean's name as one of the party—but as he specifically states (Vol. I., Page 755) that he met (Thomas) Dean, John Dean's son, while examining the tombstones in the Sleepy Hollow churchyard at Tarrytown, a legitimate inference would be that he received the information then and there from this gentleman himself.

In the several years devoted to the preparation of my book, I discovered among the long list of authorities consulted any number of statements which patient investigation proved to be errors in some cases palpable fabrications—and since its publication I have found others, one of which I discovered in The Literary Collector of this month. Doubtless there remain yet others, which will crop up from time to time, for the startling story of André's arrest and Arnold's treason gave rise to a number of camp rumors which crystallized in letters and newspaper statements of extravagant nature. But I believe none of these has found its way into my history of the events in question.

W. ABBATT.

New York, Jan. 12, 1901.

Major Andre Not the Author of the Hymn.

FREDERICK M. BIRD, South Bethlehem, Penn., writes to THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW: "Mr. William L. Stone, in THE SATURDAY REVIEW of Dec. 15, is right enough in defending Major André's memory; but he need not have repeated Lamb's foolish story (1800) about the hymn 'written a few days before his execution,' (1780.) This hymn, which he reprints at full length, begins, 'Hail, sovereign Love, that first began,' and has been in hundreds of collections for a century and more, so that it did not depend on Lamb's 'exceedingly rare' book for its currency. It first appeared in The Gospel Magazine for October, 1776, signed 'Sylvestris'; and thence André or anybody else might copy it. The author was Jehoida Brewer, (1752-1817,) afterward Congregational minister at Sheffield and Birmingham; his name has been appended to the piece dozens of times. These facts, like pretty much all facts concerning hymns, may be found in Mr. Julian's 'Dictionary of Hymnology,' 1892.

"Mr. Stone made another strong attribution, apparently on his own authority. Brewer's (or André's) lyric, he thinks, may not unfavorably be compared with Bernard de Cluny's 'Dies Irae.' If he has any warrant for this ascription, he ought to give it, for the matter is 'important if true.' While the authorship of 'Dies Irae,' like that of most Latin hymns, is not known with absolute certainty, it has been generally, if not universally, credited to Thomas de Celano, a Franciscan friar of the thirteenth century. Bernard of Cluny, or of Morlaix, about 1125, wrote 'De Contemptu Mundi,' translated by Dr. Neale as 'A Rhythm of the Celestial Country,' and thence come 'Jerusalem the Golden' and other familiar hymns. So far as heard from till now, he wrote nothing else."

LOUIS F. BENSON, editor of the Hymnal of the Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, writes to THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW: "The most accessible sketch of Jehoida Brewer is perhaps that in the recent Dictionary of National Biography. The original text of the hymn, not differing very much from that given by Mr. Stone, can be found in Rogers's Lyra Britannica.

"The hymn at one time was found in many English hymn books, and in American hymn books from the early part of this century until as late as 1865. It appeared, for example, in Beecher's Plymouth Collection, the Andover Sabbath Hymn Book, and Dr. Robinson's Songs of the Sanctuary. It has had, therefore, a somewhat extended career. Even now Dr. Robinson's book is used here and there, so that it is not impossible that the hymn is still sung.

"In regard to the merits of the hymn, each one is entitled to his own opinion. But I am not able to follow Mr. Stone in comparing it with the 'Dies Irae,' and no doubt it is by a mere slip of the pen that he attributes the latter to 'Bernard de Cluni.'"

The Real Author of Andre's Hymn.

H. L. SINGLETON, New York, writes to THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW: "Jehoida Brewer was born at Newport, Monmouthshire, 1792. He became a Congregational minister; was pastor in Rodborough, Gloucestershire, and at Sheffield. He died Aug. 24, 1817. He composed a number of hymns, which became popular during the great revival in which he took part with Whitefield and the Wesleys. His best-known hymn is the one Mr. Stone and others mistook for André's, "The Hiding Place." Its first appearance in The Gospel Magazine was with nine stanzas, four lines. It was printed in full in J. Middleton's Hymns, 1793, No. 279; in Williams & Boden, 1801, No. 226; in an undated edition of Lady Huntingdon's Collection, No. 328; Ripon, twenty-seventh edition of his selection, 1827, No. 172, Part II., set the example of abbreviation."

Not to Be Compared with Nathan Hale.

FLOYD R. SMITH, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes to THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW: "It was with great surprise that I read the defense of André and the attack on his captors in the last issue of THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW. The writer seems, at several points, to lay himself open to severe criticism by making statements which, if not absolutely untrue, are at the best very misleading. In defending André he likens him to Nathan Hale, and states that 'the principles for which they both suffered were precisely the same!' Precisely the same, indeed! Hale, it is true, was a spy, but of a far different calibre from André. He was engaged at the time of his capture in an enterprise that has always been indorsed by civilized nations in time of war—the attempt, by secret means, to obtain information of the strength, disposition, and intentions of the enemy. The spy, if caught, is hanged, because he is a very dangerous character; but no military authority that I know of ever condemned as immoral the practice of sending out volunteers for the purpose of secretly obtaining necessary knowledge of the enemy.

"Hale accepted this difficult task, and his purpose in assuming the awful risk, as far as we know, was pure and unselfish patriotism of the most exalted type. How different was the case of André, Clinton's agent in the blackest scheme of villainy that ever tarnished the British arms, a seducer sent out to play upon the criminal weakness of Arnold, his purpose to make a man with a grievance a traitor to his country's cause, the scornful by-word of his countrymen forever, and the inducement which tempted him to become a party to this detestable plot was, by his own confession, 'the favor of his King, the applause of his countrymen, and possibly a Brigadiership.' For this he sold his honor.

"The London Daily News many years later, in commenting on this courtly gentleman, said: 'The social qualities and the letters of André do not extenuate his crime, as they show that, whatever his moral principles may have been, he had the education of an English gentleman. If anything, his memory has been treated with great clemency. If monuments are to be erected in Westminster Abbey to men of such lax morality, it is time for honesty to hide its head.'

"His letters to Washington, viewed in the light of later events and his denial of his conversation with Major Tallmadge, hardly entitle him to rank as a man whose word is to be taken without reserve. As to the wishy-washy sentiment with which this gentle arch-conspirator's crime has ever been softened, I think that our own Bryant sums up the case with remarkable astuteness: 'The sympathy that regrets the fate of one with many admirable qualities degenerates into mawkish sentimentality when it remembers only those qualities and forgets the crime, which the possession of such qualities does not palliate, and ought to have prevented.' A second Hale? Bosh!

"Now as to the attack on the 'unsophisticated country boys,' Paulding, Williams, and Van Wart, the only statement against their honor came from André himself, an embittered captive, whose ability to render several versions of a story showed all the qualifications of high art. The letter from General King referred to by your correspondent was written nearly thirty years afterward, and might fairly be regarded as the very unreliable retrospect of an old man. In fact, the opening paragraph of the letter reads, 'The facts, as far as I am acquainted with them, I will state to the best of my ability or recollection.' André's statement, quoted in the General's letter, that he did not remember whether the 'sum agreed upon' was 500 or 1,000 guineas, does not seem to bear the imprint of truth even if the sturdy old General's 'recollection' was to be implicitly trusted at that remote date.

"For the causes I fail to see any good reason to believe that these young men necessarily made any compact with André, though I do admit that they may have been assailed, by that temptation which poverty sometimes renders almost irresistible.

"The facts in the case, however, prove that they did resist temptation, and that America was saved by them. In the absence of any trustworthy evidence to the contrary, why should an American refuse to give them their full meed of praise? In this respect let us follow the noble example set by Washington."

Sleepy Hollow Church Records.

An important publication of genealogical interest has just been undertaken by the Yonkers Historical and Library Association. Arangements have been made by a committee of that organization to compile, translate, and index the old records of the historic Sleepy Hollow Church at Tarrytown. The Rev. Dr. David Cole, a former President of the Yonkers Historical Society and a well-known Dutch scholar, is now at work on the records, and it is the intention to have the volume ready by Feb. 15 of the coming year. The edition will be limited to 500 copies, and a number of illustrations will add to the interest of the book. Among those will be an early view of the church, one of the ancient Flipse Castle, an illustration showing the communion service given to the church shortly after its erection by Queen Anne, and a picture of the old weather vane. The Sleepy Hollow Church was built by Vredryk Flipse and his wife, Katrina van Courtlandt, about 1685, and its records constitute the earliest and most complete list of baptisms and marriages in Westchester County between the years 1697 and 1790, being almost the only church records in that county which survived the ravages of the skinners and cowboys in that borderland between the rival armies during the Revolutionary War. Morris P. Ferris is the President of the Yonkers Historical Society, and he is also Chairman of the committee in charge of the publication. The volume will contain over three hundred pages and its price will be $5. Dr. Cole compiled some time ago the church records of Tappan, and he has also written a history of Yonkers.

Reading With a Purpose.

The State Library School at Albany, N. Y., from time to time invites speakers from outside the pale of librarianship for addresses on various phases of literary work. On Jan. 10 George Iles gave the students some account of the aid extended him by the libraries of New York as he wrote "Flame, Electricity, and the Camera." In the course of his remarks he said:

There is great gain in having a connecting thread to knit one's reading together. Instead of scratching the surface here and there of a vast sweep of ground in a desultory way, it is immensely more profitable to choose a particular and promising corner of it, and dig patiently to the precious ore beneath. As each year draws to its close there is a heartening sense that one's knowledge has taken on a new and tangible addition. Let us compare small things with great. Stanley every morning started from where he left off the night before. The postman with his pouch set out to-day just where he began yesterday. Stanley explores Darkest Africa; the postman renews acquaintance with Tompkins Square. Let any young reader take up an idea that warmly appeals to him, not in the butter-fingered fashion of a dilettante, but with a heart-whole willingness to be possessed by it if it prove worthy to possess him. As he gathers his facts, as he thinks about them from day to day, or hour to hour, they will soon of themselves take on in his brain an illuminating linkage, and fall into an order which points to where a difficulty may be bridged, to where veins of gold, as yet untouched, await his hand. Especially is this true when the reader becomes a writer. Cobbett used to say that he thought with the point of his pen. It was a luminous remark. The exigencies of writing, of making one's meaning clear, one's story intelligible and complete, and, if possible, interesting, lift into consciousness many a good thought that otherwise would rest in the sleep that knows no waking.

STEVENSON.

His Ouida-Like Romance "An Object of Pity" in a Limited Edition.*

Messrs. Dodd, Mead & Co. have recently issued in an edition limited to 110 copies an interesting bit of Stevensoniana. Stevenson says in one of his letters: "A Ouida romance we have been secretly writing, in which Haggard was the hero, and each one of the authors had to draw a portrait of him or herself in a Ouida light. Leigh, Lady J., Fanny, R. L. S., Belle, and Graham were the authors." And, again: "Most amusingly, varied by a visit from Lady Jersey, I took her over mysteriously (under the pseudonym of my cousin, Miss Amelia Balfour) to visit Mataafa, our rebel, and we had great fun, and wrote a Ouida novel on our life here, in which every author had to describe himself in the Ouida glamour, and of which—for the Jerseys intend printing it—I must let you have a copy."

The romance has never before been published, although, according to a preface to the present edition, written by its editor, Mr. Luther Livingston, it has been twice privately printed, the present edition being a reprint of the first issue, a small 16mo volume, entitled, "An Object of Pity; or, The Man Haggard," which bears on its title page, "Imprinted at Amsterdam," which is probably only a carrying out of the old custom of assigning to Amsterdam the preparation of books which were not openly published. The book, however, was probably printed in England, from the fact that its paper bears a watermark, "Hudson and Kearns Legal Note, London, S. E."

This interesting little "romance" was, as has been shown, founded upon certain events which actually took place during the visit of the Countess of Jersey and her party to Samoa in August, 1892. They were the guests of Mr. Bazett Haggard, the English member of the Land Commission of the Islands, and a brother of Rider Haggard. They, and especially Lady Jersey, were anxious to meet the rebel king Mataafa, the visit being arranged for them by Stevenson, who was on such friendly terms with that sovereign that he was somewhat afraid of being forced, through German influence, to leave the country.

Lady Jersey has described this visit in an article which appeared in The Nineteenth Century for January, 1893, while Stevenson himself writes of the incident in a long letter to Sidney Colvin, to be found in Vailima Letters, while in Volume II. of the Stevenson Letters will be found a note from Lady Jersey, and two letters to her from Stevenson, referring to the excursion. Mr. Livingston says that, while the visit to Mataafa brought about the writing of the "romance," Lady Jersey's chapter is the only one that deals entirely with it; the others bringing in various incidents connected with the visit to the islands.

The present edition, a little volume of about seventy pages, is most attractively printed on good paper, and bound in pretty gray boards with paper label, and both from the interest of the tale, and from the fact that this is really a first edition, in very limited form, will make it an essential feature of every Stevenson collection, as well as a volume likely to greatly increase in value.

"The Romance" is prefaced by Lady Jersey's Nineteenth Century article, followed by a delightful four-page dedication by Stevenson, which in many ways is the finest portion of an interesting little book. It is addressed to "Lady Ouida."

Many besides yourself have exulted to collect Olympian polysyllables, and to sling ink, not wisely, but too well. They are forgotten; you endure. Many have made it their goal and object to exceed, and who else has been so excessive? Many have desired to see the world otherwise (and, if possible, larger,) than God made it, and in this ambition none has been prospered to succeed like the author of Strathmore. • • • The present volume has been written slavishly from your own gorgeous but peculiar point of view. Your touch of complaisance in observation, your genial excess of epithet, and the grace of your antiquarian allusions have been cultivated like the virtues. • • • But while seeking to borrow tints from that admired palette, we have been careful to respect the facts of the case. As for the characters, each author has been intrusted with his own, a certain pledge of sincerity, while all have contributed emulously to enrich the central figure of the Man Haggard with the ornaments of truth and soberness. For the incidents, it must be owned, the epilogue is still prophetic, but to all acquainted with Norfolk, it will seem highly credible. The King's palace, again, appears to be not quite veraciously described, and you are recommended not to rely in practice on the recipe for Kava; it was not a cookery book we had in view.

This dedication is signed by the authors as Lady Ouida's "fond admirers," both their Samoan names and their English equivalents being given. Stevenson's name of "O Tusitala, the Writer of Tales," being much better known to us than is that of Mrs. Strong—Mrs. Stevenson's daughter, "O Tcuila, the Adorner of the Ugly," the other names being equally appropriate.

The book is divided into five chapters, followed by an epilogue and a poem, "Vala, Samoa," the various chapters being written by Capt. Leigh, (Lady Jersey's brother;) the second chapter, "The Mulled Mystery of Malie" is by Lady Jersey, introduced by a four-page extract from Tusitala's "Samoid," Canto XII., Chapter III., "There Was a Sound of Revelry by Night," is by Mrs. R. L. Stevenson; while Chapter IV., "Late, Ever Late," is by Stevenson himself. Chapter V. is by Teuila, Mrs. Strong, while the epilogue is by Graham Balfour, whose Samoan name was "O Pelema, a Globe-Trotter."

The scene of the epilogue is laid in Norfolk at the Christmas tide, years later than the time of the romance, when the old Bazett Haggard, "bowed with the weight of more than ninety years," once more for the pleasure of his guests "tells that marvelous tale. Before them rose the palm trees, and the primeval forests of Samoa, in the harbor thick with rusting wrecks, the King's palace, the twin cathedrals, the exquisite salons of metropolitan Apia." And yet, true to his model, the Lady Ouida, once more the tale was told, but the mystery of the nameless lady was still unrevealed; Haggard, deaf to all entreaty, even at this late day, simply adding: "In this bosom perishes the secret of the Beach of Apia."

The book ends with Capt. Leigh's poem, "Vale, Samoa," and contains full and interesting notes throughout, which add much to the charm of this whimsical tale, which must have appealed strongly to Stevenson's sense of humor. As each writer was intrusted with the task of describing his or her own character, their descriptions must of necessity be entirely trustworthy. And as Stevenson's is the most interesting personality therein treated, two extracts may be given as showing the value as well as the interest of this delightful little book. The first is from Tusitala's own pen; the second from that of "The Witch Woman of the Mountain," or, as she was sometimes called, Mrs. Stevenson. The two should go far toward showing the plan of this "romance," as well as its entire faithfulness to its great model:

He of the name which brought a light to the eye of the Canadian Book Agent, and a flush to the cheek of the Chicago pirate. He who had earned fame only to despise it, luxury only to discard it; who had fled from the splendors of a suburban residence to tose in the rude trading schooner among uncharted reefs; who had left the saturnalian pleasures of the Athenæum to become a dweller in the Bush and the councilor of rebel sovereigns, crouching at night with them about the draughty lamp on the bare cabin floor; whose pen was of gold, and his bed a mat upon a chest, who loved but three things, women, adventure, art—and art the least of these three, and, as men whispered, adventure the most—was he, even he, at ease? I trow not. His slender fingers plucked at his long mustache; his dark eyes glittered in his narrow, sanguine face; in his mind—the mind of a poet—the oaths of stevedores and coal-porters hurtled.

Stevenson writes a correspondent this description of himself should prove amusing, while the following, a little nearer its original, should prove equally so. Mrs. Stevenson writes:

"The one who was dark presented the aspect of a boy in his teens; the slender figure, tending in repose like a lily in the Summer wind; the sensitive, startled nostril, the small, narrow head, the bloom on the smooth cheek, the soft, tranquil, dark eye—all these pertained to youth. But a closer inspection revealed silver threads in thinning brown locks, fine lines in the forehead, traced by the inexorable hand of time, deepened, perchance, by the follies of his dissolute early life. And behind the eyes so velvet soft burned the fires of hell. Let no one in fancied security make the mistake of touching this creature on a sensitive nerve. The drooping figure springs erect with a tigerish activity, from the lips apparently formed to sing the praises of fair dames leaps a torrent of blasphemy and imprecation that might well appall a fishwife, his terrible voice ringing out like the trump of doom, till strong men crawl shuddering from his presence to lie for days on their beds sick and prone, while women, shrieking and laughing in delirium, flee until they fall in their tracks. The name of this singular being was Tusitala, the Writer of Tales.

*AN OBJECT OF PITY; or, The MAN HAGGARD. By Robert Louis Stevenson. And five of his friends. New York: Dodd, Mead & Co. 1900. Pp. 69. 110 copies. $2.50.

"The Bennett Twins."

M. C. S., New York, writes to THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW: "Your recent article on 'Christmas in Song and Story' was of special interest. I should like to add to your list a humanly winning chapter, full of spontaneity and happy youthful comradeship, entitled 'How the Hive Hummed at Christmas'; it is in 'The Bennett Twins,' by Grace M. Hurd. That story is a very true comment on life as it is lived, and the characters show the brush marks of study from nature, which is not always true of people in a book of so much interest of a genuine contemporary sort. The 'Hive,' as all lovers of the 'Twins' know, is the great New York Studio Building, where they went through their struggles, learning in grim reality that the artist must live in a garret aloof to keep the goddess constant and glad. On Christmas Eve the young brother and sister went out and got a bunch of holly for themselves, and had a good time watching other people going home with bundles, making 'bravo holiday eyes over their greens at every glum face they encountered,' and throwing Merry Christmas to street urchins and blue-fingered street peddlers. Agnes had a mysterious gift that night tossed through the hole in the wall of the studio, where they lived, which turned out to be a little gold bee, its pin through a card, a very significant present for a worker in the 'Hive.' Then in the morning came Vi'let, the black woman, who was house fairy to the boys and girls pursuing ideals hungrily beneath that great roof. 'Vi'let' is a character worthy to be hung up with Col. Carter in the gallery of gems from the South. The Christmas dinner of the eighteen dwellers in the 'Hive' who did not go out anywhere was cooked in installments in the different rooms where girl students lived, and carried from all over the building to the largest room at their service by the merry flock; and 'when it came to pudding, steaming away two floors below, they had to descend in a body and go trolling their roundelays over one flight of stairs and down another and up the middle staircase, Vi'let prancing proudly at their head. • • • Though the toasts were drunk in water, they were of the heartiest. They toasted Christmas past and present, absent friends and the gifted company drawn together by a common bond, that of hunger.' And this best of sauces does not go with all Christmas dinners in the land!

"In expressing my appreciation of 'The Bennett Twins,' I am, I know, but repeating your own excellent indorsement of the story some weeks ago.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY'S NEW BOOKS.

THE AMERICAN NEGRO.

WHAT HE WAS, WHAT HE IS, AND WHAT HE MAY BECOME.

By WM. HANNIBAL THOMAS. Cloth, 8vo, $2.00.

"No one interested in what M. Brunetiere has lately declared to be the gravest problem before the republic can afford to neglect this book."—Evening Post, N. Y.

ETHICS DESCRIPTIVE AND EXPLANATORY.

By SIDNEY E. MEZES, Ph. D., University of Texas.

Published this week.

Cr 8vo, $2.60 net.

A textbook for Colleges and Schools, which aims to give such an objective treatment of morality as textbooks on natural sciences do of their subjects.

AMERICAN HISTORY.

TOLD BY CONTEMPORARIES

Third volume ready next week.

National Expansion, 1783-1845.

By ALBERT BUSHNELL HART, Professor of History, Harvard University. Uniform with

Vol. I.—ERA OF COLONIZATION, (1493-1689) $2.00

Vol. II.—BUILDING OF THE REPUBLIC, (1689-1783) $2.00

To Follow: Vol. IV.—Welding the Nation.

A TREASURY OF IRISH POETRY IN THE ENGLISH TONGUE.

Edited by the Rev. STOPFORD A. BROOKE and T. W. ROLLESTON, with an Introduction by the former. Cloth, $1.75.

Such names as DOUGLAS HYDE, W. B. YEATS, Dr. GEORGE SIGERSON, LIONEL GRAVES, etc., are on the list of authors quoted.

CONSIDERATIONS ON PAINTINGS.

A new edition.

Lectures delivered at the Metropolitan Museum of Arts, New York, by JOHN LA FARGE.

12mo, Buckram. $1.25 net.

"One of those all too rare books on art written by an artist of standing who knows whereof he speaks, and who is also possessed of a fascinating literary style."—Nation.

THE NEW NOVELS.

THE LIFE AND DEATH OF RICHARD YEA-AND-NAY.

The well-known critic, Frederic Harrison, calls it "a great feat," in The Fortnightly Review.

By the Author of "The Forest Lovers," MAURICE HEWLETT. Cloth, $1.50.

"The only first-class book of 1900," also said Frederic Harrison in The Academy.

"Full of intense interest."—Boston Advertiser.

IN THE PALACE OF THE KING

By the author of "Saracinesca," etc. F. MARION CRAWFORD. Cloth, 12mo, $1.50.

"A book to read and to remember with inexhaustible pleasure."—San Francisco News Letter.

"The best story of the civil war that has appeared of recent years."—Springfield Republican.

WHO GOES THERE?

The Story of a Spy in the Civil War. By B. K. BENSON. Cloth, 12mo, $1.50.

"Of such vividness and power that . . . you want to shut out the rest of the world completely until you have finished it."—Boston Herald.

New Editions, Illustrated, of the most widely discussed books, aside from fiction, of the past year.

ELIZABETH AND HER GERMAN GARDEN.

Illustrated in photogravure from photographs. Cloth, 8vo, $2.50.

The record of a woman's struggle against nature and man—in making a garden—full of humor and quiet touches of satire on German ways, and of the rare fragrance of a happy life.

THE SOLITARY SUMMER

A SEQUEL TO THE ABOVE.

The story of a contented woman, happy in her home—in three of the most delicious children in the book world—happy, too, in the at-last-achieved garden.

Like the above, illustrated, $2.50.

With it, the two in a box, $5.00.

THE APRIL BABY'S BOOK OF TUNES,

with the story of how they came to be written. By the author of "Elizabeth and Her German Garden" and full of her strong sense of humor. Nursery rhymes set to music; with illustrations in colors by Kate Greenaway.

Cloth, small 8vo, $1.50, net.

The Macmillan Company, 66 5th Ave., N. Y.

Complete Your Dickens

JOHN JASPER'S SECRET

By Charles Dickens, Jr., and Wilkie Collins

A Masterly Sequel to "Edwin Drood"

12mo, $1.25

R. F. FENNO & COMPANY - - - - NEW YORK

Library of the World's Best Music

Bound in 8 Volumes 2,300 Pages

$200.00 Worth of Sheet Music at One-Tenth Value! 350 best old and new songs, 300 instrumental selections, 400 greatest composers. Ably Edited, Superbly Illustrated. Indispensable in every home where there is a piano. Sent free for examination. Send postal for specimen pages containing 4 complete compositions.

THE UNIVERSITY SOCIETY, 78 Fifth Ave., New York.

"OLD IRONSIDES."

Mr. Hollis's History of the Frigate Constitution.*

The history of this famous vessel, a spirited picture of which under full sail, after the painting by Marshall Johnson, forms the frontispiece of the present volume, is much more than the history of a single vessel, however famous. The book is an outgrowth of Mr. Ira N. Hollis's paper written for The Atlantic, in commemoration of the hundredth anniversary of the launching of this old ship. The author tells us that the Constitution has so long been a favorite subject for song and story that nothing new remains to be said. However that may be, the present history of this old frigate brings together in extremely readable and concise form the entire story of the formation and early development of our sailing navy, down to the days when the invention and perfecting of steam power commenced to alter all existing conditions.

In his preface Mr. Hollis states that while in no sense a history of the navy, yet his book brings together a reasonably connected narrative of naval events, and particularly of all such as had any close connection with the history of this old frigate. His information has been drawn from the American State papers, the Constitution's logbooks, and the reports of commanding officers, as well as from naval biographies and histories. Mr. Hollis has prepared his book with the idea of first making clear the relation of the sailor to the country, and then to stimulate an interest in the rebuilding of the old ship. Should he succeed as well as did Oliver Wendell Holmes, he would be greatly to be envied. Holmes, then a student in the Dane Law School and just passed his majority, having seen in a newspaper one morning that the Constitution was to be destroyed by order of the Navy Department, dashed off his poem "Old Ironsides," which was first published in The Boston Advertiser, copied by newspapers all over the country, and even printed on handbills and distributed in the streets of Washington. The public sentiment thus aroused was irresistible, the Navy Department's order revoked, Congress at once appropriating sufficient money to rebuild the old ship without alteration of her original model, the Constitution being placed in the new dry dock in the Boston Navy Yard in June, 1833.

As is well known, by an act of Congress, approved Feb. 14, 1900, the Secretary of the Navy is authorized to restore the Constitution, as regards hull and rigging, to her original condition while in active service, provided a sum of money estimated at $400,000 can be raised through the agency of the Massachusetts State Society of the United States Daughters of 1812. Large as is this sum, the patriotic women having it in charge hope to see the old ship completely restored within a few years, and if Mr. Hollis, while giving us a most readable and interesting sketch of our early navy and of its remarkable triumphs over seemingly insurmountable obstacles, can also further this end, he will have accomplished most successfully a double purpose.

The sailing frigate was to the old navy what the cruiser is to that of modern days. Nelson called them "the eyes of the fleet," often serving as scouts to watch the movements of the enemy. In the old navy, the campaigns were longer, and information as to the enemy's movements being so much more difficult to obtain, fast frigates formed valuable auxiliaries in all fleet service. To increase such effectiveness the hulls of frigates were made large enough to carry a great spread of canvas, the lines being drawn relatively fine, so the vessel might be calculated to outsail everything afloat.

Mr. Hollis tells us of the formation of the navy at the time when the Constitution was built, three classes of ships usually forming the bulk of all navies—sloops, frigates, and line-of-battle ships. They usually carried three masts, with square sails, and were distinguished by the number of decks carrying complete batteries, although its rating was not an entirely reliable indication of a ship's power. Mr. Hollis carefully explains all classes of war vessels entering into the old sailing navy, clearly and plainly, but at too great length to be entered into here. He also describes the different methods of going into action, telling us that in the war of 1812 the British had no regulated sights for their guns, while our navy gained an advantage through being clever enough to provide a fair substitute for the modern sight bar. The height of the deck above the water level had much to do with the fighting qualities of a ship; it was therefore of much importance in naval construction to place the decks as high as possible above the water line.

The percussion cap not having been invented until after the war of 1812, the guns were fired by means of a flintlock or match, which necessitated an entirely different placing and management of the guns from that in use at the present day. The armament comprised three types of guns—the long gun, the carronade, and the columbiad. Mr. Hollis also draws all sorts of parallels between the service of the two countries, the handling of the ships in action, the housing and feeding of the crews, and a thousand and one small details which will be found of great assistance when it comes to description of the actual battles.

The author takes up in a separate chapter the reasons for the establishment of a United States Navy and the causes which helped to bring it about. The corsairs of North Africa had for three centuries preyed upon the Christian nations of Europe, and it was not until 1794 that Congress passed a bill by a very small majority authorizing the construction of four ships of forty-four guns each, and of two ships of thirty-six guns each, for the protection of our vessels. In 1793, 11 American ships and 100 American sailors had been captured by Barbary pirates. Even then there was no idea of forming a permanent navy, and work on these vessels was to be discontinued in case a satisfactory treaty with the Dey could be arranged.

There was, of course, no Navy Department, and the matter was referred to Henry Knox, the Secretary of War, who finally accepted the plans of John Humphreys of Philadelphia, a well-known shipbuilder. The hull frames, the planking, and masts of these ships were equal in dimensions to those of a line-of-battle ship, while the unusual hardness and weight of the timbers and planking in the Constitution gave her the name of "Old Ironsides." The greater height of her guns above water was also an advantage, making it possible for her to go into action in weather which rolled the gun ports of the ordinary frigate and line-of-battle ship under water. The extra beam given to Mr. Humphreys's ships also allowed a better angle in staying the masts to resist rolling in a seaway; while his masts, yards, and rigging were in every way admirable.

This book will be found to give the most interesting sketches of the early commanders, the war with Tripoli, and Edward Preble's exploits; the outbreak of the war of 1812, the marvelous escape of the Constitution from a British squadron, partly through superior sailing ability, and partly through the clever use of a kedge anchor; the destruction of the frigate Guerrière; the action between the Constitution and the Java, which lasted about two hours and a half, every stick of timber on the latter, except part of the mainmast, being shot away in less than an hour; her cruise under Stewart and the capture of the Cyane and Levant.

Mr. Hollis reminds us that while our success in the war of 1812 can hardly be credited to a single frigate, yet the Constitution did by far the greatest amount of damage of any one vessel, while the guns captured by her amounted to more than half the whole number taken from British armed ships upon the sea.

The cruises and other incidents connected with the Constitution's history after the war of 1812 are also fully touched upon in the present book, but the old vessel's real history is confined to a period of about twelve years. The frigate Constitution Mr. Hollis thinks almost as important a source of inspiration to Americans as are Bunker Hill, Independence Hall, and Gettysburg, the frigate's successes coming:

> At a period when we sorely needed a strong arm to vindicate for the second time our right to independence, and to the untrammeled development of our own institutions, her victories did much to teach a few scattered colonies or States respect for themselves and faith in their own united strength. Perhaps more than all else she stands to-day for the freedom of the seas—around her are woven the memories of our great sailors, many of whom obtained their early training upon her decks. Her history is almost a history of the navy during its most critical period, and she has survived to us the heirloom of a glorious past, which cannot be forgotten so long as her wooden walls stand firm. She holds a place as a representative of the days of sails, and is one of the finest examples of the wooden frigate at its best. As a type in marine warfare her class was the flower of the sailing period, and although sails were soon to be superseded, there was still time for her victories to work great changes in European navies. Her model and armament were copied by England before the war of 1812 had closed, as it was imperative to build something to overtake and destroy her. In her day the organization of men to manœuvre and fight ships had reached a high state of perfection. It is probable that we shall never find crews better adapted by nature to contend with the sea, or better fitted by training to carry their ships into distant seas and fight them than were the seamen on the decks of the old Constitution.

The book is well printed and profusely illustrated, and may be said to carry out most successfully Mr. Hollis's aim of "keeping alive the interest in our old ships and in the sailors who contributed with their lives to the welfare of their country."

*THE FRIGATE CONSTITUTION: The Central Figure of the Navy Under Sail. By Ira N. Hollis. Illustrations, Index. Pp. xi.-263. 1900. Boston and New York: Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Cambridge: The Riverside Press. $1.50.

An Exhibition of William Morris's Works.

The Philobiblon Club of Philadelphia is gradually coming to the front as a leader in subjects that appeal to book lovers. It was established five or six years ago and is rapidly outgrowing its present quarters. On Tuesday, Jan. 8, it held a special meeting in the H. Josephine Widener Branch of the Free Library of Philadelphia. The Trustees of the library placed the building at the disposal of the club for an occasion of special interest. Dr. C. R. Ashbee, a representative of the Society for the Preservation of Ancient Buildings, delivered an illustrated lecture before the club and their friends on the subject of William Morris. The executive officers of the Free Library thought this a good opportunity to secure for the residents of Philadelphia an opportunity to inspect a complete set of the publications of the Kelmscott Press, with very nearly complete specimens of all that has been published by the Vale and Essex House printing presses. Through the courtesy of Mr. Harold Peirce the books will remain on exhibition for a few weeks.

Four large cases in the lecture hall of the Widener Branch are filled with specimens of the works of Morris and his successors. It is believed that no such complete collection has hitherto been exhibited. Regarding first the work of Morris as a printer, attention will naturally be called to the copy of "Sigurd, the Volsung," which was considered by Morris himself his masterpiece, but the general observer will probably be more attracted to the reprint of "Chaucer." Two copies of this book are exhibited, one closed and one open. The closed copy shows the original binding in pigskin designed by Morris himself, and is as tasteful a production as ever came from the Doves' Bindery. The first page of "Chaucer" is decorated by Sir E. Burne-Jones, and however well known is always worth another inspection. This work was illustrated by eighty-seven drawings from the pen of Sir E. Burne-Jones, and these are shown in this splendid typographical production. Close by are exhibited on one card the autograph of William Morris, and autograph letters from S. C. Cockerell, the private secretary of the Kelmscott Press; from Emery Walker, the friend and adviser of Morris, and from S. F. Ellis, the editor of the work; with autographs of Sir E. Burne-Jones, the artist and illustrator; Cobden Sanderson, the binder, who works under the trade name of the Doves' Bindery, and W. H. Hooper, the engraver. Here we have, therefore, the writing of every person connected with this remarkable production.

In a large folio close by are shown sixteen pages of a projected edition of Lord Berner's translation of "Froissart." Of this thirty-two copies only were printed for presentation to personal friends of Morris, and one of these has been secured by Mr. Peirce. With it are bound up two pages of a projected edition of "Sigurd." The "Froissart" is printed in the Chaucer and the "Sigurd" in the Troy type. Another exceedingly interesting product of Morris's work is the illustrated edition of the Rev. Dr. John Mason Neale's celebrated Christmas carol, "Good, Kind Wenceslas," illustrated by J. Gaskin, and scattered in the exhibition cases are a large number of portraits of William Morris at various periods of his life, with two or three family groups, in which are included Morris himself, Miss May Morris, (afterward Mrs. Sparling,) and Sir E. Burne-Jones. There were twelve book-plates printed of the Kelmscott Press, of which a set is exhibited, and on the platform of the lecture room is placed a wooden table made in Morris's workshop, being an exact model of the one at which he worked in his library for so many years. A small brass tablet, explaining what the table is, is attached to the side.

As has been remarked, Morris worked a complete revolution in house decoration, and photographs and drawings of some of the tapestries he designed will be found on exhibition. A large number of autograph letters and other manuscripts by Morris are included, but possibly the most interesting is a minute book of the Society for the Preservation of Ancient Buildings, of which Morris was Secretary. It will be noticed that during the intervals of recording the business of the meeting he has amused himself by sketching artistic decorations in the margins of his manuscript. While the "Chaucer" is interesting as the result of his life work, it is not uninteresting to turn to the "Story of the Glittering Plain," with which are placed two trial plates. These were the first leaves printed at the Kelmscott Press, and were struck off Jan. 31, 1891. They were not adopted in the work as published, as may be seen on examining a copy of the "Glittering Plain" opened at the same place. Only six or eight copies of these trial plates were printed, and the visitor will find lying by them an interesting letter from Mr. Cockerell to Mr. Peirce, dated Feb. 5, 1900, giving interesting details of these two pages.

Turning to Morris as a great Socialist leader, the most interesting exhibit seems to be a dramatic piece entitled "The Tables Turned; or, Nupkins Awakened." This was played at the hall of the Socialist League Oct. 15, 1887, and Morris himself took the part of the Archbishop of Canterbury; "a witness," and Miss May Morris played the part of Mary Pinch, the woman wrongfully accused of stealing. Side by side with this lies a copy of Morris's poem, "The Death Song," with a memorial design by Walter Crane.

Books, Serious and Frivolous

They Are All Good and the Merit of All Has Been Recognized

We have not said much about Mrs. Ward's novel

Eleanor

recently, largely because it hasn't needed it.

Some books require more advertising than others. "Vanity Fair" or "Romola" wouldn't need any more to-day than they received when they were first published.

It is much the same with "Eleanor." There is a certain literary finish about the book which sets it apart from the rest of the fiction of the year and makes it its own best advertisement. The success of "Eleanor" is exceeding even our expectations.

• • • • • •

The Mantle of Elijah

Mr. Zangwill's new novel, is a book which one would naturally expect to have a larger sale in England than in this country. It is an English political novel and touches upon anti-imperialism.

As a matter of fact its greatest success has been on this side. It is a splendidly dramatic story, and if Mr. Zangwill has made as good a play out of his material as he has a novel, theatregoers may well look forward to its production.

• • • • • •

There are two other stories of which we have something to say, both of which are humorous in character. The first is by Frank R. Stockton. Mr. Stockton is a story teller who can always be relied upon. His work is invariably up to the level, and in this case considerably above it. As we mentioned recently, it is among the most successful of our new books.

A Bicycle of Cathay

• • • • • •

The other humorous book is

The Idiot at Home

by John Kendrick Bangs. We have published some sixteen books by Mr. Bangs, all of which have been successful. The "Idiot at Home" is a sequel to the most popular of them all—"Coffee and Repartee"—and it is just as amusing.

• • • • • •

Lord Rosebery's withdrawal from active political life was universally regretted until he began to write. Then discriminating persons discovered that where England had lost a statesman she had gained an essayist and historian—how brilliant an historian few guessed until his

Napoleon: The Last Phase

was published. The remarkable sale of this book is the best indication of its equally remarkable character. It is necessarily expensive, but that has not interfered with its success.

• • • • • •

You may have been told by your bookseller that you would have to wait for a copy of Mr. Howells'

Literary Friends and Acquaintance

This is merely to inform you that our bindery has just turned out a new edition and that the Trade is now supplied. You can get it anywhere.

Eleanor, $1.50	A Bicycle of Cathay, $1.50
The Mantle of Elijah, $1.50	The Idiot at Home, $1.25
Napoleon, $3.00	Literary Friends, $2.50

NOTE.—If you want our illustrated catalogue of books of every sort it may be had for the asking.

HARPER & BROTHERS,
Franklin Square, New York City

CORINTH.

Interesting Disclosures Which Recent Excavations Have Made.

ATHENS, Greece, Jan. 2.—Ancient Corinth, which can be traced back over 3,000 years, is not shown on any ordinary map, for its exact site is only now being determined by the excavations of the American School of Classic Studies. Beginning along the northern shore of Peloponnesus at the Gulf of Patrae and continuing along the Gulf of Corinth we come to the Isthmus of Corinth, on the western edge of which stands the modern village of Corinth, a miserable aggregation of huts, totally unworthy of its grand old name. This isthmus, about three miles wide, is now cut by the most beautiful ship canal in the world as straight as a rifle barrel. The ancients conceived the same plan, and actually did some cutting, remains of which are still visible. About three miles inland, and up a rapid slope may be traced the general outlines of the walls of ancient Corinth, inclosing a vast area. Within these walls the ground looks as wild as the rest of the slope, and the rude farming of the locality is carried on. The few scattered farmhouses could not be called a village, yet under them lie several Corinths, each built over the ruins of its immediate predecessor.

The greatest of these was in its glory 600 or 700 years before our era. It was destroyed by the Romans over 2,000 years ago, and later refounded by Caesar. The village which stood on the site up to less than fifty years ago, was of no importance, and was finally leveled by an earthquake about forty-two years ago. At this time the modern village on the isthmus, referred to above, was founded, but long before this the exact site of the mighty Corinth of 700 B. C. was lost. Neither the natives nor learned historians knew the site, excepting that it lay somewhere within the remains of the old walls. The position of this great city was commanding, standing practically on the isthmus like a sentinel between two seas, the Gulf of Corinth and the Saronic Gulf, and catching the trade of both. It bore the same relation to the land trade between the mainland of Greece and Peloponnesus. It thus stood in the centre of a great crossroads of trade, the northern and southern arms being land and the eastern and western arms water. Higher up the slope we come to Acro-Corinth, a high rocky eminence surmounted by an ancient citadel.

This lost Corinth was what Prof. R. B. Richardson of the "American School of Classic Studies in Greece" set himself to find about three years ago. The Turkish war stopped operations, but within the last year phenomenal progress has been made. During a visit to Athens last November I had the good fortune to carry an introduction to the enthusiastic professor, and received the great favor of a special trip to Corinth and being taken over the ground by one of his favorite pupils, who had acted as Superintendent of excavations last Summer.

It was known that Greek cities of that date had an "Agora," or market place, and that this was the centre of the life of the city. It formed the nucleus of the town. It was much more than we understand by "market." Market it was, but forum would be a better translation. It was the meeting place, the loafing place, the public club, the centre of the city's activities. It was the place to get the news and hear the gossip. The laborer "stood idle" there and the employer went there for laborers. The great mass of the people had no other place to go for a little brightness, for the American liquor store had not been evolved. The houses of the poor were only little dens, at that date, and the husband staid at home as little as possible, going to the "Agora" to meet his fellows. This market place generally had the best architecture, statuary, and fountains. It was the show place. Its shops were usually only cubicals open on one side for business, light, and air, and were lined along the passageways and around the open spaces. Virtually, to find the "Agora," or market place, was to find the city. Now, the professor, knowing this, and very much more, did a little thinking and concluded that from Lechaenon, the old harbor on the gulf, near the isthmus, a main road, or way, must have run up the hill face to this market place. Then he made a guess as to the direction of this road and began cutting trenches ten to sixteen feet deep across the face of the hill at right angles to the supposed direction of this road.

At this point he had not the slightest positive knowledge of where Corinth was, but was just feeling for a trail toward that much-desired market gate. After cutting sixteen of these great trenches, he cut across a paved way running up the hill, and instantly concluded that it was the one wanted, and he was right, for, following it up, it led to the "Propylaea," or monumental market gate. Previous to this, in cutting the trenches, two fountains had been laid bare, one of them a wonderful work, cut in solid rock, with all its passages and catch basins complete. The other was less elaborate, but through it flowed the water supply of the native farmers. It cannot yet be determined whether this water comes from the spring of Pirene or from some spring lower down, but this will come later as they dig up the hill. The Greek author Pausanias has left a tolerably accurate account of the positions of the "Agora" and these two fountains, and mentioned a Temple of Apollo out toward the city limits. The old temple, mentioned above, is in the correct place, and is now identified for the first time, and, with the market gate and the two fountains, settles the main points of the city. This temple has been completely laid bare, and while only a few columns still stand, is of extreme interest in itself as an example of very old Doric, its clumsy columns having a very wide echinus and plinth, far inferior to those of the Parthenon at Athens. It is now principally a question of money to dig up the hill and bring to light such treasures of art as may remain after the unspeakable vandals of former ages. No risk of wasting money now, as a general plan of the city could be drawn from the four identified landmarks described. The disposal of the rubbish is worth noting here. Fields further down the hill are rented from the farmers, and a small narrow-gauge railroad carries the rubbish down from the diggings. This is left in a deep layer on the fields in a generally level position, and the farmers commence cultivating on top, getting better crops than from the original fields.

The Propylaea, or market gate, was something which we could not easily associate with a market, being flanked by two heroic statues which have been found. One of these was found head down against a rough wall, and has a perfect nose, a very rare thing in a statue dug up from rubbish. The other one is without a nose, but a dovetailed groove shows where one had been fastened on; but whether this nose was broken by the original artist and he was compelled to patch it up, or it was an accident later in the life of the statue necessitating repairs, cannot yet be determined. Quite a quantity of statuary and fragments has been found, and the Greek Government has built a new museum on the ground for its safe keeping. Nothing whatever can be carried out of Greece, so the Americans are doing all this for knowledge and National honor.

Unfortunately, the Greeks made this law too late and after they had been plundered, principally by Lord Elgin, his stealings being now in the British Museum. The columns, with their bases and capitals, as well as the architraves and cornices, have all been found, so this monumental gate could be restored. Below the main way, already referred to, can be seen the ends of steps, at one place where the digging has gone lower, indicating probably the level of the ancient city. Still further there is unmistakable evidence of this way not being the original one, for its steps and paving stones are often cut stones, with molding and ornaments from former buildings, which have been chiseled off a little to make them serve as flat stones. Beautiful cornices of Greek style can be easily identified in some of the steps, making it almost certain that the city of this level was constructed from the ruins of an older Corinth.

In looking around there is overwhelming evidence of this in the rudely constructed walls, containing fragments of a far higher art. Here is a piece of the fluted shaft of a marble column built inside out, and a little further on a piece end out. Generally, at the lowest points the best work is found, having the close-fitted joints without cement, which are characteristic of the best Greek. Higher up the rough Roman work, with excessive mortar in the joints, is easily distinguished. On the faces of the trenches the various strata can be distinguished, and my expert instructor stated that these layers told their ages in pottery, utensils, and art fragments with a remarkable general accuracy. One of the most impressive features of the excavations, so far, is the amount of rude, bad work, at this level. Columns, bases and capitals rarely fit each other, and this applies also to superstructures. Hardly any original work is in evidence. Nearly everything has been badly constructed from fragments of a far higher style of architecture and art, and by a people evidently oblivious to the excellence of the fragments they were clumsily putting together.

Two bases for statues command attention. One of them has been chiseled off and an epitaph cut on its face, but the workman did no more work than was necessary to make room for the inscription and left a little at the bottom untouched, and on this can be read "A decree of the Senate." Not a word of the decree left, but in its place a blathering epitaph! The other had evidently been treated the same way, but the epitaph has been intentionally obliterated by rough pick marks, leaving the stone disfigured. Did they discover something bad about this man after a flattering epitaph had been set up and then blot it out in contempt?

No notice of this piece would be complete which did not point out that this is the Corinth of St. Paul. While it had passed its greatest glory hundreds of years before his day, it was still a great and important city. It was rich and arrogant—pleasure loving and materialistic—frivolous and self-conscious, wicked and luxurious. It was here that Paul planted his little church, and it is quite likely that the members were not much better than their neighbors; for Paul says, (I Cor., xi, 18,) that he "partly believed" the very bad stories which the "heathen" told about them! Considering the place in which this church was established I would guess that the apostle had good reason to "believe"—well, about half what the wicked said about them. From the extreme language used by Paul in First Corinthians it is evident that they were worthy forerunners of the Christian Church, which even to this day disgraces itself by quarreling about theological doctrines. A door lintel has been found having an inscription showing it to have belonged to a Jewish synagogue, but nothing Christian has been unearthed yet.

"A fountain of information on the affairs of many great and even good men."
The Book Buyer.

ECCENTRICITIES OF GENIUS

By Major J. B. POND.

READ WHAT IS SAID OF IT.

"It is distinctly one of the most interesting books of the year from any point of view."—Rochester Sunday Herald.

"One of the most simple, naive and straightforward books ever written. It fairly reeks with personality.....No man living has had such interesting association with so many interesting people."—Home Journal.

"Adorned by many pictures, never before published."—Detroit Journal.

"Possesses unparalleled attractions."—Boston Journal.

"If any more charming and interesting book has appeared this season it has not come to our notice. The get-up is worthy of the matter of the book."—Philadelphia Evening Telegraph.

"The whole book, stuffed as it is with anecdotes and extracts from personal letters, is marvelously interesting."—Boston Transcript.

"It is many a day since I have read so fascinating a book of reminiscences. Many a day—or perhaps I should have said a 'night'—for this volume has given me delight during hours, when, according to the laws of nature, I should have been asleep."—Newell Dwight Hillis.

"All the world loves a teller of stories, and readers will surely take approvingly to the man who gives them so much of entertaining reading as is found in Major Pond's 600 pages of bright personal description."—N. Y. Times.

"Shining by reflected light, its pages literally teem with interesting anecdotes of many sorts."—Chicago Evening Post.

"Originality stamps the volume, copiously illustrated with portraits."—The Boston Globe.

"Major Pond goes deep into his subject, furnishing pen-portraits that are admirably clear and graphic."—The Mail and Express.

"It has a thousand charms, and a thousand points of interest. It is full of striking gems of thought, rare descriptions of men and places; biographical bits that delight one by their variety, and the distinction of those alluded to. From a literary view it is as interesting as Disraeli's famous "Curiosities of Literature."—Philadelphia Item.

It is a handsome octavo volume, 5¾x8¾ inches, of 620 pages, with nearly 100 half-tone portrait illustrations. Beautifully bound in English silk cloth, with gold stamp on side, gilt top. At all Bookstores. $3.50.

G. W. DILLINGHAM CO., PUBLISHERS, 119-121 WEST 23d St., NEW YORK.

THE FOLLOWING BOOKS ARE NOT FOR A DAY, BUT FOR ALL TIME.

THEY HAVE BEEN RECOGNIZED AS DESTINED TO BECOME CLASSICS.

(I.) HEROD: A TRAGEDY. By Stephen Phillips. Seventeenth Thousand - - - - - $1.50

London Times: "Here is a noble work of dramatic imagination; dealing greatly with great passions; multi-colored and exquisitely musical."

(II.) PAOLO AND FRANCESCA: A TRAGEDY. By Stephen Phillips. Seventeenth Thousand - - $1.25

(III.) POEMS. By Stephen Phillips. Ninth Edition. - - $1.50

(IV.) MARPESSA. By Stephen Phillips. Illustrated. Cloth, 50 cents; Leather, 75 cents net, each.

(V.) THE CARDINAL'S SNUFF-BOX. By Henry Harland. Seventieth Thousand - - - $1.50

Mr. John Lane has pleasure in announcing that he will publish shortly a work that is the literary success of the London season. It is entitled

THE VISITS OF ELIZABETH.

The press in England are unanimous in praising this book, which is considered a most delightful achievement.

JOHN LANE, 251 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Distinguished critics, as well as laymen, differ widely as to the merits of popular books. Zangwill has selected "QUISANTÉ," by Anthony Hope, as the greatest book of the past year. Dr. Joseph Parker, the great London preacher, says that "ROBERT ORANGE," by John Oliver Hobbes, is the best book of 1900.

The fifth edition of "Quisanté" has just been issued and is now ready.

The New York Times.

Saturday Review of Books and Art

SUPPLEMENT TO

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SIXTEEN PAGES.

NEW YORK, SATURDAY, JANUARY 19, 1901.

PROFESSORIAL LITERATURE.

The literary department of one of our esteemed contemporaries used to have a good deal of unmerciful fun with what it described as "the Columbia College School of Fiction." Perhaps the fun was as unjust as it was unmerciful. But it cannot be denied that it was fun, and refreshing to the disinterested and carnal man. Just or unjust, as to its immediate object, the satire undoubtedly points to a wider application. The Germanization of our education has gone to such an extent that, when a professor puts forth an article on a professedly literary question, the judicious reader is, as a rule, moved to wish that he hadn't. Because the judicious reader is forewarned that the professor is going to deal with "facts" without that just suspicion which tact gives that one fact differeth from another fact in value.

These remarks are suggested by the appearance of an appreciation of Mr. Stedman's very remarkable "American Anthology" in the current Forum, from the pen of Prof. Oscar Lovell Triggs of the University of Chicago. Fate was particularly unkind to Prof. Triggs in inspiring Mr. Howells with the obvious, but, after the fact, apparently malicious design of reviewing the same work in The North American Review. Very interestingly he did it, and, as is not unusual with Mr. Howells's critical performances, the more the reader disagreed with the appreciation the better he liked it. Unkind as it may seem, we really must confront Mr. Howells's serious and scholarly judgments with what, to Prof. Triggs, seem appropriate and germane remarks upon the appearance of the most authoritative, catholic, and sensitive exposition that has been made, or that is likely to be made, of American poetry for the century to which it has been confined. Here is one professorial remark:

> A group of hill-poets, as Grant Allen might call them—those who dwell upon the uplands of song—make up a considerable company. Bryant, Emerson, Lanier, Riley, and Emily Dickinson have significance hardly less than the major writers: Bryant for his discovery of the poetic value of the American landscape; Emerson for his quaint exposition of transcendental lore; Lanier for his wonderful music; Riley for his dramatization of commonplace lives; Emily Dickinson for her whimsical expression of profound thought.

We need not stop to characterize these amazing remarks, because every intelligent reader will have done that for himself as he reads them. We hasten on to give more of him. Here is a somewhat astounding critical observation:

> The maiden names of poets—Edith Thomas, Evaleen Stein, Emma Lazarus, Nora Perry, Harriet Monroe—are simple, dignified, and sufficient ones. Confusion begins with marriage.

And what can you possibly do with a professorial critic who considers that the following "line of thought" has anything to do with an appreciation of the contents of Mr. Stedman's "Anthology"?

> There are no less than six Brown(e)s, five each of Bates, Johnson, and Stoddard; four of Howells, Thompson, Smith, Robinson, and Cook; three of Aldrich, Brooks, Dickinson, Eastman, Field, and Hawthorne, while duplicates are numerous, among them Jones, Hay, Channing, Osgood, and Whitman. The literary families are the Hawthornes, the Howellses, the Thompsons, the Aldriches, the Dickinsons, and the Hays.

It is very wonderful to see how a statistician, stumbled into the Chair of Literature instead of that of Agricultural Chemistry, which he might conceivably have adorned, can produce a quantitative instead of a qualitative analysis, as the thing which it behooves to be done. The ultimate moral seems to be that a man needs an unusual degree of sense in order to trust himself in a position in which nobody can "talk back" to him, on the papal throne, in the pulpit, on the bench, or in a professor's chair. When he does not exhibit that eminence of wisdom we see what happens to him. Upon a mind not apparently extraordinary from the first, the habitual practice of telling boys, without fear of contradiction, things which are either irrelevant or "not so," must, in the long run, most unfavorably react.

"HIGHER" SCHOOLS AGAIN.

We publish in another column a letter from a correspondent commenting unfavorably on an article in THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW of Jan. 5, as to higher schools. It seems to us a very good example of the unfortunate confusion of mind that exists on the subject we discussed.

It is, perhaps, of little importance that the writer of the letter has sadly misread the article he criticises, but when he accuses Controller Coler of "'rushing into print about' a subject of which he knows very little," and speaks of THE TIMES as "led astray by the many unfounded statements of Mr. Coler," it is worth while to point out to him that one who indulges in this sort of talk ought to be much more accurate in his own assertions than our correspondent is. No opinion expressed in our article was based on any statement of Mr. Coler's, or purported to be, but we took pains to say that our judgment was "based on long study and a good deal of actual experience in connection with public school administration." Mr. Coler is in no way responsible directly or indirectly for the views expressed in the article, and it is foolish, if not disingenuous, to drag him into the discussion.

Again, our correspondent refers to "the proposal of THE TIMES to put the best teachers in the lower grades and the least efficient in the higher, and to pay the latter the least." We made no such proposition, nor any resembling it. We said that "ability and training of the best should be required in the earlier classes, and should be paid accordingly. It should be made an object for teachers to attain the highest efficiency in the teaching required in these classes and to devote their time and thought to developing and perfecting that teaching." We did not suggest that the least efficient teachers should be employed in the so-called higher classes, or that their pay should be the least. We believe that the best attainable ability should be secured in all branches that are taught, and paid accordingly. If the teaching in the earlier grades were of the best it would require ability, training, and experience as great as the teaching in the later grades. The trouble with our system is that the best teaching is not required in the earlier grades. The pupils who constitute the great body of attendants at our schools, those who are forced to leave school early, those who need the best schooling and need it most, those who cannot get it elsewhere, those whose parents pay, in proportion to their means, far the largest part of the taxes for the schools, get the least and the least useful schooling. It is not fair. It is not intelligent. When the vast multitude who are thus wronged understand their wrongs, the system will certainly be changed. It would be prudent and decent to make the change without waiting their mandate.

COLLEGES AND CULTURE.

The writer of a recent letter to the editor of one of our contemporaries called attention to the manner in which the early literary lights of New England managed to get a liberal culture out of college courses arranged on much less generous plans than those of the present day. These men read omnivorously on the subjects in which they were interested and did not wait for the dicta of their professors in the classrooms. There is a suggestion here for the student of to-day. No doubt the really earnest seeker after culture will obtain it, no matter what may be the nature of the curriculum in the college. But the question which readily will suggest itself to the thoughtful observer of university affairs is, How is culture esteemed now?

The rapid growth of the strictly technical departments of the various universities may or may not have a decided effect upon the regard of the average student for culture, pure and simple. The old ideal of a university was its office in the cultivation of gentlemen and scholars, not electrical engineers or lawyers or doctors. But to-day a remarkably large percentage of people esteems any college course which does not directly prepare a man for the calling to be pursued after graduation a foolish thing. Practicalism is the war cry of the time, and the records of our universities, even such conservatively scholastic ones as Harvard and Princeton, will show that the increase in the number of students in the scientific departments is speedier than that in the academic.

It would be a pity indeed if the office of universities in making culture common among the people should be obscured by the demand for what is called a practical education. But just how this is to be prevented from coming about, at least in some measure, is not manifest. It certainly is the duty of all apostles of the higher culture to preach continually the gospel that it does not consist in ability to do, but in the power, as Matthew Arnold suggested, to know and appreciate the best that is said and thought in the world. Art and music and literature should not be forgotten because the vast majority of students are not intended for the pulpit or the editorial chair. An intensely living interest in a literature ancient or modern is, as the writer of the letter previously referred to said, something worth living for, and as an evidence of real culture it cannot be surpassed.

GOOD AND BAD TITLE PAGES.

The accidental taking up of one of the ordinary six-shilling novels so commonly issued in London at the present day, Mrs. Steel's "The Hosts of the Lord," published by William Heinemann, revealed such an unusually good title page that the whole subject seemed worth a careful investigation for the sake of comparison. Looking through volume after volume of such ordinary commercial issues, the title page which seems best worthy to rank after that in the Heinemann book is one also found in an English six-shilling novel, the edition of Mrs. Ward's "Eleanor," published by Smith, Elder & Co. This is remarkably good, but the ink is so much paler—the type, too, being a trifle smaller—that it seems to lack part of the dignity and plain, bold effectiveness of the former.

It would seem, therefore, that a title page to be most thoroughly effective should not contain either too much ornament or too many particulars. Two or three lines of small type, useful as they may be in giving particulars as to the author and his other work in literature, spoil the artistic effect of the page. It may even be questioned whether it is of any real service in any way, because the fact that an author has done other things is usually known to us if they were well done, and if not, what possible weight can they bring to bear in selling his next volume? Some titles seem completely to lack effectiveness through the fact that the capitals, used in the composition of all book titles, are not large and plain enough to stand out boldly; the quality and blackness of the ink being also a factor which enters largely into the artistic effect of a page.

A favorite manner of composing American title pages at the present time seems to lie in a lavish use of heavy black lines, either surrounding the whole page or dividing it into boxlike compartments—which breaks the page unduly and seems to detract largely from what should be a title's main object, first to attract the eye and then give all necessary information.

Some of the old title pages, such as those to be found in books issued by the Chiswick Press, for instance, during the first quarter of the nineteenth century, bore charming vignettes, which served to attract and hold the attention of any one who took up the volume, in addition to making its possession a pleasure. Collectors will remember many other volumes of English origin and later date which bear on their title pages beautiful vignettes, designed and executed by men like W. J. Linton and William Bell Scott, all these books being ordinary commercial issues. But it must be remembered that such vignettes, to be effective, must be the best work of the best men and printed directly from the wood block or copper plate, process work, charming though it may be at certain times, not being suited to such use.

Many of the old Ticknor & Fields title pages were remarkably effective through a very sparing use of color; while, to come nearer our own day, it may be safely said that few, if any, of the books issued by Copeland & Day, whose imprint is sadly missed from our shops, failed to show title pages which were thoroughly effective in their plain, dignified typography. "The Old Gentleman of the Black Stock," contains a remarkably good title page, rendered doubly effective by the half-length portrait of Basham Miles by H. C. Christy, admirably well printed in colors. The delightful volumes of English minor poets, which have been appearing for the last decade or so, aside from the interest of their contents, have long been noted for their typography and mechanical details, many of their title pages being extremely good in every way.

The title page found in the de luxe edition of Walter Pater, which is just appearing from the Macmillans, is altogether bold and dignified, and just sufficiently rubricated to add to its effectiveness. On the other hand, the title page to the Mackail life of William Morris, unfortunately, entirely lacks distinction, although a careful examination of it fails to show exactly why this should be. There is nothing to criticise in its composition, and yet the result is not sufficiently striking, which seems unusually unfortunate in a volume whose binding and typography are so fine in every other detail.

It would seem hardly fair to speak of the Kelmscott Press title pages but for the fact that no possible comparison could be made between commercial, or ordinary issues, and fine, limited editions. Therefore it will hardly be considered a criticism on the books mentioned above to speak of the delightful title pages, from the simplest to the most elaborate, always found in Morris's work.

And since we seem to have run off into a discussion of the title pages of the finer editions, it may be said that those found in books bearing the imprint of the Marion Press, although sometimes rubricated, depend most largely upon the beauty, dignity, and arrangement of the type for full artistic effect. The title pages of the Merrymount Press books are always good, although part of their effectiveness is more often due to use of ornament and rubrication.

The "Account of the Gibbs-Channing Portrait of Washington," by Mr. Samuel Putnam Avery, a privately printed book recently issued from the De Vinne Press, has a particularly fine title page, the charm of which lies to a great extent in a clever use of color on a page, which is first well composed. The large opening initial is partly rubricated, while a central ornament of poppies and leaves shows the flower colored in an odd shade of red, the leaves and tendrils being in black—the whole effect being particularly good.

Some of the books issued by Mr. William Loring Andrews have particularly striking title pages, his "Sextodecimos et Infra" showing a beautiful fac simile of one of these small books, in an embroidered binding, so well reproduced in colors as to show clearly all gradations of tone, even those produced by age, as well as differences in texture. His recently issued "Gossip About Book Collecting" shows on its title page a small but most delightfully executed copper-plate vignette by E. D. French, after Millet's "The Sower," which is fine in every detail.

Two other recent books, Mr. Andrews's "Trio of French Engravers," issued in the Fall of 1899, and the lately issued "Bibliography of the Compleat Angler," by Arnold Wood, have charming and unusual title pages. Both title pages show elaborate designs carefully worked out down to their smallest details, and engraved throughout on copper plates, and are most effectively printed on Japan paper. These title pages are so fine and so thoroughly in keeping with the character of the books that it is hard to decide whether one is finer than the other. The Andrews title page is lighter and more graceful, and so best suited to a book on the work of French engravers in miniature of the eighteenth century; while the Izaak Walton title page is so much more elaborate in its carefully worked out details, which consist almost entirely of marine subjects, that it suits a book of such character equally well.

Mr. De Vinne has partly promised us a book to be entirely devoted to the composition of title pages, which would seem to show how important a matter he thought it to be. In the meantime, it must be remembered that in his book on "The Practice of Typography" he tells us that a great deal of the present unsatisfactory work on title pages is due to the fact that the type founders of the present day usually end their series with a body of pica, adding that there is very little call for the larger sizes of Roman capitals necessary to insure good title pages. Mr. De Vinne says: "Book titles, always difficult to compose in good form, call for many sizes, and for a closely graded series of uniform face," which would seem to show conclusively that the chief fault lies with the type founder, and not with publishers and printers. The fact that the title pages in ordinary commercial issues are uniformly better in England than in America may also be due to the fact that the foreign type founders have recognized this need.

LONDON PUNCH WAKING UP.

It seems incredible that Sir John Tenniel, the famous caricaturist of Punch, should have preferred, up to his retirement the other day, to draw his things on the wood, when it is so much easier to do them freely and let the photographer bother with the size. The statement that "hereafter the drawings for Punch would be reproduced by the photomechanical processes" was a revelation of conservatism that has been willing to lag behind everybody else for fifteen or twenty years. In America we have almost done away with the wood block altogether, much to the sorrow of many who remember the beautiful and unequaled engravings by such men as Yuengling, Closson, King, Müller, Knell, French, and others, whose names ten years ago were so well known to magazine readers.

These men, however, were freed from the restrictions of the earlier days, before we had learned to photograph any drawing or painting directly on the block. Their work was even the more difficult, however, because they had to translate the tones and values of the original into line without any suggestion from the artist and to invent combinations of lines that would best serve to convey a clear impression of delicate textures. What they accomplished became the wonder of the art world. If at times vigor was lost in caring too much for tone, much remained to praise in the beauty and marvelous delicacy of the result. All the great draughtsmen of Punch—Keene, Leech, Richard Doyle, Tenniel, and many others—had to contend with the restricted space of the block and with the necessity for making the drawing in reverse. Then, too, in wood engraving something of the original is always lost; the engraver never makes an exact duplicate. If he cuts away a bit too much here or there he cannot restore the wood, but has to make the best of what is left. Apart from any question of artistic limitations—and with us they would seem insuperable in these rapid days—are the matters of time and cost.

A line drawing can be made ready for the press in a few hours, and one in wash or a painting reproduced in half tone in the same time. The difference in cost is very large. It was not uncommon, in the palmy days of wood engraving in America, to pay as much as $200 for a single page engraving, and for small sizes in proportion. Nowadays a large line drawing can be reproduced, page size, for $3, and a wash drawing in half tone for $8 or $10. Drawings cost more than they used to, and there are more men who have been specially trained in general art who are willing to do things for the periodical press. There is no longer any restriction as to size or color or any danger of the interposition of the personality of the engraver. The camera has no artistic preferences, but is content with the impersonal directness of a machine.

We lead the world in wood-engraving, and it is evident to the most casual observers of foreign and home-made magazines that we are ahead in the molding of photo-mechanical plates and in the printing of them. Even in color printing we are rivaling the best that France has done. Germany is still the home of the wood-engraver, as she was the mother of one of its greatest practitioners and founders; the art has degenerated into a most mechanical one. Cole and Wolf and The Century Magazine are still showing us some beautiful and worthy examples.

Moses Coit Tyler's Death and the Needs of Cornell.

Of the address made by President Jacob Gould Schurman at the banquet of the Cornell Alumni, in this city last Saturday, a report was printed in Sunday's NEW YORK TIMES. A reference which President Schurman made to the death of Moses Coit Tyler, omitted from that report, should find a place here. He said:

I cannot take my seat without adverting to the growth of an admirable espirit de corps in all the members of the University, and especially the instructing staff. To preside over the Cornell Faculty has always been a matter of pride to me, but it is now also a peculiar pleasure. Such cooperation, such fraternity, such mutual helpfulness and kindness, such unalloyed harmony—it is difficult to imagine anything more delightful! The deeper our regret at any break in the ranks! And one of the noblest, alas! has just fallen! On the last Sunday of the old year we committed to the earth—ashes to ashes, dust to dust—all that was mortal of our friend and colleague, Moses Coit Tyler. You recall that manly presence, that genial disposition, with the quiet, pervasive humor, that noble character, that generous and accurate scholarship, that polished and delightful style, those lectures which were at once instruction and inspiration to successive generations of students. Never again shall we see the man or hear his words. But the influence of his personality survives. It is men of the moral and intellectual calibre of Moses Coit Tyler that make the glory of a university. It is not enough for a university to furnish instruction in all forms of knowledge and discipline in the use of all the methods by which knowledge is obtained. You need also, as Huxley has well said, "the force of living example" to fire the student with a noble ambition to emulate the learning of the scholar and to follow the investigator in the exploration of new fields of knowledge. A university which aims to be the home of all knowledge, theoretical and practical, and which has in its faculty men like Moses Coit Tyler, has a mission in this Republic, whose extent no man can measure, and whose importance no man can overestimate.

President Schurman also set forth some of the pressing needs of the university, due to the increase in the number of students. With buildings and an equipment valued at $3,250,000, and invested funds of nearly $7,000,000, and with not a dollar of debt, the university needs further resources. He said, in detail:

We graduated last June 465 candidates, and since that time we have enrolled in all departments more than 3,000 students. The instructing staff numbers 327. To maintain that corps of teachers, to supply them with apparatus, equipment, and books; to provide for repairs, heat, light, and power; in other words, to conduct the university, both on its intellectual and material sides, taxes to the utmost the resources available for the purpose. Every foot of floor space on the campus, from attic to basement, is in requisition, and almost everywhere the rooms are overcrowded. The number of students this year is over 200 more than last year, when there was a similar increase over the preceding year. The Professor of Latin told me the other day that he had 100 more students enrolled this year than last. And I find that there are now registered in chemistry 1,358; in physics, 880; in French, 603; in German, 511; in English, 777, and that the Sibley College of Mechanical Engineering and Mechanic Arts has 634 students, while 361 persons who have already received bachelor's degrees are enrolled in the graduate and other departments. No one can realise how hard we are put to even to provide rooms for lectures, recitations, and laboratory work. We are in urgent need of two large buildings—one for physics and the other for languages—and I trust generous men of wealth may be induced to look into these investments and provide us the desired relief. In the department of physics the professor is obliged to repeat his sophomore lectures three times, simply for lack of a room large enough to hold the entire class. You know we are still without dormitories or halls of residence for our young men, who are thus missing infinite opportunities of mutual education. If we might open the century with the erection of three or four dormitories and two large halls, one for physics and the other for languages, and if an auditorium were provided large enough to accommodate all members of the university at public lectures and on ceremonial occasions, at least the most imperative needs of the university would be met, and we should face with hope and confidence the new century into which we have already entered. These seven additional buildings might cost about $1,000,000. I appeal to the public for that amount.

English Books Published Last Year.

From The London Publishers' Circular.

The books of 1898, the year of the Spano-American war, were 410 fewer than those of 1897. The books of 1899, when our Boer war began, were about the same in number as those of 1898. All the year 1900 that war has worried us, and our book list shows a fall of 418. But the fall is not in every class of book. The numbers have increased in politics and commerce, including South African politics and commerce; in voyages and travels, including voyages to and travels in South Africa; in history and biography, including South African events, territories, races, and notabilities; in year books, in medicine and surgery, including malarial medicine and military surgery; in arts and sciences, including the science of war. On war in general the number of books produced has been very large, on the South African war in particular more than one hundred books have been published during the last six months. The analytical table is divided into thirteen classes, also new books and new editions:

	1900.
Divisions.	New Books.	New Editions.
Theology, sermons, biblical, &c.	579	129
Educational, classical, and philological	613	110
Novels, tales, and juvenile works	1,563	546
Law, jurisprudence, &c.	101	46
Political and social economy, trade, &c.	390	107
Arts, sciences, and illustrated works	385	63
Voyages, travel, geographical research	174	70
History, biography, &c.	601	115
Poetry and the drama	296	74
Year books and serials in volumes	410	...
Medicine, surgery, &c.	192	74
Belles-lettres, essays, monographs, &c.	280	41
Miscellaneous, including pamphlets not sermons	177	5
Total	5,760	1,389
Total new books		5,760
Grand total		7,149

The totals in 1899 were: New books, 5,971; new editions, 1,596. Grand total, 7,567.

"The Twentieth Century Critic."

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

You are to be congratulated. The sentiment of your editorial utterance of Jan. 5 on "The Twentieth Century Critic," holding that the proper mission of the critic is to praise as well as to blame, has the speedy indorsement of competent authority. In his eulogy on the late Senator Cushman K. Davis yesterday, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, himself an author of distinction, designated as "a common error" the idea that eulogies are little to be believed, and added:

This error springs from another equally common, that criticism means fault finding, whereas true criticism, which alone is of value, consists quite as much in pointing out beauties as in enumerating defects.

Thankful indeed should the world be for the sanity that has rescued criticism from the cruel, swashbuckling methods of Jeffrey and Gifford. "Reviewers" like these men did more harm than good. They reveled in displays of what they mistakenly thought astuteness and "smartness," but which were in truth only advertisements of their own lack of discrimination, their perverse blindness, their callous brutality, or mayhap their downright ignorance.

Every author should be a rigid and honest self-examiner. Being so, he is no more apt to be unduly swayed—"spoiled"—by injudicious praise than cast down by wantonly unkind denunciation. In the new channels that intelligent criticism has of late years found for itself, critics are coming to be recognized by the author as safe guides, helpful mentors, and genuine friends rather than unhappy, pessimistic creatures whose every utterance is a mere outcropping of "bile." They assist materially in bringing out the best a writer is capable of, and have as reward not only ease of conscience and the indescribable joy of feeling that they have performed some of those good "works" so much more important than "faith," but legal title to part ownership in the future output of writers whom they have encouraged.

The century upon which we have just entered is one of Hope most luminant. Is it not reasonable to expect that among the benefits and blessings it has in store is a mutually pleasant and profitable co-operation of author and critic?

JOHN TALMAN.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 13.

"Emerson's Writings in The Dial."

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

As the compiler of a bibliography of Henry D. Thoreau, I have been deeply interested in Mr. Spofford's communication concerning Emerson's contributions to The Dial, and this because, from Mr. Spofford's copy of that periodical, containing Emerson's contributions, "marked by Mr. Emerson with his initials," some errors of mine are corrected.

In the "Bibliography of Henry David Thoreau," published by the Rowfant Club, I ascribed to Thoreau the following papers, as published in The Dial: "The Laws of Menu," Volume III., p. 331; "Sayings of Confucius," Volume III., p. 486; "Ethnical Scriptures. Chinese Four Books," Volume IV., p. 205; "The Preaching of Buddha," Volume IV., p. 301; "Ethnical Scriptures. Hermes Trismegistus," Volume IV., p. 402.

Of these five entries, Mr. Spofford attributes the following to Emerson: "The Laws of Menu," the above-mentioned papers on "Ethnical Scriptures," and "The Preaching of Buddha."

I compiled my bibliography during a severe attack of hero worship, having access to no library except my own, and the shamefully meagre one of the University of Michigan. (This was six years ago, and I owe it to the present librarian to avow that his untiring efforts have largely removed this regretted.) Among other material at my hands was Channing's "Thoreau: The Poet-Naturalist," and on Page 240 of that work he ascribes "The Laws of Menu" to Thoreau. I felt safe with Thoreau's most intimate friend for my authority. For my other entries I relied upon the interesting paper on "The Dial: An Historical and Bibliographical Introduction, with a List of the Contributors," by George Willis Cooke. (The Journal of Speculative Philosophy, Volume XIX., p. 225.) I append Mr. Cooke's list for comparison, with Mr. Spofford's.

"Veeshno Sarma." Cooke ascribes to Emerson. Spofford to Emerson.

"The Laws of Menu": Cooke—Not ascribed. Spofford—Emerson.

"Sayings of Confucius": Cooke—Thoreau. Spofford—Not mentioned.

"Ethnical Scriptures. Desatir": Cooke—Not ascribed. Spofford—Emerson.

"Ethnical Scriptures. Chinese Four Books": Cooke—Thoreau. Spofford—Emerson.

"Ethnical Scriptures. Hermes Trismegistus": Cooke—Thoreau. Spofford—Emerson.

"Ethnical Scriptures. Chaldean Oracles": Cooke—Not ascribed. Spofford—Emerson.

"The Preaching of Buddha. Selections": Cooke—Thoreau. Spofford—Emerson.

It is noteworthy that of these papers, Mr. Cabot, Emerson's literary executor, includes only "Veeshno Sarma." He does not mention any of the other entries, even in the list which he marks with a dagger as "doubtful."

Of course the contributions "marked by Mr. Emerson with his initials as written by him" must be accepted as authentic; yet Mr. Cooke speaks "as one having authority" when he says "several of the Ethnical Scriptures were selected by him [Thoreau] or with his aid." Moreover, Thoreau himself has made a bold claim to a somewhat intimate knowledge of the literature from which the Ethnical Scriptures are derived: "The reading which I love best is the scriptures of the several nations, though it happens that I am better acquainted with those of the Hindoos, the Chinese, and the Persians than those of the Hebrews, which I have come to at last."—"A Week on the Concord," &c., first edition, page 7.

Thoreau's copy of The Dial is now owned by Mr. F. B. Sanborn of Concord, Mass., and if Thoreau's contributions are marked with his hand, the fact will definitely settle this bibliographical muddle.

SAMUEL A. JONES.

Ann Arbor, Jan. 11, 1901.

Nearly One Hundred Responses.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

To a recent appeal to readers of THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW for a correct reproduction of the Ten Commandments in rhyme, familiar to the youth of sixty years ago, I have received nearly one hundred responses, most of which are from memory. A few quote directly from the printed page, giving the exact title and imprint of publication. The best version, taken from "The New England Primer," Congregational Publishing Society, (now Pilgrim Press,) Beacon Street, Boston, reads as follows:

1. Thou shalt have no more gods but me.
2. Before no idol bend thy knee.
3. Take not the name of God in vain.
4. Dare not the Sabbath day profane.
5. Give both thy parents honor due.
6. Take heed that thou no murder do.
7. Abstain from words and deeds unclean.
8. Steal not, though thou be poor and mean.
9. Make not a willful lie, nor love it.
10. What is thy neighbor's, dare not covet.

A more popular version is printed in the "Calvary Catechism," (place and date unknown,) "Songs for Little Ones at Home," (American Tract Society, New York,) and Bombaugh's "Gleanings for the Curious," (Lippincott,) and differs from the above mainly in beginning of the eighth and ninth lines with "Nor steal" and "Nor make."

I appreciate your valuable aid, as well as the thoughtful courtesy of many of your readers.

JAMES W. CHENEY, Librarian.

War Department Library, Washington, D. C., Jan. 14, 1901.

Libraries of New York State.

The annual report of the Public Libraries division of the New York State Library at Albany for 1900 contains returns from 1,035 libraries. Of these 460 are free for lending to the public, and, containing 2,187,125 volumes, circulated last year 8,432,445. The free libraries lent to the people an average of 23,157 books daily, 1,163 for each 1,000 of the population, and 367 for each 100 books in the libraries.

Other items in the report are also interesting:

Grants of money amounting to $26,891.43 were made to 173 libraries and branches on condition of equal amounts locally raised and all spent for approved books.

At the Regents' meeting Dec. 20, 1900, permanent library charters were granted to Patchogue Library, to Riverdale Library Association, and to the Women's Round Lake Improvement Society; provisional library charters for five years to Brewster Library, to Bristol Free Library, to Frankfort Free Library, to Haines Falls Free Library, to Roanoke Public Library, to Theresa Free Library, and Walden Public Library. The provisional library charters formerly granted to Cornwall-on-the-Hudson Public Library and to Newfield Public Library were made permanent.

The name of Syracuse Central Library was changed to Syracuse Public Library. The Brooklyn Library Association of the Eastern District was dissolved, its net property (about $3,800) to be transferred to the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences on the condition that each year fifty annual memberships be given to pupils of the public schools in Wards Thirteen and Nineteen of the Borough of Brooklyn.

Concerning traveling libraries and pictures, the report says that statistics do not vary materially from month to month, as the demand remains about the same. In December fifty-nine libraries were sent to forty-four different borrowers; fourteen wall pictures, 1,254 slides, two lanterns, and 573 photographs were lent to twenty-six schools and clubs.

In regard to study clubs we learn that the following clubs registered in December make the total now 432: Burnt Hills Clio Club, Canandaigua Young People's Reading Circle, Canisteo History Club, Delhi Monday Night Club, Fort Plain Monday Night Music Club, Heuvelton University Extension Club, Littlefalls Progress [illegible] New York Home Travelers' Club, [illegible] George's Sunday School Club, [illegible] Strollers' Club, Patchogue General Information Club, Poughkeepsie Oriental Research Club, (formerly Bible Study Class,) Rochester Cardinal Newman Reading Circle, Romo Zion Church Club, Rushford Cynthian Club, Troy Unity Club, Watervliet Shakspere Club. A new edition of the handbook on "Study Clubs," giving conditions of registry and privileges offered to registered clubs, is just issued and will be sent to any address on request.

The February number of Harper's Magazine will contain a short story by Edith Wharton, called "The Recovery." Prof. Brander Matthews will have an article on "Questions of Usage in Words," while Booth Tarkington will present the concluding portion of his romance of "Cherry." The same number will also contain an article on "Franz Von Lenbach," by Sidney Whitman.

Is It Worth 25 CENTS to see for three months the Magazine of which the following things have been said:

ANDREW CARNEGIE—"I think 'The World's Work' remarkable. When I read the first number I doubted whether you could keep it up to that standard. You make a splendid beginning."

GILBERT PARKER—"It is the kind of magazine which must appeal to every person who reads and thinks and works."

G. E. TARRELL, 2nd Vice-Pres. Equitable Life Assurance Co.—"I want to congratulate you on the high standard and superior excellence of the work you are undertaking, which I feel cannot help but meet with great success."

PAUL MORTON, Vice-Pres. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé R. R.—"I think the magazine is all right, and believe it will go. Your idea will commend itself to thinking men. I congratulate you on the appearance of the magazine."

FREDERIC EMORY, Dept. of State, Washington—"Permit me to congratulate you on the remarkable scope and variety of your magazine. I had no idea that you would be able to cover such a field. It is a revelation to me."

GEORGE EASTMAN, Eastman Kodak Co.—"I am much pleased with it—so much, indeed, that I am sending a subscription by same mail."

JOHN W. NAMAKER—"'The World's Work' will help the work of the world, if it is as well done as in the first number."

THOS. A. EDDY, Vice-Pres. Flint, Eddy & American Trading Co.—"I wish to congratulate you upon the successful initiation of so important a publication. It should be of the greatest value to manufacturers, particularly those seeking an extension of their trade in the world's markets."

CHARLES R. SKINNER, State Supt. Public Instruction, Albany, N. Y.—"Let me congratulate you upon the success of 'The World's Work.' I did not imagine there was a field for another monthly publication, but I am now satisfied that there is such a field and you are filling it admirably. It is just the publication for a busy man who is interested in the world's progress, and especially in the development of our own country."

THE WORLD'S WORK

is a new kind of magazine. It contains the literature of positive achievement, not threshing over old straw. Its articles are about freshest subjects, living men and what they do; our own country, its progress and its place among the nations. It is cheerful, suggestive and patriotic; it takes American achievement at its flood and reports and interprets it. There is not a vague or general article in it.

The pictures, too, are essential, and not made up or fanciful. They are beautiful and beautifully printed and every one helps to tell the story.

Printed in large type and sewed like a book.

Cut this out:

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO., 34 Union Square, New York.
Please send me The World's Work for three months.

Enclosed find 25 cents.

CRAWFORD.

His Volume on Sicily, Calabria, and Malta.

It is in vain that the modern historian looks to certain sites on the Mediterranean and attempts to find signs of a revival that shall play some important rôle in the civilization of the future. It is perhaps a paradox of the world's development that those places which at all ages have been recorded as possessing an extraordinary vitality have actually continued to exist simply because they have been untouched by enlightening political influences, and because they possessed no eternal spark themselves. They have not been found unattractive by the great nations that have arisen around them and passed away, but they have been inadequate to the task of self-development, or of conserving and drawing new inspiration from the many and varied civilizations that have been forced upon them at different times in their history. Hence the term "vitality" employed by historians may become the ironical expression of inertness, if not of stagnation.

That Calabria, Malta, and Sicily are what they are to-day is not owing to any vitality that they are erroneously said to possess, but because they have ever been too inert to profit by the vital touches that have been given them from without or to apply these touches to their own independent advancement. The influences which have shaped their course, the obstructions which have always arisen to bar the way to national progress, are entertainingly and instructively set forth in Mr. Crawford's chronicle-like book, "The Rulers of the South," the very title of which illustrates the irony of the fate which has made these territories the playground of the civilizations that at one time or another have prevailed throughout the Mediterranean.

Calabria, which geographically may be called "the toe of the Italian boot," is now divided into the Provinces of Cosenza, Reggio, Calabria, and Catanzaro. Like the adjacent islands of Sicily and Malta, it contains in its archaeological and ethnological aspects the remains of the foreign peoples that have been resident upon its shores, while its atmosphere seems burdened with the traditions of the past, and its people speak a soft dialect not unlike that of the Sicilians, but different from the sharp phrasings of the Maltese, which are emphasized with Arabic idiom. To-day Sicily is chiefly talked about as being the home of the Mafia and the birthplace of Crispi, and Malta as a convenient station for the British ships that, on their way to India, are to pass through the Suez Canal. But Mr. Crawford takes the reader back to that dim, far-distant past—

> When demigods made history and myth together, heroic beings moved upon the southern land and sea, in shapes of beauty and of strength, sometimes of terror, and pursued each other, changing and interchanging forms, appearing and disappearing, arising from the waters as a mirage and sinking into the bosom of the earth, then springing into life again elsewhere in the more vivid day of a nearer reality, half human still, but already mortal, to die at last, to be buried in tombs that endure, and to leave names behind them which history can neither quite accept nor wholly overlook.

Malta, known to the ancient Greeks as Ogygia, the residence of the nymph Calypso, whose grotto is still shown there, was first colonized by the Phoenicians, then visited by the Greeks, then subdued by the Carthaginians. Then came the Vandals in A. D. 454, the Goths in 533, the Arabs in 870, and the Normans, who united it with Sicily, in 1090. Later still were conflicts for the possession of the island between the Knights of St. John and the Turks, and in 1798 the treachery of Bonaparte gave the island to the French. Until the end of the Middle Ages the history of Malta and Calabria reflected that of Sicily, where the enterprise of the Phoenicians, the culture of the Greeks, the zeal for conquest of the Goths, and the religious and adventurous zeal of the Normans obtained firmer foothold and created out of the heterogeneous population that they found miniatures of their respective mother countries. This was particularly true of the Greeks, who made a little Hellas of Sicily, divided in parts, antagonistic one toward another, as were ever Attica, Boeotia, Achaia, Argolis, and Aetolia; but unlike the latter, the divisions of Greek Sicily were, owing to natural jealousies, rarely able to unite against a common enemy, or to enlist themselves in a common enterprise for their mutual advancement. From the Middle Ages onward the people, whether the descendants of the ancient Sicuii, the Phoenicians, Greeks, or Goths, drew gradually together, and, had the rising European powers then left them free for a time to develop along natural lines, we might to-day see Sicily the Holland of the Mediterranean, as Garibaldi, less than half a century ago, tried to make it. But it was not to be. Every political upheaval among the Latin nations found expression in Sicily, often with ruin and bloodshed, until the Sicilians, smarting under the rule of foreign masters, broke their bonds by the same means which had been employed to enslave them, only, after a little while, to fall victims to new conquerors, who brought with them new conceptions of life.

Mr. Crawford has written a unique work, and we believe that experts will regard it as one of authority. He draws most of his material from original sources, and the time and labor expended in such an undertaking must have been enormous. Nothing like it is found even in Italian literature—in Chiesi, di Giovanni, Lo Faso, or Amari. In fact, these authorities by comparison with Mr. Crawford's work are very often found to be at fault. For the most part, he ignores them without comment. More modern Italian scholarship he has a certain respect for, and he is not loath to cite from the non-academic pages of Cutrera and others who have made specific studies along the lines which he follows in general. And it is a curious fact, which, as it cannot be attributed to ignorance, intimates no small amount of absolute knowledge, that many well-established Italian traditions which are conspicuous in textbooks are entirely disdained by Mr. Crawford.

For example, he declares toward the end of his work that the derivation of the word Mafia is unknown, and that "it was first used in its present sense by the author of a famous play, 'I Mafiusi di la Vicaria,' which was produced in 1863." Acknowledged authorities, the author of "La Guerra dei Vespri Siciliani" among them, we believe, have said that the word and its peculiar significance date back to the Sicilian Vespers, in 1282, when the island ran with French blood to the cry of "Morte alle Francese Italia anelo," the initial letters of which form the word Mafia. What is really meant by the Mafia to-day as a means of executing or of obstructing justice Mr. Crawford fully explains in some of the most interesting pages of his book.

But it may be asked, Has such a work as "The Rulers of the South" any general use or interest? To which we unhesitatingly answer, yes. In putting the traditions, the legends, the chronicles of Sicily, Calabria, and Malta into a modern coherent form he has produced a most delightful series of romances, which for the classical scholar will give a new meaning to historical text books. But there is still another way in which the work may be regarded, and its mission in this respect is abundantly enhanced by the beautiful drawings of Mr. Brokman and the photographic illustrations, but of it we prefer to let the author speak for himself:

> My task is ended. If the curiosity of my readers is unsatisfied, let them visit the south and seek out for themselves those things which they desire to know; if they are disappointed with the story of twenty centuries, as I have told it, let them look into the fathomless archives of southern history and read in half a dozen languages and dialects the thousand tales which I have left untold. In either case I shall not have labored in vain. If any, after reading this book, are tempted to wander through some of the most beautiful and memorable places in the world, or if any, desiring more knowledge, are impelled to pursue the study of classic history or the romantic chronicles of Norman times, I am more than repaid for having attempted what is perhaps impossible.

"THE RULERS OF THE SOUTH: SICILY, CALABRIA, MALTA. By Francis Marion Crawford. With 100 drawings by Henry Brokman and photographic reproductions. In two volumes. Pp. 392 and 408. 8vo. With index and full chronological table. New York: The Macmillan Company. London: Macmillan & Co. $6. In large paper edition, limited to 150 copies, $12.50.

The High Schools of New York.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

When Tammany regained control of this city in 1898, there was a general cry that the high schools established under Mayor Strong's administration would be abolished. So far, however, Tammany has not shown such a violent opposition to high schools as has a gentleman outside that organization—Mr. Coler. That THE TIMES should join forces with him in an attack on such schools in an editorial in THE TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW of Jan. 5 came as a surprise to many of your readers. It seems as if THE TIMES had been led astray by the many unfounded statements of Mr. Coler about a subject which even his omnipotence does not include.

The subject of high schools and how far they ought to be a burden on the public treasury has been fought about so often in all sections of this country that it would seem that the people of New York City might be spared a repetition of the arguments for and against the maintenance of such schools. It was thought by many that the last word had been said when Mr. Frank A. Hill, Secretary of the Massachusetts State Board of Education, published his paper on "How Far the Public School is a Just Charge on the Public Treasury." Probably a perusal by Mr. Coler of that paper might make him waver in his attack on the high schools and lead him to withdraw statements which he has made unwisely because of his ignorance of the literature relating to public education and because of his unfamiliarity with the conditions in the high schools of this city and with the class of pupils who attend them.

His "rushing into print" about a subject of which he knows very little only has the effect of hurting his reputation for accuracy in matters with which he is more conversant. When, however, THE TIMES leads an attack on the higher schools, it calls for a much more careful consideration.

Granting that the three high schools now in existence in the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx accommodate only a small proportion of the total school population, nevertheless the good they do is felt by all. The high schools here have been in operation too short a time for the average citizen to appreciate this, but it is only too well known in communities where the high schools have existed for years. In these places, and the same will eventually be true of New York, the high schools occupy the same position toward the elementary schools as the colleges occupy toward the high schools. For many years all movements for the improvement of education and educational methods have originated in our colleges. These have insisted on the raising of the standard of instruction in the high school, and in order to accomplish this the high school teachers have felt the necessity of seeing that their pupils come to them with a better preparation. So the standard is raised in all schools. If we were to abolish the high schools, however, the forces exerted by the colleges for the improvement of educational standards would be scarcely felt by the grammar schools, which would remain stationary.

Nothing better illustrates the truth of this statement than the condition of the New York elementary schools as compared with schools of the same grade in communities where the high school has long been an ideal for both pupils and teachers. One of our best and most earnest School Commissioners has said that the schools of our city were fifty years behind the times before Mayor Strong's administration, and it is not surprising that Dr. J. M. Rice, in his articles in The Forum, reserved his most scathing criticisms for New York schools. No matter how much of the evil was due to a faulty school system, no such backwardness would have been possible had the beneficent influences of the college been felt in the grammar school through the medium of the high school.

What THE TIMES seeks in the other part of the editorial is certainly impossible. It is so human for everybody of any worth to look forward to advancement, to some position of greater distinction and remuneration that to deny the hope of such stultifies healthy growth. As long as high intellectual attainments are counted by the world as deserving of the greatest respect, so long will the teacher of the lowest grade in an elementary school be ambitious to teach in the highest, the grammar school teacher to teach in the high school, and the high school teacher to teach in a college. When an ambition is so natural and healthy, it is absurd to hear teachers constantly reproached with being dissatisfied with their positions because of their desire to rise higher. The thwarting of such an ambition certainly results in a poor teacher.

The second proposal of THE TIMES, to put the best teachers in the lower grades and the least efficient in the higher, and to pay the latter the least, is certainly novel to most educators. It requires less preparation to fit the teachers of elementary grades for their positions, and, notwithstanding what THE TIMES says, the teaching required in those grades is far less wearing on the teacher than the work required in the high school and the last grades of the grammar school. Those two elements alone would call for higher salaries for the more advanced grades. Even if the teachers of the lowest grades were paid the highest salaries, it would by no means follow that the best teachers would be had for those positions, for salary is not everything to the good teacher. Those teachers who would seek to remain in the lower grades simply because the salaries were higher would be of the kind who did not aspire to attain a more intellectual standing in educational matters.

Unfortunately the argument advanced by THE TIMES for such a radical change would apply equally to most of our institutions. The best and highest paid professors in our colleges would have to teach freshmen, while the worst and poorest paid would give instruction to the graduates—all on the theory of the best service to the greatest number. Salaries in our libraries, in our hospitals, in our departments of police and justice would have to be reversed. Skill and great ability due to length of training would count for naught simply because relatively fewer people came into actual contact with the higher officials. What an anomaly for the boy and the citizen to find that as he went higher, his teachers, his surgeons, and his judges became less and less efficient. It would be better that high schools and Supreme Courts did not exist, for what respect would their officers command?

The teachers of New York City enjoy little enough respect as it is, and the plan proposed by THE TIMES and Mr. Coler would only tend to lessen it. There is no city in this country where the social position of the teacher is so low as here, none where the teacher is of so little force in the community. This has been largely due to the low salaries on which they have been kept for years. It was good to have THE TIMES come out in support of maintaining the increases lately awarded them. Many people argue: "We can get good teachers for $500 a year." Perhaps it would be sufficient to reply that there are many good lawyers who would take positions in the United States Circuit Courts at $5,000 a year, but do we want them? J. S.

New York, Jan. 14, 1901.

Origin of New York Churches.

Two volumes of records relating to the ecclesiastical history of the State of New York will soon be ready under the supervision of the State Historian, Mr. Hugh Hastings. In 1890, according to the conditions of a legislative appropriation, the Rev. Dr. Edward T. Corwin undertook the task of copying and translating the documents in the possession of the ecclesiastical archives of Amsterdam and The Hague relating to the Colonial history of this State and for their preparation for publication. The two volumes just issued represent 50 per cent. of the entire matter included by the researches of Dr. Corwin and cover the period from 1632 to 1700, or, in other words, the chronicle of the Dutch rule, the conquest of the Dutch by the English, the temporary reversion to Dutch authority, the restoration of the English domination, and the Leisler rebellion, all of which throw considerable light for the first time upon many religious questions.

In a very comprehensive and painstaking introduction Dr. Corwin points out the various values which may be attached to work of this nature—ecclesiastical, historical, sociological—and sketches the former achievements in this field, beginning with the foundation of the New York Historical Society, in 1804. And, in connection with the doctor's own special work, it is of interest to note that as far back as 1839 a bill was passed authorizing the appointment of an agent to visit England, Holland, and France to secure copies of "all desirable documents." In January, 1841, J. Romeyn Brodhead, former Secretary of the American Legation at The Hague, was selected as the agent. In Holland Mr. Brodhead obtained about 4,000 pages of transcripts. In England about 17,000, and in Paris about 6,000. He was greatly disappointed to learn while in Holland that the records of the West India Company had been sold in 1821 for old paper. The Brodhead transcripts were ultimately published in ten volumes, and from them several histories of the State drew their inspiration, including O'Callaghan's "History of New Netherlands," and Brodhead's "History of New York." But concerning the first quest of ecclesiastical documents for their own sake, Dr. Corwin gives this interesting bit of information:

> When Mr. Brodhead started on his mission, the Rev. Dr. Thomas De Witt, one of the pastors of the Collegiate Church of New York, requested him to seek access also to some of the ecclesiastical archives in Holland, to ascertain whether there was not material to be found therein which would throw light on the early history of the churches of New York and New Jersey. This request was in perfect harmony with his main enterprise, and he cheerfully consented. His letter, making application to the ecclesiastical authorities in Holland, in 1841, for permission to search their archives, was found by the writer in his recent researches, as well as several letters of the Rev. Thomas De Witt bearing on the same subject.

The researches in this direction, conducted by Mr. Brodhead, were by no means exhaustive, and Dr. Corwin's work, conducted for the General Synod prior to his appointment by the State, revealed this fact. At The Hague he examined the archives of the General Synod and made extracts from the Acts of the Old Classis of all items relating to New York and New Jersey, extending from 1632 until 1810, when the last lament is recorded, "No news from New York and New Jersey." The minutes of the "Deputies of the Classis on Foreign Affairs" were next examined with the same object in view. Then came the correspondence between the Classis of Amsterdam and the Colonial Churches, the minutes of the Synod of North Holland and the archives proper of the General Synod of the Church of the Netherlands. Concerning the general and particular worth of the material thus obtained Dr. Corwin writes:

> To the historian original documents are invaluable. The transcriptions now secured constitute the fundamental facts of the ecclesiastical history of New York and New Jersey. About three-fourths of these documents relate to New York and one-fourth to New Jersey, but they cannot very well be separated, and ought not to be. They represent much of the social history of Colonial times, although they, of course, relate chiefly to the religious history. There are also not a few allusions to civil matters, which cannot fail to be of interest to the general civil history of these States. Indeed, the social, civil, and religious histories in Colonial times were so closely blended that they cannot be altogether divided. This fact abundantly appears in the Documentary History of New York, and in the Colonial Documents of the same State. The same also appears in the similar set of volumes styled, "The Archives of New Jersey." The general tone of the documents obtained also gives a true and living picture of the religious life of Holland during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. They show a genuine spirit of piety, and great zeal to promote the spiritual interests of the Colonial churches.

Dr. Corwin has deemed it wise in such a collection to incorporate material other than that referring to the Reformed Church, such as the repeated applications for charters by other denominations under the Dutch colonial rule and the three college charters of New York and New Jersey of the colonial period. "These," he concludes, "are those of the College of New Jersey, (now at Princeton,) 1746; Kings (Columbia) College, New York City, 1753; Queens (Rutgers) College, New Brunswick, 1766 and 1770. Occasionally, also, church calls, with their varying forms of phraseology, according to the periods and the struggles of the times, have been included; also certain civil legislation, bearing on the churches, as well as certain judicial decisions relating to the same, anticipating the dawn of full religious liberty; or where this was found to be impracticable, at least an abstract of such facts, with references to the documents, have been inserted at the proper points. It adds but little to the bulk of the work to include the documents from all denominations, or at least abstracts and references to the same. This also adds greatly to the value of the work, making it more unique and complete as 'Original Documents Relating to all the Religious Bodies of Colonial Times in New York and New Jersey,' for these two Provinces were generally under one Governor."

The Boston Authors' Club.

When the Boston Authors' Club celebrated its first anniversary Saturday before last, it held up its head without fearing the world's laugh. Indeed, had it been so inclined, it might have laughed at the world as represented by the metropolitan press, inasmuch as the prophecies had not been fulfilled with which the latter christened it—the prophecies that it probably would not survive six months. Yet why in its earliest infancy should it have been considered moribund, since it had a constitution modeled exactly on that of the New York Authors' Club? The New York club, every one knows, enjoys the highest degree of good health. The chief respect in which the Boston club differs from its New York model is in the matter of admitting women, and in the fact that it has no home of its own. It is possibly because it admits women to membership that its social gatherings have been largely of the tea-bibbing variety, but the tax on tea is so much less at present than on any other cheering liquid that it can easily be understood why Puritanic Boston should prefer tea to the more exhilarating forms of refreshment. As to a home of its own, Boston authors themselves are so well supplied with homes that the spirit of friendly rivalry has been very marked among members in the offers of hospitality to the club. At the annual meeting held at The Vendome this week, the report of the Treasurer, Mr. Herbert D. Ward, showed a good balance in the Treasury, and the Secretary, Miss H. M. Winslow, reported but one resignation during the year, with several names on the waiting list. The limit of membership is 100, a small number in a city like Boston, where every tenth person is suspected of having written a book.

The most determined scoffer cannot deny, however, that a majority of the names on the list are fairly well known—Mrs. Howe, Col. Higginson, Robert Grant, Mrs. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward, Elbridge S. Brooks, Hezekiah Butterworth, Curtis Guild, Edward Everett Hale, Mrs. Louis Agassiz, Prof. Hugo Munsterberg, Prof. G. H. Palmer, Prof. Josiah Royce, Kate Sanborn, Mary E. Wilkins, John T. Towbridge, T. Russell Sullivan, Elizabeth Phipps Train, Arthur Gilman, Ashton Willard, Vida D. Scudder, Mrs. Harriet Prescott Spofford, Mrs. Mabel Loomis Todd, Sophie Swett, Mrs. Laura E. Richards, Bliss Perry, Prof. A. B. Hart, Caroline Hazard, Nathan Haskell Dole, Abby Morton Diaz, and Winston Churchill—have all a reputation that is far more than local, and, indeed, if the whole list were given there would be hardly a baker's dozen regarding whose work the average intelligent reader would demand any explanation. At the same time, it may be noted that a few well-known Boston authors are not in the club. Of these, two or three are averse to all clubs, two or three are too busy to add other engagements to their list, and none is in any way unfriendly to the Authors' Club. Some of those who have not joined say that they fail to see what purpose such a club can serve. But in a community that is inclined to take itself rather seriously the Author's Club is willing to say that it exists for social purposes only—to give its members an opportunity for knowing one another better. At the annual meeting Col. T. W. Higginson presided in the place of Mrs. Howe, the President, and his very witty speech congratulated the members on having had no aim beyond this. He advised them not to be troubled as to whether or not they were really representative authors, since the judgment of contemporaries is not always of the greatest value. Papers and formal "exercises" have no part in the programme of the Authors' Club, and only at the annual meeting is there anything of the kind. The club has some aspirations toward a room of its own, where books by members, pictures, and other things worth collecting might be seen. But even though such a clubroom should be established, the social meetings at the houses of members would continue. The metropolis may laugh at these domestic gatherings, but they seem to suit the less Bohemian taste of Boston.

The officers for the ensuing year are: President—Mrs. Julia Ward Howe; Vice Presidents—Mrs. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward and Mr. Hezekiah Butterworth; Secretary—Miss Helen M. Winslow; Treasurer—Mr. Herbert D. Ward; Directors—Mrs. M. A. Ward, Mrs. Elbridge S. Brooks, and Mr. Sam Walter Foss.

Edward Everett Hale's Complete Works.

BOSTON, Jan. 17.—The best planned complete editions have a wicked way of going beyond control and refusing to become complete within set limits, and here is the library edition of Dr. Edward Everett Hale's works ending without the promised sermons, which, in pulpit phrase, are "reserved for another occasion." One reason for this is that the sermons most wanted for this volume, although Unitarian, are sufficiently full of total depravity to conceal themselves when desired, and, for the moment it is impossible to replace them. The "last" volume, then, contains poems, "Nicolette and Aucassin," certain "Literary Essays," some of them dramatic, and specimens of editorial work taken from "Old and New," the magazine from which so much was expected in the middle seventies, and in which there really were so many admirable things. "Tom" Appleton and Dr. Chartineau, Mrs. Stowe, and St. John Tyrwhitt met there, and there began the Lend a Hand organizations and all the other branches of Wadsworth's work. In those editorial talks, the offspring of the Noctes Ambrosianae, like the Autocrat's, like Mr. Wildman's "Talked in the Sanctum," like scores of similar discussions, appeared the personages of many of Mr Hale's former stories, speaking in character and speaking very well, for Dr. Hale's Christianity, although it may enable him to love a stupid fellow-man, has never made him sufficiently charitable to love a stupid hero. Herein he is surpassed by many authors, especially by those trying to write a purely American novel and succeeding in writing one quite free of all English merits. When he found it necessary, he made a sudden end of all these good folk, sending them to the succor of an appearance which might be a shipwrecked vessel and might be the ghost of the Palatine. Other characters, it will be remembered, went aloft in "The Brick Moon" and there abide. This way of disposal is much better than heart disease, or the plague, or a convent, because it does not close all avenues for return to life and action. What a pleasant company they were, these well-bred, well-read, ingenious, clever, philanthropic, shrewd men and women of affairs, each one capable of managing any possible enterprise, a company of Peter Coopers and John M. Forbeses, all married to the best possible woman! And by what a company of sensible, capable, working folk each one a creation, are they attended! Col. Ingraham's "double," the too-obedient Dennis, is the only one who could possibly object to his own portrait.

The single complete novel in the edition "Philip Nolan's Friends" has enjoyed no small measure of success since its revival in this edition, but, being only a historical novel, it can never have such influence as has emanated from the short stories. "A New England Boyhood," with its faithful record of life as it was lived in the United States before steam and the Irish immigration revolutionized it, will always be valuable, and "Syvans," "How to Do It," and "How to Live" will be powerful as long as any of their suggestions are not universally adopted. The "Addresses and Essays" each in its way and time were valuable, and they constitute a series of milestones along the path traveled by American civilization. Noting their dates, one can see to what the country had not attained when they had appeared. Absolutely pure elections, universal consciousness of the citizen's responsibility, has not yet come, but that it is on the way is in no small degree Dr. Hale's work.

The verses in this volume have the motto from the "Memoir of Frederic Ingham," "If it were his duty to write verses, he wrote verses; to fight slavers, he fought slavers; to write sermons, he wrote sermons, and he did one of these things with just as much alacrity as the other." These verses, collected by Dr. Hale's friends and given to him on his seventieth birthday, are, to speak the truth, of the kind which most educated men may be entrapped into writing in the name of charity. On the other hand, those which are really the closing passages of sermons are spirited, thoughtful, and excellent, and make one regret the sermons themselves. Some day those will come, and it will be strange if there be not two volumes of them to be found in the work of fifty years. Dr. Cogswell once told Dr. Hale that a sermon was the expression of eternal truth in the language of to-day, for the purpose of to-day; that if it did this well its value for the time cannot be overstated, but that precisely in proportion as it fitted the day well, it lost its value for other days. Dr. Hale agrees with this, but there are so many souls anywhere from a year to a century behind their time that the value of a good sermon endures long after—its preacher has forgotten that he ever thought its thoughts. He once told Beecher that he kept his manuscript sermons because "a man likes to know what he used to think." "I do not know that," answered Beecher; "I want to know what I think now."

One lays down the tenth volume with regret. The coming of the series was one of the pleasures of last year, and to renew one's intimate acquaintance with stories and essays was a delight hardly to be exaggerated. As it passes, one is conscious of wondering admiration for work so powerful and so varied, although in reality only the diversions of an arduous profession eagerly and assiduously followed. These are what one man may do in his leisure, while another is shrieking for all Macedonia to come over and help him do half as much in his hours of labor. There has been no small lamentation in this retrospective time for the old-fashioned minister of the days when Church and State were outwardly one. Was he any more worthy of reverence than the ministers of Dr. Hale's type—the men who preach that man should be the same in the State and in the Church, and show him, by example, how it may be effected?

TO EVERYONE sending us a dollar and a half we will forward a copy of "WITH RING OF SHIELD" (12th thousand, price $1.50) and a very handsome cloth edition of the latest literary sensation, "AN ENGLISHWOMAN'S LOVE LETTERS." Our purpose is twofold. First, to secure a valuable list of book buyers. Second, to ascertain just how valuable The Times is as an advertising medium for books.—R. F. Fenno & Company, 11 E. 16th St., New York.

The Best Selling Book in America

EBEN HOLDEN

By IRVING BACHELLER

225th THOUSAND

WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS

"I have read 'Eben Holden' with a great joy in its truth and freshness. You have got into your book a kind of life not in literature before, and you have got it there simply and frankly. It is 'as pure as water and as good as bread.'"

MARGARET E. SANGSTER

"It is sweet with the smell of the balsam. Whenever one finds a real book he or she owes it to the rest to tell them about it, that they may read and enjoy it too. So I pass the word along: 'read Eben Holden.'"

MARY E. WILKINS

"It seems to me a most remarkable production, way and way ahead of 'David Harum,' which is not to be mentioned in comparison with it. 'Eben Holden' is simply adorable. I have not read a book in many a day by an American author which has so pleased me."

AMELIA E. BARR

"I congratulate you on having given the world a pure, strong natural story. It is as far above 'David Harum' as noonday is above dawn."

EDMUND CLARENCE STEDMAN

"It is a forest-scented, fresh-aired, bracing and wholly American story of country and town life. . . . If, in the far future, our successors wish to know what were the real life and atmosphere in which the country folk that saved this nation grew, loved, wrought and had their being, they must go back to such true and zestful and poetic tales of 'fiction' as 'Snow Bound' and 'Eben Holden.'"

12mo, gold lettered on red cloth, gilt top, $1.50.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS

LOTHROP PUBLISHING COMPANY, Boston

Margarita van Slichtenhorst's Autobiography.

An odd but interesting little contribution to the early Dutch records regarding biographical memoirs of the pioneer settlers of this country has just been published by Mrs. Morris P. Ferris. Mrs. Ferris has written several articles of a historical nature in the past, and she is the author of the little history of the old Van Courtlandt house which was adopted by the Society of Colonial Dames as the official history, and is sold at the house, which is now a museum of Colonial antiquities, as an aid toward defreying the expenses.

Mrs. Ferris's latest publication is a little poem in fifteen stanzas, in the nature of an autobiography of Margarita van Slichtenhorst. This young woman was born in 1628 and came to this country with her father and brother in 1648. Her father was for many years Resident Director of the Colony of Rensselaer Wyck, of which Fort Orange, now Albany, was the chief settlement. Young Margarita married on Dec. 12, 1650, Capt. Philip Pieterse Van Schuyler, and many of the Knickerbocker families trace their descent to this union. Three or four stanzas, in which this pioneer Dutch girl is represented as relating some of her experiences in her new home, will show the spirit of the poem:

I go to church, and stand up straight
If Jufvrouw Ganesvoort make me wait
Till her footstove's put in the proper nook,
And the Clerk begins to read God's Book.

The church is cold and the prayers so long,
And Jufvrouw Bancker says it's wrong
Not to hear each word from the Dominie,
But my thoughts will go to the Zuider Zee.

I can make good supaan as is ever found,
And olijkoeks that are large and round,
And roellachejes that would make you wish
To taste of the famous Holland dish.

I spin and make the clothes we wear,
And darn with the greatest possible care,
And keep the linen white as snow,
For my father likes to have it so.

L'AIGLON

IN FRENCH

By EDMOND ROSTAND

The Great Dramatic and Literary Success

Paper, - - $1.00, net.
Cloth, - - $1.50, net.

READ ALSO

"THE ROMANCE OF L'AIGLON"

Authorized translation from the French of

CAROLUS

Not the play, but a story treating of the same characters and covering the same period.

Cloth, 50 cents

AT ALL DEALERS AND BY THE PUBLISHERS

BRENTANO'S.

NEW YORK.

"A novel of singular brilliancy and promise."—London News.

JOHN THISSETON,

By MISS MARIAN BOWER, 12mo, $1.60.

HENRY HOLT & CO., NEW YORK

M. F. MANSFIELD, 14 W. 22, N.Y.

Blessed Damozel—Rossetti	75c.
Brain and Body—Allen	1.00
Gentle Art of Good Talking	75c.

Catalogue on Request.

BOOKS AND AUTHORS.

A NEW EDITION OF GEORGE ELIOT.—In the forty years since "Scenes of Clerical Life" appeared anonymously in England the place of its author in English literature, while not beyond dispute, has remained, for the most part, secure. Evidently she gains admirers with age. A new edition of her complete works, called the "Personal" edition, will be published in March by Doubleday, Page & Co. The features of this edition will be the illustrations and introductions to each volume. These introductions, by Mrs. Esther Wood, will show from George Eliot's own letters, as far as possible, how the various stories came to be written and who were the persons from whom the author drew her inspiration in the portrayal of the characters of her novels. The illustrations will show the homes and haunts of George Eliot, as well as many of the landmarks connected with her stories, with such views as the Floss in flood and the Rev. Mr. Tryon's church, together with two hitherto unpublished portraits of the author and her father from drawings made by Charlotte M. Bray, with fac similes of manuscripts, dedications, &c. The edition will be in twelve volumes, divided as follows: Volume I., "Life of George Eliot" and "Scenes of Clerical Life"; Volume II., "Adam Bede"; Volume III., "The Mill on the Floss"; Volume IV., "Romola," (Part I.); Volume V., "Romola" (Part II.) and "Silas Marner"; Volume VI., "Felix Holt, Radical"; Volumes VII. and VIII., "Middlemarch"; Volumes IX. and X., "Daniel Deronda"; Volume XI., "Essays"; Volume XII., "Poems."

SARAH GRAND AND HER NEW NOVEL.—Mme. Sarah Grand's new story, which will be published in February under the title of "Babs the Impossible," with illustrations by A. I. Keller, is a tale of an unconventional young aristocrat with most naïve ideas in regard to the opposite sex. The book will bear the imprint of Harper & Brothers. To the same source of information, which conveys to us the intelligence that her visit to America has been postponed for a month or two, we gather a couple of stories concerning the author of "The Heavenly Twins." Robert Buchanan in the midst of one of his fierce ink battles was one day giving, with much dryness, the details of a conversation he had had with a notorious moon-lighter in Ireland—a conversation in which he had been trying to show the man the uselessness, as well as the immorality, of "potting landlords." "But poet," said Sarah Grand, "surely your advice had little effect, for the man must have known that you yourself are always potting eminent people—ink-potting them."

THE HENRY VAN DYKE YEAR BOOK.—"The Friendly Year," a volume of selections in prose and verse from the writings of Dr. Henry van Dyke, has had an uncommon success for a book of this kind. The first edition, issued not many months ago, comprised 5,000 copies, but was exhausted almost immediately. A second edition has since been issued, with similar results, and now a third edition is on hand for the Easter season. The royalty on this volume is devoted to the support of a free library among the poor on the east side of the city.

THE ANGLO-SAXON REVIEW AT QUARTER PAGE.—The forthcoming number of Mrs. George Cornwallis-West's quarterly, (Vol. VII.,) the Anglo-Saxon Review, will be presented in this country through G. P. Putnam's Sons, and not, as formerly, by John Lane. In London the book will be published by Mrs. Cornwallis-West, whose former name, Lady Randolph Spencer Churchill, is still attached to The Review as a sort of editorial nom-de-guerre. Volume VII. will have among its illustrations photogravure reproductions of Sir Thomas Lawrence's "Napoleon II., King of Rome"; Gainsborough's "Mrs. Gordon," Francisco Goya's "Arthur Wellesley, Duke of Wellington," together with a portrait of Mme. du Barry. Among the articles are "Note of the Binding of the Volume," by Cyril Davenport, F. S. A.; "A Study in Dreams," by William Hodgson; "Drawbacks of Certain Games," by Andrew Lang; "The Bridal Hymn of Catullus," by W. H. Mallock; "Abraham Lincoln," by Joseph Choate; "England and America 'Strangers Yet,'" by Arnold White, and "The Spirit of Romance," by Egerton Castle. Possibly the most interesting feature of the publication of the periodical under new auspices is the fact that the price has been reduced from $6 a copy to $1.50, and yearly subscriptions from $24 to $6. The form of the quarterly will continue to be small folio, bound in specially designed leather.

JOHN OLIVER HOBBES.—Mrs. Craigie's "Love and the Soul Hunters," which will be published shortly, is based on the text, "Thus saith the Lord God will ye hunt the souls of My people? And will ye slay the souls that should not die—and save the souls alive that should not live, by your lying?" This sounds somewhat enigmatic, and when it is further added that the motive of the story is that the hero thinks he may lead a wild life because the heroine is devoted to him, the mystery deepens. The book will be about the length of "Robert Orange." Meanwhile Mrs. Craigie is wintering in Egypt and writing a new play. Admirers of this writer sometimes ask themselves what was the origin of her pseudonym, "John Oliver Hobbes." It was first used in the Pseudonym Library over a little study story, "Some Emotions and a Moral." The remembrance of the publisher of this library is that Mrs. Craigie simply turned about for a good, sensible sort of signature, and that the quest led her to "John Oliver Hobbes." No doubt many folks still know their author by it only, for the details of fame are not universal knowledge, but it is a very good pseudonym, for it suggests plainness, common sense, and experience.

MILLE LAC.—"Mille Lac: An Account of An Archaeological Exploration in Minnesota During the Summer of 1900," by J. V. Brower and D. I. Bushnell, Jr., has just been announced by Messrs. Dodd, Mead & Co., in an edition limited to 300 numbered copies, of which 200 are for sale at $8 per copy. The book contains about 150 pages, 9½x12 inches, and is bound in buckram, with leather label, and fully illustrated by 50 half-tone plates from photographs of the region about Mille Lac, its mounds and implements, as well as with eight charts, beginning with Capt. Carver's map of 1760 down to the chart of the present expedition. The present is the first of all the archaeological expeditions among the mounds of Minnesota, in which attempt has been made through original exploration, the application of historical events, and the traditions of local Indians, to determine the identity of these mound builders. Mr. Brower, author of "Memoirs of Explorations in the Basin of the Mississippi," and Mr. Bushnell, a life member of the Minnesota Historical Society, selected the shores of Mille Lac, a lake in the central part of Minnesota, because that region abounds in mounds and other earthworks of various sizes and characters, and because it was the earliest known field of observation in Minnesota. Prof. Fiske, in his "Discovery of America," has said we may safely speak of the makers of these ancient earthworks as "Indians," Mr. Bushnell, at the conclusion of the explorations at Mille Lac, stating: "There is ample proof to justify the assertion that the ancestors of the present Sioux Indians constructed mounds, lodge circles, and embankments in the Mille Lac Basin; and also that the stone and flint implements found there were made and used by the same nation of people." There may also be had a few copies of the two earlier volumes of this series at $8 per copy.

PRINCE OTTO.—As is well known, Robert Louis Stevenson's "Prince Otto" was long since translated into French by Egerton Castle, and now we have French versions of two of Kipling's most celebrated books—both series of the Jungle Books, "Le Livre de la Jungle: par R. Kipling; traduction de L. Fabulet et R. d'Humières," and the second series—in little 12mo volumes, published in Paris during the Autumn, and to be had of the English booksellers at 3s 6d net each. Another dainty little 12mo book recently issued in Paris, at the same price net, is "Portraits Imaginaires, par Walter Horatio Pater; traduction de G. Khropff; introduction par d'Arthur Symons," Paris. These volumes can doubtless be found at or ordered through any good bookshop in this city.

AN OLD FAMILY HOUSE.—The Triptych, organized lately for designing bookplates, initials, and other decorations, has just finished "this last Yuletide of the passing century," a poem, "The Old Homestead," by Delia Bidwell Ward, which has been issued in an edition of 100 copies, "arranged, illustrated, and overseen by the Triptych." As would be expected from its title, this poem describes Mrs. Ward's old family house in Connecticut. Mr. Jay Chambers is responsible for the volume's decorations, which have been made from sketches taken on the spot. The poem is attractively printed in black on a peculiar heavy gray-blue paper, the illustrations being printed in various shades of blue, while its cover is in heavy blue paper, lettered in darker blue. The colophon is remarkably good, showing three monkish figures examining an open book, this portion being printed in blue, while the descriptive text relating to the book is in the type of the poem, and, like it, printed in black. The full-page frontispiece shows a charming view of the old house, two stories and garret, while a full-page tailpiece shows the rear of the house, in which the sloping roof runs down so far as to make the rear only one story high.

POEMS BY ALEXANDER BLAIR THAW.—A volume of verses that seems to strike a middle chord in love, hope, reverence, and other worthy emotions to which the human heart is prone, is being published by John Lane. The title page sets forth the author's name as Alexander Blair Thaw, which may be pleasantly recalled by those who are accustomed, for one reason or another, to peruse magazine poetry as it has recently been revealed in the pages of The Critic, The New England Magazine, The Overland, The Cosmopolitan, and The Atlantic Monthly. In fact, the varied character of the periodicals in which much of Mr. Thaw's verse has appeared, is suggestive of the verse itself. As has been said, his poetry strikes a middle chord, and this means that it is neither too sentimental nor too rational, philosophical nor simple, florid nor tame, but verse of fine literary quality in conception and execution, verse in which the imagination is tempered with an appreciation for mere common sense. Here are a few well-balanced lines, "To Robert Louis Stevenson," which will mean much to those who loved the exile in far-off Samoa:

Thou spirit strong, who late in English ships
Didst bear our English tongue to the last reach
Of this world's furthest sea, thou hast for each
Live man of us pushed back the line where ships
This self into the dark, as the sun dips
Into the sea; and set on that far beach
A brave new standard for our English speech—
Or sounds the old so new upon thy lips!
* * * * * Yet thine eyes turn
To us at last as with a child's calm gaze;
And little children wait on all thy ways.

NOTES AND NEWS.

The second novel of the Harpers' American Fiction Series will be issued in February under the title of "The Sentimentalists," by Arthur Stanwood Pier. The third novel, which will be published in March, will be called "Martin Brook," and is by Morgan Bates.

Doubleday, Page & Co. have in press a volume entitled "Good Form for All Occasions," by Mrs. Kingsland.

The biography of George H. C. MacGregor, the remarkable English preacher, by his cousin, Duncan Campbell Mac Gregor, will be published next week by the Fleming H. Revell Company. Mr. Mac Gregor's associations with F. B. Meyer and G. Campbell Morgan, his work at Northfield, and his many impressive writings have made his name as well known in America as it is in England.

A new volume of children's stories is in preparation at G. P. Putnam's Sons from the pen of Mrs. Ballington-Booth, author of "Sleepy Time Stories." The forthcoming book will be called "Lights of Child Land," which finds expression in such divisions as "Fire Light," "Moon Light," "Star Light," "Lamp Light," &c.

A new novel by Imogen Clark, author of "Will Shakespeare, Little Lad," is in preparation at Charles Scribner's Sons. The scene is laid in the New York of the middle of the eighteenth century, and presents a vivid picture of the Dutch and English life of the time. The book will be called "God's Puppets," which, it may be recalled, is drawn from the line in Browning, "God's puppets, best and worse are we."

It is rather interesting to learn that there has lately been discovered in London a British headquarters colored manuscript map of Manhattan Island and surroundings during the period of the Revolutionary War. This map extends from below Governors Island to above Harlem, and shows the fortifications, defenses, streets, &c., together with the harbor, islands, river frontage, &c., and the military works on Long Island, Paulus Hook, and part of the Jersey shore. Some one has suggested that it would be a good plan to have a reproduction of this map in Miss Barrow's novel, "The Fortune of War," the scene of which is laid in the New York of the Revolution.

The second number of Meyer Brothers & Co.'s theatrical publication, "Our Players' Gallery," is now ready, and contains with reading matter photographs reproduced in half-tone of Sarah Bernhardt and Maud Adams in "L'Aiglon," O'Neill, Grace George, Miss Crosman, Lulu Glaser, and others. The publication is now edited by W. J. Thoroid.

Katrina Trask's "Lessons in Love" has just gone into a second edition at Harper & Brothers.

G. P. Putnam's Sons will shortly publish a volume, the material of which was contained in The Evening Post of Jan. 12, when an elaborate survey of the nineteenth century by various authors was presented. The volume will be entitled "The Nineteenth Century: a Review of the Progress During the Past One Hundred Years in the Chief Departments of Human Activities."

Booth Tarkington's "Gentleman from Indiana" seems rapidly advancing into favor, as the sales for last month nearly doubled those of the preceding month, while the sales so far in January show an advance in about the same ratio.

Harper & Brothers have just issued the "Golfers' Calendar," which consists of twelve pictures by A. B. Frost, with verses by Van Tassel Sutphen.

A good deal of speculation was aroused in the attempt to determine what would be the title of that English magazine called "Nineteenth Century" during the twentieth century. The difficulty has been solved in a very ingenious way. The title now is "The Nineteenth Century and After," with the employment of a design drawn by Sir Edward Poynter. One face, that of an old man, looks toward the left, where are the Roman numerals XIX., while the face of a youth gazes toward the right, where we have the numerals XX.

Possibly owing to the interest shown in "An English Woman's Love Letters," there has been a call for a new edition in London of Myrtle Reed's "Love Letters of a Musician," of which there were only 900 copies printed in London, and, curious as it may seem, the question has also been raised as to the genuineness of these letters.

F. Marion Crawford's "In the Palace of the King" has just reached 100,000.

A number of books issued by The Century Company last year were unusually successful. In the early months there were Seton-Thompson's "Biography of a Grizzly," now in its third edition; Dr. Barry's Italian romance, "Arden Massiter," now in its second; Ronald McDonald's "Sword of the King," in its third; Mrs. Scidmore's "China, the Long-Lived Empire," in its sixth. As to the Fall publications of this house, Mr. Morley's "Oliver Cromwell" is in its third edition and Dr. Mitchell's "Dr. North and His Friends," in its fourth.

Henry Holt & Co. will publish next week "The Crimson Weed," the first novel of Christopher St. John. The hero of the book, which is concerned principally with the pursuit of vengeance, is, like Mrs. Voynich's "Gadfly," of Italian and English parentage.

The February number of McClure's Magazine will contain a character study, "Croker," by William Allen White. There will also be an article by Josiah Flynt about "In the World of Graft," which is a discussion of the Chicago Municipal Government from the point of view of the lawbreakers themselves. Prof. Ira Remsen will contribute an article on "Unsolved Problems of Chemistry." The authors of fiction represented in this number are Rudyard Kipling, Robert Barr, Sarah Orne Jewett, Josephine Dodge Daskam, and Edwin Lefevre.

Eaton & Mains have published a very valuable, popular, and interesting aid to the study of the Bible, which is entitled "The People's Bible Encyclopedia, Biographical, Geographical, Historical, and Doctrinal." It is edited by the Rev. Dr. Charles Randall Barnes of the New York University. Besides the textual illustrations, there are many full-page reproductions of recent photographs, descriptive of scenes in Palestine, which give a particularly modern significance to the work.

Brentano's are publishing three lectures delivered at the Royal Institution in February, 1900, by W. L. Courtney, under the title of "The Idea of Tragedy in Ancient and Modern Drama." A prefatory note has been furnished by Mr. A. W. Pinero.

A new book by the literary and Shakespearean critic, Edward Dowden, entitled "Puritan and Anglican," is to be issued this month by Henry Holt & Co. Mr. Dowden treats of Puritanism and English literature, Sir Thomas Browne, Hooker, Herbert, Vaughan, Milton, Jeremy Taylor, Baxter, Bunyan, Butler, the transition of the eighteenth century, &c. He gives a peculiarly vivid personal tone to the book through often using the thoughts and phrases of the authors treated.

It has just been discovered that hardly an English novel is published of which a copy is not sent to the Prince of Wales. The fact that His Royal Highness is a great reader of novels has long been well known among his intimates. It has recently been extracted from his secretary, however, that if the names of the novels which have the Prince's preference were given, the publishers to reap harvests of editions would not in a majority of cases be Englishmen. As to the exact preferences of His Royal Highness, however, the secretary is non-committal.

H. G. Wells's flight into the commonplace life of to-day entitled "Love and Mr. Lewisham" has just gone into a new edition at Frederick A. Stokes Company's while in England it is generally recognized as one of the most popular novels of the season. The publishers who, having contracted for a story by the writer of "The War of Worlds" and "The Time Machine," and who later paid $1,750 to be relieved of their agreement when they found that in "Love and Mr. Lewisham" there were no flying machines or annihilators, may now have a subject for valuable contemplation.

"The Globe Mutiny," by William Lay of Saybrook, Conn., and Cyrus M. Hussey of Nantucket, is being republished with a fac simile title page of the original, by George E. Grimes of Nantucket, Mass. It is a narrative of the mutiny on board the ship Globe of Nantucket in the Pacific Ocean, in January, 1824, including a journal of a residence of two years on the Mulgrave Islands. The authors were the only survivors of the massacre of the ship's company by the natives.

An interesting edition of Mrs. Browning's complete poetical works is being presented by Thomas Y. Crowell & Co., as a companion set to the Camberwell edition of Robert Browning's works. The new edition, which has photogravure frontispieces, and is in six volumes, is edited by Charlotte Porter and Helen A. Clarke.

Apparently press cutting agencies are carried on in England with quite as much enterprise and lack of knowledge as is the case of certain similar institutions in the United States. The other day the London publishers J. M. Dent & Co. received from an agency three letters addressed, respectively, to "William Cowper, Esq.," "P. B. Shelley, Esq.," and "Miss E. B. Browning."

In "Jukes-Edwards," Dr. A. E. Winship has presented a curious character study, for he shows that the 1,200 descendants of Max Jukes, who built a shanty in the early part of the eighteenth century on the borders of a beautiful lake in New York State, have cost the State in crime and pauperism more than $1,250,000. The main purpose of the study of the Edwards family is to present a convincing contrast to the Jukes family, with its abhorrent features, to show the constructive force of training and environment and the destructive force of idleness and vulgarity. The volume is published by R. L. Myers & Co. of Harrisburg, Penn.

The Canadian publishers of "Lords of the North," which in New York is presented by J. F. Taylor & Co., report it to be the best selling book at present in the Ottawa, Montreal, and Quebec markets. Heinemann, the London publisher, has secured the English rights to the book and from his advance orders believes that it will be one of the successes of the London season. This novel perhaps is significant as showing the tendency to substitute for the Revolutionary scenes in historical fiction those of pioneer movement and westward expansion. At any rate, "Lords of the North" would make an admirable introduction to a literary era of this sort.

Harper & Brothers will publish early in February "A Lady of the Regency," by Mrs. Stepney Rawson. It is a story of the Court life in England at the time of Queen Caroline and George IV. Among the historical personages appearing are Mr. Channing and Wellington. The story, however, is one of love and intrigue.

The February Critic will contain an appreciation of the later work of Aubrey Beardsley by Christian Brinton, under the title of "Aubrey Beardsley, Revivictus." Rufus W. Wilson will also have an appreciation of the work of Sir John Tenniel, who has just retired from the staff of Punch. Mrs. Richmond Ritchie's "Black Stick Papers" will include "Haydn" and "Felicia Felix." These papers, together with the Smith Memoirs, are published simultaneously by The Critic in America and The Cornhill in London.

Five Notable Books

A Century of American Diplomacy

Being a Brief Review of the Foreign Relations of the United States, 1776-1876. By John W. Foster, former Secretary of State for the United States. 8vo, $3.50.

"Every important event in our diplomatic history is reviewed, its course followed, and its results stated. In doing this the author brings out many features drawn from original sources, and invests the affairs of diplomacy with new interest. Tha work is a distinct contribution to political history and American literature."—INDIANAPOLIS JOURNAL.

"Never before has American history been presented in so authoritative and yet interesting fashion from the diplomatic standpoint."—BOSTON DAILY ADVERTISER.

Theodore Parker.

By John White Chadwick. With two portraits. SECOND IMPRESSION. Crown 8vo, $2.00.

"It is the most readable, we think, of recent memoirs, and in conception, handling, and style fairly revives the art of biography, which of late has seemed to be languishing. * * * The interest engaged at the outset is sustained to the close of the volume."—THE CONGREGATIONALIST.

Old Virginia and Her Neighbors

By John Fiske. ILLUSTRATED EDITION. Containing Portraits, Maps, Fac Similes, Contemporary Views, Prints, and other Historic Material. 2 vols., 8vo, $8.00; half calf, $12.50.

These volumes, which are of a very high order of value and interest, are profusely illustrated with superb portraits, maps, plans of battles, pictures of historic buildings and scenes, medals, fac similes, &c.

The Frigate Constitution: The Central Figure of the Navy Under Sail . .

By Ira N. Hollis, Professor of Engineering at Harvard University. With many Illustrations. 12mo, $1.50.

Prof. Hollis here tells the story of the famous CONSTITUTION ("Old Ironsides") and of the great events which made her the leading figure of the United States Navy under sail. It is an exceedingly interesting story, fully illustrated.

The Monitor and the Navy Under Steam . . .

By Frank M. Bennett, Lieutenant U. S. Navy. Fully illustrated, 12mo, $1.50.

"The book is informtog and of real interest. Episodes in the career of the Monitor lend a dramatic flavor. The volume is fully illustrated and carries the story of the Navy through the events of the Spanish war to the arrival of the victorious fleet in New York Harbor."—BROOKLYN EAGLE.

Sold by all Booksellers. Sent postpaid, by

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO., BOSTON
11 EAST 17TH STREET, NEW YORK

"There will always remain something to be said of woman as long as there is one on the earth."

This is the last of some thousand of these sayings collected by G. F. MONKSHOOD in

"WOMAN AND THE WITS."
12mo, Cloth, $1.00. Illustrated.
A. WESSELS COMPANY,
7-9 West 18th St., New York.

An Englishwoman's Love Letters.

This is a series of nearly one hundred letters written by a noted woman, whose name cannot be given to the public at present. These letters are given in full, excepting that the names of persons and places have been changed.

It is the book of the hour. Everybody is reading it, and you ought to. 225 pages, paper cover, 25 cents; bound in watered silk cloth, regular $1.00 book. Will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of 50 cents. Address

J. S. OGILVIE PUBLISHING COMPANY,
57 ROSE STREET, NEW YORK.

NOW READY THE SECOND EDITION OF A Manual of Coaching,

BY FAIRMAN ROGERS.

Illustrated with numerous full-page plates and engravings in the text. Octavo. 500 pages. Cloth, gilt top, $6.00, net; three-quarters levant, ornamental tooling, $10.00, net.

SOLD BY ALL BOOKSELLERS OR SENT POSTPAID BY

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY,
PUBLISHERS, PHILA.

HINTS FROM THE MAIL BAG.

"Stringtown On the Pike."

PROF. WILLIAM GOODELL FROST, President of Berea College, Kentucky, writes to THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW: "You will excuse me for some special interest in the criticism of the character of the Kentucky mountaineer as exhibited in the popular novel entitled 'Stringtown on the Pike,' which has appeared in your columns. No people need a friendly interpreter more than the American Highlanders, and as the President of Berea College I have had exceptional opportunities, and it has been my special duty to study their character, and all that can be known of their history. This week four mountain boys have walked to Berea, distances ranging from ninety to one hundred and twenty-five miles.

"I believe that they are a belated people, living a life of survivals, and not a degraded population. I further believe that with their native ability, substratum of character and American spirit, they can be made into good citizens cheaper and faster than any other of the people who have not yet shared the advantages of education.

"The lynching of negroes in the South is a barbarism that is without excuse, but the mountain people are not the ones who are guilty of such outrages. They are to be sharply distinguished from the 'poor whites' who lived in the lowlands in the midst of slavery.

"In the novel referred to I hardly think the career of 'Red Head' will excite emulation in the reader. And I am quite sure that the thousands of young men who carry revolvers in the mountains can be led to change their ideals of 'honor' by proper education in a single generation. They merit the considerate regard of their fellow-countrymen."

Robert Ingersoll's Moral Courage.

"H. B. F.," New York, commenting upon the notice of Robert G. Ingersoll's works which appeared in THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW of Jan. 5, writes: "You omit reference to the rarest trait of his character, considered apart from his natural gifts of oratory and almost matchless command of our language. I mean his moral courage. Any consistent agnostic who has now reached the age of threescore and ten must remember the existence he led fifty years ago. In the forties, for example, to doubt the dogmas of any Church or to repudiate even in private intercourse the miracles of the Bible (I mean the fall of man, the stories of Joshua and Jonah, &c.,) meant social exclusion, which was not limited to the head of the family holding these doubts, but reached his children, who had to endure the brand of infidel, which followed them to school and boycotted them from other homes than their own. It was a very serious business in 1850 to doubt anything in Genesis, and Miller, the geologist, about that time died broken-hearted, if not a suicide, because he discovered that the testimony of the rocks made the biblical chronology ridiculous. It was about that time, too, that the Rev. Mr. Ingersoll, the father of the distinguished Colonel, was driven from two pulpits into poverty because he discovered the biblical indorsement of negro slavery, the stock argument of the day, and hence announced from his pulpits that he could not share the universal conviction of biblical inspiration.

"This persecution nerved the son, who never faltered—taking reputation, honors, repose, and even life at small value compared with the need of reducing to logic and common sense a creed that bound in chains not only the black man, but did something very like it for every white one who defied the then omnipotent clergy. If this statement is doubted, let any book or paper referring to Thomas Paine, from 1790 to 1880, testify. No allusion (except perhaps from Jefferson or Joel Barlow) but casts mud at the great man who first preached abolition of slavery and the legal enactment of women's rights in 1770. It was to the credit of the close of the century that Ingersoll's death was received by the whole Christian Church with sympathy and kindness, the exceptions being too few to notice.

"This exhibition showed how far the world had moved. As for the absence in Col. Ingersoll's character of 'sympathy, prudence, and repose,' had he possessed the last two in normal degree, we had never heard from him either his eloquent orations or his magnificent prose. Prudence and repose float with the stream, but do not stem the currents and leap the falls. As for his 'sympathy,' it was of the sort that gave always to the poor, liberally and unceasingly, and aided with advice and his professional help many worthy people who could only repay him with tears of gratitude. But he had no sympathy for fools."

The Poet of "Gloucester Moors."

CACTUS FLOWER, Orchard Ranch, Dewey, Ariz., writes to THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW:

"If Jane Marsh Parker will turn to The Atlantic Monthly for January she will find William Vaughn Moody represented by a fine, strong poem of two pages in length, entitled 'The Brute.' In the same magazine for May of the past year she will find covering five pages 'An Ode in Time of Hesitation' by the same poet. It is beyond doubt, I think, the noblest verse inspired by our recent wars, well worthy to rank with the loftiest poems that love of country has ever called forth. As fearless as it is fine, as courageous as it is clear seeing, this noble poem should have been copied in every paper in the land, and I trust that it may yet become better known. In everything that goes to make a great poem, these two attest the power of their author. 'Gloucester Moors' I have not read, for here, beyond the borders of Nowhere, magazines do not come as freely as one could wish. Some of our sated feasters who cry for uncut edges and editions de luxe would be horrified, perhaps, to learn how back numbers of popular magazines are treasured and passed on and on for successive reading till worn threadbare.

"But to return to the poet. Both poems, and especially 'The Brute,' show the strong influence which the poetry of Rudyard Kipling has had on their writer. Without imitation, with only the finest possible indebtedness to own, there is in every line some suggestion of the strength, the conciseness, the picturesqueness of the better-known poet.

"Reading 'The Brute,' one would say 'Kipling,' and find surprise in the strange name at the end. The swing is that of the 'Last Chantey,' and in many lines the expression might be Kipling's own. Of all the horde that have followed the trail of the greatest living poet, this new name stands first and most worthy—no imitator but a pupil who, taking the best of his master, has yet a noble field in himself."

D. APPLETON & COMPANY'S NEW BOOKS.

Mrs. Clyde:

The Story of a Social Career.

By JULIEN GORDON, Author of "A Puritan Pagan." One vol. 12mo. 368 pp.; cloth, $1.50.

The Social Career is real history; it is a faithful portrayal of life in Boston, New York and Rome. Dinner-table discussion will assuredly turn on the question: Who was Mrs. Clyde?

A Hero in Homespun.

A Tale of the Loyal South. By WILLIAM A. BARTON, Author of "Pine Knot," etc. No. 295 in Appletons' Town and Country Library. Paper, 50c.; cloth, $1.00.

"Vigorous, spirited, truthful, absorbing"—New York Critic.

"A thoroughly interesting red-blooded virile story . . . A historical document of the very greatest value."—The Bookman.

A QUAINT CONCEIT

"Once upon a time, I, Chuang Tzu, dreamt I was a butterfly fluttering hither and thither, to all intents and purposes a butterfly. I was conscious only of following my fancies as a butterfly and was unconscious of my individuality as a man. Suddenly, I awakened and there I lay, myself again. Now I do not know whether I was then a man dreaming I was a butterfly, or whether I am now a butterfly dreaming I am a man."

This is only one of the multitude of captivating gems translated for the first time into any language and cited by Dr. HERBERT A. GILES in his

HISTORY of CHINESE LITERATURE

One vol., 12mo. $1 50.

It gives an entirely new idea of the Chinaman and is most timely and valuable. The tenth volume in the LITERATURE OF THE WORLD SERIES. Edited by Edmund Gosse.

I. Ancient Greek Literature. By Gilbert Murray, M. A. II. French Literature. Edward Dowden, D. C. L., LL. D. III. Modern English Literature. Edmund Gosse. IV. Italian Literature. Richard Garnett, C. B., LL. D. V. Spanish Literature. James Fitz Maurice-Kelly. VI. Japanese Literature. W. G. Aston. VII. Bohemian Literature. Francis Count Lutzow. VIII. Russian Literature. K. Waliszewski. IX. Sanskrit Literature. Arthur A. Macdonell.

D. Appleton & Company, PUBLISHERS, NEW YORK.

The Settlement of Jamestown.

S. S. ALSOP, Enfield, N. C., writes to THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW: "In the January number of Harper's Magazine Mr. Woodrow Wilson makes the statement that eighty years before the settlement of Jamestown by the English, in 1526, a Spaniard named Vasquez de Ayllon settled the same point of land with a colony of 500 Spaniards, who built houses and planned to keep a lasting colony. But discord, fever, and death soon put an end to the venture, and only 150 of the colony survived to return to Santo Domingo.

"A few years ago a similar statement was made by Justice Walter Clark of the Supreme Court of North Carolina, and, upon being interrogated by Mr. Howison, a historian of note of Virginia, as to the authorities for the statement, he was referred to the Narrative and Critical History of America. Mr. Howison said in his reply that while the article showed that de Ayllon made an expedition to the northward from the West Indies, it utterly failed to show any settlement at Jamestown.

"I have not access to the Narrative and Critical History of America, and would be glad of any light which the editor or any correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW can throw on the subject. Is it not a favorable time now to settle this matter once and forever?"

"Villette."

O. A. L., New York, writes to THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW: "In 'The Evolution of the English Novel,' by Francis Hovey Stoddard, is an interesting chapter on 'The Growth of Personality in Fiction.' Dr. Stoddard says: 'The notion of personality is implied in the very idea of the novel.' After showing the growth of this idea of personality in 'The Vicar of Wakefield' and 'Pride and Prejudice,' he writes of 'Jane Eyre' and 'Villette.' He says: 'This intense personal life went into the novels, and has made Villette and Jane Eyre as distinct and definite personalities as Charlotte Brontë herself.' (Page 62.) 'There is interest in soul-life; there is interest in emotion as emotion. The life of the novel, "Jane Eyre," of "Villette," is the soul-life of the woman Jane Eyre, of the woman Villette. We live that life with her. And the intensity of that soul-life fills the book with an energy of assertion of life which is the essence of individuality.'

"'Turning to a copy of 'Villette,' one may read 'Villette, the capital of the great kingdom of La basecour.' * * * Villette is a cosmopolitan city. * * * Villette owns a climate as variable, though not so humid, as that of any English town.' Is 'the soul-life of the woman Villette' a slip of the pen, or some new and comprehensive figurative expression?"

Balzac and Mme. Hanska.

A WEEKLY READER writes: "I notice a letter from your correspondent Mr. De Wolfe in your last number. Having taken some interest in the matter myself, enough to have studied it, I should like to show that Mr. De Wolfe is mistaken in some respects.

"(1) The unquestioned date of the advertisement in the 'Quotidienne' Miss Wormeley makes a proof of the forgery of some of the letters. Balzac gives, in unmistakable language, the date when he received Mme. Hanska's first letter, which was February, 1833. How, then, could he have addressed that advertisement to her Dec. 9, 1832? You see, Miss Wormeley makes the existence of that unquestioned advertisement a proof that some of the letters in both 'Roman d'Amour' and 'Lettres à l'Etrangère' (Mme. Hanska) are false.

"(2) Miss Wormeley states that as early as 1889 she was fully informed of the existence of all the Balzac papers, especially the letter to Mme. Surville, by M. de Spoelberch de Lovenjoul himself, who at that time wished to sell them in America, and gave her lists and descriptions of them for that purpose. Thus it would appear that in bringing this charge she did it with full information as to the papers in question.

"I am not writing this with any intention of controversy; I simply state the facts as they appear in Miss Wormeley's translated volumes. It would be quite worth while for some unbiased young lawyer, of a literary turn and accustomed to weighing evidence, to take these volumes and study the matter. They are 'Un Roman d'Amour,' published by Calmann-Lévy; 'Letters to Madame Hanska,' 'Memoir of Balzac,' (appendix,) published by Hardy, Pratt & Co., Boston."

Bangs & Co.,

91 and 93 Fifth Avenue.

WILL SELL AT AUCTION

MONDAY and following days, at 3 o'clock each day,

A LIBRARY OF Standard and Scarce Books
COMPRISING

The Works of English, American and French Authors in Good Editions and Condition; a Valuable Collection of Works on Art, Galleries of Painting, etc.

Grolier Club and Kelmscott Press Publications; Books in Limited Editions; Americana; Early American Imprints; Almanacs, etc.

Sales of Books every Afternoon except Saturday.

CONGDON & BRITNELL,

Vendors of Rare, Historical, and GENERAL BOOKS.
CATALOGUES FREE ON APPLICATION.
CONSIGNMENTS RECEIVED MONTHLY from the LONDON BOOK AUCTION SALES.
284 YONGE ST., TORONTO, CANADA.

More Praise for Markham.

JOHN JEROME ROONEY, New York, writes to THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW: "I agree with Mr. Talman's letter in THE SATURDAY REVIEW of Dec. 29, on Edwin Markham's work. 'The Mighty Hundred Years,' recently published, I place among the great poems of late years. Necessarily, it has not the intimate personal note demanded by many lovers of poetry, but it fuses 'The Hundred Years' in the crucible of the imagination by true poetic fire—surely a notable performance.

"Mr. Markham's 'The Wharves of Sleep' is a sonnet unsurpassed, to my thinking, for beauty, scope, technique. Mr. Markham's volume of work is small, compared with the great masters, but he is still working with undiminished fervor. This small volume of performance may account for what Mr. Talman calls 'tardy appreciation,' but not among the discerning. His 'Man with the Hoe' is not first in my affection and admiration, though a true poem; he has done noble work in nearly every line so far printed. May he not grow strong for many years."

QUERIES AND ANSWERS.

FRANCIS B. HODIN, 5 East Sixteenth Street, New York City: "I am desirous of obtaining some information regarding the early life and publications of Ella Wheeler Wilcox."

Ella Wheeler was born in Johnstown Centre, Wis., in 1855, and was educated at the University of Wisconsin. In 1884 she married Robert M. Wilcox of Meriden, Conn. She has resided in New York since 1888, and is now attached to the staff of a New York evening newspaper. She is the author of the following books: "Drops of Water," (temperance poems,) New York, 1872; "Shells," Milwaukee, 1873; "Maurine and Other Poems," Milwaukee, 1876; "Poems of Passion," Chicago, 1883; "Mal Moulée," New York, 1886; "Perdita and Other Stories," New York, 1886; "Poems of Pleasure," Chicago, 1887; "Adventures of Miss Volney," New York, 1888; "A Double Life," New York, 1890; "How Salvator Won," New York, 1891; "Was It Suicide?" Chicago, 1891; "Song of a Sandwich," New York, 1892; "Sweet Danger," Chicago, 1892; "The Beautiful Land of Nod," Chicago, 1892; "An Erring Woman's Love," New York, 1892; "Men, Women, and Emotions," Chicago, 1893; "Custer and Other Poems," New York, 1895; "Three Women," Chicago, 1898.

PARK AVENUE, Baltimore, Md.: "What is the value of the catalogue of the Stewart collection, published by the American Art Association?"

There are two Stewart catalogues. The large paper catalogue of the A. T. Stewart art collection, New York, 1887, sold for $8.50 at Bangs's March 19, 1900. The catalogue de luxe of the W. H. Stewart art collection, New York, 1898, fetched $11.75 at Bangs's May 8, 1900.

F. W. COTE, Chattanooga, Tenn.: "Will you kindly tell an appreciative reader of THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW who Robert Pollok was, something of his life, and how his 'Course of Time' is regarded by the literary world? It seems to the writer that it is the grandest thing in human language, the most sublime of the world's poetry, not alone for the perfect religious fervor it expresses, but for the surpassing beauty and majesty of its eloquence. And yet who ever hears of Robert Pollok? Who ever read his 'Course of Time'?"

Robert Pollok's "Course of Time," though once universally read, is now almost forgotten. Only great things in poetry can live. Pollok was born of humble parents at Eaglesham, in Ayrshire, in 1799. He was educated at the University of Glasgow, and in 1827 took orders in the Scottish Secession Church. In the same year he published "The Course of Time," and, on account of ill-health, left Scotland with an intention to proceed to Italy, but died on his way at Southampton, on Sept. 15, 1827.

F. WEITENKAMPF, New York Public Library: "H. E. Bryant, 7 Maiden Lane, who asked in THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW of Jan. 5 for W. H. Maxwell's 'Stories of Waterloo,' will find the book in the free library of the General Society of Mechanics and Tradesmen, this city."

"M. C. B.," New York: "Kindly tell me the author of 'Two Women and a Fool,' and where same can be purchased."

"Two Women and a Fool" was written by H. C. Chatfield-Taylor, and published by Herbert S. Stone & Co. of Chicago, at 75 cents.

WARREN C. CRANE of 121 West Seventieth Street writes: "In reading a catalogue of early English engravers, compiled by Sir Horace Walpole in 1762, I find a note, after his notice of Francis Delaram, an engraver working in 1618, viz.: 'His father, Sir Amigal, who lies buried at Hamsted, was the first Englishman that made discoveries in America.' I do not find this name in Appleton's Cyclopaedia of American Biography, consequently James Grant Wilson and John Fiske, the editors of that work, could not have known of Sir Amigal Delaram. A letter upon the subject to Mr. Robert H. Kelby, Librarian of the New York Historical Society, brings this reply: 'I have exhausted our reference and other volumes here, and regret to say that I do not find a single mention of Sir Amigal Delaram.' If this Sir Amigal was the first Englishman to make discoveries in America I should suppose it would be so recorded. Sir Horace Walpole is supposed to have known what he was writing about. If any of your readers can give any information on this subject will they please do so through your paper?"

"S. G. A.," New York City: "Can you inform me if the Charles Henry Webb who wrote some very apropos verses to Mr. Stedman that were published by you several days ago is the 'C. H. Webb' who nearly forty years ago wrote a poem on the Sickles tragedy, that appeared in Harper's Weekly the day after, and were almost universally copied from one end of the country to the other? I have seen nothing over that signature since, and have frequently wondered what could have become of so promising a poet."

Charles Henry Webb and the C. H. Webb referred to above are one and the same person, and may his shadow never grow less! Since the publication of the poem on the Sickles tragedy, nearly forty years ago, Mr. Webb ("John Paul") has written "Liffith Lank, or Lunacy," (a travesty of Charles Reade's "Griffith Gaunt,") "St. Twel'mo; or, The Cuneiform Cyclopedist of Chattanooga," (a travesty of Miss Evans's "St. Elmo,") "The Wickedest Woman in New York," "John Paul's Book," "Pogram Verses," besides making many contributions to magazines, &c.

"J. H. P.," New York City: "I think the words and music of 'Capt. Kidd's Lament,' asked for by H. C. Kimball of 28 Beaver Street, New York City, can be found in an old publication of Oliver Ditson & Co., Boston. It is one of the weird minors which were very popular in old New England, and had a revival thirty-five or forty years ago by 'Old Folks' Concerts.' I can supply the melody if desired."

C. S. CAMPBELL, Owego, N. Y.: "I inclose the sonnet which was asked for by F. H. Below. Ninth and Spruce Streets, St. Louis, Mo. It will be found in Wordsworth's 'Itinerary Sonnets,' where it is No. 6, Series 3, and is called 'In Sight of the Town of Cockermouth,' (where the author was born and his brother's remains are laid:)

SONNET.

A point of life between my parents' dust,
And yours, my buried little ones! am I;
And to those graves looking habitually
In kindred quiet I repose my trust.
Death to the innocent is more than just;
And to the sinner, mercifully bent;
So may I hope, if truly I repent
And meekly bear the ills which bear I must;
And you, my offspring! that do still remain,
Yet may outstrip me in the appointed race,
If e'er through fault of mine, in mutual pain
We breathed together for a moment's space,
The wrong, by love provoked, let love arraign,
And only love keep in your hearts a place.

CHARLES E. GRAVES, Stock Exchange Building, Chicago, Ill.: "I have a first edition of Thomson's 'Castle of Indolence,' quarto, A. Millar, London, 1748. Will you kindly state its value?"

Bierstadt's copy, in old calf, fetched $8.50 in 1897. The value of the book is somewhere between $7.50 and $15.

"A. B. C.," New York City: "What is the value of this book: 'Journals of Congress containing the Proceedings from Sept. 5, 1774, to Jan. 1, 1778. Published by Order of Congress. Vol. I. Philadelphia, printed and sold by R. Aitken, bookseller, Front-st. 1777.'

A copy of the "Journals," Vols. 1-6, Philadelphia, 1777-81, fetched $18 in Philadelphia Dec. 13, 1898. Vol. I. is worth from $5 to $10.

"Alice B.," Springfield, Mass.: "Please tell me something about Miss Ferrier, and inform me where I can secure her books and her life."

Susan Edmonstone Ferrier was born in Edinburgh, Sept. 7, 1782. Her "Marriage" (written with Miss Clavering) appeared in 1818, "The Inheritance" in 1824, and "Destiny" in 1831. She visited Sir Walter Scott in 1811, 1829, and 1831. She died in Edinburgh Nov. 5, 1854. Her works were first collected in 1882. They can be had from the Macmillan Company for $6, or $2 each volume. Charles Scribner's Sons publish at $7.50 Miss Ferrier's "Memoir and Correspondence, 1782-1854," edited by John A. Doyle. Gosse praises her "Marriage" for its "lively humor and delicious satire of many types of Scotch womanhood," and says that the story of her delicate tact in soothing the shattered faculties of Scott has endeared her to thousands who never read her three amusing novels.

"DANIEL," Troy, N. Y.: "Who publishes the tragedy called 'Herod,' which Richard Mansfield is going to produce?"

Stephen Phillips's "Herod" can be had from John Lane, 251 Fifth Avenue, New York City, for $1.50.

J. WHITMORE BARRY, 205 West Eleventh Street, New York City: "Please let me know the value of the 'History and Topography of the United States,' by John Howard Hinton, printed in two volumes in London, without date. Also kindly give a list of Arthur W. Pinero's plays, with a sketch of his life."

Hinton's book is worth from $5 to $7.50. Arthur Wing Pinero was born in London, May 24, 1855, and he was educated for the legal profession. He first appeared as an actor in 1874, and his first play was performed three years later. A complete list of his plays, with dates of production, is as follows: "Two Can Play at That Game," 1877; "£200 a Year," 1877; "Daisy's Escape," 1879; "Hester's Mystery," 1880; "Bygones," 1880; "The Money Spinner," 1880; "The Squire," 1881; "The Rector," 1883; "Lords and Commons," 1883; "The Rocket," 1883; "Low Water," 1884; "The Ironmaster," (adapted from Ohnet's book,) 1884; "In Chancery," 1884; "Mayfair," 1885; "The Magistrate," 1885; "The Schoolmistress," 1886; "The Hobby Horse," 1886; "Dandy Dick," 1887; "Sweet Lavender," 1888; "The Weaker Sex," 1888; "The Profligate," 1889; "The Cabinet Minister," 1890; "Lady Bountiful," 1891; "The Times," 1891; "The Amazons," 1893; "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," 1893; "The Notorious Mrs. Ebbsmith," 1895; "The Benefit of the Doubt," 1895; "The Princess and the Butterfly," 1897; "Trelawny of the Wells," 1898; "The Gay Lord Quex," 1899.

F. B. HALL, New York City: "I have for sale the following books: 'Instructions for Youth, Gentlemen, and Noblemen,' by Sir Walter Raleigh, Lord Treasurer Burleigh, Cardinal Sermonetta, and Mr. Walsingham, London, printed for Randall Minschull, 1722; and 'The Elements of a Polite Education,' from letters of the Earl of Chesterfield to his son by George Gregory, revised and improved by Jedediah Morse, Boston, 1801, Joseph Bumstead, publisher. The first book has marginal notes in the handwriting of one of the authors. Can you tell me the value of these books?"

While they possess a certain amount of interest, these books have little value.

FRANK BEAUCLE, 10 Ward Street, Newark, N. J.: "Please print a sketch of Fergus Hume, the English sensational novelist, and also give a list of his books."

Fergus Hume was born in England July 24, 1862. He was educated, however, in New Zealand, where he became a lawyer. His first book and his most successful one, "The Mystery of a Hansom Cab," appeared in 1887. He is also the author of the following books: "Aladdin in London," "Carbuncle Clue," "Chronicles of Fairyland," "Claude Duval of '95," "The Clock Struck One," "Expedition of Capt. Flick," "Gates of Dawn," "The Girl from Malta," "Hagar of the Pawn Shop," "The Harlequin Opal," "Lady Jezebel," "Madam Midas," "The Man Who Vanished," "The Man with a Secret," "The Piccadilly Puzzle," "The Rainbow Feather," "The Third Volume," "Tracked by a Tattoo," "An Unwilling Bride," "Monsieur Judas," "The Island of Fantasy," "The Nameless City," "The Dwarf's Chamber," "The Indian Bangle," "The Bishop's Secret," and "For the Defense." Hume's latest novel, so far not reprinted here, is "A Woman's Burden."

"X. Y. Z.," New York City: "What is the value of the following book, 'The Collection of the History of England,' by Samuel Daniel, London, 1636?"

The "First Part" of Daniel's "History," 1612, sold for $7.25 in Philadelphia in October, 1899. The edition of 1636 is hardly of greater value.

Wanted and to Exchange.

WILLIAM A. REARN, 917 Belmont Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.: "I have several volumes of 'The Chautauquan,' bound and unbound, which I would like to dispose of. Correspondence invited."

CHARLES O. LE COUNT, 200 Broadway, New York City: "I wish to dispose of about 120 volume of choice fiction, comprising publications of the last few years, down to the latest. Very desirable for a circulating library, and in such case would make the price nominal. A list will be sent on application."

ROYAL STORRS HAYNES, 449 Greene Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.: "I wish to dispose of Kipling's works, the 'Outward Bound' edition, eighteen volumes, published by Charles Scribner's Sons.

RICHARD A. KANE, 132 Noble Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.: "For sale—THE SATURDAY TIMES REVIEW from November, 1898, to Jan. 1, 1901, inclusive. In all 113 numbers. Will be sold cheap."

CHARLES E. GRAVES, Stock Exchange Building, Chicago, Ill.: "There was published in New York some time in 1898 a daily literary paper called The Tatler, which had an ephemeral existence. I wish to obtain a complete set."

E. L. EDGERLY, 4,145 Park Avenue, New York City: "I have a nice clean copy of 'A Life-Drama and Other Poems,' by Alexander Smith. Boston: Ticknor & Fields, 1866. Will exchange for Eugene Field's 'Love Affairs of a Bibliomaniac,' or Emerson's 'Pepys's Ghost.'"

KATHARINE M. L. BRASHIER, 478 Willoughby Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.: "I would like to procure a copy of a book written by Mansfield French, (editor of The Beauty of Holiness, a Southern publication,) in which book John S. Ashley, the inventor, is especially referred to."

R. H. NEVILL, 201 West One Hundred and Thirty-first Street, New York City: "I have bound volumes of The Knickerbocker Magazine, January to June, 1851; January to June, 1856; July to December, 1856. They may interest and be of use to some one, and can be had for what they are worth to any one."

L. TAYLOR, 911 Seventh Avenue, New York City: "I want to purchase a copy of Elbert Hubbard's 'As It Seems to Me.' Address, stating price."

G. S., 108 West One Hundred and Thirtieth Street, New York: "I would like to buy the following copies of THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW, if in good condition: Jan. 21, Feb. 11 and 18, March 11, May 13 and 27, June 3, 10, and 17, July 1 and 8, Sept. 16, and Oct. 21, all for the year 1899."

CHARLES DEXTER ALLEN, Post Office Box 1,147 Hartford, Conn.: "The following Roycroft books for sale: 'The Legacy,' 2 vols., soft leather, 1898, out of print; 'On Going to Church,' this is No. 7 of 28 copies on Japan vellum, signed 'E. H.,' bound in parchment with tie strings; out of print; hand illuminated; 'The Song of Songs,' this is No. 538 of 900 copies, signed by Elbert Hubbard, 1896; out of print. 'The Journal of Kobelath,' (Book of Ecclesiastes,) this is No. 481 of 700 copies, signed by Elbert Hubbard, 1896, bound in parchment with tie strings; has the essay by Hubbard; hand illumined cover. 'Art and Life,' this is No. 50 of 108 copies, signed by Bertha C. Hubbard; hand illumined; printed on Japan vellum, 1896; out of print. 'In the Track of the Bookworm,' this is No. 82 of 580 copies, signed by Irving Browne, (the author of the book,) 1898; out of print. 'The Philistine,' the first nine volumes bound in the Roycroft binding, 1895-1899."

AMERICANA: Fine bound copy of Joel Barlow's "Columbiad," large paper, Philadelphia, 1807, containing long interleaved letter to Barlow, and three engraved portraits of him; also Smirke's, R. A., eleven pictures, engraved by Anker Smith, A. B. Durand, Goulding Bromley, Parker Sebiavonetti, Crosek, Neagle, Heath, and Raimbach, a masterpiece of bookmaking, and the first epic written in America. Also bound copy of "Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin," John Bigelow edition, pages 10¼x7, forty engravings inserted, some rare; five portraits of Franklin. The above for sale at $17.50 each. F. L. M., P. O. Box 1,950, New York City.

MISS EMMA CORY, Cooperstown, N. Y.: "I have Harper's Monthly Magazine, published June, 1850, to 1889, all bound in half leather, and in perfect condition. I also have, not bound, but in good condition, remaining numbers, up to the present time, which I will dispose of at a suitable price. I also have Scribner's Magazine from November, 1870, to April, 1888, bound in half leather and in perfect condition."

WARREN R. DIX, 208 Broad Street, Elizabeth, N. J.: "Many years ago a gentleman, who claimed to be an extensive reader, stated that there was a novel by Grant, in which there was a character by the name of Julie d'Auterroches, but he could not recall the name of the book. Can you or any of your readers supply the information?"

A. V. EARL, 324 President Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.: "I have for sale a complete file of The New York Times Magazine Supplement, Sept. 6, 1896, to May 3, 1899, in good condition."

M. J. WHEDON, Medina, N. Y.: "Wanted Vol. I. of The Philistine; also the July, August, September, and October numbers of 1896, and the July and August numbers of 1897. State price for each or all."

Mrs. ELISABETH H. HALL, Whitehall, N. Y.: "I have Washington Irving's 'Astoria,' first edition; 'The Court of Napoleon,' by Frank B. Goodrich, with portraits of noted women, and Macaulay's 'Lays of Ancient Rome,' fine illustrated edition. Will be glad to hear of a purchaser."

W. H. WALKER, Room 6, 80 Nassau Street, New York City: "I would like to buy a Century Dictionary; any style of binding, if reasonable would answer. I have for sale a set of Cobbett and Howell's 'State Trials,' thirty-four volumes, complete, including index, in sound condition."

JOHN JAY, P. O. Box 23, New York City: "I offer for sale at $5, or will exchange, a small collection of book plates numbering over 110, including old and modern examples and representing England, Scotland, Germany, Holland, France, Italy, and America. No duplicates."

MAXWELL C. B. HART, 1,472 Madison Avenue, New York City: "To exchange for books, &c., 50,000 stamps, both United States and foreign; autograph letters, prints, a fine collection; rare mosaic and tile design prints; many first editions and seventy-five old plays; also French books and plays, scientific books, and volume of London Illustrated News and Graphic, 1855-60, and parchment register, with autographs of James Monroe and John Quincy Adams."

HOWARD E. JACOTT, 212 West Thirty-fourth Street, New York City: "I have all the numbers of 'Plays and Players' issued by The Illustrated American, except the last—No. 12. I believe—which I wish to secure. Kindly name price and give address."

S. L. GALLOUPE, Hollywood Inn, Yonkers, N. Y.: "I have for exchange the 'Carlyle-Emerson Correspondence,' Maban'a 'Admiral Farragut,' Tyndall's 'Michael Faraday as a Discoverer,' 'Life and Letters of Bayard Taylor,' Ballard's 'Moths and Butterflies,' Burnett's 'The One I Knew the Best of All,' Hamblen's 'On Many Seas,' Macgregor's 'One Thousand Miles in the Rob Roy Canoe,' Kay's 'Three Germanys,' and Wiggin's 'Timothy Quest.' I wish to obtain The Scientific American, either bound or unbound, from July, 1899, to June, 1900; also, The Scientific American Supplement, January to June, 1900; copies of the supplement for March 4 and April 1, 1899, and The American Machinist for April 27, 1899."

W. H. BEACH, Bridgeport, Conn., Arkansas Land: "I wish to obtain certain volumes of the edition marked 'Peterson's Uniform Duodecimo Edition of the Complete Works of Charles Dickens, Boz.' This edition was at least begun in 1857, though probably not finished at the time, and I should like to know who has copies of this edition and what copies they have for sale, so that I may fill out my set if possible."

HENRY E. LEGLER, City Hall, Milwaukee, Wis.: "The following books are offered in exchange for bound or unbound volumes of 'The Lark,' 'Chap Book,' or books of bibliography; Uzanne's 'Book Hunter in Paris,' Rich's 'Bibliotheca Americana Nova,' 1831-44; Farnham's 'Glances at Private Libraries,' Stevens's 'Historical Collections,' 1881; several volumes on Mormonism, including 'Millenial Star,' and Volume I. of 'Magazine Western History,' bound."

H. GRANT, care of Mrs. Baag, 1,061 Fourth Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.: "I wish to dispose of The Illustrated London News, July to December, 1857; January to June, 1862, and January to June, 1868; also, The London Weekly Budget, Jan. 1, 1900, to the present date, and The Penny Magazine, Vol. I., (forty-eight numbers, complete,) London, 1832. All in fine condition."

"H. V.," 249 Genesee Street, Utica, N. Y.: "I have for sale the following books: Seven volumes of The English Penny Magazine, from 1832 to 1838, inclusive; also Robert Southey's 'Life of Wesley.'"

FREDERICK W. MAYER, 54 Lorimer Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.: "I have for exchange the following books: Census, 1890, about forty volumes, with compendiums, abstracts, and statistical atlas; United States Commission of Labor, a complete set of the annuls and special reports and bulletins; United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, 1888 to date; Consular Reports, from 1892 to date, (monthly;) complete set of the special reports of the Adjutant General of New York, 1893 to date; Health Report of Connecticut, 1892 to 1897; Executive Documents of Ohio, from 1893 to 1898, (this contains reports of all the State commissions;) 112 pamphlet publications of the United States Bureau of Education on education and history of the subject in various States; a complete set of the United States Geological Survey Reports and Monographs; Agricultural Reports, 1879 to date, from Michigan, Ohio, Connecticut, New Jersey, Illinois, and 400-odd reports from every State in the Union. Any library wishing the above can have them at their own basis of exchange. I would be glad to receive lists of duplicates and desiderata."

FIRST EDITIONS
OF Bryant — Lowell
Emerson — Longfellow
Hawthorne — Thoreau
Holmes — Whittier comprising 700 volumes collected by WILLIAM HARRIS ARNOLD
of New York
To be sold without reserve at auction by Bangs & Co
91 and 93 Fifth Avenue
January 30 and 31 1901
Catalogues now ready and sent free on request of the Auctioneer.

MR. MOSHER'S NEW LIST OF BOOKS IN BELLES LETTRES
IS NOT ONLY A BIBLIOGRAPHY IN BRIEF OF "THE MOSHER BOOKS," 1891-1900, INCLUSIVE, BUT AN EXQUISITE LITTLE BIBELOT IN ITSELF. SENT POSTPAID FOR THE ASKING.
THOMAS B. MOSHER
Portland, Maine.

BOTH TRUSTEES AND THOSE WHOSE PROPERTY IS HELD IN TRUST SHOULD SEND $1.50 FOR LORING'S TRUSTEES HANDBOOK.
Little, Brown & Co., Publishers,
254 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

MALKAN
CUT PRICE BOOKMAN.
HANOVER SQ. No. 1 WILLIAM ST. and 67 STONE ST
TEL. 1121 Broad.
Book Store for Everybody
Mail Orders a Specialty
Special Discounts to Libraries

Engrossed and Illuminated Resolutions and work of a similar character. W. A. Cowie Designer, St. James Building, 1135 Broadway, New York. Phone Pocket Size Standard Novels.

Thackeray's Works and Dickens' and Scott's Novels. Thinnest printing paper in the world used. Large type, easy to read. Size 4¼ by 6¼ inches and not thicker than a monthly magazine. Bound in cloth $1.00 each. Prospectus mailed free on request, or books sent prepaid on receipt of price. THOS. NELSON & SONS, 37 E. 18th St., New York.

To Authors Seeking a Publisher
Manuscripts in all branches of literature, suitable for publication in book form, are required by an established house. Liberal terms. No charge for examination. Prompt attention and honorable treatment. "Books," 141 Herald, 23d Street, New York.

THE SOURCES AND LITERATURE OF ENGLISH HISTORY, from the Earliest Times to about 1485.
By CHARLES GROSS, Ph. D., Harvard University. 8vo, $5.00 net.
LONGMANS, GREEN, & CO., N. Y.

MENTAL NUTS.
Can You Crack 'Em?
100 catch problems. Great Entertainers. Mailed for 10 cents stamps. Home Supply Co., D 58, 132 Nassau St., N. Y. N. B.—Just out, Knots. Can you untie 'em? 10 cents. New Catalogue free.

AUTOGRAPH LETTERS of FAMOUS PERSONS Bought and Sold.
WALTER R. BENJAMIN, 1125 Broadway, New York.
SEND FOR PRICE LISTS.

WANTED—A full account of the Dalton Divorce Trial, which occurred in Boston many years ago. Counsel were Rufus G. Choate and Richard Henry Dana; also a complete account of the trial of General Daniel E. Sickles for the murder of Philip Barton Key. Address P. O. Box 2,052, New York City.

WANTED—Partner to join designer in building up small printing and publishing business; must have capital and experience, be well educated and refined; references exchanged. ILLUSTRATED, Box 190 Times.

SCHOLARS WHO BELIEVE THE PLAYS attributed to Shakespeare were written by Bacon may join a Saturday night club devoted to the discussion of same. Entrance fee—intellect. Address D., Box 190 Times Office.

Heinigke & Bowen, MEMORIAL WINDOWS
New York.

Read any new book for 20 cents.
The Book Mart, 105 Fourth Av., New York.

The New York Times
"All the News That's Fit to Print."
A NEWSPAPER FOR THE HOME.
SUBSCRIPTION RATES.
DAILY, per Month.....$0.50
DAILY, per Year..... 6.00
DAILY AND SUNDAY, per Year..... 7.50
SUNDAY, per Year..... 1.50
MONDAY, with Weekly Financial Review Supplement, per Year..... 1.00
DAILY AND SUNDAY, per Month..... 0.65
SAMPLE COPIES ON APPLICATION.

"Verses That Will Live."

POEMS. By Alexander Blair Thaw. Crown 8vo, $1.50.

Pittsburgh Commercial Gazette says of this work:—

"The whole collection breathes the spirit of a man who must be essentially good. The poems of love depict the chastened affection of Anglo-Saxon Christianity, not the exotic passion of the Greeks. The patriotic verses are fervent expressions of the author's pride in his country's past and strong hope for its future. The book is a credit to its author, and its author is a credit to his native city."

Dr. Thaw's poetry is a distinct and new note of hope, joy, and aspiration by an American citizen whose love for his country is founded on a fine intellectual appreciation of its future.

A New and Striking Poem
By F. B. MONEY-COUTTS.

THE MYSTERY OF GODLINESS.
18mo, $1.00.

Other Works by the Same Author.

THE ALHAMBRA AND OTHER POEMS.
Crown 8vo, $1.25.

POEMS. Crown 8vo, $1.25.

THE REVELATION OF SAINT LOVE THE DIVINE
16mo, $1.00.

H. D. TRAIL said:—"Mr. Money-Coutts is master of the rare and difficult art of clothing thought in the true poetic language."

DAILY MAIL (London):—"A revelation and a delight."

Mr. STEPHEN PHILLIPS, speaking of "The Revelation of Saint Love The Divine," says of it:—"This little book is an addition to our literature; it has the strong personal note so long lacking, the rebel fire that is lit from clear sight, and a gift of expression both exact and direct."

JOHN LANE,
251 Fifth Avenue, New York.

IN PRESS. READY SOON.

A COMPLETE HANDBOOK OF HAVANA AND CUBA.

BY

ALBERT J. NORTON,

A Member of the Chicago Bar.

Contains full information for the tourist, settler, and investor, also an account of the American Military Invasion.

HANDSOMELY ILLUSTRATED.

A new indexed map of Havana and surroundings, showing all streets, is included, size 25"x20".

12mo, Cloth, $1.50.

Rand, McNally & Company,
CHICAGO. NEW YORK.

Booker T. Washington

SAYS "All who are interested in the proper solution of the problem in the South should feel deeply grateful to Mr. Thrasher for the task he has performed so well."

HE REFERS TO

TUSKEGEE ITS STORY AND ITS WORK

By Max Bonnett Thrasher

now in its 3d Thousand, and the most complete and authoritative account of Mr. Washington and his wonderful educational work among the negroes.

12mo, Cloth, Decorative, 50 half-tone illustrations, with an introduction by Mr. Washington.

At All Bookstores, $1.00.

SMALL, MAYNARD & COMPANY
PUBLISHERS, BOSTON.

5TH EDITION OF

LINNET,

By GRANT ALLEN.

His latest complete novel.

CLOTH, $1.50.

NEW AMSTERDAM BOOK CO.

HENRY MILLER, Bookseller and Importer, 1 Barclay St., opposite Astor House.

We sell all new Books, except net ones, at 25 per cent. off publishers' prices.

"DEACON BRADBURY

is, in many respects, as distinct a character as David Harum."
—Phila. Item.

ANY BOOKS, OLD OR NEW, SUPPLIED TO out-of-town residents. Questions answered. Orders promptly filled. Liberal discount on new book. I. BAYLIES, 415 Putnam Ave., Brooklyn, New York City.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Up to and including Thursday afternoon.

HISTORY AND BIOGRAPHY.

THE NORTH AMERICANS OF YESTERDAY. A Comparative Study of North American Indian Life, Customs, and Products on the Theory of the Ethnic Unity of the Race. By Frederick S. Dellenbaugh. Illustrated. Octavo. Pp. xxvi.-487. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons. $4.

THE HISTORICAL DEVELOPMENT OF MODERN EUROPE. From the Congress of Vienna to the Present Time, (1815-97.) By Charles M. Andrews. Students' edition. Two vols. in one. Octavo. Pp. x.-407. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons. $2.75.

FOUR GREAT VENETIANS. An Account of the Lives and Works of Giorgione, Titian, Tintoretto, and Il Veronese. By Frank Preston Stearns. 12mo. Pp. xi.-376. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons. $2.

THE STORY OF ASSISI. By Lina Duff Gordon. Illustrated by Nelly Erichsen and M. Helen James. 16mo. Pp. xv.-371. New York: The Macmillan Company. London: J. M. Dent & Co. $1.50.

THE BEACON BIOGRAPHIES. Thomas Jefferson. By Thomas E. Watson. 24mo. Pp. xv.-100. Boston: Small, Maynard & Co. 75 cents.

THE LIVES OF THE PAINTERS, SCULPTORS, AND ARCHITECTS. By Georgis. In 8 vols. 18mo. Pp. 250. Temple Classics edition. Vols. 6, 7, and 8. New York: The Macmillan Company. 50 cents.

GIORGIONE. By Herbert Cook. Great Masters in Painting and Sculpture Series. 12mo. Pp. xii.-145. London: George Bell & Co. New York: The Macmillan Company. $1.75.

UNDER ENGLAND'S FLAG. From 1804 to 1899. The Memoirs, Diary, and Correspondence of Charles Boothby, Captain of Royal Engineers. Compiled by the last survivors of his family, M. S. B. and C. E. B. Illustrated. 12mo. Pp. xii.-285. London: Adam & Charles Black. New York: The Macmillan Company. $2.

POETRY AND ART.

THE POEMS OF PHILIP HENRY SAVAGE. Edited with an Introduction by Daniel Gregory Mason. 18mo. Pp. xxxiv.-170. Boston: Small, Maynard & Co. $1.25.

EARTH, SKY, AND AIR IN SONG. Book I. By W. H. Neidlinger. With pictures by Walter Bohbett. Cloth, quarto. Illustrated. Pp. 127. New York: American Book Company. 70 cents.

CABIN AND PLANTATION SONGS. As Sung by the Hampton Students. Arranged by Thomas P. Fenner, Frederic G. Rathbun, and Miss Bessie Cleveland. Third edition. 8vo. Pp. vi.-166. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons. $1.25.

THE BALLAD OF THE UNSUCCESSFUL. By Richard Burton. Pamphlet. Boston: Small, Maynard & Co. 35 cents.

A TREASURY OF IRISH POETRY. In the English Tongue. Edited by Stopford A. Brooke and T. W. Rolleston. 12mo. Pp. viii.-576. New York: The Macmillan Company. $1.75.

CONSIDERATIONS OF PAINTING. Lectures Given in the Year 1893 at the Metropolitan Museum of New York. By John La Farge. 12mo. Pp. 270. New York: The Macmillan Company. $1.25.

NEW EDITIONS.

SINTRAM AND HIS COMPANIONS AND ASLANGA'S KNIGHT. By La Motte Fouqué. 12 illustrations by Charles Robinson. 24mo. Pp. 218. Temple Classics Edition. New York: The Macmillan Company. 50 cents.

OUR VILLAGE SKETCHES OF RURAL CHARACTER AND SCENERY. By Mary Russell Milford. 18mo. The Temple Classics Edition. Pp. viii.-360. New York: The Macmillan Company. 50 cents.

CRITICAL AND HISTORICAL ESSAYS. By Thomas Babington Macaulay. In 5 volumes. Vols. IV. and V. Temple Classics Edition. 18mo. Pp. about 412 per volume. The Macmillan Company. 50 cents.

THE ROMANCE OF THE ROSE. By W. Lorris and J. Clopinel. Englished by F. Sclls. 18mo. The Temple Classics Edition. Vol. III. Pp. xii.-260. New York: The Macmillan Company. 50 cents.

THE INFERNO OF DANTE ALIGHIERI. 16mo. Pp. 400. The Temple Classics Series. New York: The Macmillan Company. 50 cents.

THE PRAIRIE and THE PATHFINDER. By James Fenimore Cooper. Illustrated. In two volumes. 12mo. Pp. viii.-436. London and New York: The Macmillan Company. $1.25 per volume.

FICTION.

ANTON'S ANGELS. A Romance. By Anita Trueman. 12mo. Pp. v.-131. New York: The Alliance Publishing Company. $1.

DOWN AMONG THE CRACKERS. By Rosa Pendleton Chiles. 8vo. Pp. 328. Cincinnati: The Editor Publishing Company.

THE LIKENESS OF THE NIGHT. A Modern Play in Four Acts. By Mrs. W. K. Clifford. 12mo. Pp. viii.-146. London: Adam & Charles Black. New York: The Macmillan Company. $1.25.

THROUGH STRESS AND STORM. The Stars in Their Courses. By Gregory Brooke. 12mo. Pp. 240. New York: The Abbey Press. $1.

THE CONQUEST OF LONDON. By Dorothea Gerard. 12mo. Pp. 321. New York: F. M. Buckles & Co. $1.25.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FOUNDATIONS OF BOTANY. By Joseph Y. Bergen. 12mo. Pp. x.-267. Boston: Ginn & Co.

BENDER'S LAWYER'S DIARY AND DIRECTORY FOR THE STATE OF NEW YORK, 1901. For Jan. 1, 1901, to Feb. 1, 1902. Published annually. Tenth year. Price, $2. 8vo. Pp. 651. Albany: Matthew Bender. $6.

LA SAINTE-CATHERINE. Par André Theuriet. 24mo. Pp. 65. New York: William R. Jenkins. Paper. 25 cents.

THE KING ON HIS THRONE; OR, POWER OF WILL. Through Direct Mental Culture. By Frank C. Haddock. In five parts. 12mo. Pp. x.-431. Lynn, Mass.: The Nichols Press. Thomas P. Nichols.

THE GOLDEN TREASURY OF THE BIBLE. By S. C. 18mo. Pp. xv.-346. New York: Edwin S. Gorham.

THE LAWS OF SCIENTIFIC HAND READING. A Practical Treatise on the Art Commonly Called Palmistry. By William G. Benham. Illustrations from life. 8vo. Pp. xiii.-635. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons. $5.

THE WRITINGS OF JAMES MONROE. Including a collection of his public and private papers and correspondence now for the first time printed. Edited by Stanislaus Murray Hamilton. Volume IV. 1803-1806. 8vo. Pp. xviii.-500. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons. $5.

TWENTY-EIGHT YEARS IN WALL STREET. By Henry Clews. 8vo. Pp. xxii.-722. New York: J. S. Ogilvie Publishing Company.

WHO'S WHO? 1901. An Annual Biographical Dictionary. Fifty-third year of issue. 12mo. Pp. xx.-1,234. London: Adam & Charles Black. New York: The Macmillan Company. $1.75.

THE SAILOR'S MAGAZINE AND SEAMAN'S FRIEND. For the year ending December, 1900. 12mo. Pp. iv.-384. Volume LXXII. New York: American Seamen's Friend Society.

William Penn's Papers.

In February, Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge will sell in London an important series of letters and documents, in the autograph of and addressed to William Penn. There is Penn's "Last will and Testament made and writt in my own hand a codicil, dated "21st of the sixth month 1707," signed "Wm. Penn" and witnessed by Tho. Cuppage and Cha. Willcocks. One of the most interesting of the letters is from Penn to Lord Romney, dated "Pennsylvania, 6-7 month 1701." The following extract shows what were the troubles of the founder of Pennsylvania:

I have heard of the very unfaire treatment some have given me in my absence, what I am apt to think one word from the King (if I could deserve it) could alter. I was thus attacked in King James time, and when he came to know the ruine it would prove to me and my family, he cryed out, God forbid, he would never be the author of such a cruelty. I received it in consideration of the debt of £16,000 owcing to my father in 80, and that I have expended above twenty thousand pounds upon it; to sign and carry it into the conditions it is now in. I can prove as well as solemnly attest whose intereats doubles ye sum. It was sett at £12,000, to such as would have bought it of ye Duke of York, I took it upon ye encouragement of my interest to render it considerable and not upon its own value, and dropt ye prosecution of my debt, a case well known to ye Duke of Leeds, Earl of Dorset, Charles Bertie, &c., &c.

The Athenaeum devotes considerable space to a description of these papers. It is to be hoped that some of these documents will be secured by American collectors.

"A GREAT BOOK OF A GREAT EPOCH" —EDWIN MARKHAM.

"There is strength in this book—the strength of a croseder who strikes boldly and goes straight to the point."
—The Sun, Baltimore.

"A brilliant, searching book, that reminds one of 'Sartor Resartus.'"
—Rev. T. T. Munger, D.D.

The Religion of Democracy

By CHARLES FERGUSON

"It is a great book. I speak advisedly. It is great in that it clearly belongs, as do few books in a century, to the prophetic literature of the world. I rejoice that such a book has come to light, and is bringing light on the deepest problems of life."
—Rev. Philip Moxom, D.D.

"The book is one to be read through seriously, intensely, and at one sitting. Its interest is enchaining, and it is almost impossible to lay the book down. It is to be recommended to all who have the interest of mankind at heart."
—The Evening Telegraph, Phila.

12mo, Cloth. Price, $1.00. Post-paid

FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY, Pub'rs, 30 Lafayette Place, NEW YORK

Good Reading for Children.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

Much is said of the books that are written expressly for the children of to-day. It is a debatable question whether the many children's books of this age are as conducive to forming good literary taste as was the reading during childhood of the standard books of the olden time that were written for adults, but were read by children because of a dearth of other reading.

In my young childhood I read Shakespeare and Milton with delight, even if I did not understand them. The grand language of "Paradise Lost" and the rhythm of the stanza fascinated me, and hours were passed poring over, reading, and rereading certain passages which thrilled and enfranced me by the grandeur of the themes and the language they were portrayed in. I am sure Prof. Sully is right when he says in his "Studies of Childhood," that the "intense interest that a story has for a child is due partly to the fact that he lives the scenes in his own mind and partly to the fact that the mystery of new and strong words has a fascination for him."

The historical characters in Shakespeare's plays all interested me very much; the Kings and Queens, good and bad, were all wondered over; the humor in the humorous plays touched a responsive chord in my make-up, and the plays were read over and over. Dr. Samuel Johnson said from his earliest years he loved to read poetry; that he read Shakespeare at a period so early that the speech of the ghost in "Hamlet," terrified him when he was alone.

So also Cooper's works, for my childhood was passed where Indians were much in evidence; I was familiar with them, and Cooper invested them with a new and romantic charm.

Dickens was a delight, and years after, when I listened to him reading from his own books, the pleasure of first looking at the man who has given the world so much, took me back to the time when I laughed and wept over the scenes he brought before me. The sorrows of Amanda, in the "Children of the Abbey"; the romantic character of Thaddeus of Warsaw, the heroism of Robert Bruce in "The Scottish Chiefs," Bulwer's and Scott's historical novels, even Victor Hugo, and some of Eugene Sue's were read. Snarleyyow, Handy Andy, Burns, Moore, Spenser's "Faerie Queene," "The Lady of the Lake," "Hiawatha," and Mary More, an odd medley, were an unfailing source of pleasure and delight.

The children of our family were all inveterate readers, and, as we were sent to bed at a rather early hour, the books we were reading surreptitiously were taken with us, and, as we were allowed only a short length of candle, it was our daily custom to make the tour of the rooms; and where there were short pieces of candle that we knew would be taken out and replaced by whole ones, we gathered them up and smuggled them to our rooms for use after we had gone to bed, often reading until our tired eyelids closed, to open with a start, and find the candle sputtering and dying out, the candlestick almost overturned by our sudden movement. Our burning of the midnight oil, or candle, was discovered, either accidentally, or we were betrayed by the colored boy, who also was literary in his tastes, and wanted the stubs of candle for his own nightly reading. One of the chief pleasures of my childhood was

An Official Account of Norway.*

Before the opening of the Paris Exposition, the Storthing determined to bring out a work descriptive of Norway and its resources, and the task was placed in the hands of Prof. Sten Konow of the University of Christiania and Prof. Karl Fischer of the University Library. The leading specialists in Norway having been called upon to contribute, the resultant is a most valuable and instructive volume. The entire work as translated by Miss Jessie Muir is remarkably well done.

What about the old Norvegr or Noregr? The history of Norway begins in the most remote of times. All Europe has retained the memory of those expeditions led by the Vikings. Broad expanse of water did not restrain the adventurous Norseman. He reached the Shetland Islands. The voyages of the old Norsemen were even extended for a time to the Continent of North America. Dublin for 300 years was under the rule of Norwegian Kings. When we read of the Danes who conquered England, it must not be forgotten that there was with them a large proportion of Norsemen, and, as for that, Normandy bears in its name this impress of the Norseman.

Geographically, Norway is best described as a long, narrow strip of country bordering on the North Atlantic. In a straight line from Vardo to Lindesnes the distance is 1,100 miles. If the water line defines the Atlantic side of Norway, there is something indefinite about its land side. It has not in reality been a natural line, dividing Norway from her neighbors on the east. It is a band of desert land, often 100 miles in width. "Norway's land—Boundaries toward the east, toward Sweden and Finland, are defined by a broad band, desolate, trackless, uninhabited, or only occupied by nomadic Lapps and forest Finns, a band that forms a very complete isolation for the home of the Norwegian people." To those not familiar with the conditions of the Scandinavian peninsula, it has always seemed strange that there was so little affiliation between the Norwegians and the Swedes. If a nation, like an individual, may have its likes and dislikes, the Norwegian has always been more intimate with the Dane than with the Swede. The author of the article on "The Geographical Situation of Norway" writes that it is a mistake to think that the two countries on the Scandinavian peninsula "belong to one another as an organic whole. Topographically this might be the case, but anthropogeographically it is not."

In a chapter of singular interest, the size, the geographical distribution, the composition, the growth, and movement of the population are described. In 1897 the population was calculated to be about 2,095,000 persons. The army and the navy are fully treated, with the industries of the country. Finally a series of chapters treats of the history, the literature, the press, painting, industrial arts, sculpture, and architecture. Of great interest is Mr. V. H. Siewers's explanation of the musical art in Norway. If Norway had no other representatives than Edvard Grieg and Johan Svendsen her claims for the highest of musical art expression would be fully established. Before closing this necessarily brief notice of this work, a word must be said as to the fine mechanical and typographical execution of the volume. Without any attempt toward a false artistic display, the utmost good taste and sobriety prevails. The illustrations are of the very best.

*NORWAY. OFFICIAL PUBLICATION FOR THE PARIS EXPOSITION, 1900. Pp. 650, maps and illustrations. Kristiania: Aktie-Bogtrykkeriet.

A Microscopic Language.

From The Manchester Guardian.

Syed Abdul Aziz, who has written an ode to the Queen which The Times describes as "a remarkable production," is not the first of the Queen's Indian subjects who has thus illustrated the possibilities of the Urdu language. Five years ago, when Lord and Lady Elgin were at Hyderabad, the Nizam presented them with a wonderful specimen of calligraphy, the work on one Syed Shakir Ali. The whole design, which took the shape of a tree with several birds perched thereon, overshadowing carte-de-visite portraits of their Excellencies, covered a patch of 8 by 4 inches, and into this small compass was crowded the whole of Chapter VIII. of Saadi's "Goolistan," ("Rose Garden,") which usually makes forty-five pages of printed matter. This present was accompanied by two grains of rice upon which was written in the same microscopic characters—(1) "The Viceroy and Lady Elgin honored Hyderabad with their august volume called "Fürst Bismarck's Briefe an seine Braut und Gattin," it was supposed that striking revelations were to be made concerning Bismarck's relations with the Prussian sovereigns and Government. But the volume contains love letters, pure and simple, the distinguished correspondent rarely touching upon politics. In them we find the individuality of a man set forth that the "Memoirs" left incomplete. In other words, they represent the Iron Chancellor, that was to be, as a devout lover, a devoted husband, an affectionate father, and a clean-lived country gentleman. They bear witness, too, of more purely human qualities than were made manifest in the "Memoirs," of an intense and passionate love of nature, of a robust sense of humor, and, withal, of a generous, considerate kindliness. Bismarck was always his wife's lover, and consequently from 1847 to his last telegram to Princess Bismarck, in 1892, he wrote love letters, only love letters. While waiting for a translation of the book which will appear from the press of Harper & Brothers in February, a few extracts from these letters may interest our readers. The first is a formal note to Herr von Puttkamer requesting permission to pay his respects to Fräulein Puttkamer. He wrote fully conscious of the ill-repute which his free-thought had brought him, but he wrote frankly. He said:

As regards my public life, it will be easy enough for you to obtain information from other sources. I confine myself, therefore, to an account of my private concerns and especially of my attitude toward Christianity. * * * After a course of religious instruction, irregularly attended and misunderstood by my sixteenth birthday, I had no other belief than a naked deism that was not long without a pantheistic taint. It was about this time that I ceased to say my prayers, not owing to indifference, but in consequence of deliberate resolve, because prayer seemed to me contradictory to my view of the being of God, for I argued with myself that either God, in accordance with His omnipresence, brought forth all things, and therefore my every thought and will, and therefore was, so to speak, praying to Himself through me, or that, if my will were independent of God, it was a presumption, and implied a doubt in the immutability, and therefore on the perfectness of the divine Council, if we were to believe to be able to sway it by human petitions.

* * * Meanwhile I was affected by events, in which I had no active part, but, as secrets of others, am not free to communicate, that touched me nearly. Their actual result was that the consciousness of the flatness and unworthiness of my view of life became more alive in me than ever. By the counsel of others, as by my own impulse, I was led to read the Scriptures more consecutively and with a resolute suppression of my own judgment. That which stirred in me gained life when, at the news of the fatal illness of our late friend in Cardewin, I wrested, without sophistries as to its reasonableness, the first fervent prayer from my heart. God did not vouchsafe that prayer of mine, neither did He reject it; for I have never lost the capacity to be able to petition Him, and I feel that there is in me, if not peace, that confidence and courage such as never I knew them before. What worth you may assign to this quickening of heart, two months old, I do not know; I only hope that, however, it may be adjudged, it may never be lost; a hope of which I have not been able to assure you more urgently than by the unreserved opinions and confidence in what I had just told you, and to no one else, in the confidence that God will suffer the single-minded to prevail.

The same uncompromising honesty marks all his letters to his future wife. Here is an early example:

I therefore believed myself able to make the choice, as far as my prospects were concerned, with complete independence, a choice that seemed the most reasonable, given my tastes and conditions. That the nature of public affairs and the servile status of our officials did not appeal to me, that I do not necessarily consider it a blessing to be an official or even a minister, that it appears to me as respectable and, in certain conditions, even more profitable, to grow corn than to write administrative enactments, that my private ambition tends rather not to obey than to command, these are facts for which, apart from my tastes, I can adduce no reason; all the same, it is so. Of all the reasons that could have induced me to combat these disinclinations, the most reputable would probably have been the desire to work more effectively for the benefit of my fellow-citizens than a private individual can do. Apart from the fact that I am really public-spirited enough to devote my powers rather to the furtherance of the common weal than to my private profit, I am, even at the most presumptuous estimate of my own capabilities, of opinion that it would make no manner of difference, as far as the well being of the inhabitants of Prussia is concerned, if I, or anyone else of the many competent persons with a similar aim, were to preside over a province. The efficaciousness of the individual official is in our case very dependent. The Prussian official is like the individual member of an orchestra, whether he be the first violin or the triangle, with insight of or influence over the whole; he has to play his part as it has been composed for him, whether he considers it good or bad. But I want to make music such as I know to be good or none at all.

He confesses his ambition, but he disdains red tape:

In the case of some famous statesman, especially in a country of Absolutist constitution, patriotism was, perhaps, the motive that impelled them into public service, much more frequently ambition, the desire to command, to become admired and famous. I must admit that I am not immune from this desire, and many distinctions like those of a soldier of war, of a statesman of a constitutional monarchy, such as Peel, O'Connel, (sic,) Mirabeau, &c., would exercise an attraction on me, like that of candle on a moth. * * * In short, I am not innocent of ambition, but consider it quite as evil a passion as any other, and a degree more foolish.

Here he excuses himself to his lady-love for not having been more precipitous in his love making:

This Winter I have been looking after the poor a little more than usual and have found distress, if not in my villages, at any rate in the neighboring town of Jericho as it could not be worse. When I remember that half a crown would keep a hungry family over weeks, it seems to me almost a theft from the poor, if I were to spend thirty on travelling. I could, it is true, give this amount away and travel all the same; but the fact remains; twice and ten times that sum would only appease a fraction of that misery. Tell me, does this hesitation hurt you, that I am so little importunate to see you that I bother about the misère of money?

Here is a characteristic passage scribbled to his eldest son in the crowded days of the advance on Paris, and in it we gain no intimation that the fate of the Hohenzollern dynasty hung in the balance—only the fear that his wife should be disturbed by uncertain news:

If either of you should be wounded, wire to me to Royal Headquarters as soon as possible. But don't wire to your mother first.

The Laws of Scientific Hand Reading

A Practical Treatise on the Art Commonly Called Palmistry. By WILLIAM G. BENHAM. With about 800 illustrations from life. 8vo, $5.00 net.

"Mr. William G. Benham is unexcelled in his field. His experience has been gained by years of patient study, in the course of which he has examined thousands of hands, and his collection bearing on the science of palmistry is one of the most remarkable and interesting in the United States."—Ohio State Journal.

North Americans of Yesterday

A Comparative Study of North American Indian Life, Customs, and Products, on the Theory of the Ethnic Unity of the Race. By FREDERICK S. DELLENBAUGH. With about 350 illustrations. 8vo, $4.00 net.

Dr. Dellenbaugh's work is an exposition of our knowledge of the North American Indian at the close of the nineteenth century. In addition to its popular interest, the list of stocks and tribes contained in the appendix has been prepared with extreme care, and is invaluable to the ethnologist and general student. The illustrations form a perfect museum of specimens, many of them pertaining to very recent discoveries.

A History of the People of the Netherlands

By PETRUS JOHANNES BLOK, Ph.D., Professor of Dutch History in the University of Leyden. Translated by Ruth Putnam. To be completed in five parts. 8vo. Each part $2.50.

Part III—The War of Independence. 1560-1621.

Previously issued:

Part I.—From the Earliest Times to the Beginning of the 15th Century.

Part II.—The Gradual Centralization of Power, and the Burgundian Period.

"This is the standard history of the whole Netherlands, and the author may be congratulated on finding so excellent a translator. . . . She has saturated her mind with the thoughts and general sweep of the author's mind, and with that thorough mastery of the language which would enable her to give a perfect literal translation; she does what is far better. She makes a free, flowing, yet thoroughly representative version that accurately reproduces the spirit, the color, the vigor, and the charm of the original."—Literary World.

Thomas Henry Huxley

A Sketch of His Life and a Study of His Life Works. By P. CHALMERS MITCHELL, M. A., Oxon. No. 3 in Leaders in Science Series. With portrait. 12mo, $1.50.

"This book is of special interest and value because, while comprehensive in character, it is compact in form. The author is one who has himself attained to no small eminence in the field of scientific research, and he has treated his illustrious subject in a sympathetic and popular manner. . . . Prof. Mitchell certainly elucidates the life of this great scientist by fresh illustrations. He gives us reflections well worth close attention."—Boston Times.

Milton.

A Critical Study. By WALTER RALEIGH, author of "Style," "The English Novel," etc. 12°. $1.50.

Unlike Shakespeare, there is no charm of mystery about the life of John Milton. Posterity has known almost too much about him, so that his weaknesses have been magnified. Professor Raleigh is the first to prepare at such length a judicious appreciation of the man and his work.

"An admirably written treatise. . . . The English style is comely, variable, a ready weapon of finely tempered steel, . . . nor is the matter less excellent. . . . We do not hesitate to call this a beautiful as well as a stimulating book, one which suggests high hopes for the future of English criticisms."—Athenæum.

The Women of the Renaissance:

A Study of Femininism. By R. DE MAULDE LA CLAVIERE. Translated by GEORGE HERBERT ELY. With portrait of the author. 8vo, about 500 pages, $3.50.

The author of this brilliant study recounts the history of a woman of the Renaissance period from her marriage as a young girl to her final escape from the husband's yoke as a more or less pious widow. He then goes on to show with lightness of touch and with a delicacy of humor (unusual in French writers) how women of the Renaissance comported themselves in their social relations and activities; their attitude in regard to sports, books, music, and the theatre; their conversational abilities, and their qualities as literary writers.

"The author writes in great detail and with commendable erudition on the position of women and the feminist movement of the sixteenth century as it shaped itself in Italy and, later, in France. These studies of the women of those days, in all her social relations and in all her activities, are illustrated with an unceasing flow of anecdote and citation, never more apt than when employed to characterize that remarkable group who were imbued with the so-called 'idées platoniciennes.'"—The Athenæum.

Omar Khayyam

His Rubaiyat, His Life, Times, and Works. Translation of Rubaiyat by Edward Fitz Gerald. With a Commentary by H. M. Batson, and a Biographical Introduction by E. D. Ross. Half leather. 12mo. $1.50.

The Memoir of Professor Ross presents, first, a study of Persia during the life time of the poet, and, secondly, all the data which have thus far been collected from Oriental sources concerning Omar Khayyam himself. To this memoir is added a list of the writings of the poet.

. . . "Mr. Batson's commentary is an illuminating agency which they cannot afford to overlook in their pursuit of knowledge concerning the astronomer-poet's immortal work.

"The design of the work from cover to cover is something that the lover of books ought to appreciate."—Rochester Herald.

Love Letters of a Musician. Later Love Letters of a Musician.

2 vols. By MYRTLE REED. 16mo, gilt tops, each $1.75. The two volumes, in full flexible crimson morocco, in box, per set, $5.00.

"Miss Reed has repeated her first success. She has equalled, if not surpassed, the interest of her earlier letters. Here will be found the same delicate fancy, the same beautiful imagery, and the same musical phrasse from well-known composers, introducing the several chapters, and giving the key to their various moods. Miss Reed has accomplished her purpose successfully in both series of the letters."—N. Y. Times Saturday Review.

"The story which is told in the love letters is as beautiful as the manner of telling, and Myrtle Reed has made a contribution to the lover's literature of the world as precious as the 'Sonnets from the Portuguese,' and hardly less poetic, although throughout the volume there is neither affectation nor overstrained sentiment."—Lexington (Kentucky) Herald.

A Book for All Readers

Designed as an Aid to the Collection, Use, and Preservation of Books, and the Formation of Public and Private Libraries. By AINSWORTH RAND SPOFFORD. Second impression. 12mo, gilt top, $2.00.

"In all the field of books about books there is nothing else in existence which covers so well and so clearly so wide a range of subjects. . . . It is impossible to read a single chapter without gaining fresh information upon some particular subject. Mr. Spofford's book will be found of the utmost value by all who either are, or wish to become, attached to library forces."—N. Y. Times Saturday Review.

"Dr. Spofford has collected into this pleasant and useful volume much of the book-wisdom and some of the book-wit gathered during his long experience as Librarian-in-Chief of the Congressional Library. We have here information as to the acquisition and proper care of books, the management of a library, and all things of special interest to book-lovers; the whole enlivened by many curious particulars and some facetious remarks."—The Nation.

27 & 29 W. 23d St., New York. G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS 24 Bedford St., Strand, London.

Shakespeare and the Baconians.

C. Harold McChesney, New York, writes to THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW: "Yes, I think your correspondent, Mr. Arthur Guiterman's, edition of Shakespeare is 'defective.' In my edition Hamlet manages, by one ruse or another, to 'remove' all in a lump everybody, even poor Laertes, (a manly young fellow, too, whose only fault seems to have been that he loved his father and his sister too dearly,) who could possibly continue the Danish dynasty. I fancy that Mr. Morgan knew what he was talking about.

"As to Mr. C. H. Lawrence's query, I also answer, Yes. The late Thomas Davison was an out-and-out Baconian, and so, by the way, was the late Oliver Wendell Holmes. With your editorial to-day on Ignatius Donnelly I fully concur. But Mr. Donnelly did not bring much aid to the Bacon theory; in fact, he rather weakened it. His cipher claims were quite too preposterous. He even found them in Ben Jonson, and had printed an advertisement announcing a book on a Ben Jonson cipher. I never heard of anybody seriously discussing his last publication, 'The Tombstone Cipher.'"

Meyer Brothers & Co. have just received from Paris Marcel Prévost's "Heureux Ménage," Camille Pert's "Charlette," Victor Joze's "Les Nouveaux Mystères de Paris," Paul Bourget's "Hommes d'Affaires," Edouard Schuré's "Le Double," so much commended by M. Coquelin; Gyp's "La Paix des Champs," Rachilde's "Contes et Nouvelles," and the complete works of Gaston Deschamps, who is to lecture at Harvard University.

"All the News That's Fit to Print."

The New York Times.

THE WEATHER.
Fair; moderating temperature; winds variable.

COPYRIGHT, 1901, BY THE NEW YORK TIMES COMPANY.

VOL. L...NO. 15,923. NEW YORK, SUNDAY, JANUARY 20, 1901.—TWENTY-EIGHT PAGES. PRICE THREE CENTS.

VENEZUELA'S PRESIDENT BLUFFS UNITED STATES

His Bold Front Forces the Washington Officials to Pause.

IS QUITE READY TO MAKE WAR

The Scorpion Arrives at Curacao—Foreigners in Venezuela Very Uneasy About the Outlook There.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—President Castro of Venezuela has won a victory over the United States. The precipitate return of the Scorpion to La Guayra, ordered by the Navy Department yesterday, is due to the determined attitude of the Venezuelan Government, and leaves that Government in a stronger position. It has been discovered by the Administration that Venezuela means business, even at the cost of war, and it has become necessary for this Government to proceed with more caution.

Persons acquainted with Venezuelan character say that the natives of that country are daring and reckless and have absolutely no conception, or at least no fear, of what would be involved in a conflict with a first-class power. It is recalled that at the time of Venezuela's dispute with Great Britain, President Crespo made war preparations and ordered out the reserves, and that the whole country was aflame with the war fever. Americans, knowing what such a war meant, looked on with astonishment.

It is in the same spirit that Castro has met the American demands. He began by utterly refusing to entertain the remonstrances made to him by Minister Loomis. The Administration, believing that Castro did not fully understand the seriousness of the situation, directed Minister Loomis to make a vigorous protest. The reply to this was a flat defiance of the United States.

Next it was discovered that Minister Loomis's cable messages had abruptly stopped. The cause for this was not understood until later, but, after several days of silence, the news came, unofficially and in a roundabout way from the Americans at Guanoco, that they were beleaguered by Venezuelans, who had ordered them to lay down their arms. Upon this the Scorpion was ordered to proceed to the San Juan River. It was not doubted that so serious a proceeding would have an effect upon the Venezuelan Government. It certainly would have had an effect upon most Governments, but it only led to further displays of boldness on the part of Venezuela.

In some way not yet disclosed the Administration was made to understand that there would be worse trouble unless the Scorpion turned back, and the Scorpion has accordingly been ordered to turn back. It was officially stated to-day that the reason for the Scorpion's return was that it was not considered safe to have the ship at La Guayra, no matter what might be going on at Guanoco. The natural course would apparently be to let the Scorpion proceed to Guanoco and send another ship to La Guayra. The reason why this was not done was that it became evident to the Administration that another hostile move would mean war with Venezuela.

War is the last thing the Administration wants. It was obliged to choose between war and a retreat, and it chose to retreat while there was yet time. The temper of the Venezuelans was such that if sailors from the Scorpion landed they certainly would have been attacked and some of them killed, and the consequences would have been too serious to contemplate. The Administration has not, it is officially stated, changed its position in the least, and it is also officially stated that there has been no abatement in the position of Venezuela.

The present situation is due to the American discovery that precipitate action will involve the most serious consequences, and the Administration is simply pausing for time and trying to discover a more hopeful way out of the difficulty. The present advantage of the situation is all with Castro. The silence of Mr. Loomis is due to the fact that President Castro has intercepted his dispatches, and also those which were sent to him. In spite of the protest which the United States made against this, Venezuela is still keeping it up. It is believed, for no more messages have been received from the Minister.

In reference to a dispatch from Curaçao, Dutch West Indies, that the relations between the United States and Venezuela have not improved, and that Minister Loomis has sent a strongly worded note, which is even described as being practically an ultimatum, to the Venezuelan Government, Secretary Hay said to-night that this Government has not authorized Minister Loomis to present a formal note to the Venezuelan Government, and certainly nothing in the nature of an ultimatum.

The Secretary added that Minister Loomis's instructions so far have been telegraphed, and have directed him to present to the Venezuelan authorities against any despoliation of American rights or property. Further than this the State Department has not sent forward any definite instructions as to the next step to be taken in the event that the Minister's representations do not obtain satisfactory cognizance and compliance.

WILLEMSTAD, Island of Curaçao, Jan. 19—(Via Haytian Cable.)—The United States auxiliary cruiser Scorpion, (Lieut. Commander N. Sargent commanding,) has just arrived here. She recently left La Guayra, (the port of Caracas,) and brings the latest news of the Venezuelan trouble. The situation is described as being serious.

The most hot-headed of the foreigners in Venezuela go so far as to say that if the Washington authorities do not take steps to protect American citizens now all foreigners may as well leave the country. The officers of the Scorpion are quoted as saying that the Diplomatic Corps at Caracas is unanimous on this point, as are all the foreigners. They admit, however, that the United States Minister at Caracas, Mr. Loomis, is working vigorously in the effort to arrange matters.

The concession of the Orinoco Company, whose two steamers were seized by the Venezuelan Government, was recently annulled on the ground that it was illegal, and the opinion prevails that it will be driven from business and that all the money invested by the shareholders will be lost unless the British or American Government intervenes. Mr. Loomis is using his good offices to save the two steamers recently seized. It is asserted that the company has unpaid claims against the Government for $500,000.

It is further asserted that hundreds of legitimately conducted foreign enterprises have been ruined in Latin America during the last thirty years by looting officials and revolutions, and it is alleged that an attempt is now being made to "squeeze" the Bermudez Asphalt Company for about $500,000, and, according to the reports which reached here to-day, if the company does not pay this amount to the Venezuelan officials, its property, said to be worth several million dollars, will be taken unless the United States Government intervenes.

If the most recent Venezuelan reports are to be believed the anti-Government disturbances there are confined to small revolutionary movements in the eastern part of Venezuela.

GLEN COVE STARCH WORKS SOLD.

Acquired by the National Starch Company for $225,000.

GLEN COVE, L. I., Jan. 19.—The works of the Glen Cove Starch Company of Glen Cove have been sold to the National Starch Company, the consideration named being $225,000.

The sale includes all the land, machinery, stock, and other property of the company.

Short Inexpensive Sea Tours to Georgia and Florida Resorts via Savannah Line, Magnificent steamers. Superb service. Full particulars, 317 B'way, or Pier 35, N. R., N. Y.—Adv.

CONTRADICTS MAYOR HARRISON

President of Chicago City Railway Company, on Proposed Increase of Stock.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—Speaking of Mayor Harrison's attack on the proposed increase of capital stock of the Chicago City Railway, President Hamilton says: "It is purely a business proposition. The company desires to pay its bonded indebtedness of $4,619,500, and calls upon its stockholders to advance the money for its payment by increasing their holdings in the amount of $4,500,000. There is no watering, and any attempt to mislead the minds of the unthinking in the belief that this is a stock-jobbing operation or is the watering of its stock is ungenerous and at variance with the intentions of the company.

"These bonds mature July 1 next and must be paid, and the stockholders furnish the means to retire them, leaving the property freed from the complications of mortgage indebtedness and relieved from the interest thereon. It is simply such a transaction as any person would make in payment of his indebtedness. There is no increase in its liabilities. In the resolutions of the Directors it is provided that the amount received from the proceeds of the sale of its new stock shall be used for the purpose of retiring these bonds."

MARRIED HIS DAUGHTER-IN-LAW

Widow of Arthur G. Earle Becomes Wife of Former Husband's Father.

Special to The New York Times.

NORWALK, Conn., Jan. 19.—Judge Asa B. Woodward announced in Norwalk today the marriage of his daughter, Mary Hanford Woodward Earle, to William Henry Earle, until recently the proprietor of the Park Avenue Hotel, New York City.

The bride was Mr. Earle's daughter-in-law, being the widow of Arthur G. Earle. She has one daughter, thirteen years of age. The wedding took place Thursday at Altadena, California, at the home of the bride's sister, also a former daughter-in-law of Mr. Earle, now Mrs. George S. Chambliss.

The Rev. William MacCormack of Altadena performed the ceremony. Mr. Earle has a handsome Summer home in Norwalk, but announced after retiring from the hotel business that he should spend his Winters in Southern California. The news of the wedding has created widespread surprise in Norwalk.

THE COLOR LINE IN TENNESSEE.

Bill to Prohibit Employment of White Teachers in Negro Schools.

Special to The New York Times.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 19.—A bill to prohibit the employment of white teachers in colored schools was introduced in the Senate to-day by Mr. Peake of Chattanooga.

The passage of this bill would mean the entire reconstruction of the faculty of Fisk, Roger Williams, and Waldon Universities, and other colored colleges and academies, representing a large sum of money in endowment funds. The measure is certain to meet with strong opposition from the trustees and friends of the various institutions which it would affect.

The Senate passed the bill to prohibit the co-education of the white and colored races. This affects Maryville College, the only school in the State where co-education is permitted, and where an endowment was made on condition that co-education should be permitted. The college is managed by the Presbyterian Synod of Tennessee, which body is divided as to whether the provisions of the will of the donor amount to a contract or not.

WILL PRESENT A GREEK PLAY.

The Harvard Classical Club to Stage a Comedy by Aristophanes.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 19.—Greek plays are something which modern scholars very seldom attempt to stage, but that is what the Classical Club of Harvard has started out to do. A similar effort has not been made here before in six years. Then the play was a great success, but the projectors found the results by no means commensurate with the labor involved and refused to listen to the frequent demands which were made for its reproduction. Other plays which were tried in several other parts of the country at about the same time met with far less success than the one given at Harvard, and the result has been that a Greek play has been almost unheard of in the United States within the last five years.

The play to be given by the Classical Club in April is a Greek comedy, entitled "Birds," by Aristophanes. The music in full has been written by Prof. J. K. Paine and has five choruses with tenor and bass solos. The arrangement is very harmonious and promises in itself to make the play a decided success. Prof. Goodwin, the author of Goodwin's Greek grammar, will have personal supervision of the play and will be assisted by Prof. Wright and other noted scholars. The Harvard Glee Club will furnish the music.

THE HEDDLE MILLIONS.

Courts in Canada Decide that They Shall Be Administered by the Public Sequestrator.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Jan. 19.—The Court of Appeal has rendered an important judgment in the appeal case of Lovignat against Mackay, confirming the ruling of the Superior Court in a case involving a part of the millions of Mrs. Maxwell Heddle of Paris, who died two years ago. Mrs. Heddle, who was a Montreal girl, Hortense Leduc, and who was the divorced wife of Jehin Prume of Montreal, formerly Court violinist of Belgium, left her fortune, estimated at 2,000,000f., to the free night lodging houses in Paris. The validity of the will was assailed by Mrs. Oscar Martel of Montreal, the mother of the testatrix, and Jehin Prume also entered a contest before his death.

M. Lovignat, notary, in the meantime was appointed provisional administrator of the estate, and endeavored to be placed in charge of the property in Quebec Province. This action was contested by F. S. Mackay, who was judicial sequestrator in this province, and the Court of Appeal decides that he is the proper person to manage the estate in Canada.

"PROM" WEEK AT YALE.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 19.—"Prom" week at Yale begins to-morrow morning at the college chapel with the annual turn-out of the guests of the college at the weekly chapel services. The round of teas and dances commences on Monday afternoon and will continue without respite until Wednesday. Monday afternoon there will be a large number of teas in the rooms of the men, and there will be two large undergraduate teas at the residences of Mrs. Eli Whitney and Mrs. J. B. Sargent. Monday evening the annual Glee Club concert will be given at the Hyperion Theatre, and immediately afterward the class germans will be held, to be given by the juniors, seniors, and sophomores of the academic department.

Tuesday will be crowded with festivities. In the afternoon there will be a number of large receptions at the University Club and the Scientific School Society buildings, St. Elmo, York Hall, St. Anthony's, the Cloister, and Colony. In the evening will come the final event of the week, the promenade concert in the Second Regiment Armory. Guests for the week are already arriving in large numbers, and the hotels and private boarding houses are filled. It is expected that there will be over 1,000 guests of the undergraduates in the city by Monday afternoon.

Special to Florida, Cuba, Nassau, Georgia via Washington, Richmond, Charleston, "N. Y. and Fla. Special," 2:10 P. M. Two other trains. Only one night to all Florida points. Quickest route. Atlantic Coast Line office, 1,101 Broadway.—Adv.

CADETS ABOLISH HAZING

Presidents of the Four Classes Join in the Action.

Congressional Committee Concludes Investigation—President of the Cadet Y. M. C. A. One of the Worst Hazers.

WEST POINT, Jan. 19.—The Congressional investigation of the West Point Military Academy has borne fruit sooner than expected. To-night, when the Congressmen were hurrying their inquiries to a termination, the cadets of all four classes held a meeting in Grant Hall and unanimously decided to abolish exercising and hazing of every form, as well as the practice of "calling out" fourth-class men. This is exactly what Gen. Dick and the other members of the Congressional committee have been trying to impress on the cadets who have testified before them as the only course open to them if they desired to see the fair name of the United States Military Academy unsullied and above reproach.

A communication was addressed to Superintendent A. L. Mills, who got back from Washington only this morning, and he quickly took it to Gen. Dick. The committeemen are delighted with the action of the cadets, and Gen. Dick, in a few words, said that they would all go back to the House of Representatives with the firm belief that in spirit and letter the agreement would be steadfastly adhered to by the cadets, who made it voluntarily.

The first witness examined this morning was Cadet Paul D. Bunker of Massachusetts, who is a member of the present third class. Last night some of the "plebes" told the committee that Bunker had braced them and given them tabasco sauce during the encampment last Summer. One of them, Cadet Dillon, said that he was required by Bunker to swallow from a half to a quarter of a teaspoonful of the sauce, which was given him in a camp spoon, which is about the size of a dessert spoon. Bunker acknowledged having braced some of the "plebes," but denied having ever given more than fifteen drops of sauce to any one, and when Judge Smith confronted him with Dillon's testimony the witness said he did not recollect ever having given such a large quantity to Dillon or any other "plebe."

Bunker said he weighed about 200 pounds and gave his height as 5 feet 11¼ inches. He remembered having braced two men who were his equals in physique. The other "plebes" whom he hazed were small men. Dillon, he said, weighed in the neighborhood of 100 pounds. He had never engaged in fights either as principal or assistant. His hazing repertoire was rather limited, as he confined himself to bracing, making men sing out their wash lists to popular airs, riding broomsticks, standing on their heads, and charging sparrows with fixed bayonets.

A. Y. M. C. A. HAZER.

Cadet Charles Burnet, appointed from Illinois, President of the Cadet Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association, and a member of the present first class, was next called and sworn. In reply to Gen. Dick, the witness said he came to the academy on June 19, 1897. He never held any office in the class organizations and was never a member of the "scrapping committee". Gen. Dick asked:

When were you appointed President and Secretary of the Y. M. C. A.?

Last April.

How many of the cadets belong to the Y. M. C. A.?

All of them with the exception of thirty-eight.

How many cadets are there in the corps?

About 400.

Who are eligible for membership?

Every one who applies, Sir.

Now I hand you a copy of The North American, a newspaper published in Philadelphia. It is of the date of Friday, Dec. 7, 1900, and contains a full report of the funeral of the late Oscar L. Booz, a former cadet at this academy. I wish you to read this report aloud, so that all here can hear you and that you may be the better able to answer any questions that may be asked you in relation to it.

Burnett read the account aloud. It contained a report of the sermon preached by the Rev. Dr. Allison on the occasion of the funeral and a descriptive account of the scenes and incidents in the church and at the grave. The witness read also the letter to Dr. Allison which was published some time prior to the investigation by the military court of inquiry. He was told to produce the letter from Dr. Allison, and left the room to get it. He returned in less than three minutes with the letter, which he read. This letter of Dr. Allison's was read at the military hearing and published at that time.

The witness then was handed several letters, written by Booz to the members of his family while he was at the Academy, which he was told to read aloud. He also read several sections of the military regulations and the oath which is administered to every cadet on his entrance to the Academy. When he had done this, Burnett was questioned by Gen. Dick in reference to hazing as follows:

Now, Mr. Burnett, in all fairness to you, I may say that in the testimony which has been given before this committee you have been mentioned as one of the principal hazers in this institution. I hand you a list of the corps of cadets and I would like you to point out all those who are noted for their hazing proclivities.

I might have to name nearly every one in the upper classes.

Oh, then I suppose those who do not take part in hazing are the few and not the many?

Yes, Sir; that is when hazing was in vogue. During the past year all vigorous forms have become obsolete.

The committee recognizes that there has been a decided improvement in that respect. But perhaps I am going ahead too fast, so we will let that pass for the moment. Now, here is a list containing sixty-eight forms of hazing, and I will ask you to read it over and see if you can add any form to it or tell us of those forms which have been done away with.

The witness did so, showing that all violent forms of exercising had been abolished, with the exception of bracing. The funny formations were still in vogue. Gen. Dick continued:

I have handed you all these documents and asked you these questions, so that we could the better understand each other. Now, take your letter to Dr. Allison and tell me if you know of the word "Bibles" having been used sarcastically in reference to former Cadet Booz?

No, Sir.

Then he was never called "Bibles" by any of the corps?

No Sir, I never heard it, and if he were it must have been done thoughtlessly by some cadet.

If any cadet were subjected to ridicule or any inconvenience on account of his religion could he escape or avoid it?

It would come to the ears of the heads of the Y. M. C. A. sooner or later, and the President of his class would be notified. This would result in the President taking measures to stop any further molestations.

The witness was then taken to task for statements in his letter to Dr. Allison. Burnett said Dr. Allison had scored the cadets without his being in possession of the full facts of Booz's life at the academy. The witness stated that Booz had told official and private falsehoods.

Let us hear of the official falsehoods.

Booz filed an incorrect statement in answer to a report charging him with unobserving the rules at a change of sentry posts.

What authority have you for saying so?

The statements of Cadets Caples and Pegram.

Do you consider their statements sufficient?

Yes, Sir, they are two honorable men, whose words I cannot doubt.

Had you entertained any prejudice against Booz?

No, Sir.

Let us hear something else which you consider was discreditable on Booz's part.

His actions in his fight with Keller.

Did you see the fight?

No, Sir; but I talked with several who were there; they said that he lay down.

Then you think he should have staid in that fight until he would be knocked senseless?

Yes, Sir.

Anything else?

Yes. He was reading a novel inside of the cover of his Bible.

But Prentice, who accused him of doing so, has appeared before this committee and told us that he was mistaken?

I did not know that; it was on his word I made the statement.

Now you see that your statement in your letter to Dr. Allison in this regard cannot be substantiated by you?

I had no reason to doubt the accuracy of my informant.

Gen. Dick then turned to the incidents of the Keller-Booz fight, and said that several blows had landed on Booz's body, and that he had been knocked out by a solar plexus blow. The witness said in reply that Booz was not knocked out, but he acknowledged that from the statements made by former witnesses, his saying in his letter to Dr. Allison that Booz lacked spirit and courage should be modified. He insisted, however, that Booz showed cowardice when he turned his back on his opponent and ran around the ring.

CADETS URGED TO REFORM.

Judge Smith, during his examination of Burnett, said:

Will you tell us if you desired to help a fourth classman, why it would not be better to abolish all social distinction between the classes and by thus associating with the fourth class impress on its members that the sense of honor and the moral principles which actuate the corps?

As army officers can teach their men by maintaining this distinction between them, so the upper classes can better instruct the fourth class by maintaining the first class distinction. I would like to say that Congress and the people do not understand West Point.

Gen. Dick replied:

In response to your own suggestion that Congress and the people do not seem to understand West Point, let me say to you that cadets at West Point seem, until recently, to have failed to understand the people. Congress, not wishing to be hasty in the matter, sent this committee here to inquire as to the exact condition of things and to inquire into all these many charges that were laid at the door of West Point.

We are all proud of the institution and the American people have a great interest in it. One hundred years have testified to its worth and to its value to the country. It has produced great men, and it will continue to do so unless its purpose is perverted.

You are going to remain here six months longer or thereabouts. Your fellow cadets in the corps will be here one, two, or three years longer, and it seldom comes to any set of men to have such an opportunity as that which presents itself at this time to the cadets at West Point to render this institution and the country so great a service, by resolving now and here that no charges so serious as these shall, if they can help it, ever be laid at West Point's doors again.

When the testimony was concluded Col. A. L. Mills, Superintendent of the academy, handed the following document to Gen. Dick, the Chairman of the committee:

West Point, N. Y., Jan. 19, 1901.

To the Superintendent of the United States Military Academy:

Sir: Having become cognizant of the manner in which the system of hazing as practised at the Military Academy is regarded by the people of the United States, we, the cadets of the United States Military Academy, while maintaining that we have pursued our system from the best motives, yet realizing that the deliberate judgment of the people should, in a country like ours, be above all other considerations, do reaffirm our former action abolishing the exercising of fourth class men, and do further agree to discontinue hazing, the requiring of fourth class men to eat anything against their desire, and the practise of "calling out" fourth class men by class action, and that we will not devise other similar practises to replace those abandoned. Respectfully submitted.

For the first class, W. R. BETTISON, President, class 1901.

For the second class, B. O. MAHAFFEY, President, class 1902.

For the third class, QUINN GRAY, President, class 1903.

For the fourth class, JOSEPH A. ATKINS, representing class 1904.

After reading the communication Gen. Dick said: "This voluntary act of the corps has so impressed the committee that they have every reason to believe that in spirit and letter it will be carried out by those cadets who are now at the Military Academy. This action of the men is greatly commended by the committee and will be read by the country with feelings of merited approbation."

Cadets Bettison, Mahaffey, Gray, and Atkins were called before the committee and addressed by Gen. Dick, who thanked them for their action in abolishing hazing at the academy, and said that Congress would recognize and adopt what they had done.

He also thanked Col. Mills for the kindness and courtesy shown the committee since they came here. He also said that the committee would go back to Congress with the kindest feelings and best wishes for the academy and all connected with it.

The committee then adjourned to meet again in Washington at 10 o'clock on Monday morning.

MARK TWAIN ON HAZING.

Calls West Point Cadets Who Indulge in It Cowards.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Mark Twain, in an interview to-day, spoke about hazing at West Point, and denounced the practice as a brutal one and the men who indulge in it as bullies and cowards. "Why," he said, "the fourth class man who is compelled to fight a man from the first class hasn't a show in the world, and it is not intended that he should. I have read the rules provided to prevent such practices, and they are wholly deficient, because one provision is omitted. I would make it the duty of a cadet to report to the authorities any case of hazing which came to his notice; make such reports a part of the vaunted West Point 'code of honor' and the beating of young boys by upper class men will be stopped.

"I am not opposed to fights among boys as a general thing. If they are conducted in a spirit of fairness, I think it makes boys manly, but I do oppose compelling a little fellow to fight some man big enough to whip two of him. When I was a boy, going to school down in the Mississippi Valley, we used to have our fights, and I remember one occasion on which I got soundly trounced, but we always matched boys as nearly of a size as possible, and there was none of the cowardly methods that seem to prevail at West Point."

HANNA'S CIVIL WAR RECORD.

Senator Was a Lieutenant and Will Join the G. A. R.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Senator Hanna is going to join the Grand Army. In a recent conversation with the Commander he disclosed the fact that he has a war record. Hanna's biography in the Congressional Directory makes no mention of this. On Senator Hanna's relating that he had been a Second Lieutenant in the Fifteenth Ohio Volunteers the Commander invited the Senator to become a member.

The services of the Senator in the war of the rebellion were confined to the neighborhood of the National capital. After the call for 100-day men in the closing days of the war Hanna's regiment was assigned to duty in the defense of Washington.

Conditional Gift by J. D. Rockefeller.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 19.—John D. Rockefeller has agreed to give $15,000 to Carson and Newman College of Mossy Creek, Tenn., provided the Trustees raise $50,000 additional by 1905. President J. T. Henderson says he has about half of the amount pledged. Carson and Newman is supported by the Baptists of East Tennessee. It has about 300 students.

New Pipe and Tube Plant.

PITTSBURG, Penn., Jan. 19.—Contracts are about to be let for a new pipe and tube plant at Zanesville, Ohio, in which Pittsburg and New York capitalists are interested. The new company is known as the Eastern Tube Company, and is chartered under the laws of West Virginia, with a capital of $1,000,000. The plans call for a plant with a capacity of 500 tons a day.

President Diaz a Grandfather.

CITY OF MEXICO, Jan. 19.—President Diaz's first grandson was born last night, and to-day the Diplomatic Corps and distinguished visitors in crowds have been showering congratulations on Capt. and Mrs. Diaz, the parents.

New York & Florida Limited
leaves New York 12:40 noon, daily, except Sunday, via P. R. R. and Southern Ry. New York to St. Augustine. Composed exclusively of composite, library, dining, compartment, drawing-room, sleeping, and observation cars. Also carrying Pullman drawing-room sleeping cars, New York to Aiken and Augusta. Connections at Jacksonville to Port Tampa. New York offices, 271 and 1,185 Broadway.—Adv.

NOT TO OPPOSE RUSSIA.

Germany Will Put No Obstacle in the Way of the Annexation of Manchuria.

BERLIN, Jan. 19.—From an unexceptionable source it is learned that Germany, neither in the past nor in the future, has or will interpose any obstacle to Russia's claims upon Manchuria.

Count von Bülow has given the Russian Ambassador, Count von Osten-Sacken, repeated assurances since the beginning of the Chinese troubles, and quite recently again, that Manchuria lies outside of Germany's interest or commercial sphere, and that it is in nowise touched on by the Anglo-German agreement.

THE CYMRIC IN COLLISION.

White Star Liner Collides with Steamer Carib Prince in the Mersey—Both Vessels Damaged.

LIVERPOOL, Jan. 19.—The White Star Line steamer Cymric, Capt. Lindsay, from New York, Jan. 9, for this port, which arrived at Queenstown yesterday morning and proceeded here, was in collision in the Mersey this morning with the British steamer Carib Prince.

The Cymric's port quarter-deck was damaged, her plates were stove and her rail was carried away. It is said that she has a hole in her stern 12 by 21 feet, reaching to the main deck.

The Carib Prince's bowsprit was carried away and some of her plates were stove.

The collision occurred while the Cymric was crossing the river to land cattle. A strong flood tide was running, driving her into the bows of the Carib Prince, which was lying at anchor.

The Carib Prince was last reported off the Syrian coast, Dec. 10, having sailed from Alexandria, Dec. 8.

LIFE MENACED BY FIRE.

Seven Families Flee from a Burning Brooklyn Building.

Many persons were imperiled last night by a fire which destroyed the four-story brick building, 75 Meserole Street, Brooklyn, and rendered seven families homeless. There were many rescues by firemen, whose prompt response to the first alarm prevented loss of life.

The fire started in the store of Joseph Fritsch, a dealer in barbers' supplies, on the ground floor, and was caused by some newspapers ignited from a stove in the back of the store. At the time the fire occurred the store was in charge of Joseph Fritsch, a ten-year-old son of the proprietor, and Samuel Russell, fifteen years old. When the blaze started they ran to the street shouting "fire!" The dense smoke which quickly filled the place alarmed Fritsch, who lives in rooms off the store, and was attending at the time to the wants of his wife, who was ill in bed. Finding the store in flames, Fritsch seized his wife and carried her to the street.

When the six families occupying the upper floors discovered that the building was on fire, a panic ensued. While many of the occupants rushed to the halls and fought their way through the blinding smoke to the street, others took to the windows of their apartments and shouted for help. When the firemen reached the scene the flames had enveloped the store and were shooting up to the upper stories. While the fire was at its height the firemen learned that Mary Bettinger, an invalid who lived on the top floor with her widowed mother, had not been seen to leave the building. The firemen forced their way into the building through the dense smoke and carried the two women, who were in a semi-conscious condition from smoke, to the street.

Mrs. Mary Hussel, who lived on the third floor, returned to her apartments, after getting out of the building, for her jewelry. When she attempted to leave the burning building again she found her escape cut off. She was rescued by firemen.

The flames soon shot up to the top floor, and three additional alarms were turned in. The firemen then succeeded in confining the fire to the building where it had started. The damage is estimated at $10,000. The occupants lost everything they possessed.

THE PAPER SUPPLY IN FRANCE.

Scarcity May Lead to a Reduction of the Import Tariff.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Jan. 19.—As a result of the Paris Exhibition, the Canadian paper manufacturers have received numerous inquiries from France for news paper. France is almost depleted of pulp wood, and the future supply of paper is becoming a serious question. Canadians made such a good showing at the exhibition that large contracts have been offered on the strength of that alone. At the present time, however, the price of paper in France is very little higher than it is in England, and the import duty is so large that the Canadian manufacturers have so far found it impossible to accept any of the contracts.

Frenchmen are evidently facing the question of a decreased duty or an increased price. The owner of the Island of Anticosti is about to build large pulp and paper mills. It is understood that M. Menier is leading the way in France in an agitation for the lowering of the paper duties.

SHOOKS FOR 720,000 BOXES.

Schooner Carries Them in One Cargo from Bucksport, Me.

Special to The New York Times.

BANGOR, Me., Jan. 19.—The largest cargo of fruit-box shooks ever shipped from this country to the Mediterranean left Bucksport to-day in the new four-masted schooner George C. Thomas for Palermo, Sicily. This vessel measures 1,277 tons, net register, which is two to three times the tonnage of the Italian brigs and barks that come here for shook cargoes, and she carries out shooks sufficient to make 720,000 boxes, or about three times as many as are ordinarily shipped in one cargo. The Thomas will probably make the passage in from thirty to thirty-five days, or about one-half the time taken by the easy-going Italians in the trade, and she will be back on this coast again in the Spring, with salt or sulphur.

The fruit-box trade has been heavy in the past year, shipments having been so many and so large that, when the Port of Bangor was closed by ice, the expectation was continued from Bucksport, from which port the Thomas and several other vessels have sailed. About 5,000,000 boxes were sent from Bangor, and, besides those already sent from Bucksport, there are several cargoes now awaiting shipment. By far the greater part of the shooks for Italian fruit boxes are made in Maine and shipped from Bangor, those from Austria, the only other source of supply, being inferior to the Maine shooks.

New Natural Gas Field.

Special to The New York Times.

SHELBYVILLE, Ill., Jan. 19.—This section of Illinois is excited over the discovery here to-day of a flow of natural gas at seventy-seven feet by the Shelbyville Gas Company. It is estimated that the quantity will be sufficient to light and heat this town for several years. It is the opinion of parties here who know something about the oil fields, that the indications are that a bed of oil exists in this vicinity, and there is talk of boring deeper to see if the drilling which gives gas will also yield oil.

New York & Florida Limited
via P. R. R. and Southern Ry. leaves New York 12:40 noon, daily, except Sunday. The most magnificent train in the world. Takes you from the icy clutch of Northern Winter, and in a few hours, straight as a bird flies, you are in the tropics. New York offices, 217 and 1,185 Broadway.—Adv.

QUEEN VICTORIA AT DEATH'S DOOR

She Was Stricken with Paralysis Last Night.

Prince of Wales Receives Authority to Sign State Papers.

KAISER HURRIES TO ENGLAND

Relatives Gathering at Bedside—Queen Refused to Seek Medical Advice When Her Entourage Begged Her to Do So.

COWES, Isle of Wight, Jan. 20—2:10 A. M.—Queen Victoria lies at death's door. She was stricken with paralysis to-night.

A local rumor, purveyed by Osborne House employes, declares that the Queen cannot live until Monday, but this receives no official confirmation.

The Prince of Wales has received authority to act in her Majesty's stead, and there has thus been created a practical, though not Constitutional, regency. He takes over the powers of signing State documents.

Gathered at the Queen's bedside are the Prince and Princess of Wales, Princess Louise, and other members of the royal family, while the Right Hon. C. T. Ritchie, the Secretary of State for Home Affairs, officially represents the Cabinet. Lord Salisbury is in constant telephonic communication with Osborne House, and it was rumored that he had arrived at Osborne, but this does not appear to be true.

The Prince of Wales will go to London this morning, where, with the Duke of York, he will meet Emperor William. Whether the Emperor will proceed to Osborne depends upon the result of this interview.

ARRIVAL OF PRINCE OF WALES.

The arrival of the Prince of Wales, at about 6 o'clock last evening, accompanied by Home Secretary Ritchie, and the arrival of the Princess of Wales, at 10 o'clock last night, occasioned no scenes of any kind. They embarked upon the Royal yacht Alberta and went up the little river separating Cowes from Osborne. Entering royal carriages, they were driven through the half gale which prevailed straight to the royal residence.

Mr. Ritchie, it is understood, was specially summoned to supervise the details of handing over to the Prince of Wales the necessary authority to transact State business, though no official announcement of this transfer appears to be constitutionally necessary or likely to be made.

The official bulletins may safely be described as optimistic. Their vagueness in describing the Queen's ailment may be accepted as merely official evasions of the facts.

The information obtained by Reuter's Telegraph Company to the effect that it is paralysis from which the Queen is suffering is based upon the highest possible authority. By Monday it is likely that the truth will be announced to the nation.

The extreme weakness of her Majesty and the loss of all her faculties appear to be at present the chief cause for anxiety. Stimulants are being freely administered.

SCENE AT OSBORNE HOUSE.

Her Majesty lies helpless and almost speechless in her bed in Osborne House, surrounded by every comfort. Fruits, flowers, ice, and all the accessories of modern medicine are at hand. Osborne House is buried amid a gloomy park of firs. It is brightly lit outside. The wind comes up from the Channel and surges through the trees like a death dirge. A mile away stands the Lodge. Beyond its portals none but the household can pass. On the gates, without the Sovereign's knowledge, are posted bulletins announcing her condition.

In the opinion of those best qualified to judge, the Queen's present serious condition was precipitated by intense worry over the lossea and hardships suffered by the British troops in South Africa. Frequently she has remarked to Court attachés that another war would kill her.

In this connection Reuter's Telegram Company learns that the Queen was most seriously ill while last at Balmoral in the Autumn. No word of this became public, but it appears that she was then almost dying, though the rigorous etiquette which she imposes alike upon her family and attendants prevented her condition being even spoken of as dangerous.

The present stroke is a sequel to what occurred at Balmoral. If the Queen survives it she will prove herself to be not only the longest-lived monarch in England's history, but also the possessor of one of the most marvelous constitutions with which a woman was ever endowed. Locally it is taken to be a sad coincidence that Sunday is the anniversary of the death of Prince Henry of Battenberg, for whom special memorial services are always held.

WOULD NOT ADMIT SHE WAS ILL.

Even the natives, who have grown to look upon her Majesty as an ordinary body, have noticed recently that she looked more delicate and shrunken than ever—a mere shadow of her former self—yet, with feminine persistence, the Queen forbade those around her to say that she was ill. The Queen Victoria tradition and etiquette decree that she is never ill; and so, with dogged determination, she fought off the ravages that worry over the Boer war, the deaths in her own family, and her increasing years have brought upon her. But against the ruthless hand of nature even the imperial resolve of the ruler of the greatest empire proved futile, and, with a pitiful realization of the inevitable, she shut herself off from her entourage. For two nights she dined alone and never stirred from the apartments she occupies at Osborne.

Humbly, for this tiny woman rules her Court with no uncertain hand, her Court officials implored her to seek medical advice. These messages she steadfastly ignored, and, though to-night her condition is admitted to be most serious, there are only in attendance Drs. Powell and Reid.

The tiny towns of Cowes, and, across the Medina River, East Cowes, are filling up with newspaper correspondents, and rents have risen to fabulous prices.

Beyond the bulletins, nothing official is obtainable, but not a soul connected in any way with Osborne House seems to believe that her Majesty can survive this attack. Never in the memory of her subjects has the Queen been ill before, and now that at her advanced age she has been stricken, it seems to those who have lived around her that it is impossible for her to recover. The village wiseacres, who have seen her from girlhood, wag their heads to-night and say it is a sad day for England.

SOWES GRIEF STRICKEN.

Sorrow is written broad upon every face. That official secrecy which stops all callers at the lodge gates does not serve to mitigate the general dread that pervades this island. Situated almost as Key West is to the United States, it holds in its bosom the most precious and revered personality that a nation ever worshipped, and it is the general impression that forty-eight hours will decide the fate of that feeble life upon which so many international threads hang. The countrywomen are pausing at this hour in their Saturday night shopping tours to pray that the hand of death may be stayed from lighting on the big, ugly house that is over the Medina River, but their prayers find little echo in hope, for those who have seen the Queen say she is only a shadow of death.

Yet the policeman on duty at the lodge gates respectfully refers all callers to the last bulletin, and says mechanically, "Slight improvement." The dread word "paralysis" is carefully kept from the nation.

ANXIETY IN LONDON.

Big Crowds Read Bulletins Until Late at Night—Bishop of Winchester Summoned to Osborne.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—The official bulletins regarding the Queen, posted at the Mansion House and Marlborough House yesterday, were read with evident anxiety and eagerly discussed by the large crowds constantly surrounding them until a late hour of the night. At the clubs the last bulletin, saying there was a "slight improvement," was received with some incredulity, as more than one private telegram was shown expressing the most unfavorable view of the progress of her Majesty's illness.

Among the ominous items of news of the evening was the statement that the Right Rev. Randall Thomas Davidson, D. D., Bishop of Winchester, had been summoned, and had reached Osborne late last night.

The inner circle of the Cabinet met yesterday morning under the Presidency of Lord Salisbury. While it was announced that the occasion was merely an ordinary meeting of the Defense Committee of the Ministry, there is good reason to believe it was more directly connected with the grave news from Osborne.

An urgent telegram has been sent to the Duke of Cambridge, recalling him from Paris. Yesterday morning, when it was announced that his Royal Highness had started for Paris, the news was taken to mean that the Queen's condition was not so al

LONDON TOPICS OF THE WEEK

Observations on Declining Days of England's Aged Sovereign.

EFFECT OF THE AFRICAN WAR

Bowed Down by Its Magnitude and by Personal and National Losses.

The Status of the Prince of Wales—No Great Political Change Looked For—The One Important Point in the Canal Dispute.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
Copyright, 1901.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—Our aged Queen I fear is dying. To-day she is one day older than her grandfather, George III., who died Jan. 29, 1820, and she has occupied the throne nearly sixty-four years, longer than any other sovereign of England. It is said that the harrowing anxieties and disappointments of the South African war have brought on the present collapse, and one may well believe that this is the truth.

Her reign has been as full of war as that of her grandfather, and she has always taken a keen interest in the achievements of British soldiers. When we entered into the present conflict those best optimists who possessed her ear, her son and his son-in-law, the Duke of Fife, persuaded the aged lady that Africa was going to be a mere pleasure picnic, and two of her grandsons went to the front as light-heartedly as to a football match. One has died and the other, I fear, has revealed his incompetence. These incidents brought on a morose fit early in the last year, but it was dissipated by the march to Pretoria, and Autumn the Queen's hopes were feebly maintained by the continual assertions of politicians at home and the Commander in Chief in South Africa that the war was over or practically over. Lord Roberts's home-coming demonstration was elaborately arranged in the conquering hero style to maintain the fiction, but it failed.

Day by day the African position has become more serious, the attitude of the combatants more irreconcilable. We have a great army locked up, too feeble, apparently, to take the offensive against a small but mobile foe. And, however we may try to disguise it, Cape Colony is rising, not perhaps to fight much, but to harass and to endeavor to intercept supplies. No wonder then that the Queen's mind has become clouded with a deadly melancholia, and that her end should threaten to be sorrow laden. An aggravation has, too, been produced by the recent death of her old friend, Lady Churchill.

***

THE PEOPLE AND THE QUEEN.

During the long years that Victoria has reigned mighty changes have come over England, but I do not know that we are morally a better people than we were when she ascended the throne in 1837. The Empire has expanded without restraint or thought of limits, and has brought upon us burdens grievous to be borne. Also, as luxury has increased society has changed its habits, in many ways not for the better, and nowhere has this change been more marked than in the groveling attitude assumed toward her Majesty. Not so many years ago the society papers gratified the public taste for scandal by jeering at and malignantly gossiping about her Majesty, and many journals to-day, fulsomely loyal in language, have habitually sneered at her and complained of her life of seclusion. Reading such sentiments and listening to the talk they inspired, it might almost have been concluded that the Queen was deservedly a most unpopular sovereign.

She never was that with the bulk of her people. There has been a homeliness in her domestic life throughout which has attracted the middle classes. No sovereign living has insisted more strenuously upon royal prerogatives or has more jealously guarded her royal interests. Along, however, with this rigidity in ceremonial life there has been a steady devotion to duties and a complete absence of ostentatious show and of theatrical effects in the inner life of the Queen's Court. On this foundation there has been reared during the last fifteen years a kind of legendary idyl, domestic and pastoral, around her Majesty, and only among the extreme sections of irreconcilable politicians, republican clubs, and such like, do we to-day find her spoken of with disrespect or contumely.

***

ALBERT EDWARD'S PATH.

The position is so unique that it may make the path of Queen Victoria's successor a thorny one. Most of the surroundings of the Prince of Wales are sordid, and, in some senses, depraved to an extent that even George IV.'s life could hardly parallel. Cosmopolitan usurers of the shadiest type have always been acceptable members of the Prince's inner circle. He lives among racing men and betting men, and, although in a way popular with the masses because of his tact and suavity on public occasions, I feel sure that the attitude of the nation toward him and, perhaps, toward his office, will soon be entirely different from that maintained toward his aged mother. The mere fact that he is a man will cause many people to speak out about abuses and to insist upon reforms upon which they have kept silent because a woman filled the throne.

No political change will occur in the event of her Majesty slipping away from us. Parliament need not be dissolved nor any officer of State or member of the Government changed. Yet politics, I think, will take a different hue when the new sovereign comes to the throne. At the moment, however, all politics with us are utterly sterile, particularly in domestic questions. Even the land agitation, steadily rising to a threatening height in Ireland, hardly excites a remark here. Yet it looks probable enough that the Unionist and Nationalist sections of the Irish members of Parliament may coalesce when the House meets next month to press upon the Government some scheme for the immediate expropriation of the landlords with a resolution and insistence difficult to gainsay.

***

DOMESTIC TOPICS SHUNNED.

Voluntarily, however, the present Government will not be driven to take up any question outside of naval and military affairs. We are all warlike now, in the last-shirt, last-ditch temper. At least the papers say so, and it is all in the mustering, recruiting, and hurrying forward of reinforcements and supplies. No other kind of patriotism deserves a moment's consideration. This week, for example, an influential deputation drawn from many representative quarters, politically disconnected, waited upon the Home Secretary to urge the expediency of a reform in the licensing laws. Mr. Ritchie listened and intimated that nothing would be done. Intemperance, he said, was one of the greatest evils that could possibly afflict any country, and it would be a great blessing if means could be found by which it could be mitigated, if not altogether remedied. Good words and plenty, but action, never. The Government dares not touch the drink revenue, or even lift a finger of warning against the powerful monopolists by whom it is maintained.

We talk self-approvingly about the way in which the people of the United States are subjected to the tyranny of trusts, and shake our heads in solemn conviction that a country so monopoly-ridden must be doomed to many social convulsions. I am no advocate of trusts in any form, much the reverse, and sympathize considerably with the spirit animating these prophets of evil, but, as far as I have investigated, I can find no combination in the American Union comparable to that of our brewers in strength and in the determination to maintain its privileges against all comers. Our drink monopolists have elaborated a deadly system of proprietary drink houses, and sustained it by the help of unpaid Justices of the Peace, often members of their own body, and by filling Parliament with their nominees in a manner that sets reformers at defiance. Their aim is to sell more drink, and the more public houses they can open for this purpose, the better pleased they are. All our towns, therefore, and a great majority of our villages and country districts, are oversupplied with drink shops, many of them of the lowest type.

***

THE LIQUOR QUESTION.

Reformers of all shades of politics, of all hues of religion, struggle year after year to have this state of things remedied, but they might just as well put their heads against the Egyptian Pyramids in the expectation that they could tumble them over. The brewers even poison people with impunity, or have been doing so lately up north by allowing arsenic in more or less deadly quantities to get into their beer, and no great amount of public indignation has been shown over the disclosures, and certainly no serious efforts have been made by the Home Office to protect, even in this direction, the victimized supporters of a pernicious monopoly under which bad drink is being forced upon the consumers. One thing alone will bring deliverance, a collapse among the brewery companies. These have for the last ten years more particularly been fighting amoog themselves by setting up opposition proprietary liquor bars or public houses in excessive numbers. Some of these firms are not now far off from bursting, and when a selection of them becomes bankrupt there may be a chance for social reformers.

We are as indifferent to foreign affairs as to questions of purely domestic interest. This week we have again been asked from your side to gird on our armor and fight against a revised Nicaragua Canal bill, and the invitation has again passed almost unheeded. I am not sorry, but at the same time I think it would be a mistake on the part of the zealous supporters of the amended bill among your legislators to hurry things. If the pace is forced in Congress and the attempt made to obtain a final vote upon the bill before our official mind knows it, jingoes here may catch fire and raise at least smoke enough to induce our Government to write some strong dispatches. If matters be taken quietly on your side, and the negotiations allowed to drag along, there is, to my mind, no doubt whatever that we shall accept pretty well whatever you choose to offer. Whether we ought to do so or not is hardly, it seems to me, a question of practical politics, because there is a much more important aspect to the subject, which this suggested wrangle about rights to fortify and own tends to obscure.

***

A PHASE OF THE CANAL PROBLEM.

As a commercial people with the largest mercantile marine in the world it is of vital importance to us that the United States should not assume or reserve any rights whatever toward establishing differential tolls in canal traffic. Provided England, and with England all nations, are guaranteed absolute equality in this respect, not only as against each other, but with your own mercantile navy about to be recreated, it can hardly matter to us two straws whether you retain the ownership of the canal and political rights over it or not. In the event of a great war, say a conflict between different European powers in China, wherein the United States might range itself on the opposition side, say with Japan, I have no doubt that you would close the canal for European warships, treaty or no treaty. So I fear that a wrangle, if started, over wrong points and jingoism, will as usual succeed in turning the nation aside from a watchfulness over interests far more vital.

Is it not a curious item among the characteristics of our later day civilization that a man like Samuel Lewis should have died worth nearly £40,000,000? He was, I am told, a good fellow, and in his way generous and open-handed to those really in need, but this does not alter the fact that his millions were amassed by most usuriously wringing the substance out of the spendthrifts among our plutocratic and aristocratic youth. How many landed estates and fat patrimonies in funds have changed hands amid domestic misery during the years when Lewis was accumulating this great fortune? You probably know the old story of his answer to the gilded youth who chaffingly asked him what he did with his ingots: "I lend them to the lord and give them to the poor." He has certainly given to the poor showers of gold with a dead hand. I am not a profound admirer of this sort of generosity.

A. J. W.

ROBERT E. LEE'S BIRTHDAY.

Southern Cities Honor the Memory of the Confederate General.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 19.—Robert E. Lee's birthday was celebrated here to-day by a closing of the State and city public offices, a parade of the local companies of the Seventieth Virginia Regiment, and the firing of an artillery salute.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Jan. 19.—Lee's birthday was observed here to-day by a large gathering of Confederate women. Mrs. M. A. Jackson, widow of the famous Confederate General, Stonewall Jackson, pinned a bronze medal, known as the Cross of Honor, on the coat of each veteran. The medals were the gift of the children of Charlotte.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 19.—The birthday of Robert E. Lee was celebrated to-day by a parade of all the white military of the city.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Jan. 19.—Gen. Lee's birthday was observed as usual by the closing of all banks and many stores during the day, and to-night by the gathering of a large audience at Hibernian Hall under the auspices of the Daughters of the Confederacy.

Mr. Faversham Out of Danger.

Dr. John A. Burke of 152 West Eleventh Street, who attended William Faversham, the actor, during his recent illness, announced last night that Mr. Faversham sat up yesterday for the first time. It will be two weeks, however, before the patient will be able to leave the city to recuperate. Only intimate friends have been allowed to see Mr. Faversham. Dr. Burke said that Mr. Faversham suffered from blood poisoning and heart disease.

California Town Snowbound.

REDDING, Cal., Jan. 19.—Wolverville, the county seat of Trinity County, in the northern part of California, has been snowbound since the latter part of December. Two men have come out on horseback, enduring many hardships. They report provisions extremely scarce. One man was frozen to death. Efforts will be made to take in mail and supplies by pack trains.

WEISBARD MURDER ARRESTS.

Three Italians Held in New Haven, Conn., on Suspicion of Being Concerned in the Crime.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 19.—Govani Cotille, Giuseppe Silvani, and Giuseppe Marino, Italians, are held at the Police Headquarters here on suspicion of being concerned in the murder of Meyer Weisbard, whose body was found in a trunk in New York a few days ago.

The three men arrived in this city Friday night at 7 o'clock in a canvas-covered wagon. Is is said they came from New York. It is positively known, according to the police here, that they spent Thursday night in Norwalk, Conn. Just why those men are suspected Superintendent of Police Wrinn refused to state. Upon their arrival here, however, they were immediately arrested.

The Superintendent has communicated with Capt. Titus of New York, but up to a late hour to-night he had received no answer. The men, meanwhile, will be held here to await further developments.

At Police Headquarters this morning it was said that nothing was known of the arrests at New Haven, and that no information of that kind had been received. The arrests, if they had been made, the police said, were not at the request of the New York police. It was said that Capt. Titus remained at Headquarters until midnight without having received such word, and he then left, Sergt. Webb remaining in charge of the Detective Bureau.

Chief Titus, in the absence of reporting on definite work accomplished, declined yesterday to state on what theories he was progressing, saying that as a matter of fact every conceivable theory was being sifted in the hope of finding one to fit. There is so little upon which to base a trail leading to the criminals that the murder mystery is considered an extremely difficult one to solve. The trunk, the yellow Dewey table oilcloth, the woman's apron, and the few other clews that might point to the murderers are all so common that little is hoped from them except to clinch the case of the murderer after he has been found.

In the meantime Chief Titus is bending every effort to work out the problem. Yesterday every policeman and detective on the force who can speak Italian was summoned to Headquarters and hereafter will be at work on the case.

SHOT AT TWO, KILLED HIMSELF.

Nathan May, Discharged, Attempted to Kill the Men for Whom He Had Worked.

After having attempted to kill his employers because they had discharged him, Nathan May, who had been employed by the Knickerbocker Sponging Company, held a crowd of twenty-five men and one policeman at bay with his revolver for several minutes on West Broadway yesterday morning. When he saw that escape was impossible, he blew his brains out.

On Friday evening May was notified by William Fox, the junior partner in the company, that his services would not be required any longer. He was not satisfied to be dismissed by the junior partner, but wanted formal notice from Benjamin Moss, the senior partner in the firm.

May called at the office of the Knickerbocker Sponging Company early yesterday and inquired for Mr. Moss. Mr. Fox said Mr. Moss had not come down, and again informed May that he had been discharged by Mr. Moss's orders. Then May left the office and stood at the entrance to the building. He waited there for several hours for Mr. Moss, and then walked in the direction he knew Mr. Moss generally came on his way to the office. At the corner of Fourth and Wooster Streets May met Mr. Moss. About this time Mr. Fox, who had also walked to the same place, saw May talking with Mr. Moss. Suddenly May drew a pistol and fired at Mr. Moss. The bullet went through the brim of his hat and the powder burned his face. He also tried to shoot Mr. Fox, who had come up.

Policeman Thomas McInerney heard the shot and started across the park and attempted to seize May, but the man turned his revolver on the policeman and told him he would kill him if he came any nearer. Every time any one in the crowd around started to take hold of May the latter would threaten to shoot.

The body of May was taken to the Mercer Street Station, where a son of the deceased, Louis May, twenty-five years old, identified the remains. Young May visited the scene of the tragedy, and meeting Messrs Moss and Fox, he shook his fist in their faces and cried:

"I will fix you for this!"

Alarmed at the treat, Mr. Fox made application for a warrant for his arrest. The warrant was not issued, but May was advised by the police to let Messrs. Moss and Fox alone and to keep away from the office of the sponging company.

MOUNTED POLICEMAN THROWN.

His Horse Ran to Park Stable While He Lay Unconscious.

Mounted Policeman Louis Hyams's horse was not rough shod, and he started to have him made ready for icy ronds yesterday. He is attached to the Central Park Squad, and was on the East Drive when he made for the sheepfold late in the afternoon to get the rough shoeing done. Opposite the Webster Statue the horse became frightened in the twilight, and, bolting, threw Hyams, and then ran to the stable.

Hyams was found unconscious on the road. His left arm was broken, he had three bad cuts on his head, and a number of bruises. Dr. Goldsmith, the Park physician, took him to the Fresbyterian Hospital.

FATHER RIEGEL POISONED.

Coroner's Jury Holds Ten Persons Responsible for His Death.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 19.—The Coroner to-day held an inquest in the case of Father Riegel, the Roman Catholic priest whose body was found in the hallway of a house on North Eighth Street two weeks ago to-day, stripped of his outer clothing and minus a considerable sum of money and other valuables.

The jury, after hearing the evidence, brought in a verdict that his death was due to opium poisoning, and holding the following persons, now under arrest, responsible for the crime: Robert Bryan, Jacob Wynne, Stephen McNally, Ella Barrett, May Miller, and Edward Hartman. The latter is sixteen years old. The jury also held responsible the following, who so far have eluded the police: Harry Leech, Paul Jones, Paul Goodwin, and a boy known as the "Bowery Kid."

The testimony showed that the priest was induced to visit a house frequented by the crowd above mentioned, and while there drank beer. His drink was drugged, and after his death he was robbed and his body dragged into the hallway of an adjoining house.

RAID ON CIGARETTE DEALERS.

Five Arrested on Charge of Violating the Revenue Tax Law.

United States Marshal Henkel made a raid on the lower east side cigarette dealers yesterday, and he and his deputies captured five men, who are charged with selling cigarettes and snuff without the internal revenue stamp.

For a long time complaints have been received at the Internal Revenue Office that tobacco dealers around Allen and Essex Streets were selling cigarettes in violation of the law. Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue Christopher Fortman was detailed to investigate the matter, and as a result he secured warrants for a number of dealers from Commissioner Shields. These arrests were made:

Henry Guttenberg, 74 Allen Street; Samuel Lord, 99 Orchard Street; Leus Gerson, 59 Jefferson Street; Abraham Dartz, 72 Essex Street, and David Jaffe, 89 Essex Street. When they were arraigned before Commissioner Shields they pleaded not guilty. Jaffe was held in $1,000 bail and the others in $500 each for examination.

Lotos Club Midwinter Festival.

Lotos Club members and their guests, to the number of 400, gathered in the clubhouse last night to celebrate their annual midwinter festival. Vaudeville artists, grand opera singers, musicians, magicians, and monologists held the boards and did their "turns" before an appreciative audience. W. T. Carleton, W. Propert Carleton, Armand Le Conte, Jack Le Hay, Gilbert Girard, Prince Ismael, and Herr Bauermeister were among the entertainers.

TO FIGHT THE CHARITIES PLAN.

Bishop Potter and the Rev. W. R. Huntington to Protest—Charities Aid Society May Oppose It.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 19.—Bishop H. C. Potter and the Rev. William R. Huntington, the pastor of Grace Church, New York, will write protests to Gov. Odell against his recommendation for the abolishment of the State Board of Charities. Such was the information given to-day by one who claimed to know of the intention of the two distinguished divines.

It was stated also that at a meeting of the Charities Aid Society to be held in New York Monday evening the society will put itself on record as not indorsing the view of Gov. Odell that the society could perform in a large measure the work which is now performed by the State Board of Charities.

Gov. Odell has pointed out that the Charities Aid Society has the right under the law to go into any charitable institution in the State and make such investigation as it deems necessary. The Governor has stated that, inasmuch as the State Charities Aid Society has this right, it seemed to him there was a duplication of effort in the work of the society and the State Board. For the Charities Aid Society to do the work of inspection which is now being done by the State Board of Charities would entail an expense which the society would not be able to meet, it is said.

The Governor's suggestion is not being well received by the religious organizations whose institutions have been the beneficiaries of public aid. The Charities Aid Society is on record as being opposed to State, county, or city appropriations for the benefit of private institutions. Because of the society's stand upon this question, the religious organizations which have received such aid do not view with equanimity the proposition for an enlargement of the society's power.

ZIMMERMAN SELLS OUT.

Interest in Alabama Coal, Iron and Railroad Company Disposed Of.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 19.—Eugene Zimmerman, Vice President of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railroad, and father-in-law of the Duke of Manchester, has disposed of his interests in the Northern Alabama Coal, Iron and Railroad Company to Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. of New York, his copartners.

The properties held by the company consist of the blast furnace at Talladega, the Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad, running from Talladega to Pell City, and the ore and coal mines at Coal City. It is understood that there was friction between the two interests. The investment in the Alabama properties was made in the Fall of 1898 and the blast furnace was operated until last August. It is understood that operations will now be resumed.

SOUTHERN IRON SHIPMENTS.

Birmingham's Pig Iron Exports Four-fifths of America's Total.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 19.—Authoritative data obtained to-day show that pig iron and cast iron pipe shipments from the South in 1900 were as follows:

Pig iron shipments from Alabama and Tennessee, 1,327,743 tons.
From the Birmingham district alone, 817,972 tons.
Exported, 238,615 tons.
Cast-iron pipe shipments from Alabama and Tennessee, 88,050 tons.
From the Birmingham district alone, 29,114 tons.
Exported, 9,700 tons.

The Birmingham district furnished nine-tenths of the exported metals, and by reference to the United States reports of exports it appears that four-fifths of all the pig iron exported from the United States in 1900 came from the Birmingham district. For the eleven months ending Dec. 31, the total exports of pig iron from the United States were 251,000 tons, of which the Birmingham district furnished 210,000 tons. The exports represent 30 per cent. of the entire make of the district.

The pig iron exported went to Genoa, Trieste, London, Liverpool, Belfast, Glasgow, Stockholm, Copenhagen, Rotterdam, Hamburg, Bremen, and Antwerp. The export pipe went principally to Mexico, some going also to Hawaii, Stockholm, and other points.

ALABAMA STEEL FOR GLASGOW.

Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Co. Sends Heavy Consignment Abroad.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 19.—Three thousand tons of steel billets, the largest shipment of steel ever made south of the Ohio River to foreign parts, left here to-day for New Orleans. The consignment will be placed on vessels to be carried to Glasgow, Scotland. The steel comes from the steel mill of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company at Ensley, and goes to a consignee at Glasgow.

Steel shipments from the Ensley mill have been regular to foreign parts ever since the mill went into operation last Summer. Shipments are limited by the domestic demands on the plant, both in the Birmingham district and in the East.

JAMES A. ST. JOHN DEAD.

Was Well Known as a Patron of Rowing and Was President of the American Type Foundry Company.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 19.—James A. St. John, a well-known citizen of Brookline, died at his home on Beacon Street at 9:15 to-night of cancer of the stomach. He had been sick more than a year. He leaves a wife and a son. He was fifty-eight years old.

Mr. St. John was, perhaps, more prominently identified with the rowing history of this country than any other man. He was one of the founders of the National Association of Rowing Clubs.

He brought out "Jake" Gaudaur, the champion single sculler, and backed him in all his races in this country, as well as in Australia and England, and presented the famous caraman with a farm in Manitoba after his return from Australia.

He was referee of many important boat races, and an authority on the sport. He was President of the American Type Foundry Company and amassed a fortune. He lived in St. Louis for a number of years. He was a member of the B. A. A.

"Jingo" Is Persian.

From The London Truth.

"If you turn up the Persian dictionary," writes a correspondent in India, "you will find the word 'jang-jo, (pronounced 'jungjo,') from 'jang,' war or strife, and 'jo,' one who follows after; the meaning of the full word being 'aggressive, offensive, litigious, contentious, quarrelsome.'" Unfortunately, I have not got a Persian dictionary; but if I may take this information on trust, it throws valuable light on a moot point of etymology. The word written "jang-jo," and pronounced "jung-jo" in Persian, has obviously become "jingo" in English, in which form it still means "aggressive, offensive, contentious, quarrelsome." The fact that the last syllable was in the original "jo," (sometimes, no doubt, written "Joe,") and that this Jo, or Joe, in the sense of a follower of war or strife, has become merged in the English "Jingo," is a curious and interesting scientific discovery.

Mrs. Bowers Loses a Diamond Brooch.

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—It was learned to-day that a diamond brooch valued at $2,500 was stolen from Louise Bowers, wife of Frederick Bowers, the song writer, last Wednesday while she was absent from her apartments at one of the prominent hotels in this city. Mrs. Bowers left last evening for New York City, so it was impossible to learn the details of the theft.

Schooner Curtis Is Launched.

BATH, Me., Jan. 19.—The five-masted schooner Oakley C. Curtis was launched from the yard of her builders, Percy & Small, to-day. Although the thermometer registered very near zero, there was a good-sized crowd of spectators present. The Curtis was built for J. S. Winslow & Co. of Portland. She is 265 feet long, with a gross tonnage of 2,378.

Fat Flat Dwellers.

From The London Medical Press and Circular.

The tendency to obesity is greatly dependent upon racial and individual predisposition. It is much more pronounced in the well-to-do, who eat more and take less exercise, than with laborers. Dwelling in flats and using lifts are further cause sfor the increase of obesity, while the popularity of the cycle is a natural reaction against this reduction of physical labor.

MEMORIES OF LINCOLN.

Ex-Senator Dawes of Massachusetts Depicts Character of the Martyr President.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Jan. 19.—"Personal Recollections of Abraham Lincoln" was the subject of an address by ex-Senator Dawes before the Men's League to-night. Although Mr. Dawes is now in his eighty-third year, his intellect is as bright and vigorous as ever. The address partook rather of the nature of an informal talk, as the audience gathered about Mr. Dawes, who was seated in a large armchair before a glowing open fire.

"I remember the first time that I saw Mr. Lincoln on that morning when he came to Washington ten days before he was to take the oath of office as President of the United States," said Mr. Dawes. "He came at a time and in a manner most unfortunate for himself and his friends. It had an extraordinary effect on all classes of people. For three months previously there had been great apprehension in Congress over the safety of the President-elect, as it was believed that a conspiracy existed to assassinate him and thereby prevent his inauguration."

Speaking of Lincoln's personal appearance Mr. Dawes said: "I never saw a man so unkempt, so ill-looking; his hair was disheveled, his clothes were the ones that he had worn on the sleeper from Springfield. He was long and angular. It seemed as though his body was made up of component parts of different bodies, as though his head was not in the right place. Rough and uncouth, he was a typical backwoodsman. But there was something incomprehensible in his face, something unfathomable.

"About Washington there were thousands of the poor fellows in camps who had enlisted for the service of their country. Every Saturday afternoon the Congressmen used to visit those who had come from their home districts, and I never went among those soldiers but what I saw Mr. Lincoln there. No mother ever went to Washington to intercede for her son that did not go away feeling that everything possible had been done for him. He was a great lover of justice; he never allowed a man to suffer who was not responsible for a crime.

"I saw him when he came to Washington, and I was there when he fell. Just forty days before his death I took my little boy to see him. The President took him up in his arms and said: 'My boy, never try to be President of the United States. If you do you never will be.'"

Mr. Dawes related in a strikingly vivid story the scenes in Washington the night that Lincoln was shot. "'My colleague and I were planning,' he said," to return to Massachusetts the next day. Before leaving the capital, however, we thought we would go up and see the President. So on that fatal night we called at the White House at 10:05 o'clock and was told that Mr. Lincoln had gone to the theatre. He was assassinated at 10:15. Returning we called on Mr. Sumner, from Massachusetts, but he was not in. We came by Mr. Seward's house and immediately afterward we learned that the President had ben shot in the theatre. I never saw such a night in my life. As the news of the President's assassination spread, the streets of the city became crowded with a wildly excited throng. Right in the midst of it a terrific thunderstorm came, and for an hour there was a subsidence of the excitement, only to break out again more wildly than before. We got as near as we could to the place where Mr. Lincoln had been taken, and there we learned of the attempt that had been made on Mr. Seward's life, and it was said other prominent men of the city were to be victims of a great conspiracy.

"The next morning my colleague and I called on the Chief of Police and he informed us that one of the men marked out was Charles Sumner, for two suspicious men had called upon him the night previous. The Chief would not believe our story that we were the 'suspects,' and so posted a guard in front of Mr. Sumner's house for a week thereafter.

"Yes, I saw Mr. Lincoln when he came to the capital, and I saw him when he left the city in a funeral car, and I was one of the bearers."

In conclusion, Mr. Dawes gave a brief sketch of the early life of Lincoln, and said finally:

"You talk about your self-made men. He wasn't self-made. It was in him. He was created to serve his country in that momentous hour. I have never doubted that it was a miracle."

When Mr. Dawes had finished there was a long and hearty applause, and many took advantage of the occasion to shake once more the hand of the ex-Senator.

REVIVAL OF NIHILISM.

Alleged Plot to Kill Czar on His Way to St. Petersburg—Nicholas Still Weak from His Illness.

Foreign Correspondence NEW YORK TIMES.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 7.—A revival of Nihilism may shortly be expected throughout the empire if the statements of the Russian secret political police are to be believed. It will be remembered that an attempt to assassinate the Czar was frustrated by the political police last October. Now, it is said, the agents of this secret police have unearthed a Nihilist plot to blow up the train on which the Czar and the imperial family will make their return journey from Livadia to St. Petersburg. The police, while declaring that such a plot has been discovered, refuse to make public any details concerning the would-be regicides. It is, however, well known here that many arrests of Nihilists have been made in the Southern provinces of Russia during the past few days.

In any case, whether the assertions of the police are correct or not, there is nothing surprising in the fact that the Nihilists have set to work again, after a truce of ten years and more. During this period the Government has done nothing to improve the condition of the laboring classes, while, on the other hand, the necessities of life have greatly increased in price in the past decade. Discontent is general among the industrial classes of the empire, and the leaders of the revolutionary party would find existing conditions in Russia far more propitious for the spread of their ideas than was the case ten or fifteen years ago. The Russian workingmen, not only in the cities, but also in the rural districts, are to-day organized in much the same manner as in Western Europe. The police have not succeeded, notwithstanding all their efforts, in preventing this organization of labor in Russia, and, as a result, the growth of radical ideas has been rapid among the working classes.

The latest news received here concerning the Czar's health is very favorable. Nevertheless, the state of weakness resulting from his illness is such that the doctors do not consider it safe for Nicholas II. to leave Livadia before the beginning of February.

It is pretty generally known here that the Czar was much more dangerously ill than was stated in the Russian official press. In fact, at one time for twenty-four hours a fatal termination was expected at any moment. Although Nicholas II. is now convalescing, the ulterior consequences of his illness are viewed with apprehension here. The Czar's constitution has always been a delicate one, and, in any case, many months must elapse before he can resume work and shoulder once more the heavy responsibilities of Autocrat of All the Russias. Should the Czar's illness be prolonged, the leaders of the reactionary party in Russia would undoubtedly take advantage of the fact to strengthen their cause. It is a mystery to no one that the Czar's uncles have very different political views to those of their nephew. They belong to the reactionary Pan-Slav school, and while under ordinary circumstances their views would be of small importance so far as the general policy of the Government is concerned, these views might prevail should the Czar's absence from the capital continue indefinitely.

The Russian Liberals have, therefore, followed the course of the Czar's illness with the keenest anxiety, and it is they perhaps who have felt the most relieved at the news that he is convalescent. The Czar is, however, like his father, Alexander III., undoubtedly popular among the Russian masses. The devotion of the Russian people to their sovereign is even to-day more like the love of children for a parent than the loyalty of subjects to their monarch. This childlike love of the Russian people for their sovereign can alone explain the pathetic events which took place after the death of Alexander III., when men, women, and children committed suicide in sheer despair at the death of their "little father." And yet the Russians are not monarchical by temperament; on the contrary, their sentiments are perhaps more republican than those of any other people on the Continent, the Swiss alone excepted. The democratic sentiments of the Russian masses are, however, not at all incompatible with their feeling of veneration for the Czar.

Whatever may have been the exact nature of the Czar's illness, it is certain that the trouble was aggravated by the general condition of his health resulting from overwork. Nicholas II. has often been warned by his physicians, more particularly during the past two years, that, if he persisted in overworking himself, serious results would follow. Since his accession, the Czar has always fulfilled his duties in a most conscientious manner. He works, however, with even less ease than his father, and often reads the ponderous documents of State, submitted to him by his Ministers, several times over, to become fully acquainted with their contents. He often remains at his desk in this manner until 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning. Naturally, the crisis in China brought a surplus of work to the Czar and thus, still further weakened his constitution.

B. C. DE W.

BRITON AND BOER.

From The London Standard.

VIENNA, Jan. 1.—The South African war naturally occupies a considerable space in the reviews of the past year published by the Vienna papers. The most interesting article, from this point of view, is one in the Neue Freie Presse, which appears over the signature of Max Nordau. In this the readers of the paper will, for the first time, perhaps, have found the real truth about the Boer. Herr Nordau says:

"We behold the rare spectacle of the whole world being at one in condemning British policy. We see a massed and terrible hatred of the English, who by many are considered no better than cold-blooded robbers and murderers. On the other hand, the British Nation has almost unanimously declared for the policy of its present Government, with which it means to share the moral responsibility for the war. So convinced is nearly every one in England of the justice of the British cause that I think, if we except Mr. Stead, there is not a single prominent politician or writer in England who would be ready to subscribe to another Gladstonian convention of Pretoria. The unanimity of a nation like the English, in a case in which the whole world is also unanimous in condemning British policy, ought to make sensible men reflect; because the English, after all, were for centuries a bulwark of freedom. They are a nation whose sense of justice and equity is proverbial, whose high civilization only a fool would deny, and whom to treat as a band of robbers and thieves is such an absurdity that only bad faith or utter imbecility could be guilty of it. Any one not led by blind hatred, and with enough reason left in him to reflect, will find, in seeking for the cause of British pertinacity in this war, that England is simply actuated by a very natural motive—namely, the instinct of self-preservation. To understand this, however, one must know how methodically the Boers had made their preparations for driving the English into the sea; how, since the death of John Brand, the Dutch of South Africa sought the means of driving out the English, first, by the ill-treatment of the Outlanders, and, at the right moment, by using force; and how the motto, 'Africa for the Africans,' was interpreted to mean, South Africa is for the Dutch, and there is no place here for the English.'

"Other nations may be indifferent about it, but the English are convinced that they must not lose South Africa. Not only is their territory there five and a half times as large as Germany; not only are there 1,000,000 settlers of English blood or English speech, and space for a hundred times as many British settlers, but South Africa is still the most important station en route to India and Australia. Its possession in English hands is almost a condition of the possession of India and the defense of Australia. Its loss would, therefore, inevitably bring about the disruption of the British Empire, and for this reason—for one, that is, which is at the root of all human relations—British policy must be what it is—simply the question, 'You or I.' To those magnanimous persons who ask why is not the formula, 'You and I,' used, I would simply reply, 'Address yourself first to the Boers,' because it was they who wanted to exterminate the English in South Africa, and, until they succeeded, to make at least helots of them; while the English offer the Boers full British freedom, and as much independence as any loyal subject of the Queen enjoys in the British colonies. No Englishman ever thinks of depriving the Boer of his place in the South Africa sun.

"There is no doubt that the South African undertaking is a terrible ordeal for England, and there is no lack of prophets who triumphantly foretell that it will be the grave of the British world-power. I am not of that opinion, because England, under Elizabeth and under George III., had to face far more terrible dangers, and overcame them; and I am convinced she would rather spill the last drop of her blood than allow herself to be ousted from her present position in the world. And, highly as I appreciate the heroism of the Boers, I find the heroism of the English deserve the same admiration."

Permanence of Tenure.

From The San Francisco Bulletin.

Carl Schurz, President of the Civil Service Reform Association of New York, has written to City Attorney Lane giving his views on the prerogatives of the civil service in the matter of filling and creating vacancies. He says: "There seems to us, of course, no reason whatever in the contention that permanency of tenure is necessarily a part of the civil service reform scheme as formulated in the usual civil service law. There is certainly nothing in the practice here or in the decision of any of our courts to warrant it. Rules governing removal may, in short, within our understanding of the matter, be termed unconstitutional without affecting in the slightest degree those other rules that govern appointments or promotions."

New York's Leading Fur Establishment!

Importer and Manufacturer, HALL Established 1856.

WILL OFFER TO-MORROW THE REMAINDER OF OUR

HIGH CLASS FURS,

Comprising Garments in

Sealskin, Broadtail and Persian Lamb, Also Collars, Scarfs and Muffs

in all Furs

At Prices Marked Down Fully 33⅓%

Sealskin Coats
with dark Eastern Mink Collar and Revers, $150 & $175

Sealskin Coats, fine close short thick nap,
XXXXX Quality, value $225.00, now, $175
XXXX Quality, value $200.00, now, $150
XXX Quality, value $175.00, now, $125

Coats of Persian Lamb with Chinchilla Collar and Revers, value $165.00, now, $100 with dark Eastern Mink Collar and Revers, value $200.00, now, $125 with large Collar and long Revers, value $100.00, now, $60

Fur Scarfs

Mink Scarfs, Handsome Dark Eastern Skins, trimmed with 8 tails, value, $17.00, now, $11
Hudson Bay Sable Scarfs, value $50.00, now, $25
Brown Fox Boas, Double, value, $45.00, now, $25
Blue Lynx Boas, value, $25.00, now, $14
Alaska Sable (Skunk) Scarfs, value $20.00, now, $13
Alaska Sable (Skunk) Scarfs, value $15.00, now, $7
Brown Fox Boas, Brush at each end, value, $18.00, now, $11

$30 Dark Mink Muffs,	$18	$35 Electric Seal (Cony). Coats	$25
$25 Mink Muffs,	$15	$45 Electric Seal Coats,	$30
$20 Mink Muffs,	$11	$50 Electric Seal Coats,	$35
$35 Chinchilla Muffs,	$25	$60 Electric Seal Coats,	$40
$28 Sealskin Muffs,	$18	$70 Electric Seal Coats,	$50
$12 Alaska Sable (Skunk),	$7	$10 Sealskin Caps,	$5
$25 Black Lynx Muffs,	$15	$15 Sealskin Gloves,	$8
$20 Brown Fox Muffs,	$12	$15 Coachmen's Capes,	$8
$6 Electric Seal Muffs,	$3	$110 Fur Overcoats,	$65

Garments in a complete line of sizes from 32 to 50 bust. Catalogue mailed free.

W. H. HALL, 346 Sixth Av.

(BETWEEN 21ST AND 22D STS.)

Davis Collamore & Co. Ltd.

Will sell at Public Auction
the balance of their stock of

RICH TABLE CHINA, GLASSWARE AND ORNAMENTAL ARTICLES

remaining at BROADWAY and 21st STREET.
Sale to begin TUESDAY, JANUAR

PLEASED WITH THE BOSSCHIETER VERDICT

Paterson People Generally Think the Punishment Fits the Crime.

No Date for Sentence Yet Announced—Kerr to be Tried During the Present Term of the Court.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 19.—The verdict in the Bosschieter case was the principal topic of conversation here to-day. In every shop, in every public place, the fate of Walter J. McAlister, Andrew J. Campbell, and William A. Death was discussed. So far as could be judged from a general expression of opinion, the verdict pleased. Here and there a hot-head could be found who expressed regret that the three prisoners were not to be hanged, and as a rule gave fiery reasons for his belief.

The prisoners themselves could at least not be said to be greatly downcast because of the verdict. They slept sounder during the night, and ate with better appetites this morning than they had for a week past. It is certain that after the concluding speech of Prosecutor Emley, they expected worse than they got. Particularly was this true of McAlister, who went into the court-room when summoned to hear the verdict betraying for the first time nervousness and fear. "I expect to be made the scapegoat," he was heard to say.

All of the prisoners, according to Warden John F. Buckley, got up from their prison cots at 6 o'clock. They ate their breakfast and then sent for the morning papers—a lot of them. Then they straightened up their cells. McAlister's father called to see him early in the morning. The prisoners were allowed to promenade about the interior of the prison court during much of the day. When asked to express an opinion upon the verdict, they declined.

"You must excuse me," Kerr said.

Pressed further to give an expression of how he felt considering that his colleagues had been tried and he remaining to be tried, Kerr replied:

"I am as cheerful as I can be under the circumstances."

The fate of the others being known, interest centres upon Kerr. When he shall be tried depends upon Prosecutor Emley. The latter said to-day that the public might be sure that Kerr would be called to account during the present term of court. It is quite certain to be some time before the early part of February, when Justice Dixon begins to preside over the deliberations of the Supreme Court. But the Prosecutor's health has to be taken into consideration in the matter. Although he held out well during the recent trial he is known not to have regained fully the vigor he had before his illness of a year and a half ago, and he may not be able to take up the trial of the untried prisoner as quickly as he would wish.

Then there is the subject of a possible appeal from the verdict to the Court of Errors, which is extensively discussed. Ex-Judge Scott, who was of counsel for the three men, was at Plainfield most of the day. His associate in the case, Lawyer Michael Dunn, freely told all that he said was to be told upon the subject.

"Until we have a conference upon the subject, you may be sure we will not apply for a writ of error," said he. "We have lots of time to do it in. Even after the prisoners have begun to serve their terms of imprisonment, we can at any time take the steps leading to a new trial. If, however, we apply for a writ of error before the prisoners have been taken to State's prison, all the time consumed in the formalities of the court counts as naught. This men begin to diminish the time of their terms of imprisonment only after they have entered State's prison."

Concerning the date when Justice Dixon will call the convicted men before him for sentence, there has also been much speculation.

"Ask Him," said one of the lawyers who was in the case, pointing toward the sky. "There are two things impossible for a Paterson lawyer to find out; one of them is what a jury will do; the other what Justice Dixon proposes to do. The prisoners may be called before him for sentence on Monday next, or they may not be called before him for that purpose for some time to come."

No little interest was manifest as to how the Bosschieter family would take the verdict. Mrs. Bosschieter was first informed of the fate of the men who so cruelly wronged her daughter, about a half hour after the prisoners themselves learned that they had escaped the noose.

"The man who came and told me seemed very much excited," Mrs. Bosschieter said. "He frightened me. We are not entirely pleased with the verdict. We expected a verdict in the first degree. Still, I harbor no bitterness against the men who killed my daughter. It may surprise you to hear that I had never seen them in my life until I faced them in the courtroom. Even then I did not clearly see them. I was too much engrossed in what the lawyer was asking me—too anxious to tell the truth—to pay much attention to them. Nor did I ever hear Jennie speaking of them. That's the strange part of it. At the trial they spoke as if my daughter knew the men well. If she did, she never spoke of them at home."

Several ministers will make the Rosschieter case the theme of their sermons to-morrow. Some of them attended the trial.

MANHATTAN STEAMSHIP CO.

Will Put on a Line of Steamers to the Maine Coast by March 1.

Special to The New York Times.

BANGOR, Jan. 19.—N. L. Newcomb of New York, General Manager of the Manhattan Steamship Company, has been here this week making arrangements for the revival of that transportation enterprise, which, so far as the Bangor line is concerned, stopped short when the steamship Pentagoet was lost with all hands in the great gale of November, 1898. Mr. Newcomb stated here that the company would resume business about March 1, running steamers from New York to Portland, to Bangor and Rockland, to Eastport and St. John, and to Yarmouth and Halifax—four lines in all. In the course of an interview here Mr. Newcomb made some highly interesting statements concerning the vague ideas entertained by New York capitalists as to Maine and the Maritime Provinces of Canada. Said he: "I have approached Wall Street men and have had them ask, after listening to a talk about Maine and the Provinces, if the people in Nova Scotia spoke English! All through my labors in this enterprise I have had to talk up parts of the country that are not familiar to the people of the Metropolis. They know Maine as a hunting ground, but are ignorant of its products and manufactures. New York is in direct communication with all parts of the world except Eastern Maine and the Provinces. New Yorkers can give lots of information concerning the 'cotton belt,' but when a person speaks of Maine, they look blank. This, too, in face of the fact that Maine is at their very doors."

MARYLAND'S INTEREST SUITS.

I. F. Raain Confessed Judgment for $19,000 in Favor of the State.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 19.—I. Freeman Rasin, for many years the acknowledged leader of the Democratic Party in Baltimore, and still actively identified with the organization, confessed judgment in the sum of $10,000 in favor of the State of Maryland before Judge Harlan of the Supreme Court, this morning.

The claim against Mr. Rasin was originally $25,000, and arose out of the contention that the interest on public funds collected by him while clerk of the Court of Common Pleas rightfully belonged to the State, and not to the clerk. This amount included all moneys received from that source by Mr. Rasin during the thirteen years he held the office in question, including interest. A revision of the accounts showed, however, that Mr. Rasin had actually received but $19,000, and upon his agreement to refund the sum the claim for interest was waived, and Mr. Rasin, upon advice of counsel, consented that judgment should be rendered for the sum mentioned.

Several similar suits are pending against Mr. Rasin's successors and other public officials who have followed his example in appropriating interest on public funds to their own use.

TO BUILD A PALISADE DRIVE.

Private Persons Are Interested and the Work May Be Extended.

Special to The New York Times.

NYACK, N. Y., Jan. 19.—The project for building a driveway along the base of the Palisades, as planned by the Palisades Commission, has developed a still greater scheme, which may result in the creation of the most magnificent boulevard in the country. The wealthy men of the Tuxedo Park Association and prominent citizens living on the west bank of the lower Hudson River are interested, and definite steps have already been taken.

The greater project is to continue the Palisades drive from the point where the commission has planned to end it, up along the Hudson to the State Park at Stony Point, in Rockland County. Then the Tuxedo people will construct a road from the park to the river, connecting with the Palisades drive. This would make a drive from Fort Lee to Stony Point along the river, and then across country to Tuxedo, thirty-five or forty miles in length, through scenery famed the world over. It would be at the very doors of New York City.

Tuxedo Park has long desired an outlet to the Hudson River. Except by train there is no way of reaching the park from New York without a roundabout drive. With the Palisades road continuing up to Stony Point, and with a drive constructed from the river to the park, the wealthy members could reach there by taking one of the pleasantest of rides. They could also go up the river in their yachts, and then drive from Grassy Point across to the park. Grassy Point, which is a short distance below Stony Point, is where the Tuxedo road will end. For the past two weeks a corps of civil engineers has been at work at Grassy Point, and, although great secrecy has been maintained, it has been learned that they are making the preliminary survey for a road to connect with the park. This road will cross the famous Ramapo Mountains and wind through grand scenery. It will be built by experts in road building, and will cost a great sum of money.

The end of the proposed Palisades drive is just below Sparkill, four miles from Nyack. From Nyack to Sparkill there is a fine boulevard, running along the river and known as the "River Road." To connect this with the Palisades drive will be an easy matter. Then the road would have to be built from Nyack on to Stony Point. Prominent citizens are enthusiastic over the idea, and it is thought that, with aid from the State, Rockland County would build the road.

Stony Point, where "Mad Anthony" Wayne fought his famous battle, has lately been acquired by the State and a park made of it. The road would thus connect the two State Parks. The project has the approval of prominent officials. As soon as work is commenced on the Palisades drive the matter of building the connecting link will be pushed. Work on the Tuxedo road will be commenced at once, regardless of the Palisades drive.

COLUMBIA'S PUBLIC LECTURES.

Four Series, in Courses of Ten, Arranged by the University.

A series of public lectures, extending through February and March, has been prepared by the authorities of Columbia University. The first course is a series of ten lectures in the German language, under the direction of the Department of Germanic Languages and Literatures on Thursdays, in January, February, and March, at 4:30 o'clock, in Room 309, Havemeyer Hall. The programme for this series is:

Jan. 2, the Rev. Gustav Gottlieb, Ph. D., rabbi of Temple Emanu-El, on "Die Poesie in der Prosa des Lebens"; Jan. 31, Hans M. von Kadich, Ph. D., on "Die Zoologische Frage Nordamerikas"; Feb. 7, Udo Brachvogel, on "Joseph Victor von Scheffel's 'Frau Aventiure'"; Feb. 14, Clarence A. Bratter, on "Der Redacteur, der Stiefbruder des Schriftstellers"; Feb. 21, Ernst Richard, Ph. D., on "Deutsches Studentleben"; Feb. 28, Heinrich Conried, on "Das Moderne Deutsche Drama"; March 7, Max F. Blau, Ph. D., on "Heinrich von Kleist"; March 14, the Rev. August Ulmann, S. T. D., rector of Trinity School, on "Leasing und seine Zeit"; March 21, Louis Viereck, J. U. D., late member of the German Reichstag, on "Erinnerungen au Deutschlands grosse Zeit, 1870-1," illustrated; March 28, George von Skal, on "Bildung und Intelligenz."

The next series will be under the auspices of the Department of Romance Languages and Literatures, on Thursdays, at 5:30 o'clock, in Room 305 Schermerhorn Hall. The subjects and dates for this series are:

Feb. 14, Prof. Adolphe Cohn, on "La Reforme de l'Orthographie Française"; Feb. 21, L. A. Loiseaux, on "L'Age d'Or de la Littérature Espagnole"; Feb. 28, Prof. Adolphe Cohn, on "Un Héros de la Science, Louis Pasteur."

Arrangements have been made for a course to be given at the Metropolitan Museum of Art under the auspices of the University by Louis Dyer of Oxford, England. The course will consist of five lectures, on Saturday mornings at 11 o'clock. The subjects are: Feb. 2, "Introductory Lecture"; Feb. 9, "The Cretan Alphabet"; Feb. 16, "Dr. Schliemann's Excavations (in Troy, Mycenae, and Tiryus)"; Feb. 23, "Old Knossos and the Labyrinth of Minos"; and March 2, "Mycenaeans in Egypt."

Dr. Gary N. Calkins, assisted by William E. Kellicot, will deliver a course of seven lectures on "The Protozoa" in Room 305, Schermerhorn Hall. The first will be given Feb. 15 at 5:30 o'clock.

BOARD OF EDUCATION LECTURES.

MONDAY, JAN. 21, AT 8 P. M.—Public School No. 3, corner Grove and Hudson Streets, "The Wheel," Dr. John Coleman Adams; Public School No. 10, corner One Hundred and Seventeenth Street and St. Nicholas Avenue, "The Kingdom of Jerusalem," Prof. Dana C. Munro, illustrated by stereopticon views; Public School No. 14, 225 East Twenty-seventh Street, "Life in Belgium," Charles Brand, illustrated by stereopticon views; Public School No. 46, corner of One Hundred and Fifty-sixth Street and St. Nicholas Avenue, "An Empire Under the Seas," (The Dutch.) Prof. W. C. Webster; Public School No. 51, 523 West Forty-fourth Street, "Hamlet," Prof. H. B. Sprague, illustrated by selections; Public School No. 88, corner of Ninety-sixth Street and Lexington Avenue, "Henry Wadsworth Longfellow," Prof. Louis Bovier, Jr.; Columbus Hall, Sixtieth Street, between Ninth and Tenth Avenues, "The Meaning of Egyptian Art," Prof. William O. Ward, illustrated by stereopticon views; Educational Alliance, corner of East Broadway and Jefferson Street, "Colonial Life Among the Puritans," Louis H. Cornish, illustrated by stereopticon views.

TUESDAY, JAN. 22, AT 8 P. M.—Public School No. 30, 224 East Eighty-eighth Street, "Shakespeare's 'Julius Caesar,'" Richard A. Purdy, illustrated by selections; Public School No. 71, Third Avenue, between One Hundred and Sixty-ninth and One Hundred and Seventieth Streets, "Oliver Goldsmith," Thomas Gaffney Taaffe, illustrated by selections; American Museum of Natural History, Seventy-seventh Street and Eighth Avenue, "Across the Grand Canyon to Point Sublime," G. Wharton James, illustrated by stereopticon views; Institute Hall, 218 East One Hundred and Sixth Street, "Nathan Hale," Miss Dotha Stone Pinner; St. Peter's Hall, Twentieth Street, between Eighth and Ninth Avenues, "Mendelssohn Classical Tradition—Romantic Spirit," T. W. Surette, illustrated by musical selections and stereopticon views.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 23, AT 8 P. M.—Great hall of Cooper Institute, Eighth Street and Fourth Avenue, "Siegfried," T. W. Surette, illustrated by musical selections; Young Men's Christian Association Hall, 5 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, "China and the Chinese," O. M. Walker, illustrated by stereopticon views; Young Men's Institute, 222 Bowery, "Our Atmospheric Envelope," J. Newton Gray, illustrated by experiments; Young Men's Christian Association Hall, 52 East Twenty-third Street, "Revelations of the Spectroscope," Prof. Robert W. Prentiss, illustrated by stereopticon views; Baron de Hirsch Trade School, 222 East Sixty-fourth Street, "Alternating Currents of Electricity," W. W. Ker, illustrated by experiments and stereopticon views; Neighborhood House, corner of Cannon and Rivington Streets, "The Violin and Its Great Masters," Edwin Cahn, illustrated by stereopticon views and musical selections.

To Aid St. Vincent's Hospital.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of St. Vincent's Hospital have completed all arrangements for their reception to be held at the Waldorf-Astoria on Wednesday evening, Jan. 23. Supper will be served in the large dining room of the Astoria at 12:30. A large number of tickets have been sold, and among the boxholders are Mrs. De Lancey Kane, Miss Iselin, Mrs. M. B. Brown, Mrs. C. J. MacGuire, Miss Coleman, Mrs. Charles Phelps, Mrs. J. B. Bissell, Mrs. R. Roosevelt, Mrs. J. B. Manning, Mrs. J. J. O'Donohue, Mrs. M. L. Doyle, Mrs. J. E. McDonald, Mrs. Thomas White, Mrs. J. J. Harrington, Mrs. Daniel O'Day, Mrs. F. Neilson, Mrs. A. L. Ashman, Mrs. Joseph O'Brien, Mrs. J. J. Gibbons, Mrs. Richard Buckley, Mrs. J. Phalan, Mrs. J. Henshawe, Mrs. J. K. Ryan.

Dr. Lorimer Will Speak at Colgate.

HAMILTON, N. Y., Jan. 19.—The Rev. Dr George C. Lorimer of Boston has just accepted an invitation from Colgate University to deliver the annual oration before the Faculty and students of the university on Patrons' Day, April 19.

CITY IN A SNOW SQUALL

Noontide Brightness Transformed Into the Sombreness of Night.

Fierce Gale Sweeps a Huge Black Cloud Over the Scene and Gives Pedestrians a Lively Time.

What is called by the Weather Bureau a "snow squall" struck the city at 11:15 o'clock yesterday morning. It came as suddenly as a Summer thunder storm and went away in as great hurry as an April shower, its entire duration being fourteen minutes. While it lasted the wind blew at a velocity of fifty miles an hour, nor did the gale cease when the snow had stopped falling, for all through the afternoon pedestrians had a hard time keeping on their feet on the wind-swept streets. The roomy overcoats of the men and the women's flowing skirts acted like sails and caused their wearers to fairly fly along the sidewalks.

"Not exactly the same thing as a thunder shower," was the explanation of the weather prophet down at the bureau, "but somewhat the same in its physiological phenomena."

From the upper floors of a downtown skyscraper the squall looked as though one of last March's blustering breezes and one of last July's spectacular lightning shows had joined forces to interfere with the normal course of midwinter weather.

From 11 o'clock until a quarter after, there was a slight haze of clouds that floated slowly over the city and seemed to prophesy the premature coming of Spring. Through them the sun shone brightly. Folks looked at the light film of snow that the night had left on the pavements and rejoiced that the bad weather had gone, at least for the present. The whole world seemed to smile, and the sun, growing brighter and brighter as the smoky clouds grew thinner, threw its dancing beams along the crests of the tall buildings, glittered in reflection on the panes of myriads of windows, flooded the broad streets and sent straggling rays through the narrow ones, covered with a thousand gorgeous tints the ice-crusted boughs of the park trees, and cast over the waters of the harbor and rivers a sheen of golden light that made them one vast expanse of brilliancy.

Suddenly darkness burst over the scene. From the northwest a huge black cloud, coming so fast that no one could tell whence it sprang, raced across the North River from New Jersey, chasing away before it the vapory cumuli that had been covering the sun like a transparent veil of gauze. Within less than a minute the darkness was so impenetrable that the City Hall tower was hardly discernible from the top of a building in Park Row not a hundred yards away, and it was impossible even to see the outlines of Broadway from the same viewpoint.

With the black cloud came a snow shower that whitened the streets almost before anybody had realized that the storm had come. Down it fell in fierce gusts, whirling around the corners, driven by the force of the wind into every quarter, bringing the color to every face. The wind fairly howled. It came from everywhere, so far as one could tell, for as often as you turned a corner to get out of its way it seemed to change its course and take the direction necessary to drive the stinging snowflakes straight in your face.

This lasted for fourteen minutes. After that there was no more snow. The wind, however, continued unabated, varying in its violence every now and then, but never subsiding altogether. The sun appeared again and the filmy clouds, or others like them, came back. But the gale was so fierce for the rest of the day that it was only in half sheltered angles or behind protecting glass windows that the solar heat was comforting.

According to the weather experts, the squall was caused by a sudden variation of the wind, which, after blowing from a southwesterly quarter all the early morning, changed its course to the west, then to the northwest. When it reached the latter point of the compass there happened to come into its path the aforementioned black cloud, laden with snow and waiting for something to come along and lift it over to the city. What its fate was after passing here is not yet recorded. The prophets said that it was gone "for good," but that the wind would continue until to-day, being supplanted, in turn, by the coldest days of the Winter. The drop of the temperature during the squall was 9 degrees, from 26 to 17. At midnight THE NEW YORK TIMES thermometer registered 9 degrees and that of the Weather Bureau 4 degrees.

VICTIMS OF THE COLD SPELL.

Man Found Unconscious on Police Station Steps—Others Apply for Help.

Capt. Moynihan of the West Twentieth Street Station was leaving the station house after 11 o'clock last night, when he stumbled across an unconscious man on the steps, who had fallen there from exhaustion from want and exposure. The Captain and the doorkeeper carried the man inside and the officer sent a policeman out for some food. When the man was revived he described himself as John Kelly, fifty-five years old, homeless. He was accommodated with a plank in a cell as a bed for the night.

Seven other men applied for aid, or were brought into the station house during the night. A few were found in doorways, and the policemen took them in as vagrants in preference to letting them freeze. All had planks for beds given them, and they will be arraigned this morning in Jefferson Market Court as vagrants.

Edward Minsterman, thirty-nine years old, a piano tuner living at One Hundred and Fifty-third Street and Mott Avenue, was found lying on the sidewalk at One Hundred and Fifty-first Street and Mott Avenue last night by Mounted Policeman Thompson of the Morrisania Station. Dr. Mulholland of Fordham Hospital examined the man and said he was suffering from alcoholism and frozen feet and hands. Minsterman was taken to the hospital, where early this morning it was said that it might be necessary to amputate his feet and hands.

THE HORSE AS A NAVIGATOR.

Wreck of a Truck in the Storm as Seen by the Ship News Reporter.

The high wind sweeping along One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street yesterday afternoon came in contact with a truck attached to a blind horse, which was standing beside the curb, and started the vehicle to moving. The truck gently prodded the faithful animal, and the latter got under way and hauled out into the street. After going some distance, gathering headway steadily, the horse attempted to warp into another berth alongside the pavement, but the wind was too strong, and the best he could do was to put over to starboard again and go full speed astern. But everything was "set and drawing" on the truck, and, despite every effort of the conscientious animal to heave to, he gathered headway every moment, and stretched away down One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, running before the wind and using every precaution to keep from being run down by the now unmanageable truck.

Several times the now thoroughly alarmed horse, barely able to keep on his course in the howling gale, narrowly escaped running into hydrants, lampposts, and tied-up vehicles, and, as the weather showed no signs of softening, he decided upon the desperate expedient of running his craft up on the sidewalk and beaching her, so to speak.

The storm-ridden runaway was then keeping a course down the middle of One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street. When directly abreast of the Onawa Hotel, near Park Avenue, the horse suddenly put hard over to port and steered directly for the sidewalk, backing hard at the same time. The vehicle ran up on the sidewalk, and did not settle until the horse's head and the shafts had crashed through the 8 by 10 plate-glass window of the Onawa Hotel.

In the dining room of the hotel at the time were two waiters and three men who were having luncheon. The diners happened to be discussing the MacDonnell-Price shooting, which occurred in the hotel recently, when the apparition appeared at the window and the flying glass was showered over them. They waited to see no more, but rushing into the barroom, shouted frantically, "The house is blown in! Fire! Murder! Police," while those in the barroom began to dodge behind chairs and tables and the barkeepers crawled under the bar. One of the diners was so badly frightened that he sped from the hotel, leaving an unpaid bill behind.

The police investigated the wreck of the truck, and, deciding that it was the result of accident, did not arrest the horse.

DRIVER NEARLY FROZEN TO DEATH

Found in a Stupor on the Seat of His Wagon—His Condition Critical.

Policeman Siebold, of the East Eighty-eighth Street Station, saw a horse and wagon of the Henderson Towel Company standing at Eighty-third Street and East End Avenue about 9 o'clock last night with a man on the seat whom Siebold found to be in a stupor. He appeared to be half frozen, and Siebold summoned an ambulance from the Presbyterian Hospital, in which the man was taken away.

He proved to be William McDonald, forty-four years old, of 39 King Street. He had not sufficiently recovered last night to be able to tell what had happened, but it was believed he had driven on till overcome by the intense cold on the East River front. His condition is serious, the hospital physicians said.

The horse was not hurt by the cold, and he was stabled near where he was found.

NEARLY BLOWN OFF THE BRIDGE.

Riveters on the New East River Structure Had a Thrilling Time.

The riveters at work on the tower of the new East River bridge on the Brooklyn side had a thrilling experience shortly before noon yesterday during the brief blizzard. The tower is 370 feet in height, and when the squall came it nearly took the men off their feet, tore up some of the floor timbers and blew them into the river. The men were obliged to lie down flat and hold on to anything within reach. The entire structure was enveloped in a dense cloud for some minutes, and the men were unable to see one another.

Some of the men had the fingers of both hands frost-bitten. When the wind had died out the men hurried to the ground, sliding down the rope ladder. Work was suspended for the rest of the day.

CAMPANIA COATED WITH ICE.

Worst Weather of Her Trip Encountered Near This Port.

The first ice-coated transatlantic liner to arrive this year is the Cunarder Campania. Most of the frozen brine incrusting her rails, bulwarks, stanchions, forward and other deck fixtures and fittings was from the seas that swept over decks outside the Hook yesterday, while making the harbor. While the weather all the way across was of a kind that cannot be termed mild, yet, according to the passengers, it was as a general rule mild when compared with the icy fierceness of the gale into which the great liner ran yesterday morning. Several times from port to port the Campania had a slow down owing to the weather conditions, the last time being yesterday off Fire Island.

Although sighted by the observer at that station a few minutes before 10 o'clock, it was late in the afternoon when she finally docked at the Cunard piers, at the foot of Gansevoort Street. When her passengers came down the gangplank and were stopped by the Customs Inspectors in order that their baggage might be examined, few things of a complimentary nature were said by any of them concerning those officials, so frigid was the atmosphere pervading the pier. But apparently the weather was also too cold for those usually exact and careful personages, for it seemed that they worked with more speed than is customarily displayed.

Among those who arrived on the Campania were Vicomte and Vicomtesse de Cholet, Prince and Princess Albert Radziwill of Austria, Miss Florence Stow, a niece of E. S. Willard, the actor; Sir William and Lady William B. Forwood, Mrs. Walter Scott Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil H. Dean, W. H. Griffiths, Capt. J. L. Hacket, Clarence M. Hyde, W. S. North, M. de Sedano, C. A. Spreckels, J. J. Thompson, and Capt. George Davey.

Schooner John Russell Ashore.

CAPE MAY, N. J., Jan. 19.—The three masted schooner John Russell of Bridgeton, N. J., went ashore last night on Cold Spring Bar, during a severe northwest gale. The vessel is not leaking, and it is expected that she will be floated without difficulty. She carries a cargo of lumber, and was bound from Bogue Inlet for New York.

The John Russell was built at Leesburg, N. J., in 1898, and has a registry of 146 tons. Her owner is Benjamin Russell of Leesburg.

Coldest Day at Oswego.

OSWEGO, N. Y., Jan. 19.—To-day was the coldest day of the season in Oswego County. The temperature ranged from zero to 10 degrees below. Charles Higley of Oswego Falls, this county, was found dead in the snow near his home last night. Heart disease and exposure are believed to have caused his death. He had a local reputation as a magnetic healer.

Genuine Carnival Weather.

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y., Jan. 19.—Genuine carnival weather prevails here now. The thermometer registered 35 degrees below zero this morning, and stood at 10 below at noon. The ice palace of the Pontiac Club carnival was completed to-day. The rink is in excellent condition, and sleighing is splendid. An ice tower is being built at Riverside Inn Square and at each principal street corner.

Went After Whisky, Froze to Death.

BATH, N. Y., Jan. 19.—Thomas Finn, fifty years old, of Avoca, drove his horse on Wednesday night to get a jug of whisky for sick members of his family. The horse went home alone the same night. At noon to-day Finn's body was found in the creek between Avoca and Kanona frozen stiff. Coroner Hasson is investigating the man's death.

Below Zero in the Adirondacks.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Jan. 19.—Last night was close to the record for cold weather throughout the Adirondack region. At Malone it was 12 degrees below zero, at Radford 19 below, at Lake Titus 20 below, at Dannemora 22 below, at Saranac Lake 30 below, and at Lake Placid 32 below.

Died from Exposure.

BATAVIA, N. Y., Jan. 19.—Henry McKissick, a farmhand, aged about sixty-five, was found frozen to death in the park at the State School for the Blind this morning. Beside him was a bottle partly filled with whisky. The man evidently became stupefied and fell by the wayside.

Grounded in Swash Channel.

The Norwegian fruit steamer Krin grounded in Swash Channel yesterday afternoon while bound out for Philadelphia and Vera Cruz. An hour later she worked herself afloat and anchored off Sandy Hook.

An Old Man Frozen to Death.

HUDSON, N. Y., Jan. 19.—Dennis Kelly, aged seventy years, a resident of Valatie, was found frozen to death last night. He had wandered from home while in ill-health, and only partly clad.

Below Zero at Geneva.

GENEVA, N. Y., Jan. 19.—The severest weather of the year prevails here. Surrounding towns report intense cold. The mercury stands 5 degrees below zero this evening in the city.

COLD IN NEW ENGLAND.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Jan. 19.—The thermometer ranged from 10 to 13 degrees below zero here to-day. To-night it is 10 below.

NORTHFIELD, Vt., Jan. 19.—The thermometer registered 28 degrees below zero here to-day and 35 below in Plainfield this morning.

ANDOVER, N. H., Jan. 19.—The thermometer registered 18 degrees below zero to-day.

Cruiser's Crew Down with Grip.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 19.—Grip is prevalent on the Russian cruiser Variag, which is lying at Cramps' shipyards. Six officers and seventy seamen are confined to their beds, and many others are ill, but able to be about. The work of caring for the sick men has been too much for the cruiser's surgeons, and most of the patients have been removed to various hospitals for treatment.

The President Steadily Improves.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The President is reported to be steadily regaining the ground lost during his recent illness, and is slowly assuming the full measure of his official functions. Secretary Root is stated to be improving, as is also Admiral Dewey.

COMMITTEE OF FIVE HOPEFUL.

"We Are Aiming High and Count on Results," Says Mr. Platzek.

M. Warley Platzek of the Tammany Hall investigating committee declared last night that the committee had not ceased preparing evidence for the District Attorney or in sending him information.

"We are," he continued, "aiming high, and count on results. But we are not betraying our scheme to the public. I have not lost faith in our work."

Lewis Nixon said it seemed to him prudent to say nothing as to the committee's operations or plans.

"I will not entertain," he added, "any question that hints that we have abandoned or are about to abandon our work. Such a question would be absurd. As to my views on the progress made, I have already expressed myself on the subject. We are not deterred, nor are we idling. On the contrary, we are going ahead on well-defined lines. Of this work I will say nothing at present, and may have nothing to say after our meeting on Monday. I want to be courteous, but I do not care to be interrogated about it."

Bishop Potter said that he had nothing to give or add in the way of information or suggestion to what he has recently said in regard to improving vicious conditions in the city or in defense of the proposed vigilance committee.

Fifteen's Counsel Hard at Work.

Col. Robert Grier Monroe, counsel for the Committee of Fifteen, said yesterday that he would probably begin next week to pass much of his time at the Park Row headquarters of the committee. "I am," he went on, "not a member of the committee, but as a lawyer employed by it to do certain work. This I have started in to do. At present I am trying to analyze and arrange the material already in hand. The process will result in rejection of some of it. The rest will be arranged with a view to make the efforts of the committee telling. For these reasons I prefer to leave what may be said of the operations of the committee to those authorized to speak for it."

MR. ABELL'S POLICE PARTY.

Is a Social Gathering and Not a Clique Meeting, He Explains.

Police Commissioner Abell was partly amused, partly nettled, yesterday, over constructions placed on the following invitation sent by him to the Captains and superior officers of the department:

Dear Sir: If your official duties do not interfere, I shall be pleased with your company at my residence, No. 424 Fourth Street, Brooklyn, on the evening of Wednesday, Jan. 23 instant, for social intercourse. I am reminded of a like pleasurable occasion one year ago, and it is my wish to set apart the evening designated to manifest cordial personal relations. Come any hour convenient.

HENRY E. ABELL.

"I sent a like invitation out last year," he said, "and it was all right. Why should it create comment now? It is a social, unofficial gathering, and not a clique meeting. As the invitation reads all are invited whether they are classed as 'Abell' men or not. I like to see these officers get together socially. There will be chat, a smoke, and a lunch, and I'll do my best to make things pleasant. Anyway, the reception and entertainment will take place despite criticism."

A story was circulated yesterday that Inspector Thomas L. Druhan resigned from the "Captains' Association," as the New York City Police Endowment Association is mistermed, at its annual meeting in Chief Devery's office last Monday. Inspector Adam A. Cross, Secretary of the association, established by Inspector Druhan's communication to him that he resigned Dec. 19, twenty-six days before the meeting, without giving a reason for his act. He has not since explained it.

No Amendment to the Police Bill.

Senator Thomas C. Platt, when asked last evening if the Police bill would be amended so as to provide for a bi-partisan commission, said:

"Such statements are absurd and too silly to notice. The Police bill will be passed without any important amendment."

MRS. FOWLER NOT ABDUCTED.

Unstrung Nerves, Following an Operation and an Affliction, Explain Her Hallucination.

A remarkable tale of adventure, involving "knock-out" drops and an abduction in a cab in Manhattan, which was told to the Brooklyn police on Friday night by Mrs. Nellie Fowler, wife of Dr. Russell S. Fowler of 388 Lafayette Avenue, Brooklyn, and daughter-in-law of Dr. George R. Fowler of that borough, was yesterday found to be apparently merely a halucination on the part of Mrs. Fowler.

On Friday Mrs. Fowler visited her mother, who lives at 120 East Forty-sixth Street, Manhattan, leaving there at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. With her sister she walked up to the elevated railroad station at Third Avenue and Fifty-third Street. Mrs. Fowler said good-bye to her sister at the foot of the stairway and ascended to the platform to board a train for Brooklyn.

At dusk that evening Mrs. Fowler, greatly excited, entered the Classon Avenue Police Station, Brooklyn, not far from her home, and told the Sergeant that when she boarded the train in Manhattan she sat down opposite to a young man who stared at her so hard she was disturbed and left the train at the Forty-seventh Street Station and descended to the street. The young man followed her and thrust her into a cab waiting at the foot of the stairway. There was a young woman in the cab, which drove off rapidly. Mrs. Fowler said that she was so amazed she could make no outcry. The man and the woman forced her to swallow something from a bottle and she became unconscious.

Mrs. Fowler said that she had a revolver in her muff, and the couple took the weapon away from her. She remembered nothing after drinking the liquid until she was getting off an elevated railroad train at the station at De Kalb and Grand Avenues, Brooklyn, whence she went direct to the police station and related her strange experience.

Mrs. Fowler said that she had not been robbed, as she still had her purse and jewelry. After she had been escorted to her home Capt. John Eason investigated her story. Statements made by members of the family indicate that Mrs. Fowler's adventure had taken place apparently only in her imagination. Mrs. Fowler has not fully recovered from an operation for appendicitis, it is said, and the death of her father about a month ago so affected her that her nerves have since been unstrung. This condition of her nervous system, the family believe, occasioned the hallucination. Mrs. Fowler, her relatives say, never carried a revolver.

Denies Baltimore Railroad Deal.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 18.—President W. R. Woodford of the Cleveland, Lorain and Wheeling Railroad denied to-night that his road had been or would be sold to the Baltimore and Ohio. He said that a party of Baltimore and Ohio officials recently took a tour of inspection over the Cleveland, Lorain and Wheeling with a view to making a closer traffic arrangement under which that road will get more of the Baltimore and Ohio coal than formerly. That was what gave rise to the rumors of a contemplated transfer in the property.

Michigan Bank Looted.

NEW BALTIMORE, Mich., Jan. 19.—William F. Sandell & Co.'s bank here was broken into last night. The robber secured about $3,500. The sledgehammers, picks, and other tools which were used in forcing the safe were left on the floor. The thieves escaped on a car which they stole from the Rapid Railway tool house. It was found to-day at Orr's Junction, five miles south of here.

The Brig John Roberts Wrecked.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The British brig John Roberts, Capt. Davies, from Gaspe, Dec. 3, for Rio Janeiro, has been wrecked. Two of the crew were saved, and have been landed at Liverpool.

The John Roberts was built in 1875, registered 197 tons net, and hailed from Carnarvon, Wales.

Tugs Fail to Reach the Vigilancia.

HAVANA, Jan. 19.—Tugs and lighters have been unable to get alongside the Ward Line steamer Vigilancia, which has been aground off Los Colorados, about eighty miles west of Havana, for the last two days. The crew of the steamer have not been taken off, and many cattle and much freight are still on board.

This is the only high grade tailoring stock marked at reduced prices.

For eighteen consecutive seasons we have closed out the season's entire stock at cost.

To-morrow, Monday, January 21st,

we shall mark our fabrics for the 19th Season's Reduction Sale.

This includes every conceivable fabric known to the exclusive tailoring trade and presents an opportunity to all to purchase the choicest loom products at ready-to-wear prices. The workmanship and trimmings are the finest and the prices 25% to 33⅓% lower than regular mark.

This stock includes fabrics for every style of ultra-fashionable attire, also for Hunting, Sporting, Livery and house servants' garments, Waistcoats, Riding Breeches, Golfing, Wheeling and Driving suitings. No reservation of patterns or qualities.

The only stock that stands pre-eminently alone, as a high grade range, that can be purchased at present new prices.

Burnham & Phillips

Custom Tailoring Only. Temple Court Annex, 119 Nassau St.

BEST & CO

LILLIPUTIAN BAZAAR

Special Sale

Infants' Dresses.

New goods, daintily designed, neatly made—attractive both on account of their appearance, and the very low prices at which they are offered—less than the material can be bought for, and made up at home. An opportunity no mother with young children can afford to miss.

Infants' Short Dresses of Nainsook,
59c., 69c., 79c., 95c., $1.10 and $1.85.

Infants' Long Dresses of Nainsook,
59c., 69c., $1.00, $1.10 and $1.35.

Also a line of Children's Long and Short Dresses of finer quality—at correspondingly low prices.

60-62 West 23d Street.

SING SING PRISON UNSANITARY.

Some Think It Should Be Removed—Thirty Cases of Typhoid Fever.

SING SING, N. Y., Jan. 19.—Five members of the State Prison Association called on Warden Johnson to-day and made a close examination of the prison. They were accompanied by Charles F. Wingate, a sanitary engineer employed by the State Board of Health. Every building was examined. The visitors found the place in a bad sanitary condition, and said the prison ought to be removed.

Engineer Wingate found that the prison buildings are only four feet above tide water, and that at high tide there is no outlet for the sewers. All the refuse is thrown back into place, forcing gases into the prison. He condemned all the plumbing. It is believed that the thirty-odd cases of typhoid fever now in the hospital are due to the poor sanitary work.

Paper Companies Not to Consolidate.

Special to The New York Times.

BANGOR, Jan. 19.—The resignation of William B. Dillon from the Vice

LETTERS CLOG A TUBE

Mail for Branch Stations Delayed by the Accident.

Loud Report in the Post Office Caused by Efforts to Clear the Obstruction.

A loud report echoing through the Post Office about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon startled the employes in the various departments and persons who happened to be in the Post Office Building at the time. The noise was also heard on the street, and there was much speculation as to its cause. A reporter who was in the building learned upon inquiry that there had not been an explosion, as many supposed, but that the noise was due to efforts that were being made to dislodge an obstruction in the tube which connects the General Post Office with Station H, at Lexington Avenue and Forty-fourth Street.

What had caused the stoppage in the tube no one in the Post Office was able to say. There was similar ignorance on the part of the authorities in the office as to the amount of mail that was in the tube at the time that it became obstructed.

"We do not keep any record of the number of letters or the number of carriers that we send through," said Mr. Tiedman, the General Superintendent of Mails, "it would take an extra force of clerks for that. There's an obstruction of some kind, somewhere. That's all I know about it. I've made my report to Mr. Post. See him."

When Mr. Post, the Second Assistant Postmaster, was asked about the obstruction, he said that he knew nothing about it. "Oh, yes," he added, when questioned further, "Mr. Tiedman said there was an obstruction. You'll have to see the Tubular Dispatch people, however, for any information."

It was learned that Mr. Greiz, the General Manager of the Tubular Dispatch Company, was in on an investigating tour, with the purpose of locating the obstruction if possible. At the office of the company there was no one who could give any information.

In the meantime wagons were being pressed into service at the Post Office to carry the mails to the stations ordinarily fed by the tube. The obstructed tube not only feeds the Lexington Avenue branch, but has connection with Station F, at Twenty-eighth Street and Third Avenue; Station L, at Third Avenue and Ninth Street, and the Madison Square Branch Post Office, at Twenty-third Street. The tube, after leaving the General Post Office, passes underground up Centre Street to Broome, thence to Forty-second Street by Third Avenue. At Forty-second Street it passes over to Lexington Avenue.

The traffic in the tube is particularly heavy on Saturday, and, as a result of the stoppage, it was necessary to make extra exertions to transfer the mails by wagons. At a late hour the tube was still obstructed, and thousands of letters were, presumably, lying under ground.

Several methods are used in case of such accidents for locating the point of the obstruction. An obstruction record apparatus, which is sometimes used, consists of a pistol, to which is attached a delicate register. The pistol is fired into the tube, and the time for the ball to reach the obstruction is registered. A calculation is then made, and the distance at which the obstruction exists is computed.

In attempting to locate the obstruction yesterday unusual air pressure was brought to bear in the tube and the violent report resulted.

The tubes are made of iron, and are about eight inches in diameter. The carriers are of galvanized iron, with an air-tight cover of rubber and leather. On the front of each of these carriers there is a small tin plate. The plates differ in shape, and by means of a little projection each carrier as it reaches the branch tube for which it is intended is thrown into place and goes to its proper destination.

BOLD BURGLARY IN THE BRONX.

After Robbing Her House, Intruder Beats Mrs. Gross with the Butt of a Revolver.

Bronx residents in the neighborhood of Bathgate Avenue are highly incensed over the burglary of the premises of George W. Gross of 1,666 Bathgate Avenue and the assault on his wife by the thief when discovered. Several houses in this neighborhood have been broken into recently, and the thief, if caught by any of the residents of that vicinity, will be dealt with summarily, they say.

Details of the affair were not made known until yesterday. It appears that Mrs. Gross left her residence Tuesday afternoon, locking the doors as she went away. Returning a short while later, she saw a well-dressed young man coming out of her doorway and heaving the door open behind him. She demanded his business, and was engaged in argument by the stranger, when suddenly he pushed her inside the door, entered after her, shut the door, and leveled a revolver at her head. He then told her if she made an outcry as he made his escape he would shoot her. She grappled with him and received several severe blows about the head with the butt of the pistol.

The burglar broke away and escaped over the back fence. Mrs. Gross staggered to the street. Drs. Joyce and Ambrose were summoned and found that she had been badly bruised. The house had been rifled of all the movable silverware and all of the jewelry to be found in the rooms. Several hundred dollars' worth were taken.

The police were notified, and two Central Office detectives assigned to the case. Mrs. Gross furnished a good description of her assailant, and the arrest of the thief within a short time is expected.

CONFESSION OF BURGLARY.

Police Believe They Are on the Track of Bold Brooklyn Robbers.

Philip Molter of 72 Johnson Avenue, Brooklyn, arrested on Friday in connection with the burglary in the clothing store of Samuel Ferrares, at 681 Grand Street, when one of the burglars held Mrs. Mary Cornell, who lives over the store, at bay with a revolver, has confessed. Mrs. Cornell also identified Molter as the man who pointed the revolver at her, and Charles Jennings, a milkman, recognized the youth, having seen him and another man carrying a large bundle along Johnson Avenue early on Friday morning.

Molter, in his confession, implicates his brother Jack, and he told the police that if they found him all the plunder, seventeen suits of clothes, would be found. Molter said his brother lived in Manhattan, and the police set out at once to try and find him, but had not been successful up to a late hour last night. When the prisoner was arraigned in the Bwen Street Police Court he was held in default of $1,000 bail.

The police believe that the prisoner and his brother are members of a gang which has been successfully committing many burglaries in Brooklyn during the past six weeks.

PRISONER HAD CHLORAL.

Is Accused by a Doctor of Drugging and Robbing Him.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 19.—Dr. J. B. Elster to-day identified at Police Headquarters John H. Meklin as a man who gave him "knock-out" drops in a Market Street cafe on the night of Jan. 3 and then robbed him of $20 and a stud worth $175.

Elster says he was inveigled into the saloon under the pretense that Meklin wanted to talk about a sick friend. Meklin invited him to drink, and, unnoticed, he alleges, poured "knock-out" drops into the glass of beer. The doctor fell asleep, and when he came to, some time after his money and stud, as well as Meklin, had disappeared.

Meklin was arrested by the description given by the doctor. While he was being taken to Police Headquarters he threw away a package containing a bottle of whitish liquid. The contents of the bottle proved to be chloral hydrate.

$50,000 Fire in Elizabeth.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Jan. 19.—Fire was discovered to-night in the engine room of the Waclark Wire Works, on South Front Street. An alarm was quickly turned in, but when the firemen arrived they were handicapped by the extremely cold weather. The flames spread to the boiler room, the rodmill, and several small buildings. The structures were all iron framed, covered with wood. The fire consumed everything perishable about the plant before it was controlled. The loss is placed at $50,000, partly covered by insurance.

NEWS OF THE RAILROADS.

Employes Fear Many Offices Will Be Abandoned as a Result of Consolidation.

Freight and passenger officials of certain Eastern lines in positions of varying importance are feeling some uneasiness regarding the security of their positions, and are indulging in speculation as to what effect the growing tendency of railroad consolidation will have on their utility as railroad officials. It is generally believed that the controlling interests which have brought various lines under one ownership will make large savings in expenses by cutting off the fancy salaries now being paid to many traffic men whose business it is to get business for the railroad.

The recent announcement that the position of Traffic Manager of the West Shore Railroad, vacated by the election of Mr. Todd as Vice President of the New Haven Road, would not be filled, but that its duties would be assumed by Nathan Guilford, Traffic Manager of the New York Central, is taken by those interested to mean that it will be only a matter of a short time when the traffic department of the West Shore will be practically merged into that of the New York Central. This will mean that the present highest traffic officials of that line will become assistants to the corresponding officers of the New York Central, and that the separate freight and ticket offices of the West Shore, which are now being maintained with an expensive staff of agents in all the large cities, will be closed up, there being no longer any real need for them.

Similar changes, it is feared by many of the employes, will be made in the traffic and operating departments of the Lehigh Valley and the Jersey Central when these roads shall have passed into the control of the Erie and the Reading Railroads, respectively.

TO BUY YORK SOUTHERN RAILROAD.

The Baltimore and Lehigh to Have Line to Anthracite Coal Fields.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 19.—Charles H. Jones, President of the York Southern Railroad Company, has issued a call for the stockholders of that company at York on Feb. 2 for the purpose of considering an agreement of consolidation with the Baltimore and Lehigh Railroad. The question will be decided by a vote of the stockholders.

A short time ago the stockholders of the Baltimore and Lehigh gave an option to Alexander Brown & Sons to buy their stock for $70 a share, the right of purchase to be exercised at any time up to March 1 of this year. Sperry, Jones & Co. of this city, of which firm the President of the York Southern is a member, it is understood, control that road, and as Alexander Brown & Sons by accepting the option of the Baltimore and Lehigh will have absolute control of that company, the two properties will certainly be consolidated.

While both roads reach Delta, they are not connected, but it will require only a few yards of track to unite them. Consolidation of the two properties will make a direct line from Baltimore to the anthracite coal fields. Surveys which have been in progress around this city and Canton, the eastern suburbs, and the water front are part of the scheme of the consolidation, whereby the new line will have tidewater terminals.

The Philadelphia and Reading is also believed to be an important factor in the scheme for the consolidated lines and a direct line from Baltimore to the coal fields.

The Baltimore and Lehigh extends from Baltimore to Delta or Cardiff, a distance of about forty-three miles, and the York Southern runs from York to Delta, thirty-seven miles, with a branch from Delta to Peach Bottom, four miles. The Baltimore and Lehigh was a reorganization in July, 1884, of the Maryland Division of the Baltimore and Lehigh, which was sold under foreclosure in June, 1894, and purchased for $88,253.25 on behalf of the first mortgage bondholders.

The Pennsylvania Division of the Baltimore and Lehigh was subsequently organized as the York Southern, and has been operated since Feb. 1, 1896, under close traffic arrangements with the Pennsylvania Railroad. The capital stock of the Baltimore and Lehigh is $843,500, and of the York Southern $600,000, with a funded debt of over $400,000.

Panama Company Charters Steamer.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 19.—The Panama Railroad Company has chartered the steamer Argyll. The ship is under charter to the Federal Government at present, but will be released Jan. 22. She is of 4,000 tons capacity. The company proposes to maintain a fortnightly service between this city and Panama. The Panama Company has announced a cut in passenger rates between San Francisco and New York.

Big Mortgages Filed in Michigan.

MARSHALL, Mich., Jan. 19.—Two large mortgages were filed here to-day by the Grand Trunk Western Railway Company. The first, which is for $15,000,000 bearing 4 per cent. interest for fifty years, runs to the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company of New York City and Daniel Wood of Indiana. It required $7,500 in revenue stamps. The second mortgage runs to the Colonial Trust Company of New York and W. G. Crabhill of Indiana. It is for $1,500,000, bearing interest at 4 per cent., for fifty years, and required $750 in revenue stamps.

Brief Railroad Items.

E. A. Williams has been appointed Superintendent of rolling stock of the Canadian Pacific Railway, in place of R. Atkinson, who has resigned.

R. P. Buchanan, Assistant General Freight Agent of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis, has accepted the position of traffic manager for the Procter & Gamble Company.

In explanation of the circular issued a few days ago by the Jersey Central Railroad regarding the offer of J. P. Morgan & Co. to buy one-half of the minority stock at 160, it was said yesterday that this offer applied only to stockholders of record on Monday, Jan. 14.

The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé has offered to buy the outstanding stock of the Pecos Valley and Northeastern Railway at $9 per share of the common stock and $15 per share of the preferred stock. The Pecos Valley line runs from Pecos to Amarillo, Texas, a distance of 320 miles. The capital stock of the company is $6,324,000, and its funded debt is $2,916,000. The main business of the road is live stock traffic.

PRINCE OF WALES'S GIFT STOLEN.

Bridle Given to "Buffalo Bill" Sold by Boys for 50 Cents.

A handsome bridle presented to Buffalo Bill (William F. Cody) by the Prince of Wales is said to be part of the booty of four boys who were arrested yesterday charged with looting the Winter quarters of the Wild West Show at Ambrose Park, Brooklyn.

The prisoners, Alfred Cocher, Francis Gallagher, Henry Mitner, and William Mingay, who all live near the park, were held in the Adams Street Police Court yesterday. The bridle presented to Mr. Cody by the Prince of Wales is said to have been disposed of by the boys for 50 cents.

CHARGED WITH COUNTERFEITING.

Two Men Are Arrested by a Detective at Binghamton.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Jan. 19.—Merchants and bank officials of this city have been wrought up for some time, owing to the large number of counterfeit ten-dollar bills in circulation here. A detective from the United States Treasury Department has been in Binghamton for nearly a week, and last night H. P. Holland and James North were arrested and charged with the crime.

The men were arrested on the evidence of a farmer living at McDonough, on whom one of the bills was passed. The authorities have not yet been able to locate the counterfeiters, but are of the opinion that the bills have been circulated from this city as a centre.

Prof. Garner Alive and Well.

WAUTAUGA, Tenn., Jan. 19.—Prof. R. L. Garner, the student of the simian language, who was recently reported lost in Africa, is alive and well, according to a telegram received to-day by his sister, Mrs. J. Welsh, from Mrs. Garner, at Boston. Prof. Garner is said to be pursuing his studies in the heart of Africa.

CHARTER REVISION WORK

Mr. Rives Talks to the Citizens of the Bronx.

Commissioner Honored by a Dinner Given by Local Board of Trade and Taxpayers' Alliance.

The Taxpayers' Alliance, the North Side Board of Trade, and citizens of the Bronx gave a dinner last night in honor of the Charter Revision Commision, in the Schnorer Clubhouse, at One Hundred and Sixty-third Street and Third Avenue. Judge Ernest Hall presided, and there were about 100 persons present.

Some of the invited guests arrived late. Among the Commissioners on hand early were George L. Rives, the Chairman; James L. Wells, the Bronx member; James McKean, Isaac Kappell, George W. Cromwell, and Alexander S. Mason. Others present were J. A. Goulden, Henry D. Purroy, Henry A. Gumbleton, Edward W. Healey, President of the Borough Louis F. Haffen, Judge John M. Tierney, Charles W. Bogart, and D. H. Morris.

Mr. Rives was called first and was the chief speaker of the evening. He began his talk by paying a tribute to the late Charles C. Beaman, who was a member of the Charter Revision Commission. He said the commission was surprised by the result of the public hearings in outlying boroughs of the city. He said that when the commission began its work taxes had been increased, boards of public officials did little or nothing for their money, and real improvement was practically at a standstill—all due to the complexity of the City Government. The remedies in a general way were urged upon the commission by the outlying boroughs.

It was urged, the speaker said, that there should be local officials to deal with local needs; that where money was to be raised by assessment for local improvements, local officials should have a right to spend it; that government should be so simplified that the people should know to whom to go for redress for grievances.

"We have held fast to those three principles," said Mr. Rives. "In the opinion of the commission the former Charter Commission went too far in its system of checks and balances of power. Seven different bodies had to act on the question of regulating the grade of the street."

The most important change in the charter, Mr. Rives said, is that giving the Mayor summary power of removal.

"Public opinion in this city, I am sure," said Mr. Rives, "abundantly sustains the views of the commission. We have seen that within the past few weeks a politicai party which for years had been wedded to the system of bipartisanship or division of responsibility in the Police Department had been finally forced to the position of a single headed and direct responsibility in one individual."

Mr. Rives referred to the criticism that the commission had not done much to enforce economy, and said:

"I do not, however, myself consider that much can be done in the way of economy by any act of the Legislature in Albany. What is wanted is economy on the part of letting the people of the city alone. No man is wise enough to be intrusted with the spending of another man's money, and the State of New York will never be honest enough to be intrusted with the expenditure of the money raised by the taxpayers of this city.

"The changes proposed are not radical or revolutionary, but the members of the commission have endeavored in a sensible and businesslike way to deal with the situation before the city. The citizens of the city should take up some definite proposal and push it, and only such definite proposal is the report of the commission, which the people should push through the Legislature."

Judge Hall introduced the speakers, paying a compliment to the commission for its work, and especially to Mr. Wells for his protection of the interests of the Bronx and outlying boroughs. Other speakers were Mr. Wells, Mr. McKean, Frank H. Goodnow, Mr. Kappell, Mr. Cromwell, Henry W. Taft, and Mr. Mason.

Judgment Under Tivoli License.

ALBANY, Jan. 19.—State Commissioner of Excise Lyman reports that Justice Lawrence has directed a verdict in his favor for $1,685.31 against Ellen Archbold and the surety on her liquor tax bond. In a statement he says: "The bond on which this judgment was recovered was filed with the application to traffic in liquors during the year 1899 at the notorious Tivoli, on West Thirty-fifth Street, New York. This is the second judgment which the Commissioner has obtained upon a liquor tax bond given for these premises. The certificate issued for the Tivoli was revoked in September, 1900, in proceedings instituted by the Commissioner because of the disorderly character of the place and for violations of the liquor tax law. Traffic in liquors has not been carried on there since that time."

State Armories Need More Money.

ALBANY, Jan. 19.—The State Armory Commission in its annual report complains that the appropriation made by the Legislature to keep the State armories in repair is insufficient. It asks that $200,781 be appropriated this year, and that special appropriations for a new armory at Syracuse and the enlargement of the armory at Troy be made.

Work Done by the Assembly.

ALBANY, Jan. 19.—A summary of work of the Assembly for the first three weeks of the session compiled to-day shows a decrease of 76 bills introduced over that of last year. Out of 276 bills introduced 7 have been passed, against 6 last year. The number of bills introduced for the first three weeks last year was 352.

AMERICAN STEEL AFFAIRS.

Officers Have No Knowledge of Reported Purchase by Federal Interests.

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—President John Lambert of the American Steel and Wire Company said to-day that he had no knowledge of the reported purchase by the Federal Steel Company interests of a controlling interest in the stock of the Steel and Wire Company. "I know nothing about the Federal Steel Company having acquired stock in our company," said President Lambert. "I hope it is so, because Morgan and his followers are good people to have as stockholders in a corporation. But so far as I know there is not a word of truth in the present rumors."

Nathaniel Thayer of Boston, one of the leading officials of the Federal Steel Company, also said that he had heard nothing concerning the proposed absorption of the American Steel and Wire Company, and could not understand how his name came to be used in connection with it.

Mark Twain at Temple Emanu-El.

Mark Twain will talk to the members of the Hebrew Technical School for Girls at the annual meeting of the school, to be held in Temple Emanu-El to-night. Mr. Clemens will "say a few things" after the transaction of the routine business, election of Trustees, and reading of the annual reports. The public is invited.

Barnard College's Junior Ball.

Arrangements for the junior ball of Barnard College have been completed, and the members of the upper classes are busy filling out dance cards. The committee which has charge of the ball is as follows: Miss Mary Hall, Miss Elizabeth Coddington, Miss Eisle Totten, Miss Annie McKenney, Miss Eleanor Pheips, and Miss Ruth Earl. Among the patronesses of the ball are Mrs. Seth Low, Mrs. George Haven Putnam, Mrs. Henry A. Earl, Mrs. Henry K. Coddington, and Mrs. M. B. Gibson.

Smallpox in the State.

ALBANY, Jan. 19.—The State Board of Health reports that there are about seventy-five cases of smallpox in this State. The most serious outbreaks at the present time are at Watertown and at Schenectady, although both are under control. One case at Southold, Suffolk County, and the presence of several at Norfolk, St. Lawrence County, and Northville, Fulton County, were reported to-day to the board. The conditions at Northville require the State board's attention, as the local board, it is reported, has not quarantined the cases.

Smallpox at Dunkirk.

DUNKIRK, N. Y., Jan. 19.—A case of smallpox developed here yesterday. Carl Kushoff, the boy who had frequented a gypsy camp, is the victim. Measures will be taken to prevent a spread of the disease.

DETAILS OF THE NAVAL BILL.

$15,700,000 for the Four New Warships Authorized—$1,009,000 for the New York Yard.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The Naval Appropriation bill was reported to the House to-day with an elaborate statement of its provisions by Chairman Foss of the Naval Committee. The bill carries $77,016,635, the largest ever reported to the House from the Committee on Naval Affairs. This is $11,865,718 above the bill of last year and $10,229,395 below the estimates submitted by the Navy Department.

Concerning new ships for the navy, the report says:

For the purpose of further increasing the naval establishment of the United States the committee recommends that the President be authorized to have built by contract two unsheathed seagoing battleships, carrying the heaviest armor and the most powerful ordnance for vessels of their class, upon a trial displacement of about 14,000 tons each, to have the highest practicable speed and greatest radius of action, and to cost, exclusive of armor and armament, not exceeding $3,850,000 each, and two unsheathed armored cruisers carrying the heaviest armor and most powerful ordnance for vessels of their class, upon a trial displacement of about 14,000 tons each, and to have the highest practicable speed and greatest radius of action, and to cost, exclusive of armor and armament, not exceeding $4,000,000 each. Maximum cost of the vessels herein authorized, exclusive of armor and armament, will be $15,700,000.

The bill provides that not more than one battleship or armored cruiser shall be built in one yard or by one party, and the usual provision is made that at least one, and not more than two, of the battleships and armored cruisers shall be built on the Pacific Coast.

Of the appropriations of the various branches of the service, the principal item is $25,400,000 for the increase of the navy. The pay of the navy is increased $2,489,000 over the appropriations for the same object last year, and is accounted for by the authority granted to the department to enlist 5,000 additional seamen and 50 warrant machinists to meet the necessity of properly manning the new ships soon to be added to the navy. To meet the emergency of the lack of officers for the new ships the bill provides that the two classes now at sea, which have completed their four years' course at the Naval Academy, shall be commissioned thereupon. This will provide for the new officers desired by the department, and in the judgment of the committee will meet all the exigencies of the present situation.

The continued necessity for an emergency fund is found to exist in the unsettled state of affairs in the Far East, and enables the department to meet contingencies which it is impossible to anticipate with sufficient accuracy to specifically estimate for.

The following places receive appropriations for naval work: Portsmouth, $378,850; Boston, $538,000; New York, $1,009,000; League Island, $695,230; Washington, $318,210; Norfolk, $504,260; Key West, $144,000; Mare Island, $331,660; Puget Sound, $273,000; San Juan, $40,000; Pensacola, $41,500; Algiers, $230,000; Dry Tortugas, $100,000; Hawaii, $107,300; Tutuila, $225,000. For the four new dry docks now building at Portsmouth, Boston, League Island, and Mare Island, $1,000,000 is provided.

The committee recommends this year an appropriation of $3,000,000 toward the rebuilding of the Naval Academy. In last year's bill, $850,000 was appropriated; prior to that time, $1,220,000, making a total appropriation of $1,570,000 prior to the present bill.

The report says, in part, as to armor:

Your committee also provides under the increase of the navy an appropriation of $4,000,000 for armor and armament for ships now under construction. It will be remembered that Congress wisely solved the perplexing question of providing armor plate for our ships last year by the enactment of a provision giving the Secretary of the Navy full power to buy armor at such price as in his judgment might seem reasonable and just, or build an armor-plate factory, toward which $4,000,000 were appropriated. It ought to be a matter of general congratulation that the armor-plate question has been settled through the skill, firmness, and excellent judgment of the Secretary of the Navy in carrying out the evident purposes of Congress.

Promotions in the Army.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The retirement of Brigadier General H. B. Freeman, Twenty-fourth Infantry, has resulted in the following promotions:

Lieut. Col. P. H. Ellis, Eighth Infantry, to be Colonel of the Twenty-fourth Infantry; Major David J. Craigie, Twenty-fifth Infantry, to be Lieutenant Colonel of the Eighth Infantry; Capt. Daniel H. Brush, Seventeenth Infantry, to be Major of the Twenty-fifth Infantry; First Lieut. Douglas Settle, Tenth Infantry, to be Captain of the Seventeenth Infantry.

Admiral Sumner Takes Charge.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 19.—Rear Admiral George W. Sumner to-day succeeded Rear Admiral Silas Casey in the command of the Philadelphia Navy Yard. Admiral Sumner upon his arrival read his orders to assume command of the naval station and Admiral Casey read the orders notifying him of his new post of duty on the Pacific Station. Following this a salute of twenty-six guns, thirteen for each Admiral, was fired.

SUFFRAGE IN THE PHILIPPINES.

Property Qualification in New Municipal Code—Taxation of Church Properties.

MANILA, Jan. 19.—The section of the Municipal Code relating to the qualifications of electors was much discussed today before the Philippine Commission. The bill requires voters to own real estate to the value of 500 pesos, or to pay taxes to the amount of 30 pesos, or upward, and be males of upward of twenty-three years of age, who speak, read, and write English or Spanish. All are required to swear allegiance to the United States.

Judge Taft, President of the commission, promised to amend the bill so as to include men paying 20 pesos taxes.

Buencamino and other Federal Party leaders object to the feature empowering the provincial Governors to determine the legality of the elections of local officers.

The effect of the section covering the taxation of church properties will be to put the assessment in country districts largely on persons to whom the friars have nominally transferred the large tracts of land which they formerly claimed to own. The friars left all the country districts during the disturbed periods. Large holdings of land and business property in Manila are owned directly by the Church, and, as a similar provision for the taxation of Church properties will be included in a separate bill for the civil government of Manila, that question will then be more directly at issue.

DRUNKENNESS IN PHILIPPINES.

Gen. MacArthur Reports It Is No More Prevalent in the Army There than in This Country.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—In view of the debate in the Senate over the alleged drunkenness and licentiousness in the Philippines and in order to obtain definite information as to the real condition of affairs in the respects mentioned, Adjt.-Gen. Corbin, on the 16th inst., cabled Gen. MacArthur at Manila as follows:

"Telegraph the condition of the army in Manila and elsewhere in the Philippine Islands with reference to drunkenness and use of intoxicating liquors. Are houses of prostitution licensed, protected, or in any way encouraged by the military authorities?"

Gen. MacArthur replied as follows:

With reference to your telegram of 16th, drunkenness in this army is no more noticeable here than in garrisons in the United States; considering the whole force as a unit, probably very much less. In Manila drunken men are very noticeable. The effect of drunkards in public places creates the impression among citizens of extensive disorders throughout the whole force, which is not the case. The army is in splendid discipline and a high state of efficiency, doing the hardest kind of service in the most faithful and inspiring manner. Houses of prostitution are not licensed, protected, or encouraged. MACARTHUR.

Education in the Philippines.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—In the Senate to-day a resolution offered by Mr. Kyle was adopted, calling upon the Secretary of War for copies of the report of Gen. MacArthur and the reports of other officers upon educational work in the Philippine Islands.

Privates Tried for Murder.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The War Department has been informed of the trial by court-martial in the Philippines of two enlisted men on the charge of murder. Private Pasquale Tuozzo, Company C, Thirty-second Volunteer Infantry, was convicted of the murder of Private William Kilpatrick of the same company by shooting him with a revolver, and was sentenced to be dishonorably discharged, to forfeit all pay and allowances, and to be confined in the Bilibid Prison, Manila, at hard labor for ninety-nine years. Private Frank E. McLaughlin, Troop G, Eleventh Cavalry, was acquitted of the charge of murdering Quartermaster Sergeant William A. Hogan of the same troop by shooting him with a revolver, and was released from custody.

The Transport Thomas at Manila.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The War Department is informed that the transport Thomas arrived at Manila yesterday from San Francisco.

Much Sickness in the Philippines.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Reports from the Philippines indicate a great deal of sickness prevailing among both naval and army officers on duty in the archipelago. Long terms of duty in these islands are likely to impair the most robust constitutions, according to the view of army and navy medical officers, and a limitation of duty tours in the Philippines to a period of two years is strongly advocated. This practice was followed by the Spanish authorities when they were in control, and is looked upon as a wise precedent to continue.

Lieut. John Morrison, Jr., Killed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Adjutant General Corbin received a cable message from Gen. MacArthur at Manila to-day, saying that First Lieut. John Morrison, Jr., Fourth Cavalry, was killed near Gapan, P. I., yesterday. It is supposed that the officer was shot from ambush. Lieut. Morrison was a native of Iowa, and was graduated from the Military Academy in June, 1896. He was assigned to the Third Cavalry, and served with that regiment in the campaign against Santiago. In February, 1900, a few months after he had reached the grade of First Lieutenant, he was transferred to the Fourth Cavalry, and served with that regiment in the Philippine Islands up to the time of his death.

Decree Against Dueling in Havana.

HAVANA, Jan. 19.—Owing to the number of challenges sent and the attempts to bring about duels recently in Havana a new decree has been issued changing the law against dueling so as to make seconds, bearers of messages, and any one participating equally guilty with the principals.

HAWAIIAN CITIZENSHIP RULING.

Attorney General Griggs Renders an Opinion on Two Points.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Attorney General Griggs, in an opinion rendered upon the request of the Secretary of the Treasury, holds, first, that a person born in the Hawaiian Islands in 1885 of Chinese parents, who are laborers, and taken to China with his mother in 1890, is entitled to reenter the Territory of Hawaii, where his father still resides; second, that the wife and children of a Chinese person, who was naturalized in 1887 in Hawaii and still resides there, are entitled to enter that Territory "by virtue of the citizenship" of the husband and father.

The opinion is based upon the assumption that the Chinese persons in question, born and naturalized, respectively, in the Hawaiian Islands, were in fact citizens of the Republic of Hawaii under its Constitution and laws on Aug. 12, 1898, and had not abandoned or lost their rights as such.

Pay for Hawaiian Officials.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Senator Clark to-day introduced a bill increasing the salary of officials of Hawaii. It gives the Governor $5,000 and $500 as perquisites, the Justices of the Territorial Supreme Court $5,000, with $500 additional to the Chief Justice. The Judges of the Circuit Court will receive $4,000.

MAY CHANGE CANAL TREATY.

British Government Likely to Return the Agreement with Amendments of Its Own.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The expectation here is that the British Government will return the amended Hay-Pauncefote treaty with amendments of its own, and it is not expected that the British amendments will be acceptable to the United States Senate. Whether or not this expectation is based on advices from Mr. Choate or communications from Lord Pauncefote it is not possible to determine. In either case, the communications must necessarily have been informal in advance of the action of the British Government itself on the treaty.

The officials here say frankly that they have no knowledge of the character of these probable British amendments, so it is likely that the opinion that they will be unacceptable to the Senate is based on nothing more than a general understanding as to the feeling in the Senate toward the whole canal project on the one side, and on the other of the broad purpose of the British Government to avoid a complete abandonment of the interests it has heretofore claimed and asserted over Isthmian transit.

IN MEMORY OF SENATOR GEAR.

Senate Devotes Greater Part of the Day to Eulogies.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Under a special order the Senate devoted the greater part of its session to-day to eulogies upon the late Senator John H. Gear of Iowa, who died in this city last July.

Mr. Allison presented resolutions expressive of the regret of the Senate at the death of Senator Gear and providing that business of the Senate be suspended in order that his associates might pay fitting tribute to his memory.

Senator Gear was much beloved by his colleagues in the Senate, and the tributes paid to his character and distinguished services were heartfelt and eloquent. Those who made addresses were Senators Allison, (Iowa,) Burrows, (Mich.,) Platt, (Conn.,) Cockrell, (Miss.,) Nelson, (Minn.,) Spooner, (Wis.,) Morgan, (Ala.,) Mason, (Ill.,) Clay, (Ga.,) and Dolliver, (Iowa.)

WANT LOWER TAX ON TOBACCO.

Delegation Urges Finance Committee to Make Reduction.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The Senate Committee on Finance to-day granted a hearing to a delegation from the tobacco-growing States of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Kentucky, West Virginia, and Georgia in support of the proposition to reduce the tax on tobacco in connection with the legislation on the war revenue.

The delegation was composed entirely of members of Congress and was headed by Senators Pritchard, Tillman, and Martin. They represented that the tax had been doubled in the war revenue act and that over $35,000,000 of the revenue of the country is raised upon tobacco, and they asked for a reduction from the present tax of 12 cents per pound to 8 cents.

The committee did not commit itself, but some of the members indicated that there probably would be some reduction. The argument for a reduction was made upon the theory that it would be in the interest of the consumer and also that it would benefit small manufacturers.

HOUSE PASSES MINOR BILLS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The House today passed a number of minor bills, among them the following:

To permit towns and cities in Indian Territory to issue bonds for public improvements.

Authorizing a bridge across the Yalabusha River in Grenada County, Miss.

Authorizing a bridge across the Red River of the North at Fargo, N. D.

Authorizing the appointment of Frank B. Case as a line officer of the navy.

To establish a lobster hatchery in the State of Maine.

Authorizing a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Gray's Point, Mo.

Declaring a branch of the Mississippi River opposite La Crosse, Wis., unnavigable.

Providing for the entry of lands formerly in the lower Brule Indian Agency, S. D.

Allowing the commutation of homestead entries in certain cases.

Authorizing the purchase of a steam launch for the customs district of Galveston, Tex.

POSTAL CODIFICATION.

House Resumes Consideration of the Loud Bill—Debate on Star Routes.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The House resumed consideration of the Postal Codification bill to-day. The pending amendment relating to the classes and pay of letter carriers was withdrawn by Mr. W. A. Smith, (Rep., Mich.,) who did so, he said, in the interest of the carriers, hoping it would take form in separate measure.

An amendment was agreed to striking out the provision for paying letter carriers extra for working more than forty-eight hours during the week.

Mr. Lentz (Dem., Ohio) proposed an amendment prohibiting private concerns from undertaking the delivery of special delivery letters, and providing that the delivery be made only by those in the Postal Service. He said a system of farming out special delivery letters had grown up. When asked by Chairman Loud where this system existed, Mr. Lentz mentioned Columbus, Ohio. Mr. Loud expressed his surprise, and said the condition at Columbus, if it existed, was exceptional.

The Lentz amendment went over for consideration later.

A lengthy and spirited debate occurred on the proposition to require star route contracts to be let to persons residing contiguous to the route. A number of amendments and substitutes were proposed, but they were all defeated, and the bill was left substantially in its original form.

The bill was about half completed when laid aside.

No Conference Yet on the Army Bill.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The House today received from the Senate the Army Reorganization bill, and Mr. Hull, Chairman of the Military Committee, made an effort to send the bill to conference at once. But on objection by Mr. Richardson, (Dem., Tenn.,) the disposition of the bill was deferred.

Annual Leave for Navy Yard Employes.

WASHINGTON, Jan 19.—The House today passed a bill granting fifteen days' annual leave to employes of navy yards, arsenals, &c.

THE MARSHALL CENTENNIAL.

Senate Passes Resolution Providing for the Celebration.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—In the Senate to-day a concurrent resolution offered a few days ago by Mr. Lindsay, (Dem., Ky.,) providing for the celebration on the 4th of February next of the one hundredth anniversary of the assumption of the Chief Justiceship of the United States by John Marshall, was called up. Mr. Lindsay made a brief statement in support of the resolution.

Mr. Hale, (Rep., Me.,) who objected to the resolution, said he had felt it unlikely that Congress, under the great pressure of public business, would have a day even for so good and laudable a purpose as that contemplated by the resolution. However, he would yield his objection.

"I have been told," continued Mr. Hale, "it is contemplated as a part of the ceremony in celebration of this anniversary that the President of the United States be requested to deliver an introductory address. I should say clearly and plainly that no such thought ought to be harbored by the committee in charge of the exercises. The President ought never to be requested to participate in any such ceremony except by his presence."

The resolution was adopted without further debate.

PLOT TO BUY DEAD LETTERS.

Clerks Knew Contents in Advance—Four of Them Discharged.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Several clerks in the dead letter office of the Post Office Department have been dismissed on charges of having bought packages at the dead-letter sale, knowing in advance their contents and falsely representing their character in the catalogue.

The scheme was unearthed by the Postmaster General in an investigation carried on for over a month. In order to avert suspicion by the presence of local detectives in the office during the sale Dec. 17 last Inspectors from New York, Boston, and Maryland carried on the investigation and located the plot in the property division of the dead-letter office.

The clerks dismissed are R. C. Waiton, Mrs. Lillian E. Brown, Charles Albert, and Charles Hardin, the last-named being the head of the property division.

A New Six-Inch Gun.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Secretary Root has approved the allotment recommended by the Board of Ordnance and Fortifications for the construction of a six-inch rapid-fire gun, with pedestal mount and shield. The distinctive feature of the gun is to be the breech mechanism, and eight shots a minute is the firing speed guaranteed.

Pay of Porto Rican Councilmen Fixed.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Jan. 19.—The Porto Rican Council has passed a bill fixing the salaries of native members of the Council at $3,000.

Venezuelan Concessions Transferred.

FARIBAULT, Minn., Jan. 19.—The Orinoco Company, which claims to own an eleven-million acre concession in Venezuela, has transferred its rights to the Orinoco Corporation of West Virginia, except some land near Santa Catalina, granted to its colonists. The West Virginia Company has a capital stock of $5,000,000, and will maintain the colony of the Orinoco Company, assume all its outstanding obligations, and re-establish and quiet the title. The consideration was $500,000 in the bonds of the new company payable in gold.

Capt. Godfrey Buried at West Point.

Funeral services were held yesterday for Capt George J. Godfrey of Company A, Twenty-second United States Infantry, who was killed in action in the Philippines, June 8, 1900. Brief services were held at the residence of his parents, 516 East One Hundred and Twentieth Street, and then the body was taken to West Point. There, after services were held in the Roman Catholic chapel, it was buried in the military cemetery

TO LICENSE ARCHITECTS

Law Proposed to Protect the Public and the Profession.

A Movement to Bar Out Incompetent, Untrained Men—Meeting in Architectural League Rooms.

Architects of this city and from various parts of the State met in the rooms of the Architectural League of New York, yesterday, to discuss the provisions of a proposed bill requiring those who wish to practice the profession to undergo an examination and be duly registered if they prove themselves competent. The object of the promoters of the measure is to guard the profession from the men whose incompetency results in the faulty and dangerous construction of buildings.

The bill provides among other things that the Governor shall appoint a board of nine members to be known as a State Board of Architects, and who shall be empowered to issue licenses. The measure is framed on the same lines as one passed by both branches of the Legislature in 1894, but which was never signed by the Governor. The outcome of the meeting yesterday was that the bill as proposed was referred to an executive committee, with power to make any amendments considered necessary to insure its passage and to further its introduction into the Legislature. The Executive Committee comprises twenty-five members chosen from a committee of one hundred. The mission of the committee, the members of which live in widely scattered localities, is to create a sentiment for the measure.

Louis De Coppet Berg presided at the meeting, which was called to order at 10:30 o'clock. Mr. Berg in a brief address said that the object of the bill is that fitness, training, and ordinary competence may be assured among practicing architects, and that the public may be protected against imposition by men who enter the ranks of the profession without a sense of responsibility or qualification. A committee, of which J. F. Harder acted as Chairman, made a report that 995 circulars had been sent out, and that 513 replies had been received. Of these 493 were in favor of a registration law and 20 against it.

It soon developed that there was some opposition, a communication being received from the New York Chapter, American Institute of Architects, and signed by 70 of its members, registering their disapproval of the bill.

John H. Pierce of Elmira read a paper favoring the bill on the ground that it would result in better architects and better buildings. John Coxhead, an architect of Buffalo, also favored the measure, saying that every year the number of incompetent architects is increasing rapidly. Mr. Coxhead was not sure, however, that the bill could be passed and favored the appointment of a committee to see the party leaders and acquaint them with its merits.

Among those in opposition was L. P. Smith of this city, who said that he opposed legislation for architects, as he did not see that any act of this nature would be of any particular benefit to them.

"I believe in individualism," said he, "and the passage of this bill is not going to keep out incompetent persons. People won't go to a man merely because he holds a license. They will judge him more from the excellence of his work."

The question is, Mr. Smith went on, whether the Building Department protects the public. Mr. Smith referred to three cases where architects who had had bad accidents to buildings were members of the American Institute.

"We know," said Albert H. Taylor, who followed, "that serious defects exist in the Building Department, but it has a deterrent effect upon bad construction."

The passage of the bill, he added, would put a man, as architect, where he could be reached.

Walter D. Dickson of this city, in advocating the bill, said the Building Department was developing more architects than anything else, and he believed the license system would weed out many of the incompetent men who draw plans and call themselves architects.

After considerable discussion and two amendments by a special committee, the bill was turned over to the Executive Committee.

WHITE HOUSE ALTERATIONS.

The Proposed Plans Condemned as Disfigurement by a Committee of Architects.

At the annual meeting of the Society of Beaux Arts Architects, held Dec. 19 last, a committee was appointed to make a formal protest against the proposed alteration of the White House at Washington. The committee, comprising Ernest Flagg, Chairman, and William A. Boring and S. B. P. Trowbridge, has in accordance issued the following:

"We, the committee appointed to voice this sentiment of the society, do hereby most emphatically protest against the proposed disfigurement of this historic monument. The alterations, as illustrated in the daily press, are of such a character as to completely destroy whatever merit there is in the existing design. The building, if added to in the way proposed, would be devoid of dignity, and entirely lacking in unity, and would thus violate the elementary rules of good architectural design.

"We do not wish to be understood as condemning any form of addition to or even alteration of the White House, but it was the unanimous sense of the society that so important a work should be intrusted only to competent hands."

BOUQUET FOR THIS DEPONDENT MAN.

Attempted to Kill Himself in His Boarding House by the Gas Method.

An unidentified man attempted to kill himself by the gas method in a boarding house at 330 East Ninth Street yesterday morning. From papers found in his clothes it was thought at first that he might be some relative or friend of the young woman who committed suicide at the Grand Union Hotel last month, Pauline Feste by name. The police, however, concluded that this was not so, but that the man had only read of the woman's death. His clothing was new, and he wore kid gloves and a bouquet of roses, lilies of the valley, and forget-me-nots in his buttonhole.

Tied to the flowers was a clipping from a German newspaper, telling of the suicide of Pauline Feste. Attached to this was a piece of writing paper shaped like a heart, and on it was scribbled in German: "I am her friend." There were two letters in the man's pockets. One of them, directed to the Coroner, contained $16.50, which the writer said he wished to be given to his landlady. The other letter was for the landlady and told of the money, being signed with the name, "Slemnontri." In the letter to the Coroner the man stated that he was of a good family, and asked that his name be kept secret.

With the letters were several other newspaper clippings, most of which related to the Feste suicide. One of them, however, told of the Vanderbilt-French wedding, and on it was written: "A man had better die than try to get married." All of the writing was in German.

When the man was found he was unconscious, and he had not been revived after lying in the prison ward at Bellevue Hospital until a late hour last night. The physicians say that he may die. He is evidently a German, and about twenty-eight years old, well built and apparently in good health. His landlady said that she did not know his name or anything about him, that he had been in her house only a week.

New York College of Forestry.

ITHACA, N. Y., Jan. 19.—The annual report of the Director of the New York State College of Forestry has just been submitted by President Schurman to the State Legislature. The college is shown to have twenty-five regular students and fifty-four attending its courses. The college forest is self-supporting, so that further legislative appropriations for it will not be asked for.

Sacrifice Life for Beer.

WHEELING, West Va., Jan. 19.—In his eagerness to recover a keg of beer which fell from a skiff near Wellsburg last night, William Pratt overturned the boat, and with one of his companions, George McElfrest, was drowned. A third man escaped by swimming to shore.

"THE PASSING CENTURY."

Alfred Austin's New Poem Upon the Dying Year.

The London Times of Dec. 31 publishes the following poem under the caption, "The Passing of the Century."

I.

How shall we comfort the Dying Year?
Beg him to linger, or bid him to go?
The light in his eyes burns dim and low,
His hands are clammy, his pulse beats slow,
He wanders and mumbles, but doth not hear.
The lanes are sodden, the leaf-drifts sere,
And the wrack is weaving his shroud of white.
Do you not see he is weary quite
Of the languor of living, and longs for night?
Lo! He is gone! Now lower him down
In the snug-warm earth, 'neath the clods of brown,
And the buds of the Winter aconite.

II.

How shall we part with the bygone Year?
Cover with cypress, or wreathe with bay?
He will not heed what you do or say.
He is deaf to to-morrow as yesterday.
Why do you linger about his bier?
He has gone to the Ghostland, he is not here.
We may go on our way, we can live and laugh,
Round the banqueting blaze can feast and quaff.
The purple catafalque, stately staff,
The dirgest of sorrow, the songs of praise,
And the costliest monument man can raise,
Are but for the Spirit's cenotaph.

III.

Dust unto dust, He is dead, though he
Was the last of the centuried years that flow,
We know not wherefore, we never shall
With the tide unebbing of Time, and go
To the phantom shore of Eternity.
Shadows to shadows, they flit and flee
Across the face of the flaming sun,
The vague generations, one by one,
That never are ended, never begun.
Where is the dome or the vault so vast,
As to coffin the bones of the perished Past,
Save the limitless tomb of Oblivion?

IV.

What tale would he tell, could the dead but speak?
"I was born, as I died, amid wrath and smoke,
When the war-wains rolled, and the cannons spoke,
When the vulture's cry and the raven's croak
Flapped hungrily over the dying shriek,
And nothing was seen but a blood-red streak
Betwixt lowering sky and leaden main;
When slanted and slashed the rifles' rain
Upon furrows whose harvest were sheaves of slain;
When the levin's glare by the thunder's crash
Was beNewed, and ever-twixt flash and flash
The howl of the unspent hurricane."

V.

But the dead discourse with the dead. So ask
How best now to welcome the new-born Year.
She is coming, is coming, and lo! is here,
With forehead and footstep that know not fear.
She will shrink from no pleasure, evade no task,
But there never was worn or veil or mask
Like her frank fair face and her candid soul.
Do you fathom her thoughts, can you guess her goal,
Her waywardness chasten, her fate control?
She will wend with her doom, and that doom be ours;
So greet her with carol and snow-white flowers,
And crown her with Hope's own aureole.

VI.

Yet mind her dawn of the dark, for she,
She, too, must pass 'neath the lych-gate porch;
And give to her keeping the vestal Torch,
That may oft-time smoulder, and sometimes scorch,
She must tread the Unknown the dead year
Though rugged the road, yet the goal is God,
And the will of all-wise Omnipotence.

ALFRED AUSTIN.

UNITED MINE WORKERS.

Thirteenth Annual Convention Will Open in Indianapolis To-morrow.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 19.—Arrangements for the thirteenth annual convention of the United Mine Workers of America have been completed. The sessions will begin at 10 o'clock Monday morning, John Mitchell presiding. The officers hope that the work before the convention can be completed by Feb. 1. There are about 1,000 delegates, representing 1,712 local unions and 189,331 members.

During the convention officers will be elected. The matter of a permanent building for the miners' headquarters, a printing office for the journal, and a home for the National President will come up for consideration. Following the adjournment, the delegates, or nearly all of them, will go to Columbus, Ohio, to attend the joint conference of coal operators and miners.

It is practically assured that neither West Virginia nor Iowa will be admitted to the competitive coal fields at the conference between the delegates to the National convention and the operators' association. The miners agreed at the conference last year to make a strong effort to organize the miners of the State to a point where they might be able to control the situation and force the operators of the State into the competitive field and thus place them upon the same basis as Indiana, Illinois, Pennsylvania, and Ohio, the States now embraced in the field.

The operators, it is understood, have declined to send representatives to the conference, and until they can be persuaded to pursue this course, nothing can be done toward bringing them into the scale agreement.

INVENTOR THOMAS SHAW DEAD.

"The Edison of Pennsylvania" Passes Away at Hammonton, N. J.

HAMMONTON, N. J., Jan. 19.—Thomas Shaw of Philadelphia, a distinguished inventor, known in scientific and engineering circles as "The Edison of Pennsylvania," died here to-day from a stroke of paralysis received on Thursday. Mr. Shaw, who had been in ill health for the past two years, was on his way to Atlantic City about a month ago in charge of a trained nurse, but was taken seriously ill in the train and got off at Hammonton, where he remained at a hotel.

Mr. Shaw during his life had been granted 186 patents by the United States Patent Office and hundreds of patents in other countries of the world, covering 91 subjects in engineering. He was the inventor of the mercury steam gauge, the noiseless steam exhaust, which is used on every locomotive and steam boiler; the Verona lock nut washer, which is in use throughout the world; the dead-stroke hammer, and the Shaw gas tester for detecting the presence and percentage of fire damp in coal mines, now the official standard of the States of Pennsylvania and Ohio.

MARCUS DALY'S WILL.

Montana Millionaire Left His Entire Estate to His Wife and Children.

ANACONDA, Mont., Jan. 19.—The will of Marcus Daly was filed for probate to-day. It makes Mrs. Daly the sole executor of the estate, without bonds, makes her guardian of the minor children, and gives her one-third of the estate. The remaining two-thirds is to be divided equally among Mr. Daly's three daughters, Mrs. Margaret Brown of Baltimore, and Misses Mary and Harriott Daly, and his son, Marcus Daly.

In the event of the death of Mrs. Daly before the trust imposed upon her by the will is executed, the four children of the testator, or their survivors, are to be made trustees and executors in her place without security. Any of the children may, during the life of the trust, dispose of his or her share by will.

The will was drawn and witnessed in New York Sept. 8, 1900. The witnesses are William Scallon, John C. Lalor, and Dillon Brown.

New York College of Forestry.

ITHACA, N. Y., Jan. 19.—The annual report of the Director of the New York State College of Forestry has just been submitted by President Schurman to the State Legislature. The college is shown to have twenty-five regular students and fifty-four attending its courses. The college forest is self-supporting, so that further legislative appropriations for it will not be asked for.

Sacrifice Life for Beer.

WHEELING, West Va., Jan. 19.—In his eagerness to recover a keg of beer which fell from a skiff near Wellsburg last night, William Pratt overturned the boat, and with one of his companions, George McElfrest, was drowned. A third man escaped by swimming to shore.

PROGRESS ON THE RAPID TRANSIT TUNNEL

Work in the Excavations of the Several Sections.

MANY DIFFICULTIES OVERCOME

Unexpected Formations Found in Different Parts of the City—Contractors Hope to Complete the Work in Contract Time.

With steam drill and dynamite, pick and shovel, the rapid transit tunnel builders are now working in nearly seventy blocks and making pregress which seems to assure the completion of the railroad on contract time. Taking into consideration that some of the sub-contractors have been in the field but a comparatively short time, and that some of the sub-divisions have not even been started, owing to various complications incident to all big undertakings, the progress up to date is deemed by the head men of the Rapid Transit Commission and Contractor John B. McDonald as fairly satisfactory. It is conceded, however, that while in some of the sub-sections the work done is not in exact ratio to the contract time of completion, (and yet it is not far behind,) that all time lost so far will be made up before the beginning of another Winter.

Much time was necessarily lost by the sub-contractors in assembling their plants and getting fairly started. Building a railroad tunnel through city streets filled with a multitude of pipes and subways and with a comprehensive sewer system to change is not an easy problem, and requires a vast deal of study by the engineers even after the original detail plans are worked out. Changes are bound to occur during the first few months in comprehensive engineering plans, and New York's tunnel road is no exception to the rule. But by Spring the last of the preliminaries, it is confidently believed, will have been settled and every sub-contractor free to go ahead in full swing. The two thousand or more of men now engaged on the tunnel will be increased by an equal number by the time the frost is out of the ground, and it is the intention of many of the sub-contractors to run three shifts to insure completion in the prescribed time of four and a half years, from last Summer.

But even now, in midwinter, there is ample evidence of great activity on most of the sections of the road. Seven of the blocks have reached that stage of construction where the steel frame work is already up and in portions of two blocks the frames are in, roofed over and practically filled in to the street surface. Ample evidence that the road is well under way is in the presence of thousands of pounds of structural steel piled in various streets from the City Hall section to the beginning of the long tunnel at One Hundred and Fifty-seventh Street in Broadway on the west side to beyond One Hundred and Tenth Street and Lenox Avenue on the east branch.

Beginning in the extreme down-town section, for which the Degnon-McLean Construction Company is sub-contractor, a great deal of work has been done in Elm Street. Degnon-McLean's portion extends from the City Hall to the middle of Great Jones Street. Nothing has as yet been done on the City Hall loop, and will not be until the general contractor signifies a forward movement. Legal complications on contracts and some engineering problems in connection with the Broadway and Brooklyn extension served to delay here, but it is now expected that the loop excavation will be opened within the next month. North of this the first opened block is that between Pearl and Duane Streets, where but a few feet have been taken off the surface. The sub-contracting company will to-morrow morning begin to open the block between Broome and Grand Streets. From Prince to Great Jones Street the blocks are all open, and from Bleecker to Great Jones fully one-half of the excavating is completed. The most material evidence of progress, however, is from Prince to Houston and from the latter street to Bleecker, where, in the west half of the tunnel, ever one hundred bents, or upright posts and roof beams, are set and the concreting laid. The tracks in Elm Street will be on an average twenty feet below the roadway surface.

THE PIPE GALLERY COMPLICATION.

The sudden abandonment of the pipe galleries in Elm Street retarded Degnon-McLean's work considerably. They had organized their force on the basis of pipe-gallery construction, and before the order came to stop had expended between $50,000 and $100,000 on this particular branch alone. A rearrangement of forces and plans was necessary, and many of the men were laid off. The gallery excavations will, however, be utilized. The contractors will place a 30-inch gas main on the west side of the street, a 36-inch water main on the east side, and sewers on both sides. When this is done, where otherwise a chamber would have run, the holes will be filled in. This will necessitate, when repairs are needed, the usual digging up, unless within a short time a bill is passed by the Legislature authorizing the construction of pipe galleries along the tunnel route, it being the present intention on the part of the Merchants' Association to see that such a measure is introduced.

Adjoining the Degnon-McLean section comes that of Holbrook, Cabot & Daly, reaching from Great Jones Street to Thirty-third. This firm has a large compressed air plant at Union Square, which operates its drills, and where are situated repair shops and storage yards. From Great Jones to south of Eighth Street the record is eighty feet at grade and concreted, and eighty more will soon be ready for the concrete flooring. Steel construction will go in here this week. In front of Wanamaker's store forty feet of the tunnel is roofed over, with concreting finished, and two hundred feet in the block are under construction, well under way. Between Sixteenth and Seventeenth Streets two pits fifty feet long are down to sub-grade. From Eighteenth to Twentieth Street 200 feet are excavated and 80 feet advanced to the stage of waterproofing. Steel work here will begin this week. From Twenty-first to Twenty-third Street 200 feet are down to grade and 70 feet of the ironwork are set up, and before long will be roofed over. In the two blocks, Twenty-sixth to Twenty-eighth Street, eighty feet are at grade flooring being laid preparatory to the installation of the supports. One hundred and twenty feet additional are under excavation about one-third the way to grade. Of eighty feet open north of Twenty-ninth Street, half of it is about one-third the way to low level, and the remaining half is well on to the stage of receiving the steel columns. From here is a jump to Sub-Contractor Shaler's short rock section, beginning between Thirty-third and Thirty-fourth Streets and running to Forty-first Street.

Holbrook, Cabot & Daly's excavations so far are two tracks openings. When these are completed they will be closed up and the other side opened. Interesting work along here is the employment of steel girders for holding up the trolley tracks, a method first employed in New York by them, and now being used in some instances by the up-town contractors. These girders are 60 inches deep and 50 feet long, costing $400 a set of four pieces.

The character of the cuts in the section is varied and in places the contractors have had considerable trouble. Near Madison Square Garden the workmen ran into a bed of muck, which delayed them somewhat. Down in Great Jones Street a bed of sand was encountered. In Tenth, Nineteenth, and Twenty-second Streets the work was comparatively simple, being in earth, but in Fourth Avenue, near the latter street, water was found. A considerable portion of the sub-stratum in the section is of rock. Taken altogether the section, Mr. Holbrook said yesterday, is about the most difficult one of the whole line to handle, with the exception of Forty-second Street, the contract for which was recently awarded to Benezette Williams, a Chicago engineer.

Beginning April 1, Holbrook, Cabot & Daly will employ their men in three shifts of eight hours each, and expect to finish before the expiration of the time allowed them. They will soon have six derricks and six cables in operation, and will then open every part of their section.

PARK AVENUE EXCAVATIONS.

Little is seen by the public of Mr. Shaler's work, except his plant near the Seventy-first Regiment armory at Thirty-fourth Street and Fourth Avenue. The passer-by may look down into two pits hewn out of solid rock about twenty-six feet below the street level and leading in to the rock under the Park Avenue tunnel. One each side of the Metropolitan tracks the portals of two drifts are exposed to view. Mr. Shaler has reached tunnel grade, and has drifted in about fifty feet from the mouth of each tunnel. Work has been a little delayed as only an account of cramped space, but from the necessity of using light dynamite charges in blasting. "Forty per cent. dynamite" has so far been used, but as the drifts lengthen out heavier blasts will follow, and the progress will consequently become faster. On the east side of the tracks the contractor has built what might be termed a guard of planking to break the force of air whenever a blast goes off, thus saving the possible breakage of windows in the immediate vicinity and injury to persons. Another fifty feet in and progress will be accelerated, Mr. Shaler says. He has recently begun the installation of a plant at Forty-first Street to drift back to meet the tunnel coming from the south. Test wells have already been drilled, and the shaft will soon be started.

Contractor Williams has not as yet signified whether he will work in open cut in Forty-second Street or run a tunnel. He may use his own methods, subject to the approval of Chief Engineer Parsons of the Rapid Transit Commission. He will go to Forty-seventh Street, where Naughton & Co. take up the work and go to Sixtieth Street, ending in the difficult and important work in the Circle at Central Park.

Broadway then is unopened up to Forty-seventh Street. Here an opening has been made to Fiftieth Street on the west side of Broadway. Tunnel grade has been reached from Forty-seventh to Forty-ninth Street and in the next block it is approaching grade. Early in February Naughton & Co. expect to begin laying masonry in the block between Forty-seventh and Forty-eighth Streets. In a rock excavation on the east side of Broadway between Forty-fourth and Fifty-sixth Streets a depth of over twenty feet has been reached. Masonry will probably be laid this week, and during February considerable steel work will go in.

The Circle is one of the show places at present for rapid transit construction. The greater part of the space north, east, and west of the Columbus statue is torn up. Excavations to grade have been reached over a considerable part of the space where the station will be located. Concrete will go down this week. A little further south and approaching the stationway is a network of steel bents for the north bound express and local tracks, just east of the monument. The engineers have evolved a plan of building a wall to support the east side of the statue, thus relieving the tunnel roof of its weight, the tracks here running under the east edge. Part of the monument's base will, however, extend over the roof, but no weight will fall upon it. At present a working force is running a drift about half way under the monument. When this is finished the stone wall will be built through the drift, thus securing the foundation from possibility of instability and afterward the outer sub-stratum of earth will be removed for the tracks. The problem is an interesting one.

Of equal interest is the method of blasting under the Eighth Avenue tracks. These are supported by heavy beams instead of being trussed. In blasting a nice adjustment is necessary, the upright beams being from time to time shifted to accommodate the blasts. Although the operation is a delicate one, it has been done so far without the slightest injury to the track bed. Curving into Broadway at Durland's a similar method of track support is employed.

From Sixtieth to One Hundred and Fourth Street, William Bradley takes up construction. From Sixtieth to Sixty-first he is half way down to tunnel grade, of twenty-six feet. Most of the block between Sixtieth and Sixty-second has reached grade. In the next block north a pit has been dug reaching down about twenty-one feet. In the next block some steel has already been set up under the trolley tracks, which are supported on trusses. Along this portion much rock is encountered and a glance into some of the pits shows huge boulders chipped off, which workmen are breaking up to be lifted to the surface and taken away. Rock is not continuous in the few blocks north of the Circle, for in some of the deep pits, which are in length from forty to eighty feet, tramways have been erected to make the removal of dirt the more expeditious.

North of Sixty-fourth Street a break comes to Eighty-second. To the next block more than half of rock has reached track level. From Eighty-fourth to Eighty-fifth Street grade is reached, this being another block almost ready to receive masonry. From Eighty-Sixth to Eighty-Seventh one-third of the block is down to grade. In the next block north one-half is down to grade with the addition of sixty lineal feet of concrete, making it almost ready for steel installment. From Eighty-eighth to Eighty-ninth Street fifty feet is in concrete and one-half of the block to grade for two of the four tracks, as in other blocks open. From Eighty-ninth to Ninetieth Street half the distance has reached track level. On Friday the block between Ninety-ninth and One Hundredth Street was opened up.

At One Hundred and Fourteenth Street tunnel work begins again. John Shields being the contractor from One Hundred and Fourth to One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street. It may be summarized thus: One Hundred and Fourteenth to One Hundred and Sixteenth Street, south end of block down to track level, sixty feet of concrete, the rest one-third done, a difficulty being encountered in soft earth, requiring heavy scaffolding; block One Hundred and Seventeenth to One Hundred and Eighteenth, excavation down twenty-two feet and fourteen feet yet to go; One Hundred and Nineteenth to One Hundred and Twentieth, opened, but little done; One Hundred and Twentieth to One Hundred and Twenty-first, block to grade average depth of twenty-five feet, one sidewall built for seventy feet to spring line of arch, other side, foundation in; One Hundred and Twenty-first to middle of block north to One Hundred and Twenty-third, average depth of eight feet cut out. At One Hundred and Twenty-second Street the road emerges from tunnel and passing through an open cut to a masonry approach reaches the point for the steel viaduct at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street. The open cut is well under way, but little else is done, and the viaduct will not be begun for probably some months.

AT THE OPEN CUT.

At One Hundred and Thirty-third Street, where L. B. McCabe's section begins, is an open cut leading to the tunnel portal. Here the foundations for the approach are built to the curb and the open cut is also completed to the bottom of the curb, including a concrete flooring. The pressed brick facings on the retaining wall are also in, but the curb and parapet wall are yet to be completed. At One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Street the viaduct again becomes tunnel. A one hundred and fifty-foot stretch of steel bents for the two tracks, with concrete arch, side walls, and roof is completed, and the filling in over the roof is restored to the street surface. This steel construction is the farthest advanced of any along the line. Excavation is almost finished to One Hundred and Thirty-sixth Street, and along here is a stretch of fifty feet of concrete. From One Hundred and Thirty-sixth to One Hundred and Thirty-seventh Street little of importance has been done.

Between One Hundred and Forty-second and One Hundred and Forty-third Streets a start was made on January 7, and for a hundred feet the excavation is now down ten feet. Just south of One Hundred and Forty-sixth Street work also was recently begun. From between One Hundred and Fifty-fifth and One Hundred and Fifty-sixth Streets an open cut through rock largely extends to the rock portal just north of One Hundred and Fifty-eighth Street, a distance of 650 feet. This is down to grade for two stretches of 150 and 130 respectively and 60 feet of sidewalk between One Hundred and Fifty-seventh and One Hundred and Fifty-eighth Street is going up. At One Hundred and Fifty-seventh Street the track grade is 27 feet as Broadway slopes south from One Hundred and Fifty-third Street where the tracks will run 85 feet under the roadway.

From the mouth of the long stretch of tunnel through solid rock to Fort George, the heading since October has reached a distance of 420 feet, almost to One Hundred and Sixtieth Street. The shaft for the elevator station along the Broadway sidewalk at One Hundred and Sixty-eighth Street is down to a grade depth of 103 feet, and a drift has been run out to the tunnel under the centre of the street. The shaft itself is 15 by 32 feet, and a passageway has been excavated to the tunnel in the centre of the street. At this point, in order to accommodate the station, the drift is increased to a width of 50 feet and a height of 26 feet. This enlarged section has been excavated for a length of 45 feet, and the subway headings driven both north and south for a distance of 30 feet each way. Temporary elevators with cage protection for the workmen have been put in, a slight improvement on the buckets in which they were lowered and raised up to a short time ago.

At One Hundred and Eighty-first Street the other shaft sunk for the station elevators is the deepest so far, being 128 feet to the track grade. Much work has been done in the rock cutting of the gallery leading to the street centre. The gallery here is 36 feet wide and 22 feet deep, and is practically completed. The heading north and south here is 20 feet each way. All the north and south drifts are being worked simultaneously, and the contractor, Mr. McCabe, says he sees no reason to believe he will go beyond his time.

ON THE EAST BRANCH.

On the east branch, at One Hundred and Fourth Street, just west of the Central Park wall in Central Park West, a shaft was started on Dec. 10 to meet the heading from One Hundred and Tenth Street and Lenox Avenue through the Park. It is now down ten feet and will have a total depth of 61 feet. On the Lenox Avenue side a beginning has been made in erecting the steel supports in the Park. Otherwise, from One Hundred and Tenth Street, 260 feet have been excavated and the first layer of concrete is in. From this excavation is now 60 feet from the hillside, where the opening to the drift to One Hundred and Fourth Street will be made. It is expected that the heading will be started before the distance of sixty feet is closed up. The driveway will not be closed altogether at one time, but by March steel work ought to be well along toward completion in the Park from the One Hundred and Tenth Street wall. When the driveway is finished all the rock and debris from the tunnel will be taken out through the steel-roofed tunnel into One Hundred and Tenth Street and Lenox Avenue and there disposed of.

From One Hundred and Thirteenth to One Hundred and Fourteenth Street and Lenox Avenue, Contractor Farrell has opened the north half of the block to a depth of about eleven feet, over half the necessary distance, and is just beginning on the south half. From One Hundred and Thirty-first to One Hundred and Thirty-second Street no work has been done recently in excavating, a cableway having just been finished. Beyond this block rapid transit work promises to drag for some time or until the proposed Jerome Avenue extension is decided upon.

On every section under way the sewer changes are going on simultaneously with tunnel construction, and so far a great deal has been accomplished.

WIDOW CRIES FOR VENGEANCE.

Mrs. Garuguso Wants to Denounce Lorenzo Priori to Gov. Odell.

Mrs. Vincenzo Garuguse, widow of the man killed two years ago by Lorenzo Priori, who is now awaiting a hearing before the Governor to determine whether his sentence of death shall be executed as decreed, called at the District Attorney's office yesterday, weeping, and demanded the death of her husband's murderer. Her small daughter, Carmine, joined her entreaties for vengeance to those of her mother. Both requested to be allowed to attend the hearing before Gov. Odell to-morrow, where they announced their intention of demanding of the Chief Executive Priori's expiation of his crime.

Priori was convicted of Garuguse's murder and sentenced to death by Justice Fursman. The day before his execution was to take place Priori said that the murder with which he was charged had been committed by his wife's brother, and that this fact had not been made known before because of his dread of the Mafia, of which he claimed his brother-in-law was a member. He will be granted an opportunity to tell the whole story at the hearing.

Assistant District Attorney Delany, who will argue the case for the State, assured Mrs. Garuguso and her daughter that both might attend the hearing.

HUGH McLAUGHLIN'S PROPHECY.

He Says that New York's Next Mayor Will Be a Democrat.

Ex-Register Hugh McLaughlin, the Democratic leader of Kings County, accompanied by Mrs. McLaughlin and a party of friends, started yesterday afternoon for Florida, where they will spend the remainder of the Winter as the guests of Thomas F. Nevins, at his place on Merritt Island, in the Indian River. In the party, besides Mr. and Mrs. McLaughlin were Mr. and Mrs. Nevins, Col. Thomas A. Kerrigan, the Misses Kerrigan, Jeremiah Quaid, and Frank Nevins.

Mr. McLaughlin said he was confident a Democratic Mayor of New York will be elected next Fall. He will be back in time, he said, to take part in the campaign.

A Nun Elopes and Gets Married.

LANCASTER, Penn., Jan. 19.—A sensation was caused to-day by the elopement and subsequent marriage at Camden, N. J., of Roland D. Moore, a prominent resident of this city, and Miss Ellen Dugan of Shamokin, Penn., who was a nurse known as Sister M. Leonica at St. Joseph's Hospital, which is conducted by the Sisters of St. St. Francis. Miss Dugan has been a nun for seven years. A year and a half ago she came to St. Joseph's as a nurse and she and Moore fell in love while the latter was a patient in her care. Miss Dugan quietly left the hospital last evening, went to the home of a friend, and early this morning left for Camden. Mr. Moore is thirty-eight years old and Miss Dugan ten years his junior.

Changes in Branch Post Offices.

There has been a general shifting of Superintendents and chief clerks in the branch Post Office stations of this city. Chief Clerk F. Dornheimer of Station S has been sent to the Madison Square Branch Post Office as Superintendent; J. M. Goodenough, the Third Division clerk, goes to the same office as chief clerk, and J. A. Namee, the chief clerk of the Madison Square Branch, has been appointed Superintendent at Branch S.

SIEGEL COOPER CO.

The annual White Sale enters to-morrow upon the third week of its successful career with every promise made in its behalf faithfully kept and every indication pointing to a continuation of the remarkable chain of record-breaking sales that constitute its past.

The one difficulty that confronts us is the keeping up to our standard the assortments in all the lines of White Goods that this great sale embraces, but this never need cause you any trouble. If any particular line sells out faster than we anticipated, we immediately reduce the grade above it to the lower level, so that instead of meeting with disappointment you may get better value even than we promised. Our offerings for to-morrow are as follows:

Women's House and Under Garments.

Women's Empire Gowns, cambric ruffle, revers, sleeves and front, embroidered yoke; Monday at 29
Women's Muslin Empire Gowns, tucked yoke, hemstitched revers and sleeves; Monday at 38
Women's extra size Muslin Gowns, tucked Hubbard yoke, very large and well made; Monday at 58
Women's Muslin Empire Gowns, embroidery yoke and revers, finish of tucked lawn ruffles; Monday at 58
Women's Muslin Underskirts, plain double flounce or single hemstitched flounce, extra dust ruffle; Monday at 29
Women's Cambric Underskirts, dust ruffle, extra ruffle and Van Dyke flounce, trimmed with wide edge and insertion of Point d'Esprit lace of a superior quality, excellent $4.00 value; Monday at 2.95
Women's Muslin Drawers, excellent in quality, plain in style, tucked finish, Monday at 12½
Women's Muslin Drawers, tucks and wide embroidery ruffle; Monday at 39
Women's Cambric Drawers, deep ruffle of fine tucked and hemstitched lawn; Monday at 49
Women's Muslin Chemises, open embroidery front, Hamburg edged neck and reinforced sleeves; very special for to-morrow at 69

Renaissance Centrepieces and Scarfs at about half actual values.

15c. Doilies for 8
$1.00 Centrepieces for 49
$1.50 Centrepieces for 75
$2.00 Centrepieces for 1.00
$3.00 Scarfs for 1.95
$5.00 Squares for 2.45
$7.50 Squares for 3.95

All short lengths of
Outing, Canton, Plain and Dot Flannels, also French Flannelettes.
The accumulations of a season's selling will go on sale Monday at big reductions from former prices.

Women's Wrappers, Gowns, Dressing Sacques.

Women's Cashmere Tea Gowns, lined throughout, plaited back, Mother Hubbard front and pretty braid trimming, at 2.95
Women's Outing Flannel Kimonas, suitable for sleeping gowns or wrappers; very special to-morrow at 50
Women's all-wool heavy Eiderdown Dressing Sacques, with crocheted edge, silk frogs and ribbon finish in pink and blue; regularly $1.25; very special for Monday at 69
Women's Flannelette Wrappers, plain tucked yoke, percaline lining, fancy cuffs and flounced skirt; regularly $1.69; special at 1.00
Women's Sateen Underskirts, velvet trimmed, knife-plaited flounce, drop skirt and under ruffle; special for this sale at 1.69

Lace Curtains.
Some "end of the season" prices that mean a great saving to those who buy here and now.

Point d'Arabe Curtains, in a number of fine patterns, formerly on sale at from $7.50 to $11.75 per pair, reduced now to 8.75, 7.50 & 5.90
Brussels Point Curtains—Showy, hand-wrought designs, formerly on sale at $7.50 and $8.00 a pair, reduced now to 4.95
Irish Point Curtains—310 pairs of exquisite goods; formerly on sale at $8.00, $9.00 and $10.00 a pair; reduced now to 6.85
Nottingham Curtains—185 pairs in from one to four pair lots, all matchless bargains at, per pair, 1.85, 1.25 & 85

Leave Orders for Special Work Now.
In order that we may be in a position to retain the working staff in our Special Order Department during the months of January and February, we will accept orders for shades, slip covers, the upholstering of furniture, drapery work and awnings at special reductions from usual prices. These orders will be executed at once and the work will be delivered when desired, to suit the convenience of the customer.

Ready-to-Use Sheets and Pillow Slips.

15c. Pillow Cases, on sale to-morrow at 10
21c. Hemstitched Pillow Cases, on sale to-morrow at 15
39c. Pillow Sheets, on sale to-morrow at 27
59c. Pillow Sheets on sale to-morrow at 46
75c. Pillow Sheets, on sale to-morrow at 59

A Sale of Irish Point Scarfs & Shams.
The most remarkable sale of its kind held thus far this season.
Thousands of Scarfs in 36-inch and 54-inch sizes, with shams 32x32 inches to match, regularly sold heretofore at from $2.00 to $3.00 apiece, a choice to-morrow at 75c. and 1.00

A Sale of
Stamped and Tinted Laundry Bags at 25 each.
Various sizes, patterns and colorings; really worth from 39c. to 50c. each.

Also, Special for Monday:
A Sale of Short Length Dress Linings
at half former prices.
Hundreds of short lengths of fine standard linings, left from a year's active selling, will be offered Monday at half regular prices.

Irish Linen Table Cloths.
Double Damasks of very fine finish; three sizes at three special prices:
2x2 yds., regularly $2.25 each, at 1.75
2x2½ yds., regularly $2.85 each, at 2.25
2x3 yds., regularly $3.50 each, at 2.65
20-inch Napkins to match, regularly $2.25 a dozen, at 1.95
24-inch Napkins to match, regularly $3.50 a dozen, at 2.75
Also
150 dozen Hemstitched Napkins, regularly $2.50 a dozen, at 1.95

Infants' and Children's Wear.

Infants' long Bedford Coats, trimmed with baby ribbon and silk braid, Monday at 98
Infants' Nainsook Dresses, slightly soiled, made with a pretty yoke of embroidery and ruffle of same material, edged with lace; sizes 6 months to 2 years; regularly 98c.; Monday at 45
Children's Outing Flannel Dresses, sizes 1 to 4 years; Monday at 19
Children's Elderdown Caps, in pink, red or blue; Monday at 19
Children's Outing Flannel Gowns, sizes 2 to 10 years; Monday at 35
Children's Muslin Drawers, made with six buttonholes, in band and continuous facing, sizes 2 to 16 years; Monday at 19
Children's Mother Hubbard Night Gowns, yoke of tucks, neck and sleeves trimmed with ruffle, sizes 2 to 12; Monday at 23
Children's White Petticoats, made with umbrella ruffle of lawn, with small ruffle and tucks, sizes 2 to 14 years; Monday at 35

A Sale of
Soiled Sample Quilts,
For three-quarter or single size beds; made of the finest English Marseilles Quilting, in handsome designs. These quilts sell regularly at from $5.00 to $7.50 apiece; to-morrow's clearance price for a choice only 2.95

Dress Trimmings.
A general clearance of Dress Trimmings, and especially of short lengths at great reductions from regular prices. Just note a few of the offerings:

Black and Colored, Steel, Gilt and Spangled Bands and Appliques on velvet or silk, at one-fifth to one-tenth of the original prices, or, per yard, 10c., 25c. and 50
Gilt and Silver Belt Buckles, in entirely new designs for the popular "long waist" effect; reduced

AN HISTORICAL EXHIBITION

Will Open To-morrow at the Lenox Library Building.

Collection of Manuscripts, Maps, Newspapers, and Other Rare Documents Connected with the History of the City.

Beginning to-morrow, there will be on exhibition at the Lenox Branch of the New York Public Library what is said to be the most complete collection of manuscripts, maps, newspapers, and other documents connected with the history of the City of New York that has ever been gathered together in one place. Loans of curious and valuable papers and books have been made by various collectors especially for this exhibit, and the Controller of the city has temporarily deposited in the library the original copies of the Dongan and Montgomerie charters. Others who have added to the collection are John D. Crimmins, John Boyd Thacher, E. D. Church, and William L. Andrews.

The collection is on view on the ground and upper floors of the library. In the lower hall are the exhibits of the Dutch period, from 1609 to 1664; the English period, from 1664 to 1783, and later. On the upper floor are maps and views from 1610 to 1899, the Revolutionary broadsides from 1775 to 1778, and newspapers from 1727 to 1850. In the upper hall also are the autographs of the Directors of the New Netherlands from 1626 to 1664, the autographs of the Governors of New York from 1664 to 1783, and autographs of all the Mayors of New York from 1665 to 1784.

Two of the most important of the exhibits are original Dongan Charter, 1686, the first Charter of the City of New York, and the Montgomerie Charter, 1731, the second Charter of the city, both of which have been lent temporarily to the Trustees by the Controller and will be returned to him at the close of the exhibition.

Among the Revolutionary relics is a copy of the Declaration of Independence in Jefferson's handwriting and written in 1776. This came from the Thomas Addis Emmet collection and belongs to the library. The second is the original manuscript of Washington's farewell address, dated Sept. 19, 1796.

One of the famous broadsides, dated 1774, announces the arrival of the ship Nancy from England and urges the people to see that her cargo of tea is not entered at the Custom House. Another, dated 1772, is from the law students, protesting against the acts of the British Parliament and urging the people to defend their rights.

Among the maps is one showing the original grants of village lots from the Dutch West India Company to the inhabitants of New Amsterdam. Another is a colored copy of "Duke's Plan" of New Amsterdam in 1661, the original of which is in the British Museum. The first published map of New York City, known as "the Bradford map," is also there.

A curious relic of the past, loaned by John D. Crimmins, is a Bible that was once used in the church of England church in the old fort. The Bible, which is a ponderous affair, is dated 1674. Another exhibit is the "Bradford Law Book," dated 1674. This was the first book printed in New York City. The title page reads as follows: "The laws and acts of the General Assembly for their Majesties' Province of New York as they were enacted in divers sessions, which began April the 9th, Anno Domini 1691. Sold by William Bradford, Printer to their Majesties King William and Mary, 1694."

There is also to be seen an original copy of the first New York Directory, dated 1786.

The newspaper collection comprises original copies of the first New York papers. The first newspaper to be published in this city was The New York Gazette. The copy in the collection is dated April 24, 1727, and its pages are a trifle smaller than those of the literary supplement of THE NEW YORK TIMES. The front page is given up to a letter from London, dated Feb. 4. The Gazette was followed by The New York Weekly Journal, printed and sold by John Peter Zenger, who was later put on trial for his bold utterances in the paper. This copy is dated Nov. 5, 1733.

The collection will be on view for about two months.

A GREAT GAME PRESERVE.

Project to Set Apart Land in Arizona, California, and Mexico to Prevent Extermination.

Phoenix (Arizona) Letter to San Francisco Chronicle.

The establishment of a great game preserve embracing a portion of Southwestern Arizona and Northwestern Mexico, and probably a small part of California, is a project which was not conceived until recently, but which will likely be talked about by sportsmen all over the country within a few months. A small party of explorers recently visited Tucson after making a trip through the country adjacent to the head of the Gulf of California, representing, it is believed, a number of sportsmen of the Middle States, bent on formulating a plan for the protection of game, and to prevent the extermination of certain species. A convention of sportsmen will soon meet in Chicago or Denver to consider plans for the establishment of a great game preserve, and representative sportsmen from all sections report the advantages offered for game preserves in their immediate sections.

That portion of the country south of Yuma, including a small section of California and considerable territory in Mexico, is one of the most fruitful fields for the Nimrod of this country to-day. It abounds in wild game of all sorts, and with the help of man a large expanse of land could be converted into one of the greatest and most inviting game preserves in the world. Mexico offers liberal aid to such enterprises, and it is understood that already that Government has promised to make important concessions if American sportsmen are willing to carry out the plan of establishing a game preserve lying partly in Mexico.

The extermination of wild game in this country and the urgent necessity of adopting drastic measures for the prevention of further ruthless slaughter are two subjects which have long occupied the attention of American sportsmen. Never before have they been stirred up to the necessity as within the past few months, when from all over the country there have been demands for Congressional action. State and Territorial legislation has proved insufficient, but Federal action in recent years has checked wholesale slaughter in this and other Territories and States. However, slowly but surely certain kinds of wild game, such as deer and antelope, will be extinct in Arizona within a few years, and in a shorter time the mountain sheep now found in a few parts of this Territory will disappear unless early action be taken, partly because of the threatened extermination that Congress will soon be asked to make an appropriation for creating a game preserve, or at least for its moral support.

The redskins of Arizona have made great inroads into the ranks of deer and antelope, leaving their reservations frequently to engage in systematic slaughters of those animals. The Apaches in Eastern Arizona kill only the game they require for meat and leather. It is said that the Navajos of Northern Arizona and other Indians of this Territory do not kill game on the wholesale plan merely for the sport, as is commonly believed, but they seem to require an inordinate amount for ordinary use. Occasionally they leave their reservations, where long ago game became too sporadic to invite the hunter, and organize bands which go after big game with guns and bows and arrows in much the same manner that Americans organize rabbit drives. Great piles of hair scraped from the hides speak unmistakably of the slaughter which attends one of these expeditions.

A party consisting of Prof. W. J. McGee, Delaney Gill, an artist, and others representing the Smithsonian Institution, recently passed through Phoenix, after exploring the Tiburon Island, in the Gulf of California, returning from Sonora by an old road near Pendles Atlas. The party went to examine the condition of the cannibalistic Ceris Indians of Tiburon Island, who murdered R. E. L. Robinson, a newspaper man, and a companion six years ago and feasted on their bodies. On account of tribal friction a few years ago a small band of these savages left the Island of Tiburon and made their way to the coast of Mexico, subsequently traveling north and establishing a small colony near Quitovac. The Smithsonion party went among the Indians at that place for the third time, finding them in the same condition on each trip. They have not multiplied in any numbers in the past score of years, and their manners of living and habits have not varied.

In visiting those Indians McGee's journey took him through the heart of the game country, which in time may be set apart as a preserve. All along his path he discovered game in such profusion that he made a part of his trip the study of the wild animals of that region.

The Indians near Quitovac led him into some remarkable hunting grounds, where deer and wild hogs, a large species of peccary, tame and unfamiliar with the white sportsman's methods, were but little intimidated by the approach of the party. The professor returns enthusiastic over the game conditions of that region. Wild animals abound there as they did only a few years ago in many parts of this country, but although the region is not remote from thickly populated sections, it has been almost entirely neglected by hunters, untouched by the hand of white man, and its isolation from the haunts of men would be complete but for the presence of a handful of redskins who roam over that section. The country is so formed, said Prof. McGee, that some of the lands could be irrigated by water from the Colorado River, making of them even more alluring stamping grounds for wild game.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S HATS.

Many Years Ago She Set the Fashion for a Shape Englishwomen Favor Now.

From The London Mail.

The medical men who protested a year or two ago against the airy nothings which then did duty for fashionable headgear dubbed them in their indignation "Neuralgia Traps."

Such a condemnation would scarce be warranted now, for the reason that the smart toques and sensible Amazon hats of the present and coming made afford ample protection from cold air or the sun's rays. The Queen's hats are always bent downward to almost cover the nape of the neck and, curious to note, the most stylish hats worn at the present time, even by young girls, are bent downward in similar fashion.

The Queen's milliner first submitted that style of hat to the Queen in her early days of married life, when she spent much happy time on the deck of the royal yacht with the Prince Consort. He, as all young married men should do, took great interest in the question of a suitable hat for the Queen to wear on such occasions, and eventually a well-fitting shape with a brim that drooped over the eyes—as many fashionable hats do now—was approved of. The milliner added an improvement, in which the back part could be turned up or down at will. The Queen was so pleased with this hat that she sent similar hats as presents to the Empress Eugenie, then in her zenith as queen of the world's fashions, and other ladies of the foreign Courts.

At that time the wearing of hats was confined only to the country and for traveling purposes. If a lady wore a hat in town it was much commented upon, but the Queen changed all that by constantly wearing, when driving in the park, large shady hats, handsomely trimmed with lace and feathers. Lady Jane Ely, the Duchess of Wellington and Lady Churchill further helped to establish the fashion of wearing hats in town. All these ladies affected the same style of shape—a well-fitting boat shape that drooped at the back and in the front, and was usually made in the finest black Donstable plait, and was trimmed with long and handsome black ostrich feathers. This style of hat was for a long time one peculiar to the ladies attached to the Court, and had a distinction of its own, but gradually it became a general mode in fashionable circles. When the Queen reviewed her troops at Aldershot she wore a fine French felt hat in Amazone style, with long plumes of dark green cock feathers to match her riding habit. Riding hats for ladies were in those days in no way different from the hats worn by gentlemen, and were made in exactly the same fashion. When, fifty years ago, the Court hatter brought out an improved riding hat especially designed for ladies' wear, it attracted the attention of one of the ladies-in-waiting, who brought it to the notice of the Queen, then in town for the season at Buckingham Palace. The Queen was delighted with it, and ordered several to be made at once, and thus made the fortune of the hatter, who retains the royal patronage to this day.

As the Queen grows older her taste for prettily trimmed headgear grows younger, though it is always in strict accordance with the general lines laid down for elderly ladies' acceptance.

She is most particular as to perfect fit and extreme lightness, and is very fond of the large-sized boat shape in fine Italian chip or English straw that she has always been faithful to, no matter how fashions have varied. Drawings of every hat made for the Queen are in existence, though not exposed to view. They are a most interesting study of the fashion from the earliest days of the Queen's married life down to the present day. The collection also includes sketches of the hats made for the late Duchess of Teck, who followed the fashion set by her royal cousin. One hat worn by the Queen was made famous during her last visit to Dublin by the practical loyalty which it evoked among Irish ladies. The smart milliners in delightful Dublin filled their windows with the shape, and could scarcely meet the popular demand that was made for it. They still ticket hats of this style as "the Queen's shape," and the well-known man-milliner in Graftonshire who still makes the wonderfully becoming toques worn by the Countess of Cadogan and many ladies of the British Court, has made a specialty of "the Queen's hat" with immense success, even sending them over to England.

When the Queen goes out of town much pleasurable interest is taken in the royal circle in the choice of the Queen's hats, the careful deliberations as to the style of trimming, the materials to be used, &c., being a matter of considerable concern to the Queen, her favorite ladies-in-waiting, and even the royal children, who are greatly interested in their grandmother's hats. These hats are always handsewn and beautifully finished. The Queen would not wear a machine-sewn chip or straw, and is particular to a degree about the most minute details. She is a firm believer in the utility and charm of handsome ostrich feathers, of which she has a large collection, and from these she selects from time to time plumes to adorn her newest headgear. One of her most appreciated Jubilee presents, by the way, was this splendid pair of ostrich feather screens sent by her loyal Cape Colony subjects, these being formed of hundreds of perfect ostrich tips in cream color, mounted on enormous fans that are out-spread from gilt stands. Next to feathers, the Queen likes bouffante trimmings of chiffon, tulle, and mousseline de sole. At times of mourning—all too frequent in these later years—the Queen approves crape of English manufacture, and is most particular and careful as to the proper degrees of mourning to be observed and thus indicated. The favorite royal hats of this year are the white straws, trimmed with white chiffon and feathers, that the Queen wore during the hottest days, with an all white mantle, and the black hats, in which white trimmings appeared, that her Majesty wore in her memorable Dublin visit. Now that the Queen has returned from Balmoral to Windsor, it is certain that one of the earliest of her undertakings will be to give her usual order for warm and cozy hats in thicker materials that she may wear with comfort in her daily drives in an open carriage.

The Queen and the Empress Eugenie when they meet often "talk hats," and compare notes as to favored patterns, and therein they are only showing their claim to be but women after all. A. M.

A Story of King Victor.

From The London News.

King Victor Emmanuel is an early riser and very active. One morning at 8 he arrived unexpectedly at the office of administration of the royal household, which is situated opposite the palace. He only found the servant sweeping and dusting. The King took out a cigarette and walked up and down, waiting. By 9:30 the first clerk arrived. The King asked at what hour the employes were expected to be at the office. "At 8 o'clock, Majesty," replied the embarrassed official. "And it is now 9:30," remarked the King, taking up his hat, and leaving the premises. Since then the whole of the persons employed at the office have made their appearance punctually at 8 A. M., thanks to the personal vigilance of the King.

The "Habit" of Fruit Bearing.

From The Profitable Farm and Garden.

Fruit-bearing in trees is merely a habit, for a young tree, taken in hand at the commencement, need only be pruned during the first three or four years, after which it will continue to produce fruit spurs of itself. For it must be remembered that fruit-bearing is a habit which may be encouraged in trees, and when once they are well trained to do it they will not vary, except in untoward circumstances. Therefore, the aim of all pruning, whether of root or branch, of young trees or old, is to induce the fruit-bearing habit.

ROBERTS TO ENGLISHMEN.

The Gallant Soldier Makes a Characteristically Unselfish Application of National Gratitude to Him.

From The London Times.

I feel confident that I can count on the courtesy of the press, as the only medium available to me, to enable me to express to the people of London my heartfelt and sincere thanks for the generous reception accorded to me on my arrival in the metropolis, which touched me more than I can describe.

I regard the welcome I received yesterday not only as one tendered to me personally, but also as a testimony from the people of this great city of their appreciation of the valor and endurance of my brave comrades who have fought and are still fighting the battles of the empire in South Africa. I know that the echoes of yesterday's cheers will reach our soldiers far away and be as gratifying to them as they were to me, for it will show them that they are not forgotten and that an equally warm welcome awaits them on their return to England.

It is impossible for me to describe what I owe to them for their services. The only way I can ever hope to repay the debt is, as I have already said, by devoting myself to furthering their interests. It is with this object in view that I venture most strongly to support the recent appeal made by her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales on behalf of the Soldiers and Sailors' Association.

I can assure the public that nothing has cheered the hearts of our soldiers more through the long period they have been serving in South Africa than the knowledge that those who are nearest and dearest to them are being cared for in their absence by their fellow-countrymen and women. The prolongation of the campaign in South Africa has taxed the resources of the fund so heavily that I am informed ere long it may be necessary to consider whether a debt should be incurred by the committee in order to continue the help given to the families of our soldiers or to cease altogether assisting them. The latter contingency is one so painful, indeed I may say so impossible to contemplate, that I feel it my duty to make a personal appeal to the generosity of all classes of the community and ask them to assist once more the fund, the needs of which have been placed before them so clearly by her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales.

I feel confident that it is only necessary for the general public to be informed of the facts of the case for them to do what is necessary to bring relief to the homes of those whose bread winners are daily risking their lives in the service of our Queen and for the honor of the empire.

ROBERTS, F. M.

War Office, Jan. 4, 1901.

ONE SENSIBLE ENGLISHMAN.

Mr. Labouchere Argues Like an American on the Nicaraguan Question.

From London Truth.

I suppose that all will admit that it is most desirable in the interest of maritime nations that there should be a ship canal through Central America. When the Clayton-Bulwer treaty was agreed to we possessed certain territories in South America, namely, British Honduras, a perfectly valueless possession, and we claimed a treaty protectorate over the Mosquito Coast, where a town called Greytown had been built which seemed to belong to no one. Our protectorate was based upon a treaty with the King of Mosquito, a native potentate who passed most of his time in the barrooms of Greytown, but whom—when his Majesty was deemed useful to us—we affected to regard as an independent monarch. What has become of this sovereign, and what has become, indeed, of the city of Greytown I do not know. But I was at the British Legation at Washington shortly after the Clayton-Bulwer treaty had been signed, and I remember having had the pleasure of copying many dispatches about the monarch and about his capital of Greytown. I have a vague recollection that the latter was bombarded by somebody, and that it was subsequently seized by one Walker, "the gray-eyed man of destiny," as he was called, who laid hold of it. The "gray-eyed man" fulfilled his destiny by getting shot by the commander of the troops of the Republic of Nicaragua, which recognized neither him nor the King of Mosquito. The treaty was the outcome of the fussiness of Sir Henry Bulwer, who was then our Minister at Washington, and who always wanted to attract attention to himself whenever he was in official residence. The object was to make an agreement by which neither Great Britain nor the United States should annex any portion of Central America. The Americans objected to our annexations there on the ground of the Monroe doctrine. They themselves did not want to annex it, and they were inclined to discourage filibustering expeditions in that direction by their own citizens. A canal was then regarded as a vague possibility outside of the area of practical politics, and the clauses in the treaty referring to it were introduced to meet that possibility, and yet maintain the scope of the treaty in regard to the principle of non-annexation of territory.

The French capitalists later on attempted to make the Panama Canal. Millions were wasted, and after the credulity of French investors had been exhausted the attempt was abandoned because the cash could not be found to continue it. It is therefore clear that, unless some State undertakes to pierce the Isthmus, it will never be pierced. If the Americans like to undertake this useful task, we should not hinder them by insisting on any right that we have to meddle with them owing to the stipulations of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. The State making the canal should, provided that it can agree with the Republic through whose territories it passes, have a full right to regulate the conditions under which it is used by foreign countries. If it consents that the vessels of countries with which it is at peace may use it on the same terms as its own vessels, so much the better. But on this we have no right to insist. The Nicaragua route is not the only one for a canal, and if we or other countries object to the terms on which we are allowed to use that made by the United States, we or they should meet this by making another canal. The only reasonable fear, if the United States takes the risks and spends its money in piercing the isthmus, it should fortify its canal and prohibit its use by the commercial marine of any State with which it is at war, and by the vessels of war of any States engaged in hostilities with each other. This seems to me the common-sense view of the matter.

We did our best to prevent the Suez Canal being made. When it was made we managed to lay hold of Egypt, which gives us the absolute command over the canal. Our record in regard to canals piercing continents is not clean. In the event of our being at war with France, does any one suppose that we should not close the Suez Canal to French commerce, and that, if a French vessel were to reach Port Said, we should regard the canal as a neutral passage, in which the vessel would be protected from capture? Our real plea for being masters of the canal is that it is the high road between our possessions in Europe and in Asia, and the Nicaraguan canal would be primarily a sea passage between the Atlantic and the Pacific possessions of the United States.

Treaties, as I pointed out a week or two ago, are permanent or transitory. The latter a State may abrogate by duly notifying its intention to do so; the former it cannot. Either we or the United States might declare the Clayton-Bulwer treaty abrogated, because it has not a permanent character, and the two countries would fall back on the status quo ante.

The Intelligence of Ants.

An interview with Lord Avebury on ants appears in The Temple Magazine. His lordship, in the course of much interesting information concerning these wonderful little creatures of which he has made so profound a study, says: "In their modes of fighting different species of ants have their several peculiarities. Some also are much less military than others. They have the power of distinguishing color; they are very sensitive to violet light, and it would almost seem that their sensations of color must be very different from those produced upon us. When we see a community of ants working together in perfect harmony it is impossible not to ask ourselves how far they are mere exquisite automatona, how far they are conscious beings? When we watch an ant hill tenanted by thousands of industrious inhabitants, excavating chambers, forming tunnels, making roads, guarding their home, gathering food, feeding the young, tending their domestic animals—each one fulfilling its duty industriously and without confusion—it is difficult altogether to deny to them the gift of reason, and all our recent observations tend to confirm the opinion that their mental powers differ from those of men not so much in kind as in degree."

THE BAD OLD TIMES.

How English Manners and Morals, Customs and Costumes Improved Within the Completed Century.

From The London News.

Another way in which the aristocracy has been affected by the progress of the century has been not precisely in manners or morals as in that intermediate country which lies on the border line between manners and morals. Manners, strictly speaking, have perhaps rather suffered in being democratized. The stately bowings and curtseyings of the old school and the elaborate modes of speech which appear in the novels of the day have disappeared. In 1801 a gentleman never walked with a lady without giving her his arm. An amusing caricature shows a dandy under these circumstances returning from the great review in Hyde Park that year. There is a downpour of rain, and he holds a huge umbrella, as big as a small tent, suported by a long pole, in two hands, while two nymphs in what we should now call evening dress, one with a plume of ostrich feathers and the other with an elaborate kind of turban on their heads, while their white stockings and sandals or pumps are bedabbled with mud, each holding up the skirt of her dress on the left arm, hang with the right arm with full weight, one on each arm of the beau. But though manners were elaborate they were by no means refined.

The Prince Regent, with his eighteen mistresses, five of them famous, is, of course no real criterion of the morals or manners of the age. Kings and heirs apparent have always been recognized to be as much above the laws of sexual morality as those of grammar. Except under a female sovereign a moral Court has been unknown. There is, however, no doubt that the public standard of morality among the upper ten has been raised during the century. It was the fashion of the Whigs and Fox to sneer at Pitt because he did not run after his neighbor's wife nor away with his neighbor's daughter. Yet even Pitt, when Prime Minister, in his place in the House of Commons, is reported to have addressed the Speaker in the plural, because he saw not one Mr. Speaker, but two; and, after cracking a bottle of port in his own house, cracked two more with the Treasurer of the Navy in Bellamy's, the refreshment room of the House of Commons; while one of his chief oratorical efforts was made in the interval of paroxysms such as now produced by a Channel steamer in a choppy sea. It is a noted story how Pitt, with the Lord Chancellor and the Treasurer of the Navy, returning home after dinner, and finding a tollgate open, galloped through without paying toll, and the turnpike keeper fired his blunderbuss (dinner was then an afternoon function) at them. And the tale was told:

How as Pitt wandered darkling o'er the plain,
His reason drowned in Jenkinson's champagne,
A rustic's hand (but righteous fate withstood)
Had shed a Premier's for a robber's blood.

The French war, by closing the country to claret and substituting the heavy and drugged doses of port, made a three-bottle man in 1801 a more formidable hero than the statesman who, when Fox was young, "sailed on seas of claret from one comfortable official haven to another," as gout carried off their predecessors. And Fanny Burney reports how the Duke of Clarence, having dined with the King on his birthday, came and looked in on the ladies of the household having their dinner, and asked if they had drunk the King's health, and, being answered, "No, but he might make them," he exclaimed: "Oh, by God, I will. Here, you, (to the footman,) bring champagne. I'll drink the King's health again, if I die for it. Yes, I have done pretty well already. So has the King, I promise you. I believe his Majesty was never taken such good care of before. We have kept up his spirits, I promise you. We have enabled him to go through his fatigues; and I should have done more still but for the ball and Mary. I have promised to dance with Mary. I must keep sober, for Mary." But he did not keep sober, for Mary, who was his sister, coming out that night, and when the lady presiding told him not to drink any more, he kissed her, told her to shut her "potato-trap," and finally had to be put to bed instead of dancing with Mary. But at least the ladies did not roll drunk at the Prince's feet as did the Court ladies of James I.'s time. And now it would be hard to find any one, even in a pothouse on Mafeking night, to behave as the First Gentleman in Europe did habitually.

THEATRICAL SUPERSTITION.

French Actors Rival Gamblers for Foolish Fears—Live Falcons and Painted Peacocks Equally Ominous.

From The London Pall Mall Gazette.

PARIS, Dec. 27.—Theatrical managers are said, by those who know them, to resemble gamblers in the matter of being superstitious. However this may be in a general way, an example of such superstition has just occurred at the Ambigu Theatre, which is the Adelphi of Paris. The Ambigu is now playing a new piece, "L'Autre France," of which the fate is somewhat uncertain. Among the spectators, a night or two ago, was M. Rochard, the manager of the Châtelet Theatre, who had looked in to see how his friend and brother manager, M. Grisier, was prospering. At the close of the fifth tableau M. Rochard left his stall in evident perturbation, and went behind the scenes to seek out M. Grisier and inform him that he was courting disaster. M. Rochard called the attention of the manager of the Ambigu to the fact that in the tableau just over, the scene of which was in Algeria, some of the "supers" carried falcons, which, it seems, are regarded in the theatrical world as birds of ill-omen. M. Rochard was horrified to find that his friend had paid no heed to this well-accredited superstition, and would not rest until M. Grisier promised to return the birds to the Jardin d'Acclimatation, from which they had been borrowed.

Another bird that is regarded in theatrical circles as a harbinger of evil is the peacock. In this connection a rather amusing story is told on the boulevard. There is a manager on the left bank of the Seine—his theatre is not the Odéon—who is noted for his strict attention to economy. Some two years ago he found himself under the disagreeable, because costly, obligation of redecorating his theatre. The operation completed and the scaffolding removed, he surveyed his rejuvenated house with such satisfaction as the thought of the bill would permit of. The improvement in the appearance of his theatre was undeniable, and he was almost content, when his attention was drawn to the ceiling, which he perceived, to his horror, had been adorned by the artist with a frieze of peacocks' tails. He was well aware of the unlucky signification which is supposed to attach to peacocks, and his first impulse was to order the immediate obliteration of the offending motif. He promptly reflected, however, that to effect the alteration the scaffolding would have to be put up again, and he bitterly grudged spending money out of deference to what, after all, was a mere superstition. On the other hand, he had no slight lurking faith in the superstition himself, and it was not without many qualms of conscience that he decided to avoid the outlay and let the peacocks' tails be. His hesitation and uneasiness have continued ever since. His theatre has not been smiled on by fortune of late, but, though he confesses to a belief in the evil influence of the peacocks' tails, he has not yet been able to make up his mind to incur what he tries to persuade himself is a ridiculous expense. His fellow-managers are well aware of his predicament, and lose no opportunity of chaffing him on his struggle between the calls of superstition and economy.

Rajah's Third Wife a European.

From The London Mail.

The young Rajah of Jhind, who is Lord of the third biggest native State under the Punjab Government, has celebrated his coming of age by marrying a European girl, Miss Olive Monalesen, daughter of Mr. Monalesen of Bombay.

The wedding took place according to Sikh rites, and was to some extent a runaway one, if the match can be so described where the bridgroom is already the husband of at least two native ladies. Anyhow, the British political officer was not given time to interfere effectively.

The Indian Planters' Gazette claims to have seen the marriage contract which has been drawn up in accordance with Sikh usage, and provides the lady with a definite income, besides making stipulations, with reservations, as to how many other wives the potentate may also possess. The existing Maharanis are reservations.

It is an unpleasant business to Anglo-Indian thinking, this marriage of a white girl to a Rajah, but right enough from the Sikh point of view. The lady will be known as her Highness Jaswant Kuar.

This is the second case of the kind that has occurred of late years in the Punjab. That of the late Princess Florence of Patiala was the first.

"ANGELUS"
PIANO PLAYER.

An instrument by means of which any one can play any piano.

Think of the pleasure to be had from your piano if every one in the household could play it—and play well anything he desired to hear.

Exactly this condition has been brought about by the Angelus Piano Player. It has unlocked the gates of melody to all. With it any one can play any piano. It affords all the pleasure of hand-playing, the expression being at all times under complete control of the performer. With the Angelus Orchestral you can produce these five effects: 1, the piano alone; 2, an orchestral organ; 3, piano with violin effect; 4, piano with flute effect; 5, piano and full orchestral organ combined.

The Angelus is not like other piano players, and if you will take the trouble to make the comparison you will see why it is the best. Our instruments cheerfully shown at any time.

ANGELUS, $225. ANGELUS ORCHESTRAL, $250.

WILCOX & WHITE CO.,
New York Warerooms, 164 Fifth Avenue, near 22d St.

MEN'S CLOTHES.

Fashions and Foibles of the Past and Present—Ladies and Dandies Have Equal Troubles.

From The London News.

The male among most animals is the more handsomely clothed, which perhaps we may attribute to sexual selection. The gray hens in Spring select their mates, after an amusing competition, in which the black cocks dance, chuckle, spread their plumage, and behave in a very ostentatious manner. The male is the dandy among races which attempt to win admiration rather by tattooing themselves and sticking small ethnological museums about their persons than by anything that can be called apparel. Among such people the women do all the work, except the hunting, fishing, and fighting, consequently they cannot indulge in the pleasures of dress. But in the march of progress man begins to do most of the work, and consequently he simplifies his attire and makes it less decorative, while woman, no longer the potter, gardener, beast of burden, and agricultural laborer, has more time and more means to spend on adorning herself. We have come to such a point in this direction of simplifying male costume that a man of taste can find no pleasure in his clothes. They have neither color nor form nor fantasy, and by way of jewels, we are informed that if in mourning and anxious really to display sincere affliction, we must wear sleeve links of gunmetal. Not every one can wear colored sleeve links.

It had not occurred, perhaps, to many a reflective mind that colored sleeve-links exist, or that anybody would ever notice the sleeve-links of any one else, colored or not. Some license is allowed to breast-pins, but even these are as plain as they appear to be superfluous and vexatious. Yet even in Thackeray's time men wore enormous garnet pins, or a little pin attached to a bigger pin by a small gold chain. Now consider the pleasures of our ancestors. A gold and enameled chain was worn round a velvet bonnet which had a gold medal on it, or a Gothic letter in gold. A gold, diamond, and enameled chain was worn round the manly neck. With a charming cinkue cento jewel about as big as a crown piece, rings were something like rings, being ancient gems set in enamel, or tiny jeweled caskets of secret poisons, or something else, such as we now only see in museums.

As to dress, men had embroideries of gold and silver. The Regent Murray was a serious man, but in September, 1566, he sent a quantity of red silk with a gold thread to his tailor to be made up. Also three ells of cloth of silver to make a suit of clothes. Argyle and Huntly were equally arrayed like lilies of the field, and if the Maccailean Mor had his cloth of silver made into his "coquettish national costume," (as the French describe the kilt,) he must have been a magnificent spectacle. Bothwell preferred a white silk with silver thread; his evening dress, on the night when he blew up Darnley, was in excellent taste, black and silver. Darnley's dressing gown (as his bereaved father carefully noted) was of violet velvet, to match his violet velvet bed, and was lined with sable.

Now consider the young dandies of the sixteenth century, with their essenced locks, their great collars and ruffies of lace, their silks and satins. Then wigs came in, costing £40 to £50 apiece, and flowing over fashionable shoulders clad in velvet, silk, and satin, and gay with diamonds. Even a middle-aged man of letters, like Dr. Oliver Goldsmith, had a coat like a flower garden. The philosophical and portly David Hume, to please the ladies of France, wore a yellow silk coat, embroidered with black velvet butterflies. Fancy Mr. Herbert Spencer draped in such a garment! Rose-colored silk, blazing with diamonds, sufficed for the simple taste of Prince Charlie. The Reign of Terror was hardly over before the Incroyables costumed themselves in undemocratic splendor. Only burgesses, lawyers, and doctors wore anything so modest as bright brown cloth. Early portraits of Dickens and D'Orsay, long after Brummell's day, show how the young men ruffled it, with flowing locks, flamboyant breastpins and chains, buttons, and other gauds. Waistcoats of brilliant hues were still the playground of Fancy. The desires of men, though suppressed, are not eradicated. They find an outlet in cricketing and boating "blazers" and ribbons; and in such smoking suits of velvet, or silk, or brocade, as Ouida used to describe. Beyond these few "sports" in the way of raiment, male clothing is destitute of aesthetic delight. Clothes ought, of course, to be neat and well made, and it is only literary characters who fill their pockets to a disgracefully buiging degree with the spoils of bookstalls. Our garb is sombre, monotonous, "subfuse," and, as regards the legs, tubular. Our age is the only one which conceals the male leg in a cloth tube, save when knickerbockers are worn, or in Court dress.

Frock coats are flapping, heavy, ugly things, as comfortable as the shirt of Nessus. A few years ago they were suddenly made of vast dimensions, like the coat of Mr. Verdant Green. A country person, who rarely and reluctantly wears a frock coat, finds that his own never wears out, but when he comes to town he discovers that he is terribly out of the fashion—a Rip Van Winkle. Citizens of a constitutional realm will hear with satisfaction that the Prince of Wales is not to blame. He "seldom or never is the first to introduce anything new in the style of clothes." Great George—last of the Four Georges—was more audacious, and in the prime vigor of his faculties invented, and imposed on the world, a new shoe buckle. There are now no shoe buckles even; they used to be monuments of art. His Royal Highness has not even rebelled against our hats, which came in with the Reformation; Morton wore a huge black headpiece, sloping gently from the base. The Cavaliers introduced a reaction toward the picturesque, but Puritanism was too strong for them, and, after an inroad of cocked hats, the chimney pot resumed its sway. Nothing but a real democracy in cloth caps will disestablish the odious tall hat, which hurts the brows, tarnishes in an hour, is ruined by a drop of rain, is blown off under the feet of horses and the wheels of cabs, and is altogether the worst headgear yet invented by man.

Your trouser, like desolation, is "a delicate thing," and no individual trouser ought to be worn more often than once a week. The other six days it passes in contemplative repose in the embraces of a "trouser-straightener." Mere ideas of comfort ought, we think, to be laid aside by the man with a scientific interest in collars. "The new Carlton clip is in the form of a triangle, with the base resting on the shirt." Two Carlton clips may be used, similar and similarly situated, to which the studious add a tape loop of the tint of the shirt. The sage Imlac, after a lecture on poetry, persuaded his princely pupil that no man can ever be a poet. We are equally ready to conclude that no man can ever be well dressed. The mechanism of clips is too complicated and, as to the best kind, knowledge of applied mechanics is inadequate to explain its working. We are left contemplating a mournful picture of an intellectual being "getting savage with his tie."

Frequent Collisions.

"Your husband is not looking well tonight, Mrs. Rhymer." "He isn't, and I am not surprised at it." "No? Has he been overworking himself?" "It isn't that so much; it is his originality. Why, that man is struck by so many original ideas that his mind must be one mass of bruises."—Woman's Journal.

ALL CARS TRANSFER TO Bloomingdales
3RD AVE 59TH & 60TH STS

All Silk Ribbons Cheaply Priced.

There are miles of them here and just the kind of ribbons that are the most popular—satin and gros grain in the correct widths and shades. There are two qualities, one for the finer trimming use, and the other to fill less important commissions. The overproduction of a large mill gave us the opportunity to buy this fine lot cheaply, and you will derive the benefit. Remember they are all pure silk and perfect goods. Choose your width and color at the following prices:

2¼ and 2¾ inches wide, finest quality, at 12½c. yd.
3 inches wide, finest quality, at 15c. yd.
3½ and 4 inches wide, finest quality, at 18c. yd.
1½ and 3 inches wide, second quality, at 5c. yd.
2¼ inches wide, second quality, at 7c. yd.
2¾ inches wide, second quality, at 10c. yd.

Main Floor, 59th St. Section.

Carpets---Priced Very Low.

We have placed some exceptional prices on three special Carpets made by the Alexander Smith Carpet Co., whose name in itself guarantees superior quality. We will make and line these carpets free of charge.

Saxony Axminster Carpets Per Yard, 98c.
With or without border.

Moquette Carpets Per Yard, 1.10.
Best quality; with or without border.

Savonnerie Carpet Per Yard, 1.35.
With or without border.

Third Floor, 59th St. Section.

Dress Linings Under-Priced.

During our annual Dress Lining sale we cut under wholesale prices, even—much under. It makes new friends—and makes the department more popular every year.

10c. Crinoline 5c. Yd.—A very good quality; black and cross bar; black and white. Is usually sold at 10c. yard.
15c. Canvas 9c. Yd.—Linen, exceptionally good; colors natural and black. Cannot be imported less than 15c. yard.
25c. Waist Lining 14c. Yd.—Fine sateen double-faced waist lining, styles all new and very choice, usually sell at 25c. per yard.
Cambric 3½c. Yd.—Best quality lining cambric, including every color.
Mercerized Linings 16c. Yd.—Imported black mercerized sateen, worth 29c. yard.
We have a great many other items equally as cheap as those mentioned above. A call will convince you.
We are offering much cheaper than elsewhere Amisilk, Nearsilk and other popular styles.
17c. Lining at 9½c. Yd.—Our very popular Fairy Moire Lining, of which we have sold many thousands of yards, has given perfect satisfaction. It is fully 36 inches wide and has a very beautiful silk finish. We control all the manufacturers turn out. Similar goods are being sold elsewhere at 17c. per yard.
21c. Prize Percaline 11¾c. Yd.—An extremely fine quality Percaline Lining, made of fine combed yarn; has a beautiful finish; is fast black. Similar goods are being sold from 21c. to 25c. yard.
12½c. Percaline 7½c. Yd.—A nice, fine quality Percaline, known as our Perfection grade, all shades, including fast black. We contracted for an enormous quantity, much under price; usually sells at 12½c.

Main Floor, Near Rotunda.

BLOOMINGDALE BROS., 3d Ave., 59th and 60th Sts. | BLOOMINGDALE BROS., 3d Ave., 59th and 60th Sts.

The Sun Shrinks 9 Inches Every Day.

From The London Times.

The usual Christmas course of lectures was begun at the Royal Institution by Sir Robert Ball. The sun, he pointed out, was the source of all the heat received by this earth. Now, it was a well-known fact that most things in cooling became smaller; a poker, for example, was shorter when it was cold than when it was red hot. The sun, too, must obey this fundamental law, and must therefore be getting smaller. If we could measure its diameter on two successive days we should find it had decreased by nine inches—that was to say, it was shrinking at the rate of, roughly, five feet a week, or a mile in every twenty years. In view of this shrinkage, some of the younger members of his audience might feel anxious lest the sun should not last their time. Such anxiety, however, was groundless; he was 860,000 miles in diameter, so it would take 40,000 years for him to be reduced by 2,000 miles to 858,000, and the lecturer was sure that if there were two suns in the sky, one 860,000 miles in diameter and the other 858,000, no one would be able to tell by looking at them which of the two was the smaller. But as the sun was shrinking nine inches every day, and had Cheap Power, Heat and Light for New York.

ANTHRACITE CULM THE ADMITTED RIVAL OF GREAT WATER POWERS—ITS UTILIZATION BY THE MODERN GAS ENGINE—COMPETITION OF ELECTRIC CURRENTS GENERATED AT NEAR-BY COAL FIELDS FATAL TO LOCAL GAS COMBINATIONS.

Whether New York is at a disadvantage as compared with cities nearer to great water powers, in the matter of cheap sources of electricity available for power, light, and heat, is a question of great interest to all classes of our citizens, and especially to those who are large consumers of anthracite and gas. A careful consideration of the facts leads to the conclusion that, when they are sought, as attractive opportunities will be found for local enterprise in power transmission and distribution as are offered at Niagara, Snoqualmine Falls, or the Lachine Rapids. Power could very well be brought to New York from Niagara in the form of a high tension electrical current of any desired volume, but it is not necessary. It is not many years ago—probably not twenty-five—since the question of utilizing the power at Niagara for the generation of useful electric currents to be transmitted perhaps as far as Rochester, was under tentative discussion. An imaginative engineer read a suggestive paper on this subject before one of the technical societies with a membership of very learned men. It started an interesting discussion, which was ended for the time by the ipse dixit of the most eminent physicist then living, who showed to his own satisfaction and that of others that the plan of distributing useful currents was impracticable, since the interest on the cost of the copper conductors which would be required to carry from the Falls to Buffalo the power needed for the industries of that city, would amount to more than the value of its coal consumption. It is unnecessary to be specific as to names and dates, since it is neither kindly nor useful to detract from great posthumous reputations by recalling conspicuous errors of judgment. Especially is this true when such errors were due to the limitations of knowledge and of mechanical development at the time they were made. Even ten years is a long time in this present era of sensationally rapid progress—twenty or twenty-five years carry us back beyond useful remembrance.

POWER TRANSMISSION.

The answer now given to the question, how far can power currents be profitably transmitted, would be: As far as may be warranted by the conditions existing at the other end of the line. It has ceased to be a technical problem, for the reason that the electrical engineer can safely promise to perform his part of any undertaking which presents itself in a form attractive to capital. Whatever is commercially practicable is likely to be found technically possible. At the present time the engineer would not hesitate to undertake to deliver a current of any volume or voltage which available dynamos would generate, at a distance of 500 miles from the generating plant, under conditions insuring a satisfactory return upon the capital invested. If required to carry it twice as far, no doubt he could and would do it just as successfully. With the means now at command there is no difficulty in transmitting 50,000 volts a distance of, say, 1,250 miles. In dealing with currents of very close to this intensity—say 40,000 or 45,000 volts—all the difficulties which until very recently seemed insuperable have been overcome. These include insulation, loss by leakage and induction, and protection against atmospheric electricity. If the necessity existed, it would probably be no more difficult to transmit a current of 100,000 volts considerably more than 100 miles, with a leakage loss of less than 1 per cent. Even this small loss will probably be still further lowered. Vast improvements have been made in insulating materials, and these are now made capable of standing continuous tests under voltages with which, until very recently, the engineer would have found it extremely difficult to deal.

The newness of this branch of mechanical engineering will be appreciated when it is remembered that the first plan for the generation and long-distance transmission of high-tension currents was installed in California in 1892. In 1893 the first two polyphase transmission plants were installed at Housatonic and Concord. These were small and local undertakings. The pioneer of the great electrical installations, and the one which has established the confidence of capital in the attractiveness of such undertakings, was at Niagara, and is so new as to be still the subject of illustration and description in the newspapers and magazines as a fascinating novelty. The great achievement of 1900 in this field was the successful transmission on Nov. 13 of a 1,000-horse-power current a distance of 153 miles, by the Snoquatmine Falls Power Company of Washington. For San Francisco a plant is now building which will supply that city with electricity from a source 155 miles distant. L. B. Stillwell, in an article on this subject in The Electrical Review, sums up the present status of electrical power transmission in a few words, as follows:

"Many plants are commercially using potentials of from 10,000 to 30,000 volts, and a few are using potentials between 30,000 and 40,000 volts. Apparatus as now constructed permits the use of 70,000 volts probably with no more risk of breaking down than the use of a 3,000-volt current involved in 1890. This means that in ten years the increase in practicable potential has multiplied the range or transmission by 10, and the area of territory within range of cheap water power by 100."

OTHER POWERS THAN WATERFALLS.

What this progress means in its influence upon and relation to the future of industry and trade, we are just beginning to understand, and do not yet half appreciate. We naturally associate the generation of currents admitting of long-distance transmission with great natural water powers, and our enthusiasm is somewhat damped by the knowledge that such powers are not so numerous that they cannot be bought up and controlled by speculators in public utilities. To some extent artificial waterfalls can be created, but the opportunity for doing this is strictly limited and is diminishing with the disappearance of the forests in the more densely populated sections.

But are we dependent upon waterfalls for cheap power? It may be found cheaper to convert coal into electricity where it is mined than to distribute it by rail or water to be burned less economically where heat and power are required. The saving in the cost of transportation and handling will be important, and the economy of conversion of a unit of carbon into a unit of effective energy would be more than equivalent to making one ton of coal do what two are now required to perform. For the same reason it may also be found cheaper to burn natural gas at the wells than to convey it long distances through costly systems of pipes, which, though constantly enlarged, are always inadequate, and which by their heavy leakage are a perpetual menace to life and property wherever they run. In proportion to capacity to transmit potential energy in available form, the most costly and capacious conductor which could be built would offer very much cheaper transportation than a railroad or a pipe line. These are suggestions which ten years ago might have been dismissed as the creations of an oversimulated imagination. To-day they can be answered in a way which may be found disquieting to those who are combining railroads and consolidating gas works. Why, for example, should New York need the coal to run thousands of steam boilers and tens of thousands of furnaces when all the work of the steam engine and the heater can as well be done by the electro-motor and the resistance coil? Why should half a dozen or more extensive gas plants, occupying valuable real estate and depreciating all adjacent property, be maintained, when light and heat can be brought from the coal fields by a wire cable? Why should our surface railroads need great power plants, pulsating and vibrating through twenty-four hours of every day, when their place could be taken by a switchboard? Questions like these might be multiplied indefinitely. The answer would be the same in every case, and should set the cautious investor to wondering whether the many millions so impulsively, if not recklessly, locked up in these costly local facilities are not precariously invested in plants for which we shall have very little use in the near future.

THE UTILIZATION OF MINE REFUSE.

The waste of the anthracite coal industry since 1804 has represented a large proportion of the total recovery from the seams worked. It is less at present, as sizes formerly unsalable now bring enough to pay freight to the coal roads. The waste of nearly a century in mining, crushing, and screening has accumulated in veritable mountains of coal dust and débris, which have been anxiously studied for many years. They are by no means pure coal, no care having been taken to keep slate and rock out of them; but many of them are very clean. The volume of available fuel thus accumulated almost surpasses estimate. Up to this time it has suggested no means of utilization. Attempts have been made to mold it into briquettes, but stove coal has never been costly enough to make the competition of artificial fuel profitable. Some has been burned in the Wootten type of locomotive and in Wegener furnaces, but not much. Millions of tons of this dust are available for conversion on the ground into electrical energy through the media of the gas producer, the gas engine, and the dynamo. It would not cost much to riddle and wash it on a large scale, by which means the slate and rock would be separated from the coal, leaving a fuel lower in ash and sulphur than lump anthracite. This, however, may not be necessary. There are records of successful gas generation from anthracite slack containing over 40 per cent. of ash and a large amount of sulphur, as iron pyrites. Even ordinary judgment in excavating the dumps would give from the older dust piles a much better fuel than the gas producer demands. The gas engine will show an average economy of one to two, as compared with the steam engine. It is a question if power thus generated would not be as cheap, all things considered, as water power. It would certainly be very much cheaper than any power we now have in New York.

THE GAS ENGINE.

The gas engine, though still imperfectly developed, is already remarkably efficient. As long ago as 1892 tests of an Atkinson gas engine with Dowson gas, gave one indicated horse power for 1.6 pounds of coal.

This was so much better than anything thus far found possible with a steam engine of the same size, as to challenge attention. In a much more recent test with Dowson gas, an Otto-Crossley engine gave one indicated horse power for .76 pound of coal. Dowson gas is a low fuel gas, averaging 52.5 per cent. nitrogen. A twin-cylinder American Otto engine in Philadelphia has developed one indicated horse power of .95 pound of coal. The loss in gasefying coal is about 10 per cent. The growth of the gas engine from small beginnings has been very rapid. The largest machine of this type shown at the Chicago Exposition was of 35 horse power. At the Paris Exposition just closed there was exhibited a single cylinder four-stage gas engine, which developed 1,000 horse power. It was built in Belgium at the works of the Société Anonyme John Cockerill, Seraing. With blast furnace gas of such low fuel-value that it could be kept lighted with difficulty under a boiler, and would not burn at all after parting with its initial heat, this engine made a very excellent record. It employs the Otto cycle principle, with a possible explosion every fourth stroke and the hit-or-miss system of regulation. The cylinder is 51 inches in diameter; the stroke 55 inches. Its speed is 85 revolutions per minute. Tests of this engine, made by Prof. H. Hubert of Liege, showed that it will develop one-horse power per hour for an average consumption of 102 cubic feet of gas having a calorific value of 135 B. T. units per cubic foot. On this basis of fuel consumption, the gas from a cubic yard of anthracite culm should furnish one-horse power for 804 hours, or 804 horse power for one hour. This is better than anything the steam engine is capable of after a century of improvement.

FUEL VALUE OF ANTHRACITE SLACK.

For the manufacture of producer gas the dust piles of the anthracite fields are invaluable. This material will weigh about 48 pounds to the cubic foot. Assuming that it will average 30 pounds, combustible to the cubic foot, which allows 33 1-3 per cent. ash, it has a calorific value of 11,745.6 B. T. units to the cubic yard. The idea was once entertained of using it for the manufacture of uncarbureted water gas to be piped to New York, Philadelphia, and other cities, but the problems of piping were too serious to warrant capital in taking it up as a business proposition. The initial investment was too large and the risk to life and property too great to make it attractive. We know more about water gas than we did twenty years ago, and are beginning to have much the sort of wholesome fear of gas carrying 48 per cent. of carbon monoxide that the wise man has for copperheads in his native haunts. The combination of producer, gas engine, dynamo, and conductor presents the problem of the utilization of the waste of a century of crude mining in a very practical and attractive aspect for the first time in the history of the anthracite industry. The gas engine will utilize every pound of it. Power thus generated will convey itself to New York at materially less cost for rent of conductor accommodation than would represent freight and handling of coal from the mine to the consumer's bin, and the present average cost of a horse power might be cut in two and still pay satisfactory interest on the necessary investment.

These great reserves of mined fuel are within an average distance of 125 miles of New York in an air line. It has been estimated that they are capable of furnishing, in the form of electricity, all the requirements of New York for light, heat, and power for the whole of the twentieth century. Whether this is over or under, the fact is immaterial. The estimate might very well be divided by two and still remain attractive.

LIGHT AND HEAT.

The competition of electric currents from the neighboring coal fields with local gas would so change the conditions of lighting as to put gas out of the competition. Shrewd capitalists have foreseen this, and, to some extent, anticipated it in the consolidation of the local gas and electric interests so as to permanently deprive the public of the advantage of cheap light through the competition of the two systems from local plants. There are, however, too many sources from which electricity can be had to permit the closing of them all.

The permanence of the gas industry in cities has been predicated chiefly on the increasing consumption for heating and cooking. Where this use has been developed with enterprise and good judgment in the leasing and installation of stoves and ranges and in encouraging the use of gas fires in industries requiring local heats, the day consumption has run ahead of the night consumption. This seemed to warrant the belief that the gas industry had secured an indefinite lease of life in the consumption for purposes other than lighting, and in many large cities it has been made the basis of vast schemes of capitalization, discounting the future for half a century to come. There is reason to believe, however, that in this as in other lines of development the electrical engineer has made great and rapid progress while the gas engineer has stood still. All the phenomena of electrical generation and transmission are attended with the conversion of more or less energy into heat.

The localization of heat by the interposition of resistance in the path of the current dates back to the beginning of electrical experimentation. The first attempts in the direction of practical electrical heating were crude and unscientific, giving trouble in consequence of the fact that the resistance parts of apparatus for this purpose were quickly destroyed. Within the past few years great improvements have been made in electrical heaters of all kinds, and many forms of apparatus have been devised for converting electrical currents into heat which are now in successful and economical operation. Where electricity is cheap enough, they are already beginning to displace the coal stove and furnace and the gas stove and range. All the electric railroads heat their cars in this way; similar heaters are installed in all, or nearly all, the well appointed ocean liners, and the inroads of electricity into first-class buildings for cooking and heating purposes already menace the gas companies. Very satisfactory results now attend the application of indestructible enamels to metallic resistances, and great improvements have been made in resistance materials. James Ayer, in a recent number of The Electrical Review, says on this subject:

"The thorough practicability of electric kitchen equipments for modern apartment houses has been demonstrated in a most emphatic manner. Thirty kitchen equipments were put in an apartment house in Utica, N. Y., in March, 1900. After six months of practical experience, seventy additional sets were equipped in the same manner, and gas ranges previously used were displaced." Many kitchens in public buildings in the large cities are now depending wholly upon electricity, using neither coal nor gas. In view of these facts, the gas industry may find itself between the upper and nether millstones of a competition, for which it is wholly unprepared and cannot successfully meet on its present basis of capitalization.

In this glance at the possibilities of the near future, there has been no call upon the imagination to supplement what is demonstrably possible with the facilities now at the command of the engineer when capital shall give the signal. The purpose has been to show that New York is not necessarily at a disadvantage in the matter of cheap light, heat, and power, as compared with cities nearer to great water powers which can be depended upon at all times and through all variations in the rainfall.

JAMES C. BAYLES, M. E., Ph. D.

YESTERDAY IN MUSIC.

Two Performances of Opera and One Concert.

There was the usual plenty of musical entertainment yesterday. In the afternoon the third matinée concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra took place at Carnegie Hall. Despite the bitter mood of the weather there was a large audience. The programme consisted of Tschaikowsky's fifth symphony, César Franck's symphonic variations for piano and orchestra, and Liszt's symphonic poem, "Les Preludes." The solo pianist was Mr. Courtlandt Palmer of this city. The composition which Mr. Palmer elected to perform is not unknown to local music lovers, but it is infrequently played. It was produced here at a concert of French music in Carnegie Hall by Ruoul Pugno, the French pianist, on March 7, 1898. The work is interesting chiefly by reason of the contrast between the piano part and the orchestral background, but it is not a warm composition and belongs to the scholastic species.

Mr. Palmer has been heard here before, but since his last appearance has devoted himself to further study. His work shows improvement in respect of touch and technic, but his rending of the Franck music yesterday was strangely deficient in fire and tonal dignity. He played the whole work in a subdued and phlegmatic style. Indeed, in spite of Mr. Gericke's efforts to restrain the orchestra, it is probable that many of the listeners did not hear more than half of the piano part. It must be added that Mr. Palmer has not rid himself of those mannerisms which excited unfavorable comment at his former appearances and which cause amusement to some of his hearers. A spasmodic tossing of the head is the worst of these mannerisms.

The orchestra again delighted by the solidity of its tone and the perfection of its precision. But lovers of the barbaric splendors of Tschaikowsky's music were disappointed by the cool and polished interpretation which Mr. Gericke gave it. Elegance and smoothness of style are not appropriate to this music, which pulsates with passionate power.

At the Metropolitan Opera House the customary two performances of opera took place. In the afternoon Massenet's "Le Cid" was repeated before an audience which quite filled the house. The performance was, as before, admirable, but there was nothing in it to alter the impression made by the music. The work is pretentious, but it lacks heart. It is theatrically effective, but it is not convincing to the thoughtful. The most important feature of the performance was, as on Wednesday night, the superb singing of Jean de Reszke. The part of Rodrigue gives him abundant opportunity for a display of his voice and his command of style. His London friends would have rejoiced if they could have heard the splendid freedom and vibrant power of his tones. He has never sung in this city with more brilliant voice, and his delivery of the declamatory passages was inspiring. He made the natural effect with "O nobile lame," and at the end of the chamber and camp scenes. Miss Breval as Chimene again demonstrated her right to acceptance as a soprano with strong dramatic temperament and a voice of plenteous power. Her interpretation interested by its earnestness and vigor rather than by refinement of vocal style. Mme. Melba again sang the music of the Infanta with her unfailing charm of tonal quality.

Mr. Edouard de Reszke's interpretation of Don Rodrigue is one of his most satisfying. It is dignified and pathetic, and he sings the music with fine effect. Mr. Plançon was again a competent Count de Gormas, and Mr. Sizes was acceptable as the King. "Le Cid" has been generously mounted at the Metropolitan, and the pageantry delights those who love spectacular features of operatic productions. The chorus sang tolerably and the ballet was efficient. Mr. Mancinelli conducted.

Last night Wagner's "Der Fliegende Holländer" was presented. Again there was a change in the cast, owing to one of those indispositions which are so frequent among opera singers. Mr. Bertram was to have sung the Holländer, but his place had to be taken by Mr. Mühlmann. In the circumstances he gave a very creditable performance. Mme. Gadski sang Senta in her familiar style. She is a conscientious artist and never slights her work. Mr. Dippel was once more the Eric, Mr. Blass the Daland, and Miss Olitzka the Mary. Mr. Damrosch conducted and the performance was spirited. The audience was a very small one, but it was evidently well pleased with the entertainment.

Violinist Banner a Success in Berlin.

BERLIN, Jan. 19.—Michael Banner, the San Francisco violinist, appeared in concert this evening before a distinguished and critical audience at the Beethovensaal, with the Philharmonic orchestra. He played the Beethoven Concerto, the Mendelssohn Concerto, and the first movement of Brahms's Concerto. Much enthusiasm was shown, and it is the general opinion that Mr. Banner has developed into one of the foremost violinists of the world. Mr. Banner will soon start for London, where he will begin a concert tour.

Mabelle Gilman and Laura Burt Return.

Among those who arrived on the Campania yesterday were the Misses Mabelle Gilman and Laura Burt. While in London Miss Gilman appeared in "The Casino Girl," but left the company owing to a dispute with Mr. Lederer's partner. Miss Gilman will open her season in Boston, where she will appear in a play entitled "The Gay Grisette." Miss Burt said that she had secured a new play, the name of which she would not make public.

"Little Lord Fauntleroy" a Reporter.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The original "Little Lord Fauntleroy" began to-day to be a Congressional newspaper reporter. He is Lionel, the oldest son of Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett. As a member of the staff of a Washington paper he made his appearance in the press gallery of the Senate, seeking items. He looks plain and businesslike, and not at all as it would seem Little Lord Fauntleroy might look as a young man of twenty or thereabouts.

MURRAY HALL'S FUNERAL.

The Man-Woman Was Dressed for Burial in Woman's Clothes.

The funeral of Murray Hall, the woman who for more than thirty years posed as a man, was held from her home, 148 Sixth Avenue, yesterday afternoon. There were about twenty persons on the sidewalk in front of the house at 3 o'clock, when the body was taken from the house. The burial was in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Two men and the adopted daughter, Minnie Hall, comprised all of the funeral attendants. For the first time in forty years Murray Hall was dressed in woman's clothes, the garments of her sex.

Dr. John A. Burke of 152 West Eleventh Street was called in to see Murray Hall on Dec. 6. Dr. Burke says he knew Hall by sight for years, but had never attended her professionally. Hall said she was suffering from a cancer of the breast, and wanted him to prescribe for her.

"I said 'Take off your shirt,' and took off my coat and rolled up my sleeves preparatory to making a proper examination. She said she felt a good deal better that day, and thought she wouldn't have any examination then."

Dr. Burke says he regarded it as peculiar but left, and a few days afterward was called in again.

"I asked her how she felt and what her symptoms were, and got all the information I could, but she would not have an examination made and wanted a prescription. I said it was impossible unless I could make a complete examination, but she said she would not have that done as a cancer could not be cured anyway, and she insisted on the prescription."

Dr. Burke says he thought the refusal to have an examination was a piece of crankiness, and that Murray Hall thought a doctor could do as much for a patient without an examination. He left and did not give the matter a thought till he heard of Murray Hall's death.

WHISKERS FOR TAMMANY MEN.

Abraham Gruber Wants a Law to Avoid Any More Murray Hall Deceptions.

"We must pass such a bill," Abraham Gruber was remarking to State Chairman Dunn in the Fifth Avenue Hotel yesterday.

"Why," said Col. Gruber to a TIMES reporter, "we want a law providing that Captains in Tammany Hall politics must wear whiskers. We don't propose having Tammany ring in women on us in the Twenty-first District."

Mr. Gruber's remarks were apropos to the death of Murray Hall

IN WOMAN'S WORLD.

The solitaire diamond as an engagement ring has lost cast, and colored stones of many kinds are used and in all forms, frequently with a colored stone in the centre and diamonds surrounding. One young woman who became engaged not long ago braved superstition and wore an opal for her betrothal ring.

***

Every one may not know that it is not simply driftwood as driftwood which makes the delightful blue, green, and many colored flames which are so beautiful in a wood fire. It is a copper deposit on the wood, and the driftwood must come from the coppered bottom of an old vessel to be everything that is to be desired. But alas and alack a day! since this has been known driftwood is manufactured to order by some chemical process and the same effect is given to any wood. It is almost—not quite—as bad as the gas log, for who can dream over a fire whose beautiful flames are set to order?

***

This proper driftwood, the genuine article, is an expensive luxury, and a man who made his wife a present of a barrelful of it one Christmas three years or more ago felt that he had committed an almost rash extravagance. But a bit of the wood develops into such vivid and long-continuing flames that there is wood from that same barrel still on hand, and it bids fair to last for a year or so yet. It is used sparingly, and one small piece seems to permeate an entire fire, and there are still rainbows of flame long after the little driftwood stick has disappeared.

***

In connection with the driftwood, the man of the barrelful always has a story to tell. He, with his wife, were making a visit to a family out of town, another family devoted to driftwood tints in their open fireplaces. When the visitors entered the room where was burning the big wood fire of their hosts, they stopped suddenly and gazed at it with amazement and admiration. The whole fireplace was ablaze with a mass of brilliant flames, green, blue, purple, violet, red, and pink—it was a gorgeous Fourth of July celebration, and there was never a celebration like it in beauty. It was not entirely in honor of the guests. There was to have been a big wood fire, and there was to have been driftwood on it, but the luckless man who had built it had ruthlessly used piles of driftwood for kindling, and never once suspected that those small ragged sticks were worth almost their weight in gold.

***

The mother of one of the best babies in the world received a terrible shock the other day. Her baby is certainly a pretty baby, even unprejudiced individuals admit it, and the picture of rosy health and perfect physical condition. Being one of the best babies in the world and just at the cunning age, he received a large amount of attention from his relatives and friends. It was just after one of the numerous times when the baby had given an example of how one small boy can be a whole baby show in himself and take all the prizes, that the colored maid exclaimed:

"Ki, misses, dat 'ar baby is rotten."

It took some minutes for the girl, who is from the South, to explain that in her part of the country when a child is spoiled they say it is rotten. It was an unfortunate appellation. The story was such a good one that it has been told many times, and a little sister, who is just beginning to talk, christened the baby "Wotty," and that he has been called more or less ever since.

***

The finest table linen is usually finished with a plain hem. In a Fifth Avenue linen shop this work, as well as the embroidery, is usually done before the linen is sent out. The latter is all done by a young Japanese boy, who can be seen sitting at one of the side windows working steadily all day. He has his linen fastened into a large frame, where even the end of a long table cloth is held firmly, and he works up and down, never running his needle across from one side of the letter to the other, as amateur embroiderers frequently do. The work that he does is exceedingly beautiful. He is an excellent artist with the pencil as well as with the needle, and can make a quick sketch of original decorations required and then work them.

***

In the Italian districts of the city the public school teachers have many amusing experiences with the little Italian children in their classes and their peculiar ideas and funny mistakes in their unfamiliarity with the English language. They wish to know if to-day is to-morrow, and if there will be school on yesterday, and when the teacher recently asked one of the little chaps about another who was absent, he promptly answered: "Mikie loafed on a hook." That was not straight, he saw immediately, and tried again: "Mikie hooked on a loaf." He was struggling with the words "hooky" and "loafing," the teacher finally concluded, and that little Mikie was playing truant.

***

When a funeral passes the schoolhouse, if the children chance to see it, they are delighted. An Italian funeral is one of the grand events in the neighborhood. It is a spirited affair, and it is a happy child who can boast a relative in the procession. Several funerals passed the schoolhouse last week, and as one of them disappeared from view a small boy drew a long breath, and drawing himself up, proudly cried: "Teacher, my father was in that dead parade."

***

They were talking of dish washing, and the New York woman gave an experience of hers when visiting in the West. It was in Wyoming, a big establishment on a hill where a wealthy Lake Shore (Chicago) woman owns a Summer residence. The house is a big one, and was originally a sanitarium. Some of the institution's features still remain. It is a simply furnished house, with small but pleasant sleeping rooms and large halls and living rooms. The sleeping rooms are furnished with small metal bedsteads and all over the house the floors are bare, except for occasional rugs. But there are sun and air and wonderful views across the country. There is also unlimited room to accommodate guests, and the house is always full. There will be a family party, married sisters and brothers and daughters numbering anywhere from fifteen to twenty, and to them will appear a party of guests nearly as large, and there is room for all. In the big dining room the table is set in the form of a T, the hostess sitting at the end of the body of the table with her relatives on either side, while the guests group themselves around the cross of the letter. It was at the first meal after the arrival of a big party of guests, which included the New York woman, that the first exhibition of dish washing was given. As soon as the meal was finished the servants cleared the tables, piled the dishes on one end, brought dishpans and all the necessary paraphernalia, and the hostess and numerous women among the relatives turned to and washed the dishes. Just why this was done is not explained. The hostess brought her servants with her from Chicago, and whether the dish washing made the work too hard for them, or whether it was the hostess's delight in the domesticity of it does not appear, but anyway, after every meal the hostess, with several women to assist her, washed the dishes.

CHARLES T. COOK'S DECORATION.

Third Member of Tiffany & Co. to Receive Cross of Legion of Honor.

Charles T. Cook, Vice President, and for over thirty-two years actively associated in the general management of the house of Tiffany & Co., who has been created by the French Government an officer of the Legion of Honor, was born in this city on May 17, 1835, and before he got out of his "knickerbockers" he found his way into Tiffany's and has been there ever since. His connection with the house dates back to the panicky days of '47. Twenty of the fifty-three years' connection with the house were spent largely in the registry and [illegible] departments of the house. Since then he has taken an active part in the general management of the business.

This is the third decoration of the National Legion of Honor of France that has been conferred upon members of the house of Tiffany & Co. Charles L. Tiffany, the President of the company, was decorated in 1878, when he was sixty-six years old, and it is a coincidence that this decoration also comes to the Vice President of the company in Mr. Cook's sixty-sixth year. Edward C. Moore, the late Managing Director of the silver works, was created a Chevalier in 1889.

Automatic Sounding Apparatus for Holds of Vessels.—A new invention to prevent vessels from destruction, and to save life and property on high seas has appeared. The object of this invention is to provide an automatic signaling device, so that an increase of water in hold will be at once known to the person having control of the pumps. By the universal adoption of this invention thousands of lives and millions of property would be saved. For particulars and cost call on H. JAGELS, 230 Fernon St., Philadelphia, Penn.—Adv.

ECHOES OF THE VANDERBILT WEDDING.

"In all my experience of wedding breakfasts," said a guest at the Vanderbilt-French wedding, "I have never understood why the feast was called a breakfast and not a luncheon. Now I have learned. It is from the custom in the Church of England, where the bride and bridegroom always receive the holy communion before the ceremony, receive it fasting, and remain fasting until after the wedding, when the meal which is served is really a breakfast."

***

It is not always the early bird, &c. That old belief is rapidly going out of fashion. It was not the earliest arrivals for the wedding who were the most fortunate. The Friday before in Newport was a wretched day, the rain freezing as soon as it fell and making the sidewalks so slippery that it was impossible to walk upon them without the greatest care. The streets were in as bad condition, and that is a matter of importance, for it is only a new arrival in the city by the sea who thinks of keeping to the sidewalks. The streets are of fine hard macadam and the walking is good on them when the sidewalks are little seas of mud or water from rain or the moisture from the earth on a mild day in Winter. The guests who arrived on that day wished they had not, and the day following (Saturday) there was a miserably cold rain, and the women, anxious to be in good condition for Monday, particularly the bridesmaids, whose presence was essential for the satisfactory conduct of the wedding, kept to their beds with hot water bottles at their feet, in horrible fear of grip or hoarse colds.

***

It was well for many reasons that the wedding was not a full dress evening affair, and for one particularly—not only the members of the wedding party, but a large number of their guests were suffering from recent vaccination, and sleeveless gowns would have revealed a funny collection of vaccination shields. Guests from New York felt that it was due their hostess that they should take every precaution and not run the risk of leaving unpleasant souvenirs of their visit or endanger in any way the health of the two handsome little sons of Gen. and Mrs. Eaton. One of the men guests who had thoughtlessly been vaccinated on his right arm, was hardly in a condition to shake hands.

***

Dressing was one of the difficulties the wedding guests faced. The boat which met the special train which was to take them to New York left at 4 o'clock the day of the wedding. With the wedding in the church at 12 and breakfast and reception following at the house, they had little time to return to the respective houses at which they were entertained and don their traveling gowns. A few of them did not attempt it, but wore long coats and had their baggage sent off ahead of them.

***

The engagement ring of the new Mrs. Vanderbilt was as unpretentious as everything in connection with the engagement and with the wedding. It was a simple ring with two stones, a sapphire and a diamond, neither very large, with the familiar diagonal setting, a much more simple ring than that of many young fiancées without a pretense to wealth.

***

Mrs. Vanderbilt's gifts to her bridesmaids filled them with delight. They were very lovely white leather card cases with the monograms in gold. The scarfpins given the ushers were also beautiful solitaire pearls, and "nice fat ones," as one of the wedding guests described them.

***

Every one in Newport, and her intimate friends and wedding guests as well, had a pleasant word to say for the bride. The general conduct of the wedding showed in everything a kind feeling of consideration for every one, which marks a family trait. Since her father's death Mrs. Vanderbilt has been the constant companion of her mother, looking out for her, both at home and in traveling, with a pretty air of consideration which has been most attractive. She is a young woman of unusual charm of manner and character, simple and unaffected.

***

It pleased the people of Newport on Saturday, the day of the bridesmaids' dinner, to see Mrs. French, the mother of the bride, in the business part of the city shopping, buying innumerable small articles found to be needed at the last moment. She drove down in a brougham, wearing a short skirt and fur cape, and took home her small packages with her. In the millionaires and multi-millionaires the plainer people of the country find the embodiment of the fairy tales of their youth, and to see the possessor of a fairy wand shopping, like ordinary people, on the day on which was to take place a long-heralded event was interesting.

***

The decoration of the house and grounds for the wedding festivities with evergreens and trees was pretty and effective, and to people belonging to the Episcopal Church appropriate. The Christmas season, as it is recognized in the Church, does not end until the Feast of the Purification on the 2d of February. The greens in the churches are left up until that date. Nothing could have been more effective in these greens than the decoration of the big piazza of the French cottage, running along the front of the house with the fine view of the harbor from which the place gets its name, "Harbour-view." With the festoons of greens hanging from the ceiling and on the rear wall, the trees standing here and there made a perfect Christmas bower which, with seats of red, yellow, and in particolors in wood and pottery, was most attractive.

***

The beautiful pink begonia La Gloire de Loraine, which formed the chief decoration in both church and house, is worth talking about. It is a beautiful flower. Each plant, in the perfect condition to which those used in the decorations were brought, is a mass of pink blossoms, the delicate green of the leaves showing just enough to relieve the pink. The delicate flamuau effect of the plants on wands or slender rods at the ends of the pews at the church has been mentioned, but they were, if anything, more beautiful in the house, where thirty-five were used effectively. In fact, the Rosary-which furnished the decorations cornered the market in begonias for the wedding, and it is probable that not another could now be found in the city for love or money. This begonia was new two years ago, when it was brought over from Scotland. It is a Winter bloomer, and blossoms for three months, usually December, January, and February. The plants figured largely at Christmas as gifts, and a second lot will be brought out if possible for Easter. The flowers gave just the necessary bit of color at the wedding as a setting for the bride and her gray-gowned bridesmaids.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Dr. Charles R. Abbott.

Dr. Charles R. Abbot, Principal of Grammar School No. 1, Brooklyn, died early yesterday morning at his home, 287 Macon Street, that borough. Dr. Abbott was one of the oldest educators connected with the city school system. He was seventy-six years old, and had taught school continuously since 1848. Prior to that time he had labored as a clergyman of the Episcopal Church. He taught school in Westchester County from 1848 to 1852. In the latter year he became a teacher in the then only grammar school in old New York City, remaining there for three years. He was appointed Principal of the Farnum Preparatory School, a branch of the State Normal School, in New Jersey, which post he held until 1862. From that time until 1869 he was Superintendent of the public schools of Kingston, N. Y., coming from there to Brooklyn as Principal of Grammar School No. 1, at Adams and Concord Streets. He continued as the head of that school until the time of his death. Dr. Abbott is survived by his wife. The funeral services will take place to-morrow evening at St. Mark's Protestant Episcopal Church, on Adelphi Street.

John E. Dix.

John E. Dix died at his home, 123 Harrison Street, East Orange, yesterday. For many years prior to 1890 Mr. Dix was a resident of Newark, a member of the firm of L. Joy & Co., and identified with other business and several philanthropic interests. He was born at Portland, Me., and was educated at Dartmouth College, from which institution he recently received the honorary degree of Master of Arts. Beginning business in Boston in 1849, Mr. Dix became Vice President of the Edward Everett Company, organized by Boston business men for the purpose of carrying on co-operative mining in California. In the sailing ship Edward Everett he took a month's trip around Cape Horn to California. Subsequently he took two other trips to California, and then settled in Newark. Mr. Dix leaves a widow and two sons, both of whom live in East Orange.

John Sever Tebbets.

BOSTON, Jan. 19.—John Sever Tebbets, well known in railroad and mining circles, died to-day at the home of his mother in this city. He was born in Medford, Mass., July 4, 1858, the son of the Rev. Theodore Tebbets and Ellen Sever Tebbets. He was graduated from Harvard in the Class of '80. After being graduated Mr. Tebbets was employed by the Boston and Albany Railroad at Boston for a time, and then went to Albany, being in the employ of the Boston and Albany and the New York Central Railroads.

He then took charge of the coal mines of the Union Pacific Railroad, and became in turn General Passenger and General Freight Agent of that road. Leaving the Union Pacific, Mr. Tebbets became General Superintendent of the Duquesne Mining and Reduction Company at Crittendon, Arizona.

A short time ago he was appointed General Purchasing Agent of the Boston Elevated Railroad, but had not assumed his duties.

Capt. William S. McManus.

CHESTER, Penn., Jan. 19.—Capt. William S. McManus died to-day at his home, in this city, aged sixty years. He was ill ten days with pneumonia.

After serving in the war of the rebellion in the regular army, Capt. McManus returned to his home, in Reading Penn., later coming to Chester, and organizing in 1877 the Chester Tube and Pipe Company, which he successfully operated for twenty years. Two years ago he organized the South Chester Tube and Pipe Company, which was sold to a combination a few months ago.

At the time of his death Capt. McManus was engaged in organizing a third company for the manufacture of tubing. He was active in public affairs and had an interest in several local concerns.

William McMannis.

William McMannis, for fifteen years Chief Engineer of the Board of Education, died suddenly yesterday at his home, 7 West Ninety-second Street, of heart disease. Mr. McMannis was born in Westfield, N. J., in 1840. Enlisting in the Federal Army at the outbreak of the civil war, he served in the Engineering Corps. Fourteen years ago he received the civil service appointment as Chief Engineer of the Board of Education, which position he had since held. He leaves a widow and one daughter.

Obituary Notes.

Judge ROSE of the High Court of Justice of Ontario died at Toronto yesterday morning after an illness of a few days, aged fifty-six.

FREDERICK W. JONES, owner of extensive marble quarries in Greenport, N. Y., and a prominent Columbia County politician, died Friday night, aged sixty-one years.

MARK R. SOOY, a well-known resident of Mount Holly, N. J., died suddenly yesterday morning at his home. Heart disease caused death. Mr. Sooy was fifty-six years old. He leaves a widow, one daughter, and three sons.

The Rev. Dr. LOREN LAERTES KNOX, one of the oldest pastors of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the author of several books relating to that denomination, is dead of bronchial pneumonia at the Hotel Monfiett, Evanston, Ill. Dr. Knox was born in Nelson, N. Y., in 1811.

BENJAMIN VAN VRANKEN, a contractor, and one of the oldest and best-known residents of Schenectady, N. Y., dropped dead in a store yesterday morning. He held several city and minor State political offices and was interested in many large contracting ventures throughout the State.

JUSTIN A. BLISS died at his home, 301 Madison Avenue, yesterday. Mr. Bliss was born in Ashleyville, Mass., March 6, 1816. He came to this city when a young man and engaged in the dry goods business, later entering the firm of Lee, Case & Co. He retired in 1870. A widow and two daughters survive him. Mr. Bliss was a member of the Union League and Riding Clubs.

GILBERT E. DORLAND, a retired lawyer, died yesterday at his residence, 55 Downing Street. Mr. Dorland was born in Dutchess County, this State, about sixty-five years ago. He was a son of Enoch G. Dorland, the Quaker. Removing to New York, Mr. Dorland studied law and was engaged in the active practice of his profession up to about fifteen years ago. He was twice married, his second wife and one daughter by his first marriage surviving him.

Additional Reward for Pat Crowe.

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 19.—At a meeting of the City Council last evening it was decided to offer a reward of $5,000 for Pat Crowe, dead or alive, irrespective of the suspicion that he may have been concerned in the C

KILLED IN OLD BUILDING

Heavily Laden Floor Collapses and Two Men Are Crushed.

Iron Workers Engaged in Reconstruction Blame Contractors—Building Department Official Denies Negligence.

Two men were killed and a third was badly injured by the collapse of the heavily loaded and, as alleged, weakened flooring of the fourth story of the old residence 125 East Twenty-third Street, in course of reconstruction into a large office and studio building, yesterday. Without warning an immense mass of bricks and timbers was suddenly precipitated through the three lower floors of the structure, in which were nearly twenty laborers, carrying down to death in the basement Edward Nelson and George Gustafson, ironworkers, and badly injuring about the head and body James Murray, a stone mason of 317 South Third Street, Brooklyn. Nelson and Gustafson were relatives and lived at 1,616 Second Avenue. Both were pinned down by heavy timbers and almost instantly killed.

Responsibility for the fatal accident is placed by the ironworkers directly upon the contractors, who, they allege, weakened the cross beams of the flooring and placed thereon heavy masses of bricks and timber. Indirectly the Building Department is censured for failing to have its inspectors daily examine each floor in process of alteration.

Superintendent John A. Dooner of the Building Department denied that any of his men was negligent or careless, and declares that the accident was caused by the hoisting of iron beams to the fourth floor by means of apparatus attached to a wooden beam, weakening it, and allowing the overweighted floor to crash through the centre of the building. He places the responsibility on the ironworkers. The latter deny that any hoisting was done yesterday.

The house, which was known as the Gantley mansion, is owned by the Beach estate. Julius Sternfeld was the last occupant. Upon his vacating the premises some months ago, it was decided to convert the edifice into a seven-story studio and office building. William Young, a builder, of 1,133 Broadway, secured the contract. W. C. W. Childs of West and Milton Streets, Brooklyn, was doing the masonry work, and Stevenson & Breisler were looking after the iron work. The room partitions had been removed some days ago, and only the old wooden cross beams supported the floors, five in number. These beams were being removed and iron girders substituted in their places. The wooden beams, it is said by the ironworkers, were partly sawed through preparatory to this removal. Bricks and timber were heaped on each floor.

Mr. Young was seen standing in front of the building before the crash came, but twenty minutes later could not be located. This gave rise to the erroneous report that he had been buried beneath the ruins. It was said at his office that he was safe and at his home in Brooklyn.

Frederick L. Bowman of 56 West Sixtieth Street, Bayonne, N. J., an ironworker, who had a close race with death, in describing the accident said:

"With Nelson and Gustafson, I was coming down the ladder from the fourth floor, where we had been at work. We had just gotten off the ladder when I heard a crushing sound above. I didn't think the whole floor was coming down, but I yelled: 'Look out, boys, the cave-in's coming.' Gustafson jumped, and I started to run, but Nelson, who always was slow, stopped and squinted up at the first floor. Just then with a mighty crash the whole lot of rafters and bricks came shoving through the first floor, and the next thing I knew I was sprawling on my back near the toolbox. Poor Ed and George were in the cellar beneath two big beams and a lot of broken rafters. I ran down and got to Ed before he died. He never spoke. George was dead."

John D. Wellington, a mason foreman, of 127 Edgecombe Avenue, and James T. Stevenson were arrested by Policeman Newham of the East Twenty-second Street Station at the direction of Acting Captain Fagin, who made a technical charge of homicide against them. Coroner Zucca admitted both to bail.

WOMEN COOKS AS SPECIALISTS

Market Demands Confine Each to Her Single Best Product.

The specialization which is to be seen in all kinds of business is to be found in domestic lines of employment. Women who support themselves, or make a fair income by cooking, deal altogether in specialties. In the different women's exchanges of the country there are few of the consigners to the culinary departments who send in more than one variety of article, or two or three at the most. This may be partially due to the fact that a high standard of excellence is required, and only the best of a woman's work is accepted, and it is refused as soon as it falls below a certain degree of excellence. To make her work acceptable, a woman is obliged to send the one article which she is the most expert in making, while constant practice increases her skill.

Good things to eat come from all parts of the country, from the New England States to California, to the Woman's Exchange at Madison Avenue and Forty-third Street, each one representative of the locality from which it comes. In a single meal at the lunch room of the Exchange one may have a bill of fare which will include a dozen different articles from as many States. To mention a few of them, there is orange marmalade, which comes from the South and from California as well. That from the South is a sweet orange marmalade, while that from California is made from the bitter oranges, and the consignors are two elderly maiden ladies, who make a considerable income from this one line of work. Mince pies come from Connecticut, a large proportion of them, and one woman on last Thanksgiving Day sold 98 pies. The Exchange sold, all told, on that day 300 pies, and 600 during Thanksgiving week. There is a nice little New York woman who makes the individual mince pies which are served to lunch-room customers. She has been making them for many years, and is now able to take a little holiday once a year and rest for a time from her labors, all on the profits of her mince pies.

Election cake also comes from Connecticut. This is the genuine old-fashioned election cake, which comes each cake put up in a box. It is made by an old receipt which has been in one family for years, and according to the old-time requisites for a good cake is set to rise, twice in the night worked over, and baked in the morning by a fresh fire.

The beaten biscuit come, naturally, from Virginia, carefully packed in tin boxes. The woman who makes them is the mother of seven children, and one of the Exchange customers says facetiously that there is no reason why she should not be an expert in anything that requires beating.

Brown bread comes from New York City, and Vermont women send down nice little scalloped cakes of maple sugar and other kinds of candy as well. Preserved peaches, the famous brandied peaches which must be prepared in exactly the proper manner, come from Delaware. The most universal article is wedding cake. It comes from all parts of the country—no State has a monopoly. It is put up in small boxes ready to be sent out for weddings, or comes in large loaves, or it is sold by the pound. This is the way it is usually sold. In these days of easily accessible dainties wedding cake or the rich black fruit cake is not kept always on hand by the housekeeper but it is one of the dainties sent frequently to colleges, for it can be kept indefinitely improves with age, and the college boys like to have it ready for impromptu spreads.

The rich black fruit cake is sometimes used for birthday cakes, and one Exchange cake had eighteen candles upon it not long ago. The ordinary birthday cake is for children, is made of more digestible materials, and is frequently of angel cake.

Colombian Ports Closed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—A dispatch to the State Department from United States Consul Ingersoll, at Cartagena, states that all the ports of the Gulf of Morrosquillo have been closed to commerce by Governmental decree.

Jamaica's Exhibit at Buffalo Fair.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Jan. 19.—The Government has granted $1,000 toward the fund for paying the expenses of the representation from Jamaica at the Pan-American Exposition, to be held in Buffalo. A number of interesting exhibits are being arranged.

DUC DE BROGLIE DEAD.

Famous French Author and Statesman Succumbs to Cancer in His Eightieth Year.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—The Duc de Broglie died at 8:55 o'clock this evening from cancer of the tongue.

Son of the famous Foreign Secretary of Louis Philippe, and grandson of another politician, who perished under the guillotine, Jacques Victor Albert, Duc de Broglie, was interested in public questions at a very early age, and just after he reached his majority he produced a volume of brilliant essays. He was born on June 13, 1821, and even when a student at the University, attained a reputation as a precocious publicist, advocating the cause of the constitutional monarchy and the Established Church. In 1862 at the remarkably early age of thirty-one years, he was elected a member of the Academy, this honor being accorded to him for his work on "The Church and the Roman Empire in the Fourth Century."

Under the Second Empire the Duc held aloof from politics till just before its fall, devoting himself entirely to literature. In 1869 he stood as a candidate for the Chamber for the Department of the Eure, but failed of election. He was returned for the same constituency soon after the establishment of the republic, and shortly afterward was appointed French Ambassador in London. However, his free-trade principles gave his enemies a weapon with which to attack him, and, in consequence of the strictures passed upon his conduct when he was the unwilling agent of the abrogation of the Anglo-French commercial treaty of 1860, he sent in his resignation in 1872.

From that time on, as leader of the Conservative Right Centre, which held the balance of power in the Chamber, the Duc's main object was to restore a monarchical form of government in France. In May, 1873, he forced M. Thiers, the President of the republic, to resign, and the Duc became Minister of Foreign Affairs and President of the Council under the Presidency of Marshal MacMahon. It seemed that the Monarchists had victory within their grasp. Anti-Republican measures were at once introduced. All depended upon the question of the fusion of the Orleanist and Legitimist lines, but this fusion failed, chiefly through the adhesion to extreme principles of the Comte de Chambord. Then Gambetta made the people of France realize their true position, and in May, 1874, the Duc de Broglie, beaten on a question of procedure, resigned.

Three years later he again formed a Royalist and Imperialist Cabinet, in which he became President of the Council and Minister of Justice. Again he attempted to overthrow the republic, by packing the magistracies, gagging the press, and making use of the personal popularity of MacMahon. As before, however, Gambetta prevented the Royalist schemes from succeeding, and they received a crushing defeat at the polls, On Nov. 15, 1877, the Duc resigned, and a year afterward the Chamber passed a vote of censure on him.

M. de Broglie, since that time, had been repeatedly defeated in his candidacy for election to Parliament, and in his last years he again devoted himself to literature alone. Among his best-known works are the famous "Memoirs" of his father, the "Memoirs of Talleyrand," "History and Diplomacy," and "Frederick II. and Maria Theresa."

In 1845 the Duc married Mlle. Pauline de Galard de Bearn, who died in 1860. His eldest son, Victor, was Chef de Cabinet for his father.

FRENCH EXPORTS TO AMERICA.

Big Increase in Recent Years Reported at Meeting of American Chamber of Commerce in Paris.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—The annual banquet and meeting of the American Chamber of Commerce in Paris were held to-night. There was a large attendance. Henry Peartree, President of the Chamber, occupied the chair. William Seligman and United States Consul Gowdy were the only speakers, the former replying to a toast to the Franco-American relations.

Mr. Gowdy, in the course of his remarks, produced figures showing an increase in exports from France to the United States in 1900 of 4,000,000 francs over those of 1899. Comparing the exports for the years 1894 to 1896, inclusive, with those for 1898 to 1900, inclusive, he showed that there had been an increase for the latter period of 85,000,000 francs.

Mr. Peartree voluntarily relinquished the Presidency of the Chamber, after his long term of office, and Francis Kimble was elected President, and Henry Cachard Vice President. The other officers retain their positions.

SHOT AT FRENCH PROFESSOR.

Russian Girl Student Fires at Senator Deschanel and Wounds Another Student.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—A tragic incident occurred at the College of France this afternoon. A Russian girl student, Vera Gelo, tried to assassinate an aged professor, Senator Emile Deschanel, father of the President of the Chamber of Deputies.

The professor had just concluded a lecture on French literature when Vera Gelo, who was one of the audience, fired a revolver at him. Her friend, another Russian student, noticing the movement, sacrificed herself by intervening, received a bullet in the chest and fell at Prof. Deschanel's feet, bleeding profusely.

Vera Gelo was arrested. It appears that she is mentally deranged. She said Prof. Deschanel had slandered her, and added, in heart-broken tones: "I have wounded my friend."

BRITISH ARMY REFORM.

Great Effort to be Made to Secure Passage of Bill Providing Extensive Manoevring Grounds.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—British Army reform, it is learned, will consist chiefly in an endeavor to improve the existing methods of general military training rather than in any attempt to eradicate individual defects. With a more fully developed home army, the administration believes that many of the drawbacks existing at present will gradually disappear, whereas ruthless reform would only result in disorganization and chaos.

With this end in view a new Manoeuvres bill will be introduced, giving the Government plenary power to select large tracts of country, especially in Ireland and Scotland, where the home army will have the opportunity of manoeuvring in considerable numbers over a rough and unknown country, where the Generals will have the opportunity of learning to handle divisions. In the opinion of the Secretary for War, the Right Hon. William St. John Brodrick, it is futile to criticise officers and men who have never been handled or who have never co-operated except in the restricted confines of Aldershot, where every inch of ground is known to almost every officer of the service. The barracks building on Salisbury Plain will, it is believed, aid this plan; but it has become generally recognized by the War Office that it is absolutely essential to have rough country and a good deal of it at the disposal of the forces.

Many difficulties lie in the way of securing this. The moors of Ireland and Scotland are almost all the private property of aristocratic land owners, who either use them or let them for shooting purposes. One season's manoeuvres over these estates would probably ruin the game; hence large compensation must be paid. It is Mr. Brodrick hopes to get appropriated, in spite of the present heavy taxation, believing it would be an investment which would save the country millions in case of another war.

Many other changes are likely to come in force in due course of time. The Board of Army Reorganization is sitting day in and day out, dealing with the immense problem, but the cardinal point of the deliberations, on which public opinion is unanimous, is the necessity for the new Manoeuvres bill. To use the words of Lord Raglan:

"You might as well criticise the Admiral who is always obliged to keep his fleet in harbor as to criticise the army, for which the country provides no manoeuvring facilities."

FAR EAST CABLE PROJECT.

Plan for a Joint German-Dutch Line—To Extend to America.

BERLIN, Jan. 19.—The project of a network of cables to cover the world is being diligently pursued by Germany and is most actively furthered by the Emperor, who made some significant utterances on the subject to Privy Postal Councilor Strecker recently. The latest proposals, so far as the Far East is concerned, are as follows:

Germany and the Netherlands to jointly lay a cable which will go through the Dutch Indies, touching at the Natunas Islands, Billiton, Palembang, Batavia, Macassar, Amboina, German New Guinea, and the Carolinas, with a central point at Shanghai, thence branching from Kiao-Chow easterly to Japan and America. The Dutch Government will lay the cable through its own colonies and Germany will do the rest.

The financing of this project is about concluded in principle. The plan of Gen. von Podbielski, the Imperial Postmaster General, for gradually raising the annual appropriations to a maximum of 6,000,000 marks in 1920 has been approved by Emperor William. But if private companies, with a State subvention, will undertake the work Gen. von Podbielski will not object.

BOERS CAPTURE A TRAIN.

PRETORIA, Jan. 19.—The Boers have captured a train laden with mining materials between Brugspruit and Balmoral. The passengers were robbed of everything.

No More German Troops for China.

BERLIN, Jan. 19.—The Foreign Office discredits the statement that fresh German troops are about to be sent to China for the relief of sick, wounded, and returned soldiers. Only supplies for the troops will be sent hereafter. No plans exist for the withdrawal of the German troops or the return of Field Marshal Count von Waldersee. Germany has no plans in this connection apart from the other powers, and will not take independent action. How long the German troops will remain in China depends upon the Chinese themselves.

One Massacre Story Denied.

ROME, Jan. 19.—The rector of the Seminary of Foreign Missions has received a letter from Mgr. Passerini, Apostolic Vicar in the Chinese Province of Shen-Si, announcing the good health of himself and the missionaries and sisters in his charge. This is in contradiction of the story of the massacre of the missionaries and sisters published at the beginning of the Boxer outbreak.

More Horses from America.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 19.—The British steamer Rossetti cleared to-day for Cape Town with 950 horses.

PLUCKY FIGHT WITH A LION.

Englishman in South Africa Put His Arm Down the Beast's Throat.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—News of one of the most remarkable fights with lions on record comes from a correspondent in Northern Rhodesia. Mr. Johnstone, a Collector of Customs in the employ of the British South Africa Company, was out hunting and shot a buck. As the buck fell, from the long grass sprung out five lions, who commenced to eat the buck. Mr. Johnstone, not to be robbed of his dinner, went into action with his magazine rifle, killed one lion and wounded another. The remaining three fled. The wounded lion, enraged, attacked the hunter, whose magazine was empty. He called for another gun; but his native followers had gone. The police with him fired a wild volley and retreated.

Mr. Johnstone sought a nearby tree, and was nearly out of reach when the lion caught him and pulled him down. Mr. Johnstone put his left arm down the lion's throat and gave a sledge-hammer blow with his right on the animal's head. Surprised at the resistance, the lion relinquished his attack. Propping himself against the tree then, Mr. Johnstone, in spite of his mauled arm, pulled out a cartridge, fired, and took the lion right between the eyes, killing him.

Three weeks later Mr. Johnstone died from blood-poisoning, from his mangled arm.

SNEER AT VANDERBILT WEDDING.

London Papers Comment on "Vulgar Ostentation."

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The Vanderbilt-French nuptials have afforded several papers in London an opportunity to sneer at this display of wealth made upon that occasion. One paper says:

"Bad taste and want of breeding have their head in America, and there wealth flaunts itself with vulgar ostentation, to find a parallel for which we must go back to the worst period of the Roman Empire. The latest example is the execrable taste of the marriage at Newport."

Another paper endeavors to draw a "deadly parallel" between the Vanderbilt and Rockefeller nuptials, by pointing out the simplicity of Mr. Prentice, who is described as a struggling lawyer and Sunday school teacher.

Other English papers comment gravely on the American love of display.

"SAM" LEWIS'S PECULIARITIES.

He Delighted to Taunt Aristocrats, but Was Charitable to the Poor.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—Anecdotes about Samuel Lewis, the money lender, who died last Sunday, continue to appear in the papers.

Lewis's humor took a fanciful turn. Whenever he saw an opportunity to make life miserable for sprigs of the aristocracy he never missed it. Once he was able to taunt his victim he did not seem to care whether he got his money back or not. Yet a beggar never asked him for alms in the street without a substantial reply. He frequently said he had so much money that he scarcely knew what to do with it.

The true character of the man is best judged by his enormous bequests to charity, which have not been equaled in the recent history of England. It seems that he devoted his life to robbing the nobility in order to enrich the poor.

Lewis lived in a gorgeous house in Grosvenor Square, where his wife entertained lavishly. His tight trousers, sporty clothes, and immense diamonds gave him the appearance of a "flash" racing man.

The Late Bishop of London.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The Bishop of London, the Right Rev. Mandell Creighton, who died on Monday, had many attainments, and was accounted one of the most erudite theological historians of the day. Yet none could roll a cigarette more deftly or retort more quickly in up-to-date slang. He wore his learning as lightly as a flower, but his addresses to the clergy were hardly ever equalled. In ruling his episcopate during the troublous times of the keen ritualistic controversy, he avoided stern, legal measures, yet generally secured obedience to his will. He was an athlete in his youth, and rowed in an Oxford eight. Children adored him, and London showed how greatly such an ideal Bishop was appreciated by according to him burial in St. Paul's Cathedral.

Absconder Hertz Sent to London.

QUEENSTOWN, Jan. 19.—Sigmund Herts of New York City, who was arrested shortly after his arrival here Thursday evening, on the Allan Line steamer Corinthian, from Halifax, Jan. 7, charged with forgery, the instance of the United States authorities, appeared in the police court to-day and was handed over to the Scotland Yard detectives, who had come here for the purpose of taking the prisoner to London for extradition. When the depositions were read, Herts replied: "I have nothing to say." His wife, who had accompanied Herts across the Atlantic, was present in court during the proceedings.

Bavarian Prince Says He Was Snubbed.

BERLIN, Jan. 19.—Another misunderstanding has arisen with Bavaria. Prince Alphonse, nephew of the Prince Regent, who attended the funeral of the Grand-Duke of Saxe-Weimar, claims that he was snubbed by the Emperor's representatives, etiquette and questions of precedence being involved. On returning to Bavaria, Prince Alphonse resigned command of the First Bavarian Cavalry Brigade, with the Prince Regent's approval. The Prince Regent then conferred on him a higher, but inactive, rank, and also bestowed on him the highest disposable decoration.

The Marriage of Holland's Queen.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 19.—Duke Henry of Mecklenburg-Schwerin will arrive here on Jan. 30, to attend the festivities preliminary to his marriage to Queen Wilhelmina. It is officially announced that immediately after the marriage the Queen will confer on him the title of Prince and give him high military and naval rank.

Rats Dead from Bubonic Plague?

BERLIN, Jan. 19.—The German steamer Pergamon, which arrived at Hamburg on Jan. 15 from Smyrna, had a number of dead rats on board. This caused a suspicion that they died from the bubonic plague. The rats are undergoing bacteriological examination.

Danish Steamer Sunk in Collision.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 19.—The Danish mail steamers Gefion and Hveen were in collision, and the former sank. The latter put into Malmo, in a leaky condition. The passengers and mails of the Gefion were saved.

REPUBLICAN CLUB CONTEST.

Judge Olcott's Friends Say Gen. Tremain Has Not Voted in New York City Elections.

The election for President of the Republican Club is being hotly contested. The two candidates, ex-Judge W. M. K. Olcott and Gen. Tremain have many friends who are working constantly for votes. The friends of Judge Olcott have had an expert examine the registry of voters as published and discovered that Gen. Tremain, although a resident of 105 East Eighteenth Street since 1894, has never voted from that address. The members of the Republican Club have been excited over this discovery, as it was thought that Gen. Tremain was always a stanch Republican.

Martin Scudder, Republican district leader, who lives in the same apartment house with Gen. Tremain, said last evening:

"I have no knowledge of Gen. Tremain voting in this district. If he had voted from The Florence apartment house, 105 East Eighteenth Street, in the Twenty-fifth Election District of the Twenty-fifth Assembly District, I would have had him on my list. He has not voted from that address either for Col. Strong for Mayor or against Robert A. Van Wyck."

"Is Gen. Tremain a member of your district association?" was asked by a TIMES reporter last evening.

"He is not and never has been."

Gen. Tremain has a country residence near Lake George, and he spends most of his time there. The friends of ex-Judge Olcott claim that as Gen. Tremain has not voted in this city for seven years, and has not taken an active part in local politics he is not entitled to be elected to the Presidency of the Republican Club of the City of New York.

There are 600 resident members of the Republican Club, and it is supposed that 500 votes will be cast in the election for President. The Nominating Committee in the club has issued a circular in behalf of Gen. Tremain, in which it is declared:

At the November meeting two tickets for Nominating Committee had been voted for, one of which, represented by its friends to be an Olcott ticket, had been beaten. The situation of the club demanded a President who would have the leisure to give time and thought to its interests. Gen. Tremain had such leisure, and expressed his willingness to devote it to the affairs of the club. Mr. Olcott was a very busy man, occupied in private and public litigations, and could not have the needed time to devote to the club. Gen. Tremain has been a member of the club since the year of its organization; was Vice President three years, and the past year has been a member of the Committee on National Affairs. He has stood by the club in adversity and prosperity, and has been as active as any member who has ever sought office in the club. Gen. Tremain has always taken a citizen's part in the social and political life of the city. The fact that he has not sought or held public office ought not to disqualify him for the Presidency.

Mr. Olcott, regular nominee for Third Vice President, has been an active member for over seven years, one year Recording Secretary and three years member of the Committee on Membership. Why is he displaced by a gentleman who has been a member of the club less than two years?

Mr. Clarke, the regular nominee for Corresponding Secretary, has been an active member of the club for eight years. Why is he displaced by a gentleman who has been a member less than one year, who, if elected, will become a member of the Executive Committee?

It is thus evident that the opposition is based simply on personal preference. Is this sufficient ground for rejecting the regular nominees put before the club by the regularly chosen Nominating Committee? The ticket headed by Mr. Olcott was subsequently put in nomination by individuals representing themselves and not the club.

GOV. ODELL AND PLATT CONFER

Chairman Dunn Says the Police Bill Will Be Slightly Modified—A Two-Year Term for Mayor.

There was a conference yesterday afternoon between the Republican leaders in the Fifth Avenue Hotel in reference to police and other legislation. Gov. Odell had a short talk with Senator Platt and left for Newburg on the 3:30 train. State Chairman George W. Dunn remained in conference with the up-State leaders until the evening, when he left for his home at Binghamton.

It was announced after the conferences that there would be minor changes in the Police bill now pending in the Legislature, but that these changes would not materially affect the bill. The statement that the power of removal clause, giving the Governor the right to remove without charges the single-head Police Commission, would be stricken from the bill was denied by Chairman Dunn before he left the city. Chairman Dunn said:

"There will be some changes in the Police bill, but none of any importance."

There are some features of the Police bill which the leaders are considering carefully, especially the Election Bureau feature. There was also a meeting of the leaders to discuss the reapportionment of the State under the Burleigh law. The State of New York gains three members of Congress, and according to the plans made yesterday two of these members will be allowed to this city.

There was talk yesterday of the introduction of a bill making the term of office of the Mayor two years. The leaders favor the change and a bill to bring it about will be introduced in the Legislature shortly.

CLAPP WINS SENATORSHIP.

St. Paul Lawyer Nominated by the Minnesota Republican Caucus.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 19.—Ex-Attorney General Moses E. Clapp of St. Paul was this afternoon chosen as the Republican nominee for the place in the United States Senate made vacant by the death of C. K. Davis after one of the hardest contests in the history of the State. Six candidates remained in the contest and received votes for fifteen ballots, and as many others were looked on as possible nominees, although not at any time receiving any votes.

Last night in a caucus lasting four and a half hours fourteen ballots were cast, the final one showing no material change from the first. The caucus then took a recess till 2:30 o'clock this afternoon, and the work was continued at that time. Only five of the 140 Republicans were absent, and these were represented by proxies. The first ballot of the day, the fifteenth of the contest, showed a gain of three for Clapp and a loss of the same number for Evans. However, that ballot was never announced.

Earlier in the afternoon Mr. Tawney had told his friends that he would release them from their pledges, but they announced that they would continue to vote for him.

This ballot showed them all in line, but before the vote was announced Senator Lodge expressed a desire to change from Tawney to Evans. He was quickly followed by others before Senator MacArthur announced his change from Tawney to Clapp, others making like statements, Clapp getting most of the Tawney vote.

Speaker Dowling, in the chair, realising the nearness of a decision cast the seventy-first Clapp vote, that being the number needed to elect. Other changes followed, and then Representative Sherman Smith of the Evans forces moved to make the nomination of Clapp unanimous. This motion was carried with a rush, and a committee was sent after the winning and defeated candidates, who addressed the caucus appropriately.

Moses E. Clapp is forty-nine years of age, and was born in Delphi, Ind. When he was seven years of age his parents moved to Wisconsin. He secured his common school education in Wisconsin and was graduated from the Wisconsin Law School in 1873. He moved to Fergus Falls, Minn., in 1880, where he took up the practice of law, permanently locating in St. Paul in 1891. Mr. Clapp was elected Attorney General of the State in 1886, 1888, and 1890, and has been prominent in politics. He was candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor in 1896, but was defeated by Gov. Clough. He enjoys a large law practice. He is an orator of ability and is familiarly known as the "Black Eagle of Minnesota."

FOUR VOTE IN JOINT SESSION.

Delaware Legislature Casts Senatorial Ballots Without Result.

DOVER, Del., Jan. 19.—The voting to-day in the Assembly for two United States Senators was with all the customary form attending joint balloting, although only four men represented the State. The Constitutional provision requiring balloting every day at the noon hour was carried out to the letter by the four men.

Senator Allee presided at the unique joint session, and the balloting resulted thus: Long Term—Richard R. Kenney, (Dem.,) 2; John Edward Addicks, (Union Rep.,) 2. No quorum; no election. Unexpired Term—Willard Saulsbury, (Dem.,) 2; John Edward Addicks, (Union Rep.,) 2. No quorum; no election.

No Choice in Montana.

HELENA, Mon., Jan. 19.—The first joint ballot of the short-term Senatorship resulted in no choice to-day. Fifteen members were either absent or paired. Charles Buer of Fort Benton developed a boom, receiving 11 votes. He had but one yesterday. Lee Mantle received the entire Republican vote present.

MR. BAILEY EXONERATED.

Texas Legislative Committee Finds that Charges Are False.

Special to The New York Times.

GALVESTON, Texas, Jan. 19.—A majority of the members of the legislative committee which has investigated the charges preferred by David McCall, a Democratic member of the House, against Congressman Joseph W. Bailey, who is a candidate for United States Senator at the election to occur next Tuesday, to-day completed their report, recommending the adoption of the following resolutions:

Whereas, By the most diligent inquiry they have not been able to discover a single fact or circumstance decreditable either to the Hon. J. W. Bailey or to any other State official, but on the contrary, all of the evidence before said committee completely and overwhelmingly exonerates the Hon. J. W. Bailey and all State officials from the charges of misconduct; therefore, be it Resolved, That the House of Representatives denounce the imputations and insinuations against the integrity of J. W. Bailey and our State officials as the most cruel, vindictive, and unfounded attack ever made upon the character of a faithful public servant in Texas.

The minority report opposes the adoption of the above resolution, on the ground that every citizen of Texas has the right to discuss and criticise the public acts of officials and those seeking high and honorable offices at the hands of the people, so long as such criticism is kept within the bounds of reason and not inspired by malice.

BRONX AND RAPID TRANSIT.

Proposed Change of Plans Causes Much Indignation.

The rapid transit question is still agitating the residents of the Borough of the Bronx, and the recent proposition to suspend the construction of that portion of the underground system from One Hundred and Forty-first Street and Lenox Avenue to One Hundred and Forty-ninth Street and Third Avenue, has stirred up a storm of indignation and a very lively controversy among the members of the Taxpayers' Alliance. As a result of the opposition that has divided the members of the alliance, which is composed of associations throughout the borough, a special meeting will be held on Wednesday morning at One Hundred and Seventy-sixth Street and Third Avenue, when a very lively time is expected. The proposition which is to be considered at this meeting is embodied in the following resolution, which caused all the trouble:

Resolved, That we request that the elevated structure be at once built as planned by the Rapid Transit Commission, north and east from One Hundred and Forty-ninth Street at Third Avenue, along the present proposed route; and provided a rapid transit connection by a direct east side line to the City Hall, with a continuous and satisfactory train service and at a five-cent fare, is obtained within two years, we approve the suspension of the building of the link from Lenox Avenue to Third Avenue, and that if such satisfactory east side rapid transit by through trains and at a five-cent fare be not obtained by that time, then the contractor shall be requested to at once proceed to build the suspended link, his contract to do so remaining meantime in full force. Provided, however, that we favor this proposition so as to ultimately obtaining the east side underground line from Forty-second Street to the Borough of the Bronx to connect with the proposed line from One Hundred and Forty-ninth Street along Westchester Avenue, and so on to Bronx Park.

Resolved, That the Rapid Transit Commission be urged to proceed at once in the preparation of plans for an additional route along Jerome Avenue in the Borough of the Bronx, and that the alliance earnestly recommends that such plans take precedence over any further provision for the Borough of Brooklyn.

Resolved, That the commission be requested to give a hearing to the alliance upon this subject at the earliest convenient date, and that the members of the alliance and others interested in the subject be notified of the date, and requested to attend the hearing.

Mr. Hartwell, a member of the Mapes Estate Taxpayers' Association, in speaking on the proposition, said:

"After years of fighting a contract has finally been let and that contract calls for a route laid out and indorsed by the Taxpayers' Alliance. The proposition as proposed practically asks that city money be used to build a feeder for the Manhattan Elevated Railway Company. This is all wrong. The east side is asked to give up something tangible for something very uncertain. There is no good reason to my mind why the Taxpayers' Alliance should go back on its action of two months ago and build up the Jerome Avenue section at the expense of sections with a very much larger population. The proposition practically provides for rapid transit for only about 60,000 of our population instead of the 140,000 which will be provided for if the present contract is carried out. The proposed branch of the elevated road will be of very little benefit to the east side of the Bronx. We can now go from One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street to West Farms, by trolley cars, quicker than in the elevated structure. This proposition gives us practically nothing, and asks us to yield everything."

W. W. Niles, Chairman of the Rapid Transit Committee of the Taxpayers' Alliance, said:

"The Taxpayers' Alliance voted down the abandonment of the One Hundred and Forty-ninth Street link two months ago. I think if we allowed the Rapid Transit Commission to abandon that link it would be suicidal to our interests. If we did we might just as well give up rapid transit and go home, for I don't think we would ever see it north of the Harlem River."

There are, however, many Bronx residents who say they are not as sanguine regarding rapid transit as they were a year ago.

Charles M. Kaeppel, a real estate dealer and member of the North Side Board of Trade, when asked for his opinion regarding rapid transit in the Borough of the Bronx said:

"Several years ago a representative of THE NEW YORK TIMES called and interviewed me with regard to my idea as to the possibility of the Bronx receiving rapid transit. At that time I said that the only rapid transit we could hope for would be the existing surface railroads, namely the New York Central, the Putnam Division of the Harlem Railroad, and the New York, New Haven and Hartford. After the Rapid Transit Commission had given public hearings to delegations representing the North Side Board of Trade, Property Owners' Alliance, Twenty-third Ward Property Owners' Association, and others, and after having encouraged them in the belief that the Bronx would not be neglected, in fact, after having awarded the contracts for the improvement, the north side is ignored, because the commission says that there is not sufficient money to take care of the Bronx, as is stated in a communication to J. C. Davies of the North Side Board of Trade from Chief Engineer Parsons.

"Last Sunday's papers gave illustrations showing the contemplated improvements on the Grand Central Station at Forty-second Street, which are to connect the Vanderbilt roads with the rapid transit system, which in itself shows conclusively that the railroad companies have persistently worked against the Bronx in matters of rapid transit, and would only sanction it where they would reap the benefit which without a doubt will be a harvest to them in every sense of the word.

"The time is ripe for a most vigorous and hearty protest against the methods employed by the corporations whose roads run through the Bronx; it is time for the people to unite as one man to fight for their rights."

National Wool Growers' Convention.

SALT LAKE, Utah, Jan. 19.—Seventeen States and Territories were represented at the National Wool Growers' Convention, which met here to-day. Vice President F. P. Bennett delivered the opening address. Among the subjects discussed were: Sheep raising in forest reserves, freight rates, the skirting clause, Government inspection of sheep, leasing of Government lands, and the tariff question as affecting the sheep industry. Senator Francis E. Warren was elected President and F. P. Bennett of Massachusetts Vice President.

Mr. Godard Sues for Heavy Damages.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Jan. 19.—Alonzo Godard of Liverpool, N. Y., who was injured in a head-on collision on the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg Division of the New York Central in this city Nov. 26, has brought suit against the New York Central for $50,000 damages.

APPROVED CLAIMS BEFORE THE SENATE

It Will Take Nearly $14,000,000 to Satisfy Them.

Double Pay to the Amount of $507,120 Asked for a Fleet of Old Vessels—Some Typical "Old Soldiers."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—When Senator Money made an effort, a short time ago, to induce the Senate to take up and pass a bill that would take some $6,000,000 to $10,000,000 ont of the Treasury and give it to persons who claim to have been unlawfully deprived of property to that amount during the war of the rebellion, the attack made upon the Treasury aroused the watchdogs at both ends of the Capitol, and some account was taken in a general way of the gross demands upon the Government for payment of claims. The aggregate was stated at anywhere from $50,000,000 to $500,000,000. The last figure is probably quite inclusive of all manner of claims preferred and that have and have not yet met with the approval of the Committees on Claims in the two branches of Congress. Very close computation can be made, however, of the amount that members of the Senate, through the Committee on Claims of that body, has declared to be worthy of payment.

The session is not yet over, and the Claims Committee may meet many times before the adjournment of Congress. It has been industrious, and it has reported with favor, thus indicating its opinion that the sums demanded should be paid, bills that carry certainly $13,500,000, and other bills permitting prosecutions to be brought in the Court of Claims that may later impose additional heavy obligations upon the Government and burdens upon the cheerful taxpayer. This is the account as it is made out from the calendar of the Senate and from the text of the approved bills and the accompanying reports:

Whole amount called for specifically by bills reported	$13,502,238
Reported by Senator Allen	$233,078
Reported by Senator Depew	306,200
Reported by Senator Kean	209,434
Reported by Senator McCumber	61,255
Reported by Senator McLaurin	Indefinite
Reported by Senator Martin	40,241
Reported by Senator Money	6,022,433
Reported by Senator Rawlins	1,279
Reported by Senator Stewart	398,795
Reported by Senator Taliaferro	55,238
Reported by Senator Teller	5,629,774
Reported by Senator Warren	648,500

This list shows that some Senators have been more considerate of claimants than others, and that Chairman Stewart has not reserved to himself the right to put the heaviest bills on the calendar. Senator Mason and Senator Teller are the most generous in their indications of willingness to have the Treasury relieved of some of its surplus. Most of the more than $6,000,000 set down to Mr. Mason's credit would go out if the bill reported by him and pressed by Mr. Money to recover money said to be due under the old "captured and abandoned property act" should become law. Mr. Teller's legislative key to the Treasury is an "omnibus," which carries a hold and deck load of veteran claims. Some of them may be found on the calendar separately, but the persons interested in them, seldom in any case the persons for whom the original obligation was supposed to have been contracted, desire to have the benefit of inclusive or separate action.

SOME MISCELLANEOUS CLAIMS.

Senator Teller's "omnibus bill" carries appropriations of $4,709,909 for State claims and $904,677 for miscellaneous claims. Among the miscellaneous claims is one for $15,000 by W. R. Austin & Co., for getting up a list of members of the Grand Army of the Republic, in 1887, which was found to be useless when, in 1900, the Eleventh Census was completed. W. H. Crook renews his effort to get $4,000 for signing land warrants for the President from 1879 to 1882. Crook is disbursing officer at the White House, and besides paying off all hands he was assigned to sign these patents. He has been trying since the Forty-seventh Congress. Another old claim, originating in the Forty-fifth Congress, is that of James M. Wilbur, for tiling in the Post Office Building at New York. This claim was for $12,000 when it was made, and it has grown to $45,615, most of the added amount being required, presumably, to satisfy the demands of successive attorneys who have tried to get it through Congress. The work for which the claim was made was performed by certain contractors, and their contract was satisfied. Wilbur could not get anything as a subcontractor from the contractors in chief, so he came to the Treasury, which, after an investigation, offered him $1,214 to get rid of him. He refused the offer. The claim has been as high as $52,000.

It ought to be said just here, before going further to describe some of the more interesting claims and their origin, that most of the bills that have been favored by the Cla

ROMANCES UNEARTHED IN OLD BANK BOOKS

Through One a Son Learns of a Mother's Devotion.

Another Tells the Story of a Lover's Savings that Escaped the Woman Who Should Have Had Them.

Musty old bank ledgers would seem to be about the last resort of a professional romancer in search of material. Yet properly used they have their share. Those of the Bowery Savings Bank, for a single example, fairly bristle with them. That some of these have been revealed is due to the policy of President Hicks. Since 1896 he has had a systematic search made for the owners of or heirs to accounts that have become of the "dormant" class. Dormant is the name given to accounts that have not been added to or subtracted from for a period of twenty-two years. After that time interest on such deposits and their accumulated interest ceases. In this bank, established in 1834, there are now but 418 of such accounts, with an aggregate value of a trifle over $47,500, though the bank has done business to the extent of billions of dollars, and with several millions of people. So closely are these accounts watched and their owners traced that the sum named as awaiting legal claimants represents but seven-hundredths of 1 per cent. of the total deposits now held by the institution.

It is in the search for the owners of these dormant accounts or their heirs that the romances are revealed. Joseph G. Liddle, who is a sort of Sherlock Holmes among the storied secrets of the musty ledgers of the bank, has a wealth of stories as to the tracing of these heirs that are weird, pathetic, and sometimes startling in their dénouements. "I was over in Greenwood Cemetery with a friend on the afternoon of Thanksgiving Day," said he, "when the name on a plain headstone attracted my attention. It was a rather uncommon one and had fixed my attention when I was looking over the dormant accounts a few days before. On examining the stone and afterward the records of the Cemetery Association, I found that a mother and her three children were buried there in one grave. I later found that that was the end of the family, so far as any one knew. No relatives of any sort could be traced. That headstone told of the wiping out in its entirety of a family. The mother had a dormant account in the bank. It will be carried on the books as all such accounts are, in the hope that at some time or other some one may turn up who will be able to establish a claim to the money."

An impression has gone abroad that the handsome structures that savings banks erect as their homes are built from the sums of money deposited and never called for. No impression could be more erroneous. Such sums are carried on the books just the same as live accounts. The only difference is that after twenty-two years of quietude they cease to draw interest under a wise provision of law. If this were not so they would develop into enormous fortunes at the expense of the people who do keep their accounts alive. Search for the owners of these accounts never abates, at least in the larger banks of this city. Advertisements for heirs of missing holders of accounts are published from time to time, not only in the city papers, but in those published in localities where the bank has any reason to believe there are heirs of the depositors. Here are a few of the stories of searches made for heirs that have been attended with success. There are hundreds more that have been attended with failure that are fully as interesting. But these do not serve a purpose in this collection.

FORTUNE FOUND TOO LATE.

Proof of a Mother's Devotion that an Advertisement Revealed.

Here is the story of a mother's devotion. It only came to light through an advertisement published by the Bowery Bank asking for the heirs of, say, Thomas Brady. That wasn't his name. For perfectly apparent reasons, the actual names of the persons interested are not used in this series of little stories. There was nothing to indicate who Thomas Brady was in the announcement. But there was a man well-to-do, holding a very responsible position with one of the largest concerns in this town, who bore the same name. For many years he had been trying to find traces of his two sisters and the fate of his father and mother. He wrote to the bank, stating the circumstances and asking if it was not possible that he was of that family. There was a personal interview. From this, and the history of the case that the bank alone possessed, appeared a possibility that here at last was a clue to the rightful heirs to the account. It appeared that late in the fifties Brady had deposited a certain sum in the bank, giving his residence, age, family connections, and such other facts as are ordinarily required. Some two years later he died, and his widow, who was left with three small children, transferred the account to her own name. Later she again transferred it to herself, as trustee for her children, whose names were given. There was a change of residence at each transfer. The widow had stated that she was obliged to work for a living for herself and her children, and wished to save the deposit as a "nest egg" for her children in case she should become too old or incapacitated for work. Shortly after the woman, worried by her struggle for existence, became insane and was taken to the city hospital for the insane, where she died. It was also discovered that two of her children had died. The third, a boy, had been sent to the orphans' home at Ward's Island as a city charge. All trace of him after his discharge from this institution was lost.

He who responded to the advertisement was subjected to a long examination regarding his early life, knowing that such matters were confidential after that, he then told that he had been at Ward's Island as a lad. From there he had come out into the world and fought his way to his present position, devoting all the time he could after his days of prosperity came to discovering the whereabouts of his family. He remembered indistinctly that he had lived as a boy "on an east side street, far down town, opposite a graveyard." Further than this he could not tell, except that his father had been a pipeturner, and that he remembered his having had a lathe in the house, on which he turned out the pipes before they went to the hands of the finishers. The original depositor had given his business as a pipeturner. One of the four addresses at which he had lived turned out to be opposite a long-since abandoned graveyard. The claimant was asked to visit the locality in company with Mr. Liddle and others of the bank's employees. He did so, and after a short tramp about the vicinity that seemed to revive recollections of youth, was able to point out the house in which he had lived and had probably been born. This tallied with the records of the bank. After a search among his papers he also discovered the original letters of administration on his father's estate granted to the widow, and was able to produce three or four carefully guarded scraps of paper with bits of the handwriting of both his father and mother. This was all the proof needed, and he was given the little more than $1,100 that stood to the account of the Brady children.

Tears filled his eyes when the proof of his mother's devotion was made evident, and he sobbed: "Had we only known of this money in time the family would never have been broken up, and we could have made a home for mother in her last days." That mother had so carefully guarded the secret of her savings when she left her bank book with the bank for safekeeping that it had never appeared among her effects, and the fact of the deposit was not revealed until it came out in this singular fashion.

TRIED TO "BEAT" THE BANK.

Defeat of a Scheme to Get Possession of a Dormant Account.

This is the story of how a woman was balked in her attempt to get a sum exceeding $1,000 that was not rightfully hers. Among the relatives once advertised for were those of a woman who had lived as a servant, and whose name may be called Bridget Newhall. That's near enough for our purposes. A well-dressed, well-educated woman came to the bank and claimed to be next of kin to the deceased servant, claiming her as an aunt. She was able to tell all the history of the old serving woman. When questioned as to whether there were other heirs she was flippant, and her replies were so unsatisfactory that the bank officials were suspicious, and decided to hold the matter in abeyance for a time. In one of the letters she had written to the bank about her claim there was a chance reference to a town in Connecticut, where the old servant was said to have made a visit.

At a subsequent interview with the claimant at the bank this town was mentioned, with a suggestion that her heirs might be there. The claimant laughed this aside, and left the bank with an implied intimation that the bank officers would never be able to discover any heirs nearer than herself. Mr. Liddle suspected a family quarrel. So to the town named he sent an advertisement asking for the heirs of Bridget Newhall. This, published on Saturday, brought to his residence on the following Monday a number of her heirs, who wished to know what they were wanted for. Then it turned out, just as had been suspected, that there had been a family quarrel. The new-comers proved that they were nephews and nieces of the dead woman, and that the claimant was but a cousin in the second degree. To the administrator of the estate of the old serving woman the cash on deposit to her account was paid over, and the claimant has never been seen since.

Among the banks there is a community of interest in this searching out of heirs to dormant accounts. At a conference one day it developed that the same woman had succeeded so well in establishing her claim to recognition as the rightful heir that she had obtained from another bank a deposit of over $1,200. That fact became the property of a newspaper in the town where the rightful heirs lived, and where the claimant was a woman of some social pretensions. This paper printed a fac simile of the check she had wrongly obtained, and there was a scandal and a suit which were a nine days' sensation in the Connecticut township.

FOUND THROUGH CURIOSITY.

California Widow Found a Fortune Left by Her Husband.

Arps was the name of a man who had made a deposit away back in the fifties. It was such an unusual name that it seemed as if the heirs should be readily found. Yet the heirs to Mr. Arps had been sought unsuccessfully for years. His name naturally headed the alphabetically arranged list of unclaimed deposits advertised. But until a couple of years ago no one of that peculiar name was found. Then there came a letter from a man, who said he was induced to write rather from curiosity than from any other motive. He was a traveling man, and wherever he went made it his habit to search out people of his name, when he found such a one in a directory or newspaper. It was this curiosity that led him to write to the bank to know if this man might not have been a relative of his. As he was rich, he did not need the money, but wanted to satisfy his curiosity. An interview was asked for and arranged. The writer knew nothing of the history of the depositor, and had no clue as to who he was.

Six or seven months later there came to the bank from San Francisco a letter from this inquisitive man of the name of Arps. It seems that while in that city he had looked over the directory and found there a woman of the name of Arps as being a resident. He called on her, found that she was no relative, but that she had at one time lived in New York City. So he wrote to the bank of his find. They at once put themselves in communication with the lady, who told them all about her dead husband, and described him as having been a sugar baker. She was his widow, and was entirely unaware that he had a deposit at the bank. Later she sent to the bank several specimens of the handwriting of her husband. These tallied exactly with those in the possession of the bank, and the money, several hundred dollars, was forwarded to her address. Later it was learned that it came in at a very opportune moment, as she had been ill and was sadly in need of the cash.

A BAD STEP-DAUGHTER'S LUCK.

Got the Money that Should Have Gone to Worthy Women.

This story, relating to an account of $2,200, does not turn out as it should, yet it is a true history. Mary Galligan was a thrifty and saving servant in some of the best of the older families in the town. Back in the fifties she opened an account at the Bowery Bank, and added to it from time to time, until she met and married a widower with a daughter. This man married her for her money. From other banks she took sufficient sums to enable him to buy a horse and a cab and become a full-fledged "night hawk," with all that that implies. The husband drank, and when money was scarce "hocked" his cab for rum, the hard-working wife redeeming it and setting him on his pins again. This went on for a series of years, the step-daughter abusing the old woman, as step-daughters sometimes do. The treatment finally resulted in insanity, and the wife was committed to the city asylum. There she died, and from the Morgue she was buried in the Potter's Field. This was about ten years after her unhappy marriage.

Mary Galligan had two nieces who never lost their love for their aunt, and who visited her while she was on the island. Both were servants, and from their scanty earnings they bought her delicacies and provided such comforts for her last days as they could afford. The step-daughter never went near the old lady. When the bank advertised for information about the old woman the two nieces who had cared for her answered the advertisement and give the history of the old lady, as outlined above. They further proved they had had her body disinterred and buried in consecrated ground. They gave the address of the step-daughter, who had prospered as no such person should have prospered according to the rules of all well-regulated stories. But this whole romance goes by contraries. This step-daughter was found, proved that her father had died ten years after her step-mother, who had willed her property to him at the time of her unlucky marriage. She was communicated with, got the money, and the nieces who had cared for the old lady were left out in the cold.

HER DEAD LOVER'S LEGACY.

Money for a Wedding Escaped the Woman It Was Meant For.

One of the strangest looking visitors that ever came to the bank was a quiet, refined, and very ladylike spinster of about fifty years of age, and dressed in the clothes of a half century ago. She wore the corkscrew curls, the bonnet, dress, and wrap that showed that she preferred the fashions of her girlhood days to those of the present time.

"You have advertised for information as to William Blenkinsop," she said. "I once knew a man of that name who had an account at the bank. Perhaps I may be able to assist you in clearing up any mystery about him."

She was informed that the bank officers were looking for relatives of his, as he had a dormant account there on which interest had ceased for some years. She knew of that, she said. Further conversation revealed the fact that Blenkinsop had been her affianced husband, and that the money he had deposited was that with which they had intended to begin their married life and housekeeping. A sudden illness had proved fatal, and when he died, there having been no bank book among his effects, the fact that he had a sum on deposit was forgotten. The woman had remained true to her first love and had never married. She knew all about where he was buried and his living relatives. The addresses of the latter she gave the bank. Two nephews from Massachusetts came on to New York with proof of their identity. Old love letters he had written to the quaint and quiet little woman were proof of his handwriting, and the account was turned over to the nephews. Whether they gave it to the woman to whom it belonged, sentimentally at least, the records do not show.

LUCK OF A PEDDLER'S SISTER.

Finds an Estate Twenty Years After Death of Her Brother.

Away back in the early fifties a pack peddler, who shall not even be dignified with an assumed name, started a small account at the Bowery Bank. Prospering, he went West, dropped his pack, and began a career as a merchant. If he prospered, he continued business. When things began to look blue he either failed or decamped, and that was one reason why it was so very hard to trace him in his wanderings, under a lot of assumed names, through Arkansas, Missouri, and Kansas, where he had carried on business on his scandalous plan. He died some twenty years ago, and his account ceased drawing interest.

Three years ago his sister saw his name advertised in the list of those of whom the bank was anxious to secure a trace. She came to the bank, told the story of her brother's life, showed letters from him which proved her identity, gave his history and pedigree as he had given it to the bank, and then secured a deposit of a little over $300 that stood to his credit. So thoroughly was she identified that the Bowery Bank people were able to direct her to two other banks where her brother had deposits unknown to her, and from these two she obtained about $5,000 in addition.

TRACING A SOLDIER'S HEIRS.

Heirs of a Deserter with an Account Traced to Homes in England.

Here is a soldier story. James Johnson, born in Portsmouth, England, came here as a young man and started an account at the Bowery Bank before he enlisted in the army and served through the civil war. Just about the time that big bounties were offered for recruits, Johnson deserted and came North to re-enlist and get one of those bounties. His second enlistment was under a different name, and James Johnson disappeared from the army records, and from the earth as well, to all intents and purposes. His account became dormant, and was an eyesore to the bank people. They sent letters to the United States Consul and to the Postmaster at Portsmouth, trying to trace the man and find his relatives. The efforts availed nothing.

Then Mr. Liddle thought of the methods pursued here occasionally to find missing friends, and wrote to the Mayor of the town asking if he would not have the newspaper reporters there write a little story about the English soldier who served in the American Army, and who had disappeared from the face of the earth, leaving a small estate behind him that his relatives were entitled to. The Mayor complied with the request. The story got into print. Shortly afterward Mr. Liddle received a letter from a brother of the former soldier, telling all his history, and how he had died of swamp fever down in Arkansas. This told correctly of the regiment he had enlisted in, of his desertion, and of the new name he had taken. Accompanying it were a lot of letters the soldier had written home at various times, and also a certificate of his death. That proved relationship, and the bank forwarded a draft to the relatives, who had no idea of the account he had in the Bowery Bank.

AFTER GRAND ARMY MEN.

German Relatives Received the Savings of One Killed in Battle.

Tracing heirs to accounts opened by soldiers during the war is one of the most difficult problems the banks have to deal with. A few years ago the Bowery Bank tried a novel and rather effective method. To the National Commander of the Grand Army of the Republic they sent a list of all the men who for any reason they suspected might have served in the army, and in whose names they had dormant accounts. They asked him to send this list to each State Commander, with a request that he, in turn, send it to each army post in his district. In this way every Grand Army post in the United States was reached, and as a result of this scheme about 10 per cent. of the entire number of dormant accounts standing at the bank were cleaned up.

This was the way the scheme worked in one instance. The list was read in a Grand Army post out in Wyoming. A member who was present took the trouble to write to the bank to inform them that one of the men on the list had been killed in the battle of the Wilderness. This the bank had previously ascertained. But he also wrote that the man came from a little town in Germany and had received letters from relatives there, naming three or four towns of which the dead soldier, who had been the writer's tent mate, had spoken. To each of the towns the bank authorities wrote, with the ultimate result that they found his nephews and nieces and were able to send them a couple of thousand dollars, a sum that was in their eyes a veritable fortune.

MAKING ACCOUNTS LIVE.

Means Taken to Stir Up People Who Have Forgotten Their Account.

It is not to dormant accounts alone that the Bowery Bank people direct attention. What they have accomplished in this direction is worth noting, however, for since they began their systematic search they have reduced the sum of such accounts from $82,000 in 1896, to $47,500 at the present time. After an account has been untouched for a period of fourteen years, that is, where no money has been either deposited or drawn out and no book presented for interest to be added, the bank begins a search for the owners of these accounts that threaten to become dormant. Letters are sent to the addresses given when the account was opened or to others that the directories may indicate are the present residences of the depositors. Other means of a secret nature are followed that seem to give clues to the unheard-of depositors. Through these methods many accounts that threaten to become dormant are made live. Since 1896, 728 such accounts have been made live, the aggregate amount of these being about $220,000. Within the past few days two such accounts have been reopened by people who had forgotten about them, though in each instance they amounted to very respectable sums. In one of the cases, the man, once president of Richmond Hill, L. I., was unearthed in the mountains of Tennessee, and he sent on a deposit of $1, which kept his account alive. In the other the depositor was found in Oakland, Cal., and he has sent his bank account a comfortable Christmas present, which will keep it alive for twenty-two years more at all events. Scores of such incidents could be cited. They are of value as showing how thoroughly active savings institutions live to the interests of their depositors, for what is the rule at the Bowery Bank is also applicable to all the older savings institutions of the city.

A Story of German Gentlemen.

From the London News.

An interesting story from the life of the late Count Blumenthal is related in the German weekly Nation. In July, 1866, Gen. von Blumenthal had, as known, written a letter to his wife from the seat of war, and had confided it to the Prussian military post. This field post was captured by the Austrians, and Blumenthal's letter appeared in Viennese papers. In this letter he spoke unjustly of Moltke, most harshly about Prince Frederick Charles, and did not even spare his patron, at that time the Crown Prince, a slight reproof—he accused him of unpunctuality. The Crown Prince was not vexed with his Chief of the Gencral Staff. Moltke also behaved generously. According to statements of credible witnesses, he refused to read the paper in which Blumenthal's letter was printed, declaring that what a man writes to his wife no third person should interfere with. Prince Frederick Charles found the newspaper on his writing table. Nobody had dared to hand it to him personally. He ordered a horse to be saddled, and rode to the King's quarters, the newspaper in his pocket. Arrived there he was informed that the King was engaged just at that moment, for the Crown Prince was reporting to him. Prince Frederick Charles waited a long time in the ante-chamber. At last the door leading into the King's apartment was opened, and out came the Crown Prince, highly excited, his face beaming with joy. As soon as he saw Prince Frederick Charles he hastened up to him, and said: "I can tell you a piece of news which will please you as much as it has pleased me. The King forgives Gen. Blumenthal the incautious letter he wrote." Prince Frederick Charles's request was thus settled before it was known that he was there to make it.

A Snake's Vitality.

From the London Mail.

MELBOURNE, Nov. 20.—An instance showing the remarkable vitality of a snake has just been brought to light at Outtrim, Victoria, during the process of dismantling a calyx drill used for some years past in testing the coal deposits on the Outtrim-Howitt Coal Mining Company's properties.

The platform from which the drill is worked was erected upon tall, cylindrical iron pillars, 30 feet high or more, these being "stepped" in sockets of their own diameter and hermetically cemented in. On lowering one of these hollow columns last Friday a snake, about 3 feet long, and terribly attenuated, slowly and very feebly crept forth.

It seemed dazed, either by the bright sunlight or by weakness, to such a degree that it is now thought that it must have been totally blind, so it was, of course, easily despatched.

There can be not the slightest doubt that it had been immured there, without food, light, or water, in that narrow iron cell ever since it was last placed on end, now rather more than twelve months ago.

THE WATCH-DOGS OF WAR.

How Sleep Is Found for an Army Amid Its Enemies—The Duties and Feelings of Sentries.

From The London Mail.

"Halt! Who goes there?"

"Friend."

"Advance, friend, and give the countersign."

A figure advances out of the darkness and softly whispers the countersign.

"Pass, friend, all's well."

It is the relief. The sentries are rapidly changed, and in a few seconds the tramp of their feet dies away in the distance. It is a dark night. The faint light given out by the stars seems only to render the surrounding objects dark and weird.

The new sentry is a young soldier, and this is his first experience as a sentry on active service. As soon as the relief goes away, a strange feeling of loneliness creeps over him. The silence is intense; it is a silence that can be felt. It tells on his nerves and almost terrifies him. All his senses become quickened—he listens for the lightest sound—he tries to pierce the inky darkness around him. He almost longs to hear a shot ring out and end this suspense. He conjures up visions of the enemy creeping up to a lonely sentry and giving him his quietus. How he longs for his two hours' vigil to expire; but the wings of Time have suddenly become leaden. He thinks his time must have been up long ago. He tries to make it pass by counting away the minutes.

His nerves presently begin to play him tricks. He fancies he can hear the noise of a body of creeping men. He peers about him. He hardly breathes—there is an uncomfortable tight feeling around his chest—he can feel his temples wildly throbbing.

What's that?

There is a black shadow not far away. Is it a man?

His gaze is riveted on it—it seems to move, to be creeping slowly up. It must be a man—the tension is suddenly released, and his soldierly qualities return to him in an instant. He levels his bayonet and goes for the shadow, to find—a bush.

He can hardly believe his own eyes. He could have sworn it had moved. Could he have been so nervous as to suffer from delusions such as this? He had fought in battles without a tremor. In a battle a man feels full of fight, he boldly advances without thought of danger, action dissipates fear. Sentry-go at night is a different thing. There is the terrible loneliness, the feeling that danger may come unexpectedly from any quarter, a forced period of inaction when action is needed to dispel nervousness. It is an unpleasant job, and there are few men who do not feel nervous. Few will own it, although the man who does not know fear is generally lacking in brain power.

There is a well-known tale about a celebrated General, whose aide de camp, a man of muscle but with very limited brain power and deficient in sensibility, remarked that he, the General, appeared to be nervous. His answer was: "Yes! I am nervous, and if you were half as nervous as I am you'd run away."

There is an end to everything, however, even to a sentry's vigil, and eventually the sentry hears the welcome tramp of the relief. What a delightful feeling rushes over him! He feels as a child feels who has been lying in bed terrified by recollections of rumored ghosts and apparitions, when its mother appears.

NIGHT ALARMS.

Away they go back to the outpost, which consists of about thirty men, ensconced in a little natural fort, a rise of ground strewn with large boulders. Most of these men are fast asleep. In the ordinary way one would not feel like sleeping on outpost duty; but the continued physical strain of active service is so fatiguing that not even the danger of a night attack or sniping, to which an outpost is particularly liable, will ward off the much-needed sleep.

An army must have a certain amount of sleep, and what little sleep it does get should be, if possible, undisturbed. There is nothing more wearing to troops on active service than frequent night alarms. Continual false alarms are both physically and morally injurious. Our system of outposts, however, gives us a feeling of tolerable security. Our enemy suffered more than ourselves from false night alarms. They had had a few alarms which were far from false, and they were followed by attacks which our friend the enemy does not easily forget. On several occasions I was told by Boers that they never had a comfortable night's rest for fear of a bayonet attack. I believe them.

The outpost system, like all good systems, is very simple. Outposts, consisting of twenty or thirty men, are placed around the army. Sentries are placed some distance in front of the outposts. The distance between sentries varies, but it is always such that no one could creep in between two sentries without being seen by one of them. This also applies to the flank sentries of adjacent posts. We have thus a complete chain of sentries.

In the case of a night attack the sentry to whom the enemy first becomes visible retires to the outpost and reports, or, if there is no time for this, fires off his rifle. The outpost defends its position; but if the attack be a genuine one, will probably be slowly driven back upon the main body, by which time it would be ready to meet the attack. The memory of deeds of valor performed by British outposts, not only in the South African campaign, but in previous wars, gives the British soldier that sense of security so necessary to prolonged active service.

WHAT A STABLE PICKET MUST DO.

So much for the serious side of sentry-go; but there is another kind of sentry whose work is not fraught with physical danger, but which has the effect of impairing the temper of a saint. Have you ever heard of a gentleman called a line orderly? He is sometimes called a stable picket, or horse guard, or various other names, according to the fancy of his commanding officer. His duty is to look after the horse lines at night. It is harrowing work.

He takes charge of about thirty horses. These are in a line, with their heads tied together. Some of the horses try to graze, and in pushing forward the remainder step forward, so that a line orderly's work is principally keeping back the animals. He walks quickly up and down the line, persuading the brutes to keep back. We found it a good plan to push our hands into our overcoat pockets and flap the horses' noses with the skirts of the overcoat. It is effective, but doesn't improve the cloak. If it is the rainy season, the horse lines are usually a quagmire, which doesn't make the work any pleasanter. There is one blessing, however, you may smoke; but, and this is a big but, you must first get your match. These are rare. If there is no fire, you will probably have to forego your smoke, as your comrades have a peculiar objection to being woke up to be asked for a match.

A marvelous thing about horse lines is that, however tightly you tie the horses up, they will always be getting loose. It is always advisable to count the horses periodically. If one does get away, the orderly keeps his eye open for a straying horse. A good orderly will always have his right number in the morning. It does not follow that they are all the original ones of the night before. It has occasionally been found that the number has increased during the night, but when interrogated, the orderly puts on a vacant look and suggests that there might have been a mistake in the original counting.

Perhaps an orderly hears a disturbance at the other end of the line, and on going there finds that one of the horses has got its foot entangled in the head lines. While extricating the animal the horses at the other end of the line stroll forward and use the sleeping troopers' legs as a promenade. (On service each man sleeps a few feet in front of his horse.) A volley of abuse is at once leveled at the poor orderly's head. Sarcastic remarks are passed as to his efficiency as a mounted man. It is suggested that he should be told off to keep the wagons still at night. And so on.

In one case an orderly was so zealous in trying to keep the horses off his comrades' feet, that he drove the line back on to the heads of the section sleeping in rear. These remarks can be better imagined than described.

PERCIVAL C. FRANKLIN.

English Examination "Plums."

From the London News.

Some "plums" from recent examination papers are forwarded to us from a quarter in which hoaxing is not to be suspected. One question required masculine forms corresponding to abbess, ewe, and dam. The answers on one paper were abber, ewer, damn—the last a truly masculine form, says our correspondent. Another question was: What is the difference between an optimist and a pessimist? The answer of a sixth form boy, showing, says our correspondent, a fine perverted ingenuity in derivation, was: "An optimist looks after your eyes, and a pessimist after your feet."

YALE TEAM VICTORIOUS

Princeton's Hockey Seven Met Defeat in Second Championship Match.

PAULL'S EXCELLENT WORK

The Nassau Goal Keeper's Superior Individuality Stood Out as the Feature of a Well-Played Game.

With team work that would have been creditable to most any team, a defense which was all that could be desired, and an experience that kept them cool at critical moments, Yale University's hockey team had three decided advantages over Princeton in the first local intercollegiate championship game at the St. Nicholas Rink last evening. Eli's seven, intercollegiate champions of the last three years, naturally found the tall enders in last year's league not very imposing, and, without any strenuous effort, the wearers of the blue shut out the orange and black by a score of 5—0.

The struggle of last night was a battle of team work against individual play, and the exponents of the former quality fairly swept the others off their feet. Yale's seven had stick work developed to a high degree, and, in twisting the puck in and out toward the opposing goal, they had Nassau fairly bewildered.

Their attack was pretty to watch, for the four went down the ice passing the puck intricately back and forth, while the Tigers fought unavailingly to stem their progress. Yale's defense was invincible, for the puck seldom got further than Coxe, whose well-directed stick play generally sufficed to send the puck bounding in the opposite direction. Princeton had during the whole game perhaps half a dozen shots that reached Taintor, and none of these got by him. Yale had almost as many chances to shoot for goal as she wanted for the Princeton defense lacked much except at goal.

PAULL A STAR PLAYER.

Paull was a wonder at stopping shoots and his work surpassed that of many in the amateur league. If he allowed five goals get by him he prevented five times as many shoots from becoming scores.

A considerable crowd of college men and girls and graduates, numbering perhaps 1,200, saw the game, but there was a singular lack of the usual display of college cheering and partisanship.

Yale started off auspiciously by dashing down toward the Tigers' goal. On the face-off Bronson captured the disk, and dodging about, sent the rubber skimming to Inman, who smashed the rubber with the net, taking Paull by surprise. It took only a minute for the first tally.

Princeton, stimulated by the scene, went scurrying down the ice in clever form, but Coxe neatly took the puck away and sent it down the rink. A Princeton forward shot the rubber, but the disk went a little to the left of the mark.

The New Haven boys came swiftly down the ice four abreast, with team work that appeared all the more efficient on account of Princeton's lack of it. Nassau, however, put up a good defensive game, and her forwards skated desperately after the opposing four and managed to get the puck away many a time before it reached the Princeton primary defense.

ABSENCE OF ROUGH PLAY.

Play in the first half was not especially rough. There was, however, considerable checking, a little tripping, and quite some exciting melees, in which hockey players and hockey sticks got tangled up. Little of Princeton and Snow were both ruled off for a short time. Yale's second tally of the period came through team play by all four forwards, who skated down the rink, passing the puck cleverly. They disposed of Little and Sheffield, and came directly in front of the goal two feet distant, when Inman, in a remarkably slow way, shoved the rubber into the net. With this score time was up for the period.

Yale started off with the same splendid dash again in the first half, but this time Nassau was not to be caught napping, and Paull turned aside the first swift shoot. Princeton at the start of the half played better than in the opening period, and there were moments when Princeton hearts beat fast, as it seemed as if this time Nassau would surely smash the puck into the net, but each time at the critical moment a Yale player would glide out of the bunch and deftly take away the rubber. Just before Yale got her first goal of the half Bronson was ruled off for rough play. When he returned to the ice he started in to make things hum. He and Inman, by clever dual work in passing safely, brought the puck down toward the Princeton goal, but Little neatly knocked the rubber into a corner, Homans, skating after it, brought it out directly in front of the goal, where Inman recaptured it and sent it bounding into the net past Paull, who looked disconsolate. Princeton then got the puck twice by Yale's goal, but her efforts to score were fruitless.

Yale had now tested her team work with such excellent results that mechanically it formed again and the four forwards came quickly down the rink, and just at the right time Inman sent the puck flying to Stoddard, who, three feet away from Paull, shot the hard little rubber with splendid velocity between the posts. Barely a moment later came the fifth goal. It was scored by as pretty individual and combination play as could be wished. After a lift by Little had sent the puck sailing to the end of the rink, Inman got the rubber and started down the ice. In and out past McAlpin and Ogden he dodged. He hurtled Little's stick, spun by Homans, and passed the puck swiftly to Bronson, who had come down the ice abreast with him. Bronson poked the rubber into the net, bringing Princeton's fifth and final score. After a few minutes more of desultory playing time was up. Line-up:

Yale, 5.	Position.	Princeton, 0.
Taintor	Goal	Paull
Ward	Point	Sheffield, Homans
Coxe	Cover Point	Little
Snow	Forward	McAlpin
Bronson	Forward	Ogden
Stoddard	Forward	A. & F. Alexander
Inman	Forward	Poe

Goals scored by—Inman, 3; Stoddard, Bronson.
Referee—J. W. Callender, St. Nicholas Skating Club. Goal umpires—Howard Walton, St. Nicholas Skating Club; A. Loughman, St. Nicholas Skating Club. Time of game—Twenty-minute halves.

ROUGH HOCKEY PLAYING.

Measures to be Taken to Stop Brutality in the Game—League Standing.

The attention of hockey followers last week was largely devoted to considering means by which the brutality and rowdyism that have been particularly marked features of this season's sport can be eliminated. The culminating point of rough and brutal play was reached on Wednesday night, when William Murray deliberately assaulted Frederick Cobb during a game of hockey at the Clermont Avenue Rink, in Brooklyn. Since that time the players in the different clubs and the public interested have unanimously condemned Murray's action in hearty terms, and have come to the conclusion that something decisive must be done to check rough work if hockey is to keep the place it has so far occupied.

The general sentiment in the Murray-Cobb case was reflected in the prompt action in the matter of the Board of Governors of the Amateur League at a meeting on Thursday night, when Murray was expelled from the league. This board discussed at considerable length the proposition of effectually stamping out roughness, and several methods were proposed. One was suggested that, it is believed, will establish so severe a penalty on unfair tactics that players will be exceedingly careful of their procedure. At present, if a man is guilty of rough work the referee rules him out of the game from two to five minutes, according to his discretion. At the expiration of this period the player re-enters the game. In the new scheme the offender will at first be ruled out of the match for ten minutes. If, when he takes his place again, he still pursues rough play, he will be suspended for two weeks. Persistent roughness will be met with expulsion. This is the plan outlined at present, which will be considered in detail and probably adopted at the next meeting of the Board of Governors.

The Crescent Athletic Club won the only game it played last week with the Hockey Club of New York, and continues to occupy first place. The New York Athletic Club's record of two victories has been diminished by one, as its game won from the St. Nicholas Skating Club on Jan. 8 is not to be counted and must be replayed. This is due to the fact that Howard represented the New York seven in that match when he was under suspension. This and the fact that, crippled by Howard's absence and the assault on Cobb, Wednesday, it lost to the Brooklyn Skating Club, ties it for third place with the Brooklyn Skating Club. St. Nicholas, on the contrary, by the removal of its defeat at the hands of the New York Athletic Club on Jan. 8 and by its victory over the Quaker City team, has pulled into second place. The standing:

	Won.	Lost.	Tied.	To Play.
Crescent Athletic Club	3	0	0	7
St. Nicholas Skating Club	1	0	1	10
New York Athletic Club	1	1	0	8
Brooklyn Skating Club	1	1	0	9
Hockey Club of New York	1	2	0	7
Quaker City Hockey Club	0	3	0	7

Columbia Freshmen Win at Hockey.

The Columbia freshmen hockey team experienced little difficulty in defeating the Berkeley School seven yesterday by the score of 4 goals to 1.

INDOOR BICYCLE RACES.

Frank Wins One Event and Qualifies in Two Others at the Eighth Regiment Cycle Meet.

William G. Frank, the champion bicycle rider of the Eighth Regiment, was the star man last night in the races of the joint meet held under the auspices of Company E, Eighth Regiment, and the Associated Cycling Clubs of New York. The events were held on the twelve-lap track of the Eighth Regiment Armory, Park Avenue and Ninety-fourth Street. All the contests were cycle races, and only one of those was finished. With that exception, only the trial heats were run, and the final contests will take place at the same armory next Saturday night, when, in addition, there will be a number of track athletic games.

Frank is one of the best indoor riders in the country, and he sustained his reputation thoroughly last night. He qualified for the final runs in both the one-mile and two-mile handicaps, winning his heat in the one-mile race from scratch in 2:36. He got second place in his two-mile heat, riding from scratch, being led by H. R. Brown, Jr., of the Kings County Wheelmen, who had 60 yards. Frank was also the individual victor in the five-mile pursuit race, and was the means of giving his regimental team first honors in a competition which brought out five teams, consisting of two men each.

This latter race attracted the chief attention, probably from the fact that it was the only one to be definitely decided, and also by the presence of five popular teams. Frank had for his companion on the Eighth Regiment team A. Morris. They first beat the Twelfth Regiment pair—F. W. Sulzer and Oscar Ludwig. Frank and Sulzer were the final pair, and Frank caught his rival in eight laps. Following this, the Seventy-first Regiment pair—George H. King and Thomas A. McCahill—met the Kings County Wheelmen, represented by Hugh R. Brown, Jr., and A. Brexendorf. The Howard Wheelmen drew a bye. In the final contest, Frank and Brown had a pretty race for half a dozen laps, the latter keeping up a stiff pace, but Frank steadily overhauled him, and at one and one-third miles he passed the Kings County man. Summaries:

One mile bicycle handicap.—First heat—Won by H. R. Brown, Jr., Kings County Wheelmen, (45 yards;) Louis Meyer, Empire Cycling Club, (105 yards,) second; J. F. Rogers, Kings County Wheelmen, (45 yards,) third. Time—2:38 2-5.

Second Heat—Won by W. G. Frank, Eighth Regiment, (scratch;) Charles Martin, Empire Cycling Club, (15 yards,) second; F. T. Tanner, Howard Wheelmen, Brooklyn, (45 yards,) third. Time—2:36.

Third Heat.—Won by G. H. King, Seventy-first Regiment, (45 yards;) T. A. McCahill, Larchmont A. C., (60 yards,) second; W. P. Mullaney, Eagle Wheelmen, (120 yards,) third. Time—2:34.

One-Mile Bicycle, Novice.—First heat—Won by F. T. Satterfield, Leonard Cycling Club; Peter J. Volkmann, Columbia A. C., second. Time—2:49 4-5.

Second heat—Won by Charles Wehner, Company I, Seventy-first Regiment; Louis Meyer, Empire Cycling Club, second. Time—2:44.

Two-Mile Bicycle, Handicap.—First heat—Won by Charles Martin, Empire Cycling Club, 20 yards; J. E. Purcell, Battery L, Thirteenth Regiment, 90 yards, second; F. T. Warner, Howard Wheelmen, 60 yards, third; A. F. Rodgers, Kings County Wheelmen, 60 yards, fourth. Time—5:15 4-5.

Second heat—Won by H. R. Brown, Jr., Kings County Wheelmen, 60 yards; W. G. Frank, Eighth Regiment, scratch, second; F. W. Sulzer, Thirteenth Regiment, 60 yards, third; J. H. Karkella, Battery E, Thirteenth Artillery, 100 yards, fourth. Time—5:09 4-5.

Five-Mile Bicycle Team Pursuit Race.—Won by Eighth Regiment, (W. G. Frank and A. Morris; Kings County Wheelmen, Hugh R. Brown, Jr., and A. Brexendorf, second; Howard Wheelmen, Fred T. Warner and J. Townsend, third. Frank caught Brown in 1 mile and 4 laps in 3:23 3-5.

Harvard's New Rowing System.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 19.—Harvard has adopted a new rowing system for the coming season, a system similar in many respects to that used in football last Fall. There will be no head coach. The work of developing a crew will be left to a council of experienced oarsmen, and that council will be responsible for the crew's failure or success. This plan was announced by Capt. Bullard to-day and created considerable surprise in athletic circles here. It is a departure from the plan which has been in existence for the last two years, and its outcome is looked forward to with great interest by those who are interested in the work of the crew. Harvard's head coach for the last two years has been E. C. Storrow, who, with his brother, George Mumford, and Dan Goodrich, have brought the standard of rowing at Harvard up to a high grade. This year, however, Storrow, owing to business pressure, has refused to take charge. A man to fill his place seems impossible to find, so Bullard has decided to abolish the office for good. Mumford and Goodrich will remain with the crew, and with the graduate oarsmen who always turn up, will constitute an executive board. Later in the season

POWERFUL CUP DEFENDER

Belmont Syndicate Yacht Compared with the Columbia.

SECRECY IN BRISTOL SHOPS

Parts for the First Steel Mast for New Boat Are Ready to be Put Together.

Special to The New York Times.

BRISTOL, Jan. 19.—The new cup defender being built at Bristol will not only be an improvement over the Columbia in design, but will also be a great deal more powerful boat, and of a type with no radical departure from that which it has more than once been proved can carry a large sail area, can be easily driven to high speed, and is of a seaworthiness that is faultless.

Additional information obtained about the craft bears out assertions appearing previously in these columns that she will be more lightly and more thoroughly built than was the champion of 1899.

It would not be surprising if she stood up stiffer under her canvas than did the 70-footers, as special attention was given to such details in making the design.

A large amount of metal of many kinds was received at Bristol the past week from Pennsylvania, Ansonia, and Pawtucket, to form part of the construction of the new cup defender. This has not lessened in any degree the stories that there are now at the Bristol shops more steel and bronze than are needed to construct the Belmont sloop. It is known that the Maxwell 46-footer is to have wooden planking; therefore, the theory exploited the first of the week that the extra plates of Tobin bronze were procured for an outside skin for the 46-footer is out of the question. If a centreboard boat should be built in Bristol it is claimed by parties who seem to know that it will be an all-metal boat from keel to rail of much the same construction as was followed in turning out the Vigilant.

The designer has during a busy week of it supervising the bending of the frames for the Belmont craft. The least defect in the bolted angles is submitted to him for examination before any attempt is made to place it in the frame pile in the south boat shop, but so far the good judgment of the steel company in Pennsylvania has resulted in but few of the angle irons being culled as unfit for use in the framing of the big sloop. It is learned that in one lot of angle iron bars consisting of forty-two there was but one or two rejected owing to imperfections.

The work of bending, which was rushed at first in the blacksmith's shop, is now progressing slower, with the view of obtaining the best results in the curves.

The mechanics are still at work fitting the floor plates to be attached to the bases of the frames, which will be done when they are set up in place.

Considerable work of a preparatory nature went on all week about the lead keel in order to have all details of the work advanced to such a degree when extra plates are engaged that once the actual construction begins on the hull the craft will have what is termed a surprising growth. Many arguments are heard here relative to the merits of the Boston boat and the one building here, some yachtsmen offering to wager on even terms that the Lawson craft will not outsail the Columbia on a reach or on a beat to windward. There is a yachtsman in Bristol who has viewed some of the lines of the Lawson boat design who claims that she will give a good account of herself, but without having access to the plans of the Belmont boat he declares that it is utterly useless to hazard an opinion as to which of the two would be the winner in the trial races. Still from what those yachtsmen saw in the Lawson boat lines it is considered that she will have Columbia characteristics, although she is in part an advancement on those lines.

The system of secret movements is in full force at the Bristol shops, but without any apparent change in the rules followed in the building of other cup defenders. While nothing is said about keeping quiet about doings in the boat shops, there is a feeling that the gray apparition of secrecy is hovering about at all hours.

All the parts for the first of the steel masts for the new boat have been shaped out and are ready for putting together at the shortest possible notice. Two steel masts are to be completed and ready for use the latter part of April.

The flanging of plating, both steel and Tobin bronze, was carried out the past week to a great extent in the north as well as the south shop. It appears that the system of flanging is being carried out in the construction of the new sloop more than it was in the construction of the Columbia in 1899.

SHAMROCK IN OPEN RACES.

Capt. Sycamore of Sir Thomas Lipton's Yacht in Favor of Such Competition.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—Edward Sycamore, the Captain of the new challenger for the America's Cup, has arrived in London from Glasgow. Heretofore he has refused to be interviewed, but he has at last talked with a representative of The Associated Press, to whom he said:

"It seems to me that magnificent opportunities for sport have been thrown away by the practice of taking a challenger to the other side and using her there only for the purpose of sailing the number of races necessary to decide the ownership of the America's Cup. These boats, of course, have been built with the object of bringing back the cup, and that must always remain their principal work. The Shamrock II. will cross for that object, and nothing will be allowed to interfere with that. When the races shall have been decided, however, I should like her to be sailed in new races against the pick of the American fleet for whatever prizes may be offered.

"The cup contest is sailed under conditions calculated to give the fairest possible test. Still, it is conceivable that these very conditions might tell heavily against one or the other of the boats. I think it would be satisfactory to the owner and the designer of the defeated boat and good for sport to have a trial or two at open racing. If we are fortunate enough to win the cup we would be glad if our opponents had an opportunity for revenge under other conditions. If unfortunate enough to be beaten, we would prefer an opportunity to try at something else instead of the certainty of returning empty handed."

In view of Sir Thomas Lipton's promise to take the Erin, and possibly the Shamrock II., to some of the principal American yachting centres, the challenger is likely to be seen on more courses than that at Sandy Hook this Fall.

YACHTSMEN AT HOME.

New House of N. Y. Y. C. Formally Occupied Yesterday.

At 1 o'clock yesterday morning the old clubhouse of the New York Yacht Club at 67 Madison Avenue, which had been the home of the club since May 1, 1884, was permanently closed, and at 8 o'clock the well-known red and blue burgee of the club was hoisted over the home of the organization at 37, 39, and 41 West Forty-fourth Street. No formal ceremonies attended either the abandonment of the old or the occupation of the new house, but a series of receptions will be given as soon as the club is comfortably settled in its new quarters.

Although the new clubhouse was not supposed to be open until the colors were hoisted yesterday morning, it was visited by quite a number of members during the preceding evening, and yesterday the total attendance was between two and three hundred. The unique grillroom, with its timbered walls and ceiling and heavy oaken furniture, was the centre of attraction, though the spacious and beautiful model room received its share of commendation.

Now that there is room to adequately exhibit and care for full-rigged models, it is likely that the club will receive more of that description for its collection. A notable one lately added is of the Virginia. Isaac Stern's new yacht, which now occupies a prominent place on one of the tables.

The future of the old house is in doubt. A sign upon the front informs all who pass that it is for sale or to lease.

A Hint for Next Christmas.

From the London Globe.

An Englishman in Paris sends us the quaint saying of a child, suitable for this season of the year. "Mamma," said the youngster, "as my 'tocking is a werry 'mall one, I will cut off the foot and put a basket underneath. Santa Claus will know it is mine, but I wants lots." Let us trust that Santa Claus may not put his foot in it.

NEW ASSOCIATION'S PERIL.

Action of Philadelphia Owner Nearly Caused Dissolution of the Latest Baseball League.

The infant baseball body, the American Association, formed only a day before, was perilously near its exit from existence yesterday at the Marlborough Hotel, where its organizers have been in session since Thursday. The stand taken by Col. John I. Rogers of the Philadelphia Club in the National League was so directly opposed to the ideas of the American Association that all save one man, Charles Havenar, who is one of the owners of the association's Detroit Club, became disgusted, and were willing to quit and give up all hope of ever establishing the new body. Havenar, on the other hand, advised that the association put up with the terms offered by Rogers for the one year that the League's agreement will last, and in the end prevailed, the association agreeing to have its Philadelphia Club play on the grounds controlled by Rogers in that city and under the direction of Hezekiah Niles, the man named by Rogers. Before these terms were named the association had expected to go into Philadelphia and play under the management of one of its organizers in a new park which Kock of the association had promised to build. The final agreement, made in accordance with the wishes of Col. Rogers, was most distasteful to the American Association, as the committee in charge said it would put the association in the position of playing second fiddle to the Rogers club, and give the general impression that the new Philadelphia Club was a "second nine" and its allies subordinate to the League clubs. Havenar argued, however, that as the National League contract has but one year to run the American Association would be able to make new arrangements for 1902, and having a year to establish itself would be in a position to make terms that would be more satisfactory.

Under the present arrangement, the American Association is to be an eight club league, with clubs representing Detroit, Milwaukee, Louisville, and Indianapolis in the West and Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, and Boston in the East. The Board of Directors will be composed of the managers of the Boston, Washington, Detroit, and Milwaukee Clubs. The new association has the right to hold or reserve any five players for each club. This, to all purposes, relieves the American Association from the provisions of the drafting rules.

The American Association later held a final business meeting and adopted a constitution, which is practically the same as that of the National League. W. H. Watkins was again chosen as temporary President and Secretary, and will continue to serve for probably three weeks, when a full list of officers will be elected. The next regular meeting of the association will be held as soon as possible after the schedule meeting of the National League in the Spring, and, it is said, will be in Detroit. At this meeting the association clubs will make arrangements for players, taking the surplus from the League clubs, which then will be restricted to sixteen players each.

Baseball on Armory Diamond.

In one of the most exciting games ever played in the Forty-seventh Regiment's armory, the All Brooklyn Indoor Baseball team last night defeated the All New Yorks by the score of 12 to 9. In the second inning, Cunningham of the home team fell while running to third base and struck his head on the floor with considerable force. He was carried off the floor unconscious. Later he resumed play. During the sixth inning, Capt. Thomas ordered him out of the game because of a caustic criticism of the Captain's playing. Instead of leaving the floor, Cunningham went at Thomas in a threatening manner, but wiser heads prevented an altercation. The score:

ALL-BROOKLYN.	R	IB	PO	A	E	ALL-NEW YORK.	R	IB	PO	A	E
Costello, ss.	1	0	2	5	0	Smith, ss.	0	1	0	4	0
Sweet'n, cf.	1	3	0	0	0	Reyling, rf.	1	2	2	0	0
Thomas, rf.	0	0	0	0	0	Collins, 3b.	1	2	4	1	0
Thorne, c.	0	1	6	4	1	Fritch'n, 1b.	2	12	0	0	1
Copp, 3b.	0	1	5	3	0	Schwartz, c.	1	6	1	1	1
Dixon, lf.	2	0	0	0	0	Ettinger, 2b.	1	1	2	0	0
Murphy, 1b.	3	9	12	2	2	Ritter, cf.	1	1	0	0	0
Cun'am, 2b.	2	2	1	1	0	Deegan, lf.	1	1	0	2	0
Gillette, p.	2	1	1	1	1	Heun, p.	1	2	1	1	0
Total	12	8	27	16	4	Total	9	13	27	9	3

All Brooklyn.....0 6 1 0 1 2 0 0 2—12
All New York.....4 0 0 1 0 3 1 0 0—9

Two-base hits—Dixon, 2; Murphy, 2; Ettinger, 1; Costello, 1; Fritchman, 1. Sacrifice hits—Cunningham, Reyling, Costello. Struck out—Costello, 1; Thomas, 2; Copp, 1; Smith, 1; Murphy, 2; Gillette, 1; Ritter, 2. Stolen bases—Sweetman, 4; Reyling, 4; Copp, 3; Dixon, 4; Murphy, 4; Cunningham, 1; Costello, 4; Gillette, 2; Collins, 5; Deegan, 3. Balks—Gillette, 1. Umpire—A. Simpson.

NEW UTRECHT GUNNERS' SHOOT

Gaughan's Straight Score Won the Handicap for the Club Trophy.

A wind that all but justified the term of "gale" applied to it by one gunner of the New Utrecht Gun Club blew over the shooting grounds at Inter-State Park yesterday, when the New Utrecht Club's monthly handicap trophy shoot took place. Coming from behind the pigeon shooters as they faced the trap, the chilly breeze swept down on the traps with a velocity that hustled even the most sluggish birds into rapid flight. Whether or not they wished to rise, the pigeons were forced away the instant any of the traps were sprung, and, driving with the force of bullets before the wind, four in five of them winged it, almost straightaway, as outgoers. The unlucky one in five, which tried to go against the wind, became practically a stationary mark and invited death. In spite of the stiff breeze, the sport was good, and the seven men who competed for the club trophy had a close race of it. J. E. Gaughan, at the back mark, twenty-nine yards, winning with a straight score of ten kills, from two competitors, with nine each, the tenth bird for Gaughan, when a miss on last bird would have made a tie among three, causing an amount of excitement that would have been worthy of a Grand American Handicap. Gaughan took no chances, however, and, holding on the pigeon as it rose and went with the wind, pulled both barrels, made a beautifully clean kill and won the sweep. Two other events were shot off Gaughan and C. A. Lincoln dividing one and C. M. Chapman winning another. The scores follow:

New Utrecht Trophy Handicap, Sweepstakes, Handicap 28 to 29 yards' rise, at 10 live birds per man.

		K.	M.
C. W. Chapman, 28 yards	22220	20122	8	2
F. V. Joy, 28 yards	01222	00222	7	3
C. M. Lincoln, 28 yards	20122	01222	7	3
"Jack," 28 yards	22122	02112	9	1
J. A. Bennett, 28 yards	12121	20121	9	1
J. E. Gaughan, 29 yards	22222	22222	10	0
J. Greenway, 28 yards	01221	00112	7	3

Sweepstakes, at seven live birds.

	K.	M.
C. M. Chapman	7	0
C. A. Lincoln	6	1
F. V. Joy	6	1
C. C. Bennett	5	2

Handicap sweepstakes, at seven live birds.

	K.	M.
J. E. Gaughan	7	0
C. A. Lincoln	7	0
J. A. Bennett	6	1
C. A. Lockwood	6	1
A. Jackson	6	1
C. M. Chapman	5	2
F. V. Joy	5	2
C. C. Bennett	5	2
P. Roy	5	2

Referee—T. W. Morfey.

Chapman Wins at Owl's Head.

It was almost impossible to hold a gun steady against the wind that howled across the plateau on which the Crescent Athletic Club's traps are situated, yesterday, and in consequence the Shooting Committee of the organization cut down the programme of competitions for the day, deciding but two instead of the usual lengthy number. The principal event run off was the third competition for the January Cup at 50 targets per man. In this event H. C. Chapman won, getting a tally of 44. Summaries:

Third Contest for January Cup, 50 Targets Per Man, Two Sets of Traps—H. C. Chapman, 44; Frank B. Stephenson, 36; Dr. J. J. Keyes, 35; Luke C. Hopkins, 32; Charles A. Sykes, 30; W. W. Marshall, 29.

Sweepstakes Competition, 15 Targets Per Man, Expert Traps—Frank B. Stephenson, 9; Dr. H. L. O'Brien, 4; Dr. J. J. Keyes, 4; W. Marshall, 3; H. C. Chapman, 1; G. Stephenson, Sr., 0.

Another Man Foiled.

"I often wonder what's the best thing to do for the grip," remarked the stingy man, who was trying to get some advice gratis.

"Go out without your overcoat," replied the doctor.—Philadelphia Press.

IMPORTANT WEEK IN GOLF

Future Officers of the National Body to be Announced.

WOMEN CONTESTANTS TO MEET

Long Series of Open Tournaments Arranged for the Florida East and West Coasts.

Charles B. Macdonald, Chairman of the Nominating Committee of the United States Golf Association, said yesterday that the list of officers for election at the coming annual meeting had been completed and sent to Robert B. Kerr, the Secretary, for official announcement. Mr. Kerr was out of town yesterday, but it was said at his office that the report had been received and would probably be publicly announced to-morrow. Mr. Macdonald would give no clue as to the new selection for President to fill the office now held by W. B. Thomas, who has declined to serve for a third term. It is the general impression among golfers that the future golf President will be either Henry B. Hollins or R. H. Williams. Either would be eminently acceptable, and the future high standard of American golf would be well preserved.

Mr. Hollins was the first President of the Metropolitan Golf Association, and has always taken a keen interest in the game. He was one of the founders of the Westbrook Golf Club at Islip, L. I. Mr. Williams is equally well known in the golf world. He is a member of several clubs, including Garden City and Morris County, at Morristown, near which place he has a fine country home. Mr. Williams is the new President of the Racquet and Tennis Club, and he is a popular New York clubman. With the announcement of the ticket, Secretary Kerr will also name the date for the annual Golf Association meeting, which will come toward the end of February, in this city, probably at Delmonico's.

Another feature of golf interest for the coming week will be the annual meeting of the Women's Golf Association. This will be held on Friday in this city. Besides the election of officers, plans will be laid for the events of the year, and some modifications will be adopted in the management of team competitions, a reduction in the number of players on each team from six to four contests being one of the most radical changes to be made.

Walter J. Travis, the amateur golf champion of America, has decided to make a brief visit to Florida this Winter. He will visit the links in that Southern resort in company with Van Tassel Sutphen, leaving about Feb. 20, for a two weeks' tour. During that time the tournaments at Kissimmee and Tampa Bay will be in progress, and it is more than probable that Travis may take a hand in the sport himself. An effort will be made to induce Travis to prolong his stay so as to play in the Florida West Coast championship, which will be held at Belleair, near Tampa, beginning on March 9.

The golf exodus to Florida has already commenced, and several of our prominent Northern players have been studying the Florida links for two weeks or more, in preparation for the coming events. The programmes of both the East and West Coast Associations have just been announced, and they are more elaborate, particularly on the latter coast, than has been the case in the past. The regular series of events on the West Coast will begin Feb. 5 at Ocala, and close late in March at Belleair. Besides this association series of events, there will be weekly handicaps on each course during the season. The list of regular club tournaments, open to all golfers on the West Coast, with dates, is:

Ocala—Feb. 5, men's scratch competition; Feb. 6, men's handicap; Feb. 7, women's scratch and handicap contests; Feb. 8, professional match; Feb. 9, driving competition.

Winter Park—Feb. 19, men's scratch competition; Feb. 20, men's handicap; Feb. 21, women's scratch competition; Feb. 22, women's handicap; Feb. 23, professional tournament and driving competition.

Kissimmee—Feb. 26, men's scratch competition; Feb. 27, men's handicap; Feb. 28, women's scratch contest; March 1, women's handicap; March 2, professional tournament and driving competition.

Tampa Bay—March 5, men's scratch competition; March 6, men's handicap; March 7, women's championship of the Florida West Coast; March 8, women's handicap; March 9, professional match and driving competition.

Belleair—March 9, men's championship of the Florida West Coast; March 20, men's handicap; March 21, women's scratch contest; March 22, women's handicap; March 23, professional match and driving competition.

On the East Coast, besides numerous club tournaments, the series of open events will begin on the last day of February at Nassau in the Bahamas, and will be continued on March 1 and 2. Following this the tournament at Miami will come, March 7, 8, and 9. Palm Beach will have its open event on March 14, 15, and 16. Ormonde will come on March 21, 22, and 23, while the last of the open tournaments will be at St. Augustine on March 28, 29, and 30. Immediately after this event the annual championship contest of the East Coast will be held at the St. Augustine Country Club, which has one of the best links in Florida. The club has engaged as the professional this year Harry Reddie, who had charge of the Misquamicut golf links on Wa[illegible] during the Summer. The Palm Beach Club tournaments began last week, and next month the Southern Florida golf championships will be held there.

Golf on Florida Links.

Special to The New York Times.

ROYAL POINCINIA BEACH, Fla., Jan. 19.—After a spirited contest, Devereaux Emmet of the Garden City Golf Club won the silver cup offered as first prize here today, and the Consolation Cup went to A. W. Black of Lakewood. Play was over eighteen holes in the morning, medal scores to decide who should enter first and second eights.

There was a silver and a bronze medal for the best score, and these went to Mr. Dutton and E. A. Mulliken of Boston, respectively. The amateur record for the new course was broken by both of these players this morning on their score of 73. Previous to this Mr. Dutton held the record, with 74. The scores:

George Dutton, Oakley Club	73	83	156
E. A. Mulliken, Boston	73	86	160
Deveraux Emmet, Garden City	79	77	156
Charles B. Corey, Oakley	81	83	164
S. Maddock, Crescent Athletic	88	90	178
H. B. Smith	90	89	179
J. W. Johnson, Ardsley	90	88	178
R. L. Laylor, Watertown	91	89	180

Second eight.

A. W. Black, Lakewood	93	90	183
R. A. Farrelly, Westchester	93	95	188
J. B. Johnson, Ardsley	93	95	188
C. Livingston, Jr.	93	104	197
D. Mallory, Baltimore Club	98	99	197
J. Willie	Jefferson	100	98	198

COLUMBIA CREWS TRAINING.

Coach Hanlan Instructing the Candidates on the Gymnasium Machines.

The training of Columbia's oarsmen which was begun last Monday is being continued regularly in the rowing room of the gymnasium under the direction of Coach Hanlan. Two sets of machines have been set up, and in these Hanlan coaches the men in squads. At present there are about forty men out for the 'Varsity boats, but a number of the experienced oarsmen will not come out until after the midyear examinations.

According to a new regulation of the Faculty Athletic Committee, every candidate for the crew, before he is permitted to row, must submit to a physical examination by the director of the gymnasium. He must also make a total of at least 700 points in the strength tests before he can participate in rowing.

The financial side of the freshman crew is also promising. Manager L. L. Savage has already collected $670 of the total of $2,500 which he must raise from his class, and will probably have the full amount in about a month.

Lea Princeton's Football Coach.

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 19.—The management of the Princeton football team announced to-night that at a joint meeting of the Graduate Advisory Committee and Undergraduate Executive Committee, held here this afternoon, Langdon Lea, Captain of the 1895 team, was elected head coach of the football team for next year. He will have entire charge of supervising the routine of work, which will lighten the burden of responsibility for Capt. Pell.

Lea successfully coached Princeton's '99 gridiron warriors.

At the meeting this afternoon the Executive Committee passed a rule whereby the election of Captains of all the athletic teams which bear the name of the university shall be subject to the approval of the Executive Committee. The object of this is to insure the election of Captains that are best fitted to uphold the interests of the university.

YALE'S ATHLETIC CAMPAIGN.

It Is Hoped that the Old Standing Will Be Regained This Year.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 19.—Yale athletic managers are planning a campaign this year that bids fair to regain for the university the standing in intercollegiate athletics that was held here in the old days. The great success of last year's football season, with the remarkably good team that Capt. F. Gordon Brown turned out, has acted as a tonic on all branches of Yale's athletics, and the season starts in this month with more assurance of success than ever before.

Plans are already making for next year's football team. The candidates will be turned out for the annual Spring practice toward the end of next term, and until then all the men who intend to try for Capt. Gould's eleven will go through a systematic course in the gymnasium. Gordon Brown will undoubtedly return next Fall to coach the eleven, and Mike Murphy will again take charge of the physical condition of the men.

Crew work has already commenced, though the real opening of the season will be deferred until next week. The freshmen, to the number of 110, ar now working daily in the tanks and taking regular cross-country runs in preparation for the hard work to come later. This coming week there will be the real opening of the season, when all the candidates for the crew will be called out. Yale is still in the experimental stage as regards the crew stroke tried last year, and this coming season will be an important one in Yale boating annals for that reason. Capt. Fred Allen has agreed to return to Yale this Spring as the head coach, and his work will commence immediately after Easter. Last year's stroke and general method of rowing will be continued this coming year, and it will be the first time in five years that Yale has had any permanent method of rowing.

The track team starts in with a rush this year. Regular daily work at the field will not commence until later in the season, but by the 1st of February the candidates will be called out for the preliminary training. A meeting of the men was called this week, with the result that 122 candidates turned out, among them a superior line of middle-distance runners, jumpers, and weight throwers. Capt. Fincke and Trainer Murphy have decided to change the method of recent Yale teams this year and participate in several indoor meets before the open season begins. A squad of men is already at work under Mike Murphy getting ready for at least two meets that Yale will enter, that of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club, in New York, on Feb. 4, and the Boston Athletic Club, at a later date. The men who are now working with this end in view are Dixon Boardman, the middle-distance man and sprinter; Hargrave, the sprinter; Clapp, the all-around runner; J. S. Spraker, jumper, and Dick Sheldon and Frederick Beck, weight putters. These men will represent Yale at the two meets mentioned.

The baseball outlook is thus far not so encouraging as that of the other teams. Capt. Robertson called out his men last Fall, but among them was no new candidate of promise. The team will begin work as soon as the weather permits, and as an unusually long season is ahead with an unusual series of hard games, the outlook is not as yet a hopeful one.

HAMBURG IS DUE TO-DAY.

A special train, bringing to New York the eight stallions from Marcus Daly's Bitter Root Stud of Hamilton, Mont., after one stop off for rest in Illinois, is due this morning. The horses will be unloaded at the Morris Park race track, where they will be stabled temporarily near the Bitter Root Stud mares and horses in training, to await the time of the great dispersal sale, which will be conducted for the Daly estate by the Fasig-Tipton Company in Madison Square Garden, Jan. 30 and 31, and Feb. 1. The famous stallion Hamburg heads the list of eight horses coming, and his arrival is awaited with great interest by turfmen generally. The horse, now six years old, was last seen in New York in 1898, when he won the Brighton Cup, and promptly afterward was retired to the stud by Mr. Daly.

The first of his produce yet have to race, but Hamburg's fame, both as an individual and as the best and most promising representative of a famous producing line, already is world-wide, and there is much speculation among horsemen as to whether he will or will not remain in America. A like curiosity is felt as to the price he will bring at public auction, for it is known that the agents representing breeders in both England and France have been authorized to bid on him, and two Englishmen are now in New York, each of whom is reported to have come for the purpose of taking back the best son of Hanover. One other prospective bidder, now on his way to New York, is an American trainer, now under engagement to a wealthy English turfman, who is coming with a commission to buy Hamburg. The horse sold for a price which Mr. Daly admitted was about $40,000 as a three-year-old. The stallions that will be sold with him are of unusual merit and prominence, but all are in eclipse beside Hamburg. Many inquiries have been made as to whether visitors will be permitted to see the horse at Morris Park, but it is probable that he will be kept in comparative seclusion until he is led into the sales ring. The regular catalogue of the sale was issued a week ago.

American Turfmen Sail for Europe.

Edward Corrigan, the turfman, sailed for Liverpool on the Cunard liner Umbria yesterday. Accompanying him were Jed and William Waldo, the two jockeys he has retained to ride for him during the approaching season. Mr. Corrigan said a number of his horses were already in England and some had been shipped about two weeks ago.

"I am going to get everything ready for the racing season," he said; "though I do not expect to start in before April or May. I have entered some of my horses for several of the best races, including the Derby." Mr. Corrigan said that he would retain Spencer if that jockey could get a license over here. In that case Mr. Croker would also retain him.

Edward McJoynt, the jockey who will ride for William K. Vanderbilt, also sailed on the Umbria.

Race Track Results.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 19.—One mile—Emigre, 107, (Cochran,) 1; Frank McConnell, 107, 2; Waterhouse, 105, 3. Time—1:43¾. Three furlongs, Two-year-olds—Haydon, 110, (Dale,) 1; The Hoyden, 107, 2; Fullen, 107, 3. Time—0:38. Handicap, steeplechase, short course—Don Clarendo, 137, (Hines,) 1; Brakeman, 135, 2; Divertisement, 132, 3. Time—3:20. The Live Oak Handicap, mile and an eighth—Ben Chance, 105, (O'Brien,) 1; Sir Gatlan, 100, 2; W. B. Gates, 108, 3. Time—1:56¾. Six furlongs—Bummer, 103, (Dale,) 1; Charles O'Brien, 109, 2; Mordelmo, 100, 3. Time—1:15¼. Seven furlongs—Algie M., 107, (Winkfield,) 1; Porter B., 114, 2; Assessment, 105, 3. Time—1:81.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 19.—Four furlongs, purse—Dorine, 115, (Buchanan,) 1; Sol Lichenstein, 113, 2; Doctor Scharff, 108, 3. Time—0:48¾. Six furlongs—Theory, 101, (Mounce,) 1; Socialist, 103, 2; Tiburon, 95, 3. Time—1:13¾. One mile—Donald, 100, (Mounce,) 1; Torsida, 104, 2; Campus, 109, 3. Time—1:42½. Lissak Handicap, one mile—Specific, 104, (Dominick,) 1; Vulcain, 112, 2; The Lady, 118, 3. Time—1:41¾. Mile and an eighth—Grand Sachem, 92, (Redfern,) 1; Lena, 108, 2; Opponent, 105, 3. Time—1:54¾. Seven furlongs, San Lundso Handicap—Bill Garrett, 96, (Dominick,) 1; Rolling Boer, 94, 2; Grafter, 81, 3. Time—1:26¾.

Jews Under Arms for England.

From The London Spectator.

The special service held at the Great Synagogue in Aldgate recently for Jews serving in the regular and auxiliary forces was attended by about 250 men, including some 20 officers and several members of the City of London Imperial Volunteers, and attracted an immense congregation. In the course of his sermon the Rev. F. L. Cohen mentioned that more than 800 Jews had taken part in the campaign in South Africa, and that, in proportion to their number in the empire, they had actually borne more than their share in their contribution to the fighting forces. These striking figures deserve the widest possible currency, as they effectively and convincingly dispel the view, still entertained in some quarters, that the Jewish community always constitutes an imperium in imperio, that it is incapable of true loyalty to the land of its adoption, and that it never breeds fighting men.

Krueger's Views About Dancing.

From The London Ball-Room.

Here is a moral for lovers of dancing. It is President Krüger's answer to a request that his name might be used as patron of a ball in honor of her Majesty's birthday. It is signed by Mr. F. Eloff, his principal secretary. "Sir," the letter ran, "in reply to your favor of the 12th inst., requesting me to ask his Honor the State President to consent to his name being used as a patron of a ball to be given at Johannesburg on the 26th inst., I have been instructed to inform you that his Honor considers a ball as Baal's service, for which reason the Lord ordered Moses to kill all offenders; and as it is, therefore, contrary to his Honor's principles, his Honor cannot consent to the misuse of his name in such connection."

THE SHOW FOR SPORTSMEN.

Ojibway Indians Will Dance on the Shores of a Miniature Lake—Other Novel Attractions.

Madison Square Garden, without its annual Sportsmen's Show, would lose a large part of its attractiveness as a resort for Winter amusement and recreation. That popular exhibit, which has come to be one of the show features in New York life, is still over a month in the future, as it will not open until March 2, but the chief plans are already completed, and some striking novelties have been arranged.

The Sportsmen's Show this year will last two weeks, opening Saturday, March 2, being closed only on Sundays. During the past two years the water tank, with its water polo and other aquatic amusements, has been the star feature. This season that will be abandoned and something on a more elaborate and picturesque scale added. The greater part of the Fourth Avenue side of the Garden will be occupied by a miniature lake, from 18 to 24 inches in depth.

This lake will be an exact reproduction, except in size, of that upon the Ojibway reservation, on the shores of which those Indians assemble for their annual festival and religious dances. Near the western end of the lake will be constructed an island, in imitation of the one in the original lake. From the island the water will stretch away to the mountains, down which pour picturesque cascades and waterfalls, the shores being indented with coves and miniature bays. Natural bridges and arches of rock extend from the shore into the water, and at the mouth of a stream entering the lake, beavers, otters, and other amphibious fur-bearing animals have constructed their houses.

A delegation of Ojibway Indians from the reservation, attired in their dress of the woods, will come down the mountain every afternoon and evening, enter their canoes, and paddle to the island for an exhibition of their religious rites and dances.

At the left of the lake and at the foot of a mountain stream will be situated the beaver dam, where a dozen or more of these industrious animals will be quartered, wholly unconfined and free to give a continuous performance of their skill at house building. The Indians will attack the beavers and demolish their houses. Meantime, the beavers will return to their ruined homes and begin to repair the damage done. L. O. Armstrong, who has this part of the exhibit in charge, states that it is a characteristic of the beaver to persist in rebuilding its dams when damaged or disturbed.

A larger number of shooting contests will be given than heretofore. Events have been added for militia and regular army shoots with the military revolver, as well as one for policemen, and a number of revolver and rifle competitions for all comers. There will also be clay pigeon shooting on the roof of the Garden.

CHICKENS AT THE GARDEN.

Annual Show of Poultry, with Cats, Rabbits, and Guinea Pigs.

Chickens will be the attraction during the coming week at the Madison Square Garden. The common garden fowl will not usurp all the attention, however, for ducks, geese, pigeons, besides many varieties of caged birds, as well as guinea pigs, rabbits, cavies, and even cats will be distributed with considerable liberality about the Garden. The occasion for this lavish display of winged fowl is the twelfth annual exhibition of the New York Poultry and Pigeon Association. The exhibit will open Wednesday morning and will be continued through Saturday. It may seem rather odd to include such an animal as the cat with pigeons and small birds, but since the attempt to establish cat shows failed the annual exhibition of felines has been included as one of the attractions of the poultry show.

The cats, guinea pigs, and rabbits will be placed in the concert hall, and it is possible that a portion, if not all of the, restaurant, may have to be given up to these animals. There is a large entry list with a long array of prizes, and in certain lines the coming show will present superior features over past years.

Among the large number of clubs that will be represented in the show are the following, with the times of their annual meetings, which are always held during the Madison Square Garden exhibit:

Wednesday—Waterfowl Club of America.
Thursday—American Rose Comb Brown Leghorn Club, American White Plymouth Rock Club, National Bantam Association, American Wyandotte Club, American Black Minorca Club.
Friday—American Exhibition Game and Game Bantam Club, Eastern Magpie Club, Leghorn Club, American Carrier and Barb Club, Eastern Fantail Club of America, American Jacobin Club.
Saturday—American Owl Club.

KNICKERBOCKER A. C. SWIMMING.

Final Heats in Three Races and a Match Decided.

The final heats in the Knickerbocker Athletic Club swimming races, begun earlier in the week, were decided last night in the swimming tank in the clubhouse, in addition to a match race at 100 yards between W. C. Miller and L. Goodwin, which Miller won in 1:14. The competition in three classes for plunging or diving, for distance, was an interesting feature of the sports. The plunge contests were all handicaps, and the results were close throughout. A summary follows:

Final Heat, Class A, 100-Yard Handicap—Won by S. O'Callahan, handicap 6 seconds. Time—1:17. No second and third.
Final Heat, Class B, 200-Feet Handicap—Won by J. Patterson, scratch. Time—0:51 2-5. A. L. Favarl, second; J. L. Swope, third.
Final Heat, Class C, 100-Feet Handicap—Won by C. G. Osborne, handicap 6 seconds. Time—0:29. R. L. Larendan and F. Quigg were disqualified for starting before the signal was made.
Match Race, 100 Yards.—Won by W. C. Miller. Time—1:14 4-5. L. Goodwin second.

PLUNGING FOR DISTANCE.

Class A, Handicap.—Won by W. Reus (10 feet,) with plunge of 56 feet 6 inches; L. A. Goodwin, (13 feet,) 51 feet plunge, second; W. C. Miller, (14 feet,) 50 feet 9 inches plunge, third.
Class B, Handicap—Won by A. L. Favarl, (5 feet handicap,) 54 feet 2 inches plunge; J. A. Patterson, (14 feet handicap,) 45 feet plunge, second; Dr. Altshure, (15 feet handicap,) 43 feet plunge, third.
Class C, handicap—Won by C. T. Osborne, (14 feet handicap,) 52 feet plunge; G. Herring, (13 feet handicap,) 41 feet 6 inches plunge, second.
Starter—J. K. Church. Timekeepers—Frederick Stayles and Harry King.

The swimming competitions this week will be three races, a 400-foot handicap for Class A, a 100-yard handicap for Class B, and 50-yard handicap for Class C. The finals will be held on Saturday.

EDISON'S INVENTIONS.

He Enumerates Some of Those He Thinks Most Important.

From an Interview in The Electrical World.

Mr. Edison said that one of the first things he went into was a messenger call-box, or domestic telegraph system. "We got the thing in shape," he said, "and made 200 instruments, and then sent two men out to get subscribers, but they tramped around without avail day after day, and our hopes sank and sank further and further. Finally a man named Brown came along, and the first day he tackled the job he got six. This sent our hopes up again, and after he got the lines loaded up with subscribers we sold the scheme out and realized a good profit on it. After that I worked out the stock ticker.

"What were my principal patents? Good gracious, man! Oh, you don't mean patents—inventions? Why, first and foremost, the idea of the electric lighting central station; then—let me see, what have I invented? Well, there were the mimeograph, and the electric pen, and the carbon telephone, and the incandescent lamp and its accessories, and the quadruplex telegraph, and the automatic telegraph, and the phonograph, and the kinetoscope, and—I don't know—a whole lot of other things."

The talk turned to the early days of the electric railway, and Mr. Edison said: "Yes, I was in that, too. I had a three-mile road out there in 1883, and we used to pull freight cars up to the laboratory on it. We made as much as forty miles an hour at times, that railroad project seemed to me to be a mighty good thing. You know I had a Board of Directors in those days—men with bulging foreheads—fellows that thought away ahead into the future—and I went to work and carefully elaborated all the ideas I had for electric railways and submitted them to the board. They considered the subject carefully and fully, and unanimously decided that there was no money in the electric railroad, and that they would let it alone!"

Quicker than Thought.

A little boy, hearing some one remark that nothing was quicker than thought, said he knew better than that; whistling was quicker than thought.

Being asked to explain, he said:

"In school the other day I whistled before I thought, and got a licking for it."—The Evangelist.

LE ROY LITTLE

SUN-DIAL LORE.

Artistic Patterns and Quaint Mottoes Used in This Ancient and Natural Method of Time Telling.

From The London Standard.

The well-known words, "The shadows lengthening as the vapors rise," probably express man's earliest notion of measuring time. They indicate the germinal idea of the sun-dial. The subject is full of interest, and leads into many curious bye-paths of learning. Who made the first sun-dial is lost in the mists of antiquity. Charles Lamb, perhaps, went too far in saying that "Adam could scarce have missed it in Paradise"; but men must soon have found out how to use the sun as a kind of time-keeper. But the sun-dial was known to the two most civilized races of ancient times, the Chaldaean and the Egyptian. Herodotus tells us that the Greeks obtained their knowledge of the gnemon—viz., of the principle of the dial—from the former people. That, of course, is little help in fixing an exact date, for recent discoveries tend to put the origin of Greek civilization several centuries earlier than used to be supposed. The dial of Ahaz was probably copied from Assyria, for wise men of the East doubtless watched the stars many a long century before the Christian era, and there is no reason why they should not have discovered the principle of the sun-dial even when the elder Sargon reigned in Agadé, some fifty-seven centuries ago. Egyptian monuments and hieroglyphics, so far as they have been deciphered, are not much more helpful than the monuments of Chaldaea. The earliest dials found in the Nile Valley are of Greek work, and little more than nineteen centuries old, but we may feel sure that the "wisdom of the Egyptians" included a fair amount of practical astronomy, and that the men who could build the Pyramids would be capable of devising some kind of sun-dial.

The dial may be made after more than one pattern. The Arab, when he sticks his spear upright in the sand to learn the time of day from its shadow, illustrates the rudimentary idea. But that, though a ready, is an inexact method. In dials of more scientific construction, the majority may be subdivided into those where the shadow of the gnomon falls either on a curved surface or on a plane. How the dials are mounted, provided the position be rightly ascertained, is a secondary matter. Sometimes they are quite small, and can be carried about like a watch; though, of course, they are much less easily consulted, and only accurate in a particular latitude. More commonly they are fixed and often large. To some, a monumental character is given by mounting them on pedestals, often elaborately designed, but very many are simply attached to the face of a wall. We are given here illustrations of several interesting examples of the former group, which includes almost all those of complicated pattern, and incidentally indicates the curious forms which are sometimes assumed. Many are mounted on pillars—appropriately when we remember the ancient relation of these to sun worship—and one is on the slope of a buttress. Some like this, and a small cylindrical one carved on the face of a tombstone, are hollowed out; "facet-headed" dials where several plane surfaces are cut on a block of stone, each of which is fitted with a gnomon, are also known; others are shaped as crosses or stars. In fact, while the principle is one, the construction admits of many modifications. These complicated sun-dials seem especially characteristic of Scotland and the northern parts of England. In the former country they are, comparatively speaking, frequent, and several examples are depicted in this volume. Indeed, the Scotch dials are so remarkable as to be allotted a special chapter. They have, however, already received attention from Messrs. McGibbon and Ross, who have described no less than 230 instances in their book on "The Castellated Architecture of Scotland." The latter authority makes four independent types of detached dials—the obelisk, the lectern (or sloping dial, the horizontal, and the facet-headed.

In towns the dials are often supported by tapering shafts, mounted on steps—taking the place of the old market cross, some of them, perhaps, constructed from it when the "idolatrous" emblem had been removed. The more ornate specimens belong often to the seventeenth or earlier part of the eighteenth century, and great ingenuity is displayed in varying the designs. One from Haddington might be taken for a font. At Lee Castle, in Lanarkshire, and at Mount Melville, near St. Andrews, faceted dials are mounted on ornamental pedestals, but the richest of all is at Glamis Castle. Standing over seven yards in height, with its pedestal adorned by upright lions, bearing shields, it supports a great block of stone cut into many projecting pyramids, and from it rise ribs forming an open crown, on which rests a coronet. The monument fairly bristles with dials—they are fitted on each shield and facet, which can serve the purpose, so that, if a multitude of counselors is any good, the time should be truly told. This "perhaps the most beautiful dial which the world can show," was set up between 1647 and 1605. Some even of the vertical dials are more ornamental than usual. These are two-faced, and as they project from the wall are supported by brackets. Heriot's Hospital is well provided, for there are eight on its exterior walls and three inside the courtyard. These were constructed soon after 1630. An ornate one at Alloa is dated in 1695. But the making of dials went on much later, though it is being expelled by cheap clocks and watches, as flint and steel have been by lucifer matches. The schoolmasters often taught "dialing"—Robert Burns learned it in his boyhood—and the stonemasons carried the lessons into practice. A dial made by Hugh Millal may still stands at Cromarty. But the "book" gives numerous instances from other parts of the world. There is a famous one at Chartres Cathedral, held by an angel figure; another at Laon, a third probably existed at Rheims. They are not, however, confined to cathedrals or cities, for they exist on humble churches in tiny villages, even in the remoter parts of the high Alps of Dauphiné. The inception of one placed on the Château of Nevers during the Revolution may be read as stating that the sun moved by order of the convention. Dials are also abundant in Italy; they are less frequent in Spain, but are common in all parts of Germany, where Nuremberg was once noted for portable examples, and in Scandinavia. They exist in Asia, and the great equatorial dial at Delhi constructed in 1724 is one of the most famous in the world.

A dial frequently bears a motto to point a moral. The "book" countains a large collection of these pithy sentences. Of those not in the vernacular, many are in Latin. Greek is but rarely, Hebrew almost never, laid under contribution. Now and again the inscription forms a kind of cryptogram, giving the date by certain of its letters, which are made larger than the rest. Time is flying, death is approaching, is, in some form or other, a favorite and obvious maxim. Now it is conveyed by a single word, "Advesperascit," "evening draweth nigh"; now by two, "Appropinquat Hora," "the hour cometh"; now by three, "Aspice, Respice, Prospice," "look at, look back, look forward"; now by words enforcing the general truth, "As a shadowe so man speedeth," "Make use of the day, for the night cometh." Once or twice the terms are curt, as when it is simply "Allez-vous," or at High Lane, near Disley "Begone about your business," or slightly pessimistic, as is the noted inscription at Ashcott, in Somerset, "Be the day weary, be the day long, Soon shall it ring to evensong." Leighton Bozzard Church echoes a similar note, "Brevis aetas vita fugax." More hopeful is "Crescit in horas doctrina," and "Crepusculum mens nescia" expresses a wish that every one will echo. Not infrequently the dial draws a moral from its own dependency. "Datam do nego negatam," probably is intended in more than one sense. "Deficit sol, nemo reeplolt" certainly is so; "Deus movet, umbra docet" has a far-reaching significance; so, too, has "Ho la vita nella luce, la morte nelle tenebre," or that at Uppingham, "Non rego nisi regar." Did space allow, many striking phrases might be quoted from the motoes, nearly 1,700 in number, which the authors have collected. Rarely sarcastic or Epicurean, often pathetic, most of them enforce a lesson similar to the one given by this translation, "Never returning. Hours glide away, Thou, though much yearning, Canst not delay. Laboring, learning, Spend thou thy day, Indolence spurning, Watch thou and pray."

$75,000 Log Cabin.

From The Boston Journal.

What will be the most costly log cabin in Maine, if not in the whole world, is now being erected on Warren's Island, which lies just outside of the mouth of Kilkey's Harbor, of the Town of Islesborough, on the Maine Coast. The cabin will cost, when completed, in round figures, $75,000. It was begun by the late W. H. Forwell of Philadelphia, and is being completed by his son, Nathan F. Forwell, to whom the property was willed with the express request that the house be finished according to the plans decided upon by Mr. Forwell, Sr. The cabin is 100 by 105 feet on the ground, is made of unpeeled spruce logs, cut upon the island, and is made after the style of the old-time houses of Virginia by an expert log-cabin builder, Fred Heald, from the Old Dominion

Brooklyn Advertisements. | Brooklyn Advertisements. | Brooklyn Advertisements. | Brooklyn Advertisements. | Brooklyn Advertisements. | Brooklyn Advertisements.

ABRAHAM AND STRAUS

BROOKLYN.

Price Reductions the Keynote of To-day's Store News.

A Notable Sale of Cotton Dress Fabrics

Under Actual Cost to Make in Numerous Instances.

Thirty-one thousand yards of splendid Cottons are concerned in this transaction—one to be memorable in the history of Cotton dealing. It is a gathering from various makers, their overproduction of popular fabrics and patterns brought here for quickest dispersal and priced in every case the lowest which the fabric has ever cost. Such prompt and wide distribution as is certain here at these rare prices is least likely to disturb Cotton prices generally. That is why the embarrassed makers turned to us. That is why this sale is possible:

Ginghams at 5c. a Yard.
4,000 yards of corded Ginghams; white grounds corded with pink, blue, black and heliotrope line stripes. The lowest previous price ever quoted for this fabric was 9½c. a yard, and that was under manufacturing cost.

Dimities at 8c. a Yard.
12,500 yards of fine Dimities with corded stripes. A wide choice of patterns—blue, pink, heliotrope and black figures and stripes with white, also fancy and novel patterns. These Dimities have sold extensively at 12½c. a yard.

Batistes at 8c. a Yard.
3,000 yards of printed Batistes of fine quality and in the newest patterns shown this season. Printed on white and tinted grounds. Generally priced at 12½c. a yard.

Lawns at 9c. a Yard.
4,000 yards of 36 inch printed Lawns, exceptionally wide and fine. Small figures on white, fancy stripes and white dots on blue. At 15c. a yard they were very good value.

Irish Dimities at 14c. a Yard.
Come from one of the leading manufacturers in Belfast—the best quality that sells generally at 22c. a yard. A large variety of patterns in the choice black and white, navy blue and white and white and black designs. Also in tinted and white ground with pretty figured designs.

Novelty Ginghams at 19c. a Yard.
4,000 yards of satin stripe Ginghams, one of the best known of the novelty cotton Dress Fabrics. Charming stripe and plaid patterns; very handsome colors with lustrous silk overplaids and stripes. Regularly little priced at.....37½c. a yard

Main floor, West Building.

Foulard Silks in the Silk Sale.

Thirty Thousand Yards Join To-morrow—Foulards and Japanese Wash Silks Priced Under Cost.

The January sale of white and black and fancy Silks grows bigger instead of smaller. Now the Japanese Foulards join—and already the showing of printed silk and satin Foulards was the largest, the most exclusive and the most various in designs and colorings in Greater New York. Foulards were never more popular, either. There will be hurrying of these beauties to-morrow. Be among the early ones:

Japanese Corded Wash Silks—6,000 yards of the best styles and colors, 29c. a yard

Printed Japanese Foulards—24 inches wide, 10,000 yards and over forty choice designs in all the good colors; value 79c. a yard, at 55c

Oriental Waterproof Printed Foulards.

Something entirely new in printed Foulards—a silk that we guarantee not to spot with water. The quality is one of the best made in Japan, the printing and finishing are done in Lyons, France. Designs and colorings are the freshest from Paris and are shown in wide variety. So excellent do we think these waterproof Foulards that we have taken the sole agency for Brooklyn. Price is exceedingly low at 79c. a yd

Main floor, West Building.

Crepons and Grenadines--Under Half.

Black—the finest of silk and wool weaves.

There are 2,300 yards altogether and a great variety of the odd, rich patterns which are promising to make Crepons and Grenadines most popular this season. The silk is rich and lustrous—it is a most attractive showing. Importer was embarrassed with a larger stock than he could afford to carry—that is how it happens.

To make selection easy we have cut them into four, five and six yard lengths. Not a pattern is worth less than $2.50 a yard and many styles are regularly priced at $3.50 to $3.75.

Ready to-morrow at $1.49 a yard.

Main floor, front, Central Building.

Women's Capes and Jackets--Bargains

Price reductions in the Coat and Suit Store have done more than the prompt clearance that was planned to make room for Spring styles. Belated makers came to us with such exceptional offerings—Winter has been especially hard on the Cloak makers this year—that we knew you would take them promptly. Coats, Golf Capes, Separate Skirts are here accordingly at prices half or near it. Thus:

$10.00 Golf Capes for $4.75.
Five hundred—soft, warm, handsome reversible cheviot, plain outside with handsome plaid back; flare collar; some with deep hood, others with double shoulder cape showing the plaid; 30 inches deep and a full sweep.

$10.00 Jackets for $5.50.
Just 100—of black kersey cloth, 19 inch; stylish, double-breasted box front; coat collar, notch revers, pleated back; black satin lining.

Separate Skirts, $4.98.
Black cheviot, serge and pebble cheviot in gored style; narrow at hips, graduating to a wide flare at bottom; gore seams outlined with stitching; inverted pleat back; percaline lining, velveteen binding.

$12 to $18 Automobile Coats, $9.98.
Black and Oxford gray cheviot—40 inches long; high flare collar and wide revers; double-breasted front; half fitting back; edges finished with rows of stitching; heavy black satin lining

$15 Box Coats at $7.50.
Cheviots and Venetians—26 inches long; black, Oxford, tan and navy blue; double-breasted box front with pearl buttons; flare collar and revers; half fitting back; black satin lining.

Second floor, front, Central Building.

January Price Cutting in Furs.

Furs in our own stock are cut this time and sharply—the Persian Lamb, Broadtail and Baby Lamb Jackets, which have made the most brilliant display of fur luxury we ever were able to show.

Every Jacket Here Reduced a Full Third.

Prices originally were the lowest fur prices anywhere—new prices must insure speedy departure for these elegant garments. A hint of them:

Baby Lamb Jackets, with real chinchilla collar, reduced from $375.00 to.....$195.00
Baby Lamb Jackets, plain, reduced from $357.00 to.....$179.00
Baby Lamb Jackets, plain, reduced from $295.00 to.....$147.50
Extra quality Persian Lamb, with chinchilla shawl collar, reduced from $174.50 to $116.00
Extra quality Persian Lamb, with extra fine mink collar and revers, reduced from $265.00 to.....$176.50
Extra quality Persian Lamb, plain, reduced from $236.00 to.....$150.00
Extra quality Persian Lamb, plain, reduced from $175.00 to.....$114.50
Nearseal Jackets, with Persian shawl collar, reduced from $55.50 to.....$37.50
Nearseal Jackets, with Beaver shawl collar, reduced from $55.00 to.....$37.50
Nearseal Jackets, with chinchilla collar and revers, reduced from $65.00 to....$42.50

Fur Neckwear—Reduced Also.

Extra fine Mink Collars, tab front, mink tail trimmed, reduced from $135.00 to..$83.50
Extra fine Mink Collars, tab front, trimmed with mink tails, reduced from $45.00 to $28.50
Extra fine Mink Collarettes, mink tail trimmed, reduced from $50.00 to...$27.50
Extra fine Alaska Sable Scarfs, trimmed with cluster of 12 in. fine Alaska sable tails, value $16.75, at.....$12.45
Alaska Sable Cluster Scarfs, prime skins, trimmed with eight Alaska Sable tails, value $14.50, at.....$10.45
Alaska Sable Cluster Scarfs, trimmed with eight sable tails, value $8.75, at....$6.95
Fine mink cluster Scarfs, very dark, cut full and wide, trimmed with eight large fox tails, chain attached, value $17.50, at $12.95
Mink cluster Scarfs, natural fur, with dark stripe, large full pattern, can be worn either up or down, trimmed with eight fox tails, value $12.50, at.....$9.95
Mink cluster Scarfs, trimmed with six fox tails, value $7.50, at.....$5.75

Second floor, front, Central Building.

Household Linens. A Stirring Sale.

A 20 by 40 inch hemmed huck Towel of the usual 15c. quality for 10c. That's a modest illustration of the values that are keeping this Linen Store busier than any January it has ever known. Now comes a sale of considerable range and Prices in Every Case Are Less Than Import Cost.

How? Wise buying a year or so before the rise in prices. Closest touch with the best makers now. Biggest and best bargains come naturally to the biggest and best Linen Store. Now a word of prices:

66 inch extra heavy bleached Damask, 85c quality.....59c. yd
72 inch superfine satin finish bleached double Damask, $1.35 quality.....$1.00 yd
⅝ size, 20x20 inch, extra heavy silver bleach Austrian Napkins.....$1.49 doz
¾ size, 25x25 inch, all linen bleached Damask Dinner Napkins, $2.50 quality..$1.88 doz
¾ size, 24x24 inch, superfine satin finish damask Dinner Napkins, $4.50 quality, $3.45 doz
Hemmed Huck Towels, size 20x40 inches, 15c. quality, at.....10c. ea
Knotted fringe all linen Damask Towels, size 20x40 inches, regular 21c. quality, 12½c. ea
Large assortment of Remnants of Table Damask and odd half dozen Napkins at greatly reduced prices.

Main floor, rear, East Building.

Rugs . . . The January Clearance.

Stocks must be fresh each season—that is one of the rules of store-keeping here adhered to, though it means price cutting on such sturdy merchandise as Rugs. You buy a Rug for its beauty, not for its new style, and so these half-yearly clearance sales mean savings that are notable. This year the gathering is larger than ever—hundreds of the finest Rugs made

A Third to Half Below the Regular Prices.

They will go promptly—hundreds of Brooklyn householders wait for these sales. Choice is wide and fine, but widest and finest to first-comers, of course. Now a look at prices:

All Wool Ingrain Art Squares. About 125 a third under regular.
3x2½ yds.....$3.65
3x3 yds.....$4.35
3x3½ yds.....$5.15
3x4 yds.....$5.85

Smith Axminster Rugs less than present wholesale cost; 15 patterns, some antique designs, some floral, some plain colored centers.
4½x6½ ft., usually $7.75.....$5.50
8¼x10½ ft., usually $19.50.....$15.25
9x12 ft., usually $22.50 and $28.50..$16.85
27 in.x54, handsome wool velvet Rug, nicely fringed, usually $1.50, at.....98c
36 in.x72, handsome Wilton velvet Rug, usually $3.75, at.....$2.95
36 in.x72, Byzantine reversible Rug, usually $5.00, at.....$2.45

Carpet Rugs. We have made them from the best carpetings; selected, cut, sewed, pressed and finished with great care. In nearly all center and border match and in the others plain colored centers are used. As handsome and low priced Rugs as we ever offered. A few of the kinds, sizes and prices:
6x9 ft., best Tapestry.....$8.25
6x9 ft., best Axminster.....$9.75
6x8½ ft., Velvet.....$11.75
6x9 ft., body Brussels.....$12.00
6¾x11¼ ft. Savonnerie.....$15.50
6¾x10½ ft. Wilton Velvet.....$18.75
8¼x11 ft. best Tapestry.....$12.00
8¼x12 ft. Axminster.....$10.25
8¼x11 1-3 ft., body Brussels.....$24.75
10½x13¾ ft., best Tapestry.....$20.25
10½x12 1-3 ft., Axminster.....$22.50
10½x12½ ft., body Brussels.....$29.75
10½x13 ft., Wilton Velvet.....$31.75

Smyrna Rugs a third less than usual. All wool, reversible, made by one of the best manufacturers, a particularly choice and large variety of designs and colorings.
18x36 in.....60c
26x54 in.....$1.25
30x60 in.....$1.55
36x72 in.....$2.25
4x7 ft., at.....$3.70
6x9 ft., at.....$8.75
7½x10½ ft., at.....$13.75
9x12 ft., at.....$17.50

Animal Rugs; Fur, Carriage & Sleigh Robes
At prices averaging half.

Fur Robes. 12 black, white, grey and brown Robes, well lined, were $7.00 to $10.00, at.....$3.75
1 lynx cat, with tails, Robe, well lined, was $25.00, at.....$10.50
3 opossum Robes, well lined, were $30.00, at.....$11.00
2 white goat Robes, lined with plush, were $20.00, at.....$9.50
1 black bear Robe, lined, was $40.00, at $24.75
10 28x64 in. black Goat Skins, were $4.25, at.....$2.25

Animal Skins. 50 Red Fox, Lynx and Tiger Cats, lined with cloth and pinked edge, value $8.25, at.....$5.75
2 Prairie Wolves, open mouth, were $15.00, at.....$11.00
2 Hudson Bay Wolves, open mouth, were $25.00, at.....$18.00
2 Mountain Lions, closed mouth, were $16.50, at.....$11.00
3 Mountain Lions, open mouth, were $35.00, at.....$22.50
1 Leopard, open mouth, was $32.50, at $17.50
1 Leopard, open mouth, was $40.00, at $24.50
1 Brown Bear, open mouth, was $40.00, at $19.50
1 Brown Bear, open mouth, was $45.00, at $24.50
1 Black Bear, open mouth, was $60.00, at $29.50

Third floor, East Building.

Oriental Furnishings Smartly Reduced

The luxuries of the Oriental Room at prices which make them economies. No single piece of furniture will do more for the decoration of a room than a cozy corner, nothing is more solidly comfortable. The draperies of such a corner—couch covers, Oriental curtains, a multitude of Orientalisms—are sharply reduced in price to hurry them into usefulness. It is a notable opportunity.

Damask Curtains, 30 in.x3¼ yards; value $1.75, at.....$1.19
Japan Draperies, 1¼x2¾ yards.....98c
Gagra Skirts, dark blue and gold; value $6.00, at.....$3.75
Meerut Print Curtains in very dark Oriental colorings, 50 in.x3 yards.....$1.50
Phulkar Curtains; values $6.50, at..$4.25
Turkish Slippers.....39c. a pair
Couch Covers in Oriental patterns; 50 in.x3 yards; value $5.00, at.....$3.98

Lace Curtains. Talk of Price Tumbling.

Unusual pricing even for the Upholstery Store—it isn't often that we can find such splendid Curtains to sell for such little money. When we do—just to tell you is sufficient. It is pleasant to feel such confidence reposed in one. Now for to-morrow—bargains thus:

Real Renaissance Lace Curtains, fresh from the importer, yet actually less than wholesale prices. This way: $3.28, $4.69, $5.98, $6.98, $7.98, $9.48 and $10.48 a pair
Nottingham Lace Curtains, $1.19, $1.98 and $3.24 a pair
Irish Point Curtains, specially low priced at.....$5.98 and $6.98 a pair
Ruffled Muslin Curtains, 98c. and $1.15 a pair
Tapestry Squares—A mixed lot, suitable for covering chairs or pillows, 19c., 39c., 49c. and 98c.

Third floor, front, Central Building.

LOOT AUCTIONS IN PEKING.

Bargains Gayly Made in Plunder Rivaling That Which the Spaniards Anciently Gathered in America.

From The London Express.

PEKING, Sept. 25.—"Here are two rolls of mandarin silk, about twenty yards. How much shall I say for the mandarin silk?"

"Three dollars."

"Four."

"Any advance on four dollars? Going for four dollafs! Going! Gone for four dollars to Capt. Phillips."

Then Capt. Fell brings up another article out of the heap, and the auctioneer, old Dick Herring, the constable of the British Legation, takes another sip of whisky and water, then stands erect at six-foot-two and holds up a warm blue silk coat, full length from shoulder to ankles, lined throughout with foxskin and embroidered on the outside with silk.

We are expecting the Winter here shortly, and tailoring is rather at a premium.

"How much shall I say for this beautiful foxskin coat?" says Richard.

His phrases are not much varied; in fact, you know what he is going to say before he opens his mouth. He turns the long clonk back to front and vice versa, and his white shirt sleeve drops down to his shoulder as he lifts the foxskin well off the ground.

"Two dollars," says an Indian dealer, with reckless prodigality. The article is worth $30, or £3, in any part of the world.

"Three dollars," says a Corporal of Marines from the outer ring.

"Four," says a Colonel, seated on one of the forms in the inner ring.

"Five," from an American war correspondent. It has never before been discovered that press correspondents were men of means, but this loot auction draws them out.

"Six," shouts Dr. Dudgeon from the form. He knows the value of things, and people smile. So the bidding runs up to twenty.

"Going for twenty! Gone! Name, please? Oh, Dr. Dudgeon. Didn't know it was you, Sir, or I would have sent the bidding higher."

A RUMMAGE SALE.

Whereat the company laughs. Dr. Dudgeon is not the man to pay too much. Then there is put up a piece of Chinese ink or a chunk of bird-nest soup, solid and dirty, or a Manchu lady's hairpin, and though half a dozen articles may have just been sold in succession at less than half their market value, this trifle will be run up to a ridiculous figure. Its intrinsic value is less, to a European, than that of a single brace-button, (which, indeed, is sometimes a precious possession in the circumstances,) but the company is seized with the humor of the thing.

Every afternoon, except Sundays, these scenes occur under the colonnade in front of the British Legation. Sir Claude MacDonald is frequently among the crowd, and Gen. Gaselee, Gen. Barrow, and the officers of the staff, together with colonels, majors, captains, and subalterns, warrant officers, non-coms., and men, Sikhs and Royal Marines, Royal Engineers, and Welsh Fusileers, Japanese, Punjabis, and Baluchis and Indian camp followers, Chinese traders, and even coolies, with a sprinkling of American officers and men, and Germans. The sale is free and open to every one who chooses to come. The Russians and the French do not choose to come.

RIVALS OF PIZARRO.

That is loot systematized. This China expedition affair has been the biggest looting excursion since the days of Pizarro. There are different ways of looting, and other nationalities have not pursued the English way, but all are agreed that loot is the correct card. It had to be. Peking was a wealthy and populous city, full of big houses, busy marts, thriving banks, large warehouses, and crowded pawnshops. Half the population rushed helter-skelter through the northern and western gates when the troops entered by the southern and eastern. Those who fled took with them what they could carry, and buried, or attempted to conceal, the best part of what they had to leave behind.

But thousands of pounds worth of property was left derelict, with no likelihood of its owners coming to claim it. On the entry of the troops an honest endeavor was made by the British commander to keep his troops within bounds. The Indian troops, in particular, required a tight rein. But there lay the unclaimed, ownerless, portable property, and meanwhile Russians, French, and Germans were freely gathering it in, as well as the Chinese themselves as soon as they gathered courage to invade the empty houses.

It becomes clear that the virtuous abstinence of the British troops from the appropriation of goods would not in the least help the former rightful owners, and as many of these must have been participators in the Boxer attack, their goods would in any case be liable to confiscation. This was the situation when the British troops were given permission to bring in what they could find.

ONE GOOD DEED.

While the wealthy houses and the crowded pawnshops were stripped of their silks and furs, the poor man's cottage was spared, and men found looting beyond bounds were court-martialed. The coolie's necessary goods and chattels, his baskets, his wretched clothing, his needles and thread, even his paltry ornaments of artificial flowers and cheap vases were left as they stood. Though gratitude is not perhaps the strongest point in the Chinese character, I cannot but think that this step, which did no one any harm, did something to enhance the reputation of British troops.

There is another method of dealing with the Chinese. I will not now make mention of particular nationalities. There have been cases, and many thousands of them, where houses have been entered and every single article which could not be carried off has been wantonly smashed, the occupants of the houses beaten and sometimes killed, the women grossly treated, mules and donkeys bayoneted, and dogs shot.

British soldiers have had no share in such pillage.

LOST ON BUSINESS LINES.

The property taken by British troops has not been left in the hands of those who seized it, but has all been put together in warehouses under guard. It has then been placed in charge of a prize fund committee, who have made a selection each day of various kinds of goods, which have been and are being put up for auction.

Upward of $50,000 has been realized so far, and there is as much more yet to be sold.

There is still another matter which must be mentioned. There is the matter of private looting. A facetious suggestion has been made that, after the example of The Ladysmith Lyre, the newspaper correspondents here should set up a journal with the title of The Daily Lute. The suggestion has point. There has been a good deal of looting by civilians. But I do not wish to incriminate all my friends. I mention the subject only to leave it alone.

Irrigation for Indians' Benefit.

From The Santa Fé New Mexican.

The fact that the Government is taking a hand in providing adequate irrigation systems for the Indian tribes is a step in the right direction, demonstrating what can be accomplished in the arid region by the storage of water. Private enterprise has already shown this, but the Government is generally slow to see and to act upon proof furnished by private parties, and it is well that it is making a few experiments in the same line that will enable it to draw conclusions and comparisons. If that much is being done for the Indians, a good deal more should be done for reclaiming the public land and thus making it of value to the homeseeker.

BRAZILIAN RECIPROCITY.

Frank Opinions of Our Proposals—The Monroe Doctrine and the Coffee and Flour Duties.

From The Brazilian Review.

Nothing more stupid, illiberal, or better calculated to set every one by the ears than the so-called reciprocal policy was yet invented. In order to obtain an undue, and often unmerited, advantage over a competitor, adherents of this principle are quite willing to set all their neighbors quarreling and care not a jot so long as they get their pound of flesh. So long as we had but one tariff, to be applied indifferently to all alike, and asked for no preferential treatment from others, neither the United States nor any one else could complain or ask for special favors. But now that we ourselves adopted the principle and enforced it on other people we can scarcely grumble when the United States exact similar favors. So long as it did no harm to any one else there might not be so great inconvenience in making concessions to the United States, though they are certain to be taken exception to and the example imitated by others, by lowering the duties on some of their produce in return for exemption of our coffees.

We do not ourselves think it very dignified of a great country like the United States to go about the world threatening weaker brethren into concessions, and still less to appeal ad misericordiam, to get McKinley out of an electioneering sorape; but after all, every one must be the judge of his own dignity, and if Americans like it, it is scarcely our business. Yet, looking at it from another and still wider point of view, it scarcely seems that concessions wrung from one South American country at the expense of another are calculated to endear the United States, particularly to the countries she seems anxious to "protect," or to promote that harmony which followers of the Monroe doctrine should, it might be thought, do all they can to foster. However, that again is not our affair, but only the effect on ourselves of the projected treaty of commerce with the United States, in accordance with which American flour is to be granted special and, to our view, improper favors.

American flour, as is well known, comes in barrels, and that from the River Plate in bags; both, according to the present tariff, pay 25 reis per kilo. We underetand that the American Minister demanded a reduction of duties on American flour, that is, a differential duty against the River Plate article. That, however, could not be granted, as the grounds on which the Government was alone allowed to raise duties were clearly enumerated and limited to such countries as refused to make any reduction of excessive duties on coffee.

The law said nothing about these countries where there was no duty to reduce, and, clearly, as no concession at all was made on the side of the United States, any arrangement of the kind would be invalid. Besides, if granted to one it could not be refused to another, and Argentina would have only to let in coffee free, too, to be put on the same favored footing. As coffee only gives a revenue of £40,000 in Argentina, it might be done without any great sacrifice. The difficulty, however, has been got round in what seems to us a particularly indecorous manner, odorous of sharp practice and unworthy of either of the contracting parties. That the United States should stoop to such practices is surprising, but that Brazil should imitate her bad example and risk offending her very good friend and neighbor, Argentina, just at the moment when she has received such unmistakable marks of esteem and friendship, is more than surprising; it is amazing! Nor does it seem to us that the part played by the United States is particularly friendly in imposing such a sacrifice on the country.

It is reported that to conciliate Mr. McKinley, we will not say the United States, the duty on flour in bags, which, as we said, all comes from the River Plate, will be raised to 35 reis per kilo, while that in barrels is left at 25 reis. Perfectly fair, Americans may say, because it is the same for all. But it is not the same for all, and they know it perfectly well, because Argentines have no barrels to put their flour into and cannot get them. The whole thing is a mere pretense.

That Argentina will submit quietly to such unfairness is scarcely likely. Besides, the proposed arrangement is clearly illegal unless ratified by Congress, as Government has no power at all to make such discriminations as that between flour in barrels and flour in bags, but only to raise duties on certain well defined lines. If this is a sample of the American new diplomacy, for Heaven's sake let us return to the old! The United States should want no favors, but only a fair field. That they have always had, and if, in spite of all, they have been unable to compete in these markets in certain lines, it is owing entirely to natural inabilities of distance or cost of production, that it is no Government's province to correct. If Argentina has some advantage here, the United States have far greater in Europe, so let them be content and not ask for the impossible, lest worse befall them. The United States have been threatening to put a duty on coffee, off and on for years. But far better it should be done, than that we should be constrained to concessions so undignified and humiliating.

The prospects of coffee are not brilliant just at present, and will possibly be still worse next year, should the crop be anything like what is anticipated. There is, however, a minimum below which prices cannot be forced, and, as there seems every probability of its being reached anyhow, it does not much matter if duties are put on in the United States or not as in any case they will be paid by consumers. We think, therefore, that on every ground, political, economical, or moral, the concession claimed by the United States is inconvenient, and ought not to be carried into effect.

MONEY A CENTURY AGO.

Its Purchasing Power Was Small in the "Good Old Times."

From The London Mail.

Nothing throws into bolder or more striking relief the progress achieved by the masses of the English people in the direction of comfort and good living during the century now closing than a comparison of the purchasing power of the sovereign of a hundred years ago with that of the same sovereign to-day.

Take bread, for example—the staff of life then to a far greater degree even than it is at present! On Jan. 1, 1801, the quartern loaf was selling in London at 1s. 9½d., and in March it had risen to 1s. 10½d. Its present price varies from 4d. to 6d., according to the quality of the flour and the locality in which it is retailed. It follows, therefore, that the housewife of a century ago had to expend 4 sovereigns to purchase approximately the same quantity of bread as is obtainable to-day for 1.

Barley "griddles" and oaten "cakes" were, it is true, largely used as a substitute for wheaten bread, but little was gained thereby, for the selling price of these inferior grains arose in sympathy.

Nor was this enormous disparity between prices prevailing then and now confined to cereals alone. Beef fetched a shilling a pound, mutton, 13d., and veal 14d. And these were average prices. For choice cuts one-and-six and one-and-eight were asked and obtained.

No butter was to be had in 1801 at less than 16d. a pound, and cheese cost a shilling. Candles were quoted at 11d., loaf sugar at 17d., and soap at 10d. Even cleanliness was an expensive luxury in those days. Coffee fetched £8 per cwt. in bond, and to this had to be added £2 5s. 8d. duty, making the price to the wholesale merchant £10 5s. 8d. The price now is about £1 10s. per cwt. Even tea, which is now found in comparative profusion in the poorest cottage, was then the luxury of the well-to-do only, the commonest kinds being quoted at from 7s. to 9s. the pound. This quality, moreover, was largely adulterated with sloe, licorice, and ash tree leaves. Really good, pure tea cost 10s., 12s., and even 15s. the pound.

It was much the same with other minor luxuries. The high price of sugar of course affected sympathetically everything into the composition of which it entered. Jam was considered cheap at 18d. the pound pot, and all kinds of dried fruits were from 300 to 500 per cent. dearer than at present.

We grumble at the price of coals now, but in the Winter of 1800-1801 they were being hawked in the streets of London at £2 11s. a caldron. A load of hay fetched £7 3s. in Whitechapel on Jan. 5, 1801. Small turnips were retailed at one penny apiece, large ones were worth twopence to threepence.

Even wearing apparel was expensive beyond all conception. An ordinary suit of woolen clothes cost between eight and nine pounds. A pair of boots fetched a sovereign. Yet, withal, trade had never been worse. Manchester, Leeds, Sheffield, Coventry all told the same tale of factories closed and workpeople starving. These were the days when raw silk was quoted in the London market returns at £5 12s. per pound, and "scarce at that." This was largely due to the war then raging with France, the risks due to which added enormously to the cost of freight and insurance. Thus, a small ship of less than 400 tons burden charged £30,000 for bringing a cargo from Calais to London. From Bordeaux £80,000 was asked and paid; and no wonder, when on an average three out of every five vessels flying the British flag homeward bound were overhauled by French privateers.

PRESERVING THE BIG TREES.

Senator Hoar Thinks California Ought to Do It Herself.

From The San Francisco Chronicle.

The women's clubs of this State are persevering in their efforts to save the Calaveras grove as a legacy to posterity. Mrs. Emma Shafter Howard has opened correspondence on the subject with many influential men in Washington. Senator Hoar of Massachusetts suggests in a letter written on the subject that California ought to have intelligence and public spirit enough to save her wonderful trees. The suggestion is pertinent, but the Nation as well as the State has an interest in their preservation. The Senator adds that his State would not ask any help of the Federal Government if she had them, which is probably true; but Massachusetts has a larger permanent population and greater wealth than California, while the proximity of the grove to a national park in this State naturally suggests their union and their subsequent care under one patrol. Mr. Hoar promises, however, to aid the Senators from this State in their efforts to secure favorable action by Congress.

Another letter of special value on the subject has been received from the Secretary of the American Forestry Association, in which the co-operation of the women's clubs of California with that organization in all kindred projects to that of the preservation of Calaveras Grove is cordially invited. In this letter there is a friendly intimation that heroics should supplant hysterics in the work of saving the forests of the country from destruction, and the hint will probably not be thrown away.

FILIPINO SECRET SOCIETY.

Said to Have 800,000 Members and to be Responsible for the War.

From The Baltimore American.

Mr. Roy Ayres, late of the Fourth United States Cavalry, seeing service in the Philippines, is in Baltimore, and talked interestingly of the conditions in our new possessions in the East. Although but twenty-four years of age, Mr. Ayres has crowded enough adventure into his life to suit half a dozen ordinary men. He entered the army before the war with Spain, being a native of the Lone Star State, and was on the first transport to arrive in Manila after Dewey's victory over the Spanish fleet, on the memorable 1st of May, 1898. He served during the fights about the city, and when it fell was transferred to the Commissary Department.

"The insurrection in the Philippines," said Mr. Ayres, "and its continuance can be ascribed to a secret society known as the 'Katapulan.' I can speak with proof to substantiate my statements. It was organized in 1892 by Dr. José Rizal, a famous agitator, who was afterward beheaded for treason in 1896, on the Lunette, in Manila. It has to-day a membership of over 800,000, and is one of the most powerful organizations of the kind in the world. Its members are known by a tiny cross cut on the end of the index finger, under the nail, which is, as you know, worn very long in the islands, and whenever you find that mark on a Filipino you can bet that he's a good rebel. They are bound by the most awful oaths, permit no foreign powers to rule them, and before our Government took a hand in the affairs of the islands were used against the Spaniards, against whom the organization was directed at its birth."

Soldier's Gift to ex-Confederates.

From The New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Capt. S. S. Brown, a prominent business man of Pittsburg, Penn., has sent his check for $50 for the fund being raised for the entertainment of the Confederate veterans at the coming reunion at Memphis, Tenn. In doing so Capt. Brown wrote a letter which is creditable to his head and he

KITES TO HELP SOLVE WEATHER PROBLEM

Experiments at the Blue Hill Meteorological Observatory.

RISE TO IMMENSE HEIGHTS

Preferable to Balloons, Giving Adequate Exposure to the Self-Recording Instruments.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 19.—Ten miles to the south of Boston lie the Blue Hills. Here, on the summit of the "Great Blue," is the Blue Hill Meteorological Observatory, maintained by A. Lawrence Rotch as a station of the Astronomical Observatory of Harvard University. The work done has been notable and interesting in many ways, but to the popular imagination the most interesting thing done at Blue Hill is the kite-flying—the exploration of the free air, as it is more scientifically called, by means of self-recording instruments attached to kites.

At Blue Hill the kite now used in tandems of two to six, is commonly a modified Hargrave box kite. Steadiness, power, and, for a kite, a satisfactory degree of reliability are its useful characteristics. Another kite sometimes used is Lamson's "aero-curve folding kite," invented by C. H. Lamson of Portland, Me. It is more powerful but less steady than the Hargrave kite, and when used in a tandem is usually sent aloft as the leader, with the Hargrave kites below to give stability in addition to their proportion of lifting power. Steel piano wire is used as "string," as the best combination of strength and lightness. The windlass on which the line is reeled, however, presented the most difficult problem in the first experiments. Finally a modification of Lord Kelvin's steam power windlass for deep-sea sounding was devised, which after many experiments has proved entirely successful.

Simply stated, the principle is a pulley over which the kite wire is conveyed to a storage drum, the coils on which are thus protected from the strain of the kite. The pull of the kite is sufficient to unwind the drum, the power is used to draw the wire back. The length of wire paid out and the pressure exerted necessary to be known in order to calculate how many more kites, if any, can be safely added to the tandem—are automatically registered.

Kites are attached from time to time as the wire tends to sag more and more and to approximate, near the windlass, a horizontal line. Each additional kite, therefore, after the first, is released, exerts its power partly in sustaining the main line and taking off the strain from the leader, and partly only in elevating the instrument itself. The instrument, called a meteorograph, is a combination contrived to include, compactly and with the least possible weight, the various self-recording instruments which are used to investigate the aerial conditions. Formerly it was suspended from the wire, but it was found that greater steadiness could be secured if it were attached directly to it; and this is now done. In clear weather the height of the kite is determined by observation of the angle and from the length of the wire, after eliminating the error caused by the sagging, averaging about 7 per cent.

Ordinarily a kite flight at Blue Hill lasts from six to eight hours, though it may continue throughout a day or even a night. For some time the flights have taken place monthly, on several successive days, in order to study the changing weather conditions at different heights.

The highest flight was made on July 19 of last year. It is 15,800 feet for the meteorograph, or, for the kite above, about 100 feet more. This is something over three miles—higher than Mount Blanc, for example. The flight was made by means of six kites, a Lamson as leader, and five Hargraves as "wheel horses" at distances of from 1,500 to 3,500 feet apart. It is possible that four miles may be reached, though the difficulties increase greatly with altitude.

According to a statement of Mr. Rotch, the advantages of kites have proved to be economy in installation and working, accurate determination of height by angular measurements, adequate exposure and ventilation of the thermometers, which in a balloon are bathed in heated and stagnant air, and the possibility of making frequent ascents and descents, permitting observations to be obtained almost simultaneously in different air strata and nearly over a station at the ground, where there may be instruments recording simultaneously. With these points of advantage it is not strange to learn that kites are being increasingly used not only in the United States, but in Europe where many meteorological stations are already following the lead in the Blue Hill Observatory. It is intended to continue these kite flights as a part of the regular work of the observatory as the best means of sounding the free air, and thus throwing light on many of the most puzzling problems of the weather.

Physical Effects of Fear.

Letter to the Editor of The London Times.

Sir: As I look back upon my sensations during the anxious minutes which I, in common with some 2,000 others, passed when there was an alarm of fire at the Grand Theatre at Islington, yesterday, I recall a symptom which, it seems to me, may have some scientific interest. Twice in my life have I been horribly frightened, but the symptoms have been quite different on the two occasions. The first was a case of pulling a careless friend out of the water, which was quite a simple thing to do, since I could swim, and he, a little man, could not. Then I was not aware that I was frightened until, after all was over, my knees shook exactly like jelly and behaved as if they had an independent existence. Yesterday, especially when the fireproof curtain was down and one could not know what was going on behind, I found no difficulty in controlling myself, but I was also quite conscious of terrible anxiety, of which I am not in the least ashamed; for in the box with me were my wife and my two children, the hostages I had given to fortune; in fact, all my eggs were in one basket. I cannot find words to express my appreciation of the resourceful promptitude of the conductor and of the calm behavior of the huge Islington audience, for, abolished the panic which was to be feared far more than fire. But it is of the symptoms of my fear that I write, being of opinion that they may be interesting. Three times over, at intervals of a second or two, I felt a sharp and sudden pain in the small of the back, as if I had been grasped and squeezed tightly in a gigantic hand, and as I write now, fifteen hours later, the place where the pain was is stiff and uncomfortable. Now, the shaking knees are a symptom as old as Homer, probably as old as man himself, but the other effect is new to me, and it would be interesting to learn whether others who have been frightened without showing fear, either at Islington or elsewhere, have suffered similar sensations. I am, Sir, obediently,

YOUR REPORTER.

Dec. 27.

Derivation of "Doll."

From The London Chronicle.

The derivation of "doll," about which a correspondent inquired, was for long doubtful. Even now, though the Oxford Dictionary explains the word as short for Dorothy, thus agreeing with Lloyd's and the Century Dictionary, the latest edition of Chambers still quotes Skeat. The best of English philologists suggests the Old Dutch "dol," a whipping top. The Century gives the analogous "jack" as the name of a toy. And it gives up the old derivation of doll as an abbreviation of idol as certainly wrong." French says that the word did not come into use until after Dryden. Mr. Canton, in his fascinating book of "Children's Sayings," has an interesting reference to the origin of the name "doll." "The doll is one of the best teachers of a child," he says, "and it is one of the happy chances of language that the very name 'dolly' carries us back to St. Dorothea (God's gift) and her beautiful rose legend. 'Dorothy,' writes Miss Yonge, in her 'History of Christian Names,' was once one of the most usual of English names, and 'dolly' was so constantly heard in every household that it finally became the generic term for the wooden children that at least as late as the infancy of Elizabeth Stuart were called babies or puppets.'"

Brooklyn Advertisements. | Brooklyn Advertisements.

JOURNEAY & BURNHAM.

Flatbush Avenue, Junction Fulton Street.

Most Attractive Shopping Place in Brooklyn—Prices Always the Lowest.

Great Sale of Fine Broadcloths,

In Every Desirable Color---Goods Worth $1.25, at 73 Cts. Per Yard.

Two thousand yards of fine Broadcloth, in beautiful shades of gray, old rose, reseda, cardinal, beaver, tan, garnet, brown, royal blue, castor and navy—high quality goods that happen to be 48 inches wide, instead of 50 inches (the regular standard), and therefore our price for them is only 73 cts. per yard; actually worth $1.25. Main Floor, Centre Aisle.

Special Offers in the Silk Department.

1,500 yards of 23-inch Black Taffeta, guaranteed, 69 cts. per yard, instead of $1.00.

1,700 yards of Panne Velvet, black and colors, beautiful, rich quality, 98 cts. instead of $2.00.

1,800 yards of Corduroy Velveteens, in all the staple shades, 59 cts. instead of $1.00.

Clearing Sale of Ladies' Suits.

One lot of Suits, in all wool homespun and cheviot, principally light colors—Suits that have been sold at $12.00 to $15.00—reduced to $5.95 each. The skirts alone are worth more.

Fifty Suits of all wool materials, in colors and black, some of them with Taffeta drop linings, all good styles, have been $15.00, $18.00 and $20.00, reduced to $9.95 each, to clear at once.

Reduction Sale of Waists.

Fifty Silk Waists, tucked, some with ruffles down front, in all sizes and colors, were $7.50 to $12.00, reduced to $4.95 each.

Twenty dozen more French Flannel Waists, in black, helio, green, cadet, red and white, same as those sold last Monday, regular $3.00 Waists, at $1.85 each.

Annual Sale of Writing Paper and Envelopes.

Special lots from the mills of Geo. B. Hurd; superior quality, including Irish Linen in cream; Old Style wove in silver, gray and heliotrope; Satin wove in mauve and purple aster; Treasury Bond in white; all in Billet, Octavo and Douglass size; 100 sheets of paper and 100 envelopes, in a box, at 50 cts.

An entirely new style of Parisian monogram, on steel die, for $1.00.

Four quires of paper will be stamped in any color, free of charge, to any purchaser of this die.

Another Reduction Sale of Ladies' Shoes.

Full lines of Ladies' Box Calf Shoes, extension soles, button, full bulldog toes, hand welts, regular $4.00 Shoes, at $3.00.

Box Calf Storm Boots, lace, high cut, heavy soles, hand welted, $3.00, instead of $4.00.

Vici Kid Shoes, button and lace, medium soles, Patent Leather tips, for dress and street wear, $2.50.

Vici Kid Shoes, button and lace, Patent Leather and Kid tips, $1.85.

Great Special Sale of Corsets, Models.

P. D. Corsets, medium length, white and drab, top finished with embroidery, sizes 18 to 29, 95 cts.; were $1.75.

Z. Z. Corsets, medium length, black only, sizes 18 to 25, 95 cts.; were $2.25.

C. B. Leotie Corsets, bias, gored, medium straight front, pink and blue Silk-Batiste, lace trimmed, $1.25; were $3.50.

Redfern Corsets, all whalebone, white and black, broken sizes, 95 cts.; were $5.00.

Broken Lots and Sizes of Knit Underwear, greatly reduced to clear immediately.

Men's Natural Merino Shirts and Drawers, regular 85 cts. and $1.25 goods, reduced to 55 and 95 cts. each—mostly large sizes.

Ladies' Winter weight Vests and Drawers, white ribbed and plain, reduced from 50 and 75 cts. to 40 cts. ach.

Boys Natural Shirts with Drawers to match, fine wool fleece on the inside, reduced from 50 and 65 cts. to 35 cts. each, or 3 for $1.00.

Pure Twilled Silk Umbrellas for $1.55.

A very desirable lot of Umbrellas for men and women, in pure Twilled Silk, with Paragon frames, steel rods and outside covers, made up in the best style, with handles of fine natural hardwood for men, and very handsome fancy and natural handles for ladies, at $1.55 each to-morrow, as long as the lot lasts.

STORIES ABOUT ANIMALS.

Cats Which Performed Auto-Tracheotomy and Swim—Bird and Dog Anecdotes.

From The London News.

I wonder that Greeks are so fond of cats—the National type in Greece being so clearly birdlike. Now, as we all know, Aristotle held that every human being resembles one or the other of the animals. And there is a National face, with its human-animal type. Greek men are often eagle-like; Greek women, mostly parrot-like, or finch-like. (There are exceptions. I know two female Greek faces that are absolutely deer-like, as to eyes, upper lips, and teeth.) Now, according to later developments of this minor "Aristotlean theory," a people should prefer that "beast" which is "in the (National) face," and detest the creature which preys upon their prototype. The French, who are in the main bird-like, are not conspicuous cat lovers. But in Greece the family cat is often nothing short of a personage. The owners, in their pride of their puss, tell many stories to prove her great qualities of head and heart. Here is such a true history:

A beloved tabby swallowed a strong fishbone, which stuck in her throat. The cat could neither eat nor drink, and swelling of the lacerated parts soon increased so much that the poor creature was gasping for breath. Her mistress tried to take out the bone, but it was so firmly fixed in the throat that the attempt only tortured the cat, who fled and hid herself. Every possible search was made for the poor thing, but without success; and the owner felt sure that Tabby must have died of suffocation, if not of starvation, when she was found—alive, but very weak—in a wood cellar.

There had been a course of medical lectures in the place, and Tabby's mistress gave this account of the matter: Puss "had performed tracheotomy, neatly shaving off a circular patch of hair on her throat, and cutting the windpipe—oh! wonderful animal!—below the part where the bone still stuck." Puss "was breathing when found through the orifice that she had herself made." The happy owner now easily removed the bone, "treated the wound antiseptically," as she said, and nursed the cat back to health. To tell that lady that her pet had merely scratched herself to pieces in her pain and breathlessness would have simply been to arouse the lady's contempt for the speaker, for "why was there no torn skin above the place of the fish bone? Why was all done with the art of a trained surgeon?" she would have asked.

It seems more natural that Greeks should love birds. And, indeed, they love them so well that, in general, they do not like to keep them in cages, but a Greek lady, whose canary came to her as a legacy, felt that liberty would be no boon to a prisoner who had grown old in captivity, and she keeps her pet still in its cage. This canary, when the weather is warm, calls for his present owner, and will not leave off an ear-piercing chirp until she has put his tin bath and fresh water into the cage. He then jumps into his tub, chants his satisfaction on a new note, spreads his wings, and hops about joyfully after a rapturous and protracted "dip."

AMERICANS IN BONDAGE TO BIRDS.

I have met two American ladies who were positively in bondage to their birds. They had a crossbill who, when his wants were not supplied in the manner that met his views, would peck at the hand that fed him, and he frequently drew blood. A sparrow nestling fell to the ground. One of these lovers of winged things picked up the injured birdling, and cared for it until it was strong enough to tyrannize over herself and her sister, by a nerve-racking "Cheep, cheep" whenever it needed something new to eat, or water, or merely conversation, or a change of place, or some other form of entertainment. When he was perfectly strong, his human friends gave him his liberty. They also rescued a bullfinch from cruel boys, who had so injured one of its wings that it was crippled for life. "He cherished a grudge against the whole human race because of what those boys had made him suffer," said his benefactress, in excuse for Bully's bitter spirit. That bird would snatch food from his friends' hands, but would never take it gently. His loud chirp expressed impatience, anger, and even hatred; never any gentle feeling. He ruffled his feathers in fury, and pecked at his protectors; but he looked to them for his supplies of all kinds, and resented delays and disappointments with a ferocious eloquence. It has happened that his most devoted friend, having spent hours climbing to a spot where grew a berry that he loved, has brought him the fruit of her toil, only to be pecked at and scolded. But, before showing his temper, Bully would spring upon his allowance of berries, and shriek, and flap his sound wing like some victorious and bloodthirsty standard bearer in an assault. His friends pardoned his evil ways, and when the injured wing, after months of care, permitted of his fending for himself, they said good-bye to him one fine Spring morning, and never saw him more. His friend, who gave me the history, had birdlike eyes. She could imitate the notes of the forest admirably. The ordinary movements of her head were the nearest approach to peckings possible to humanity. Her hands were most delicate claws. A bird has hairlike feathers at the root of its beak; and my acquaintance's eyebrows sent out skirmishers, as it were, across the root of her pretty, beaklike nose. Small wonder that this bird-woman perfectly understands the feathered tribe!

There is a parrot in the Channel Islands who has lived with his loving owner ever since he was a fledgling. This owner told me that it is an old-established rule at afternoon tea-time to give Poll five or six Brazil nuts. When there has been any delay in serving him with this light refection, sounds come from the perch. "Polly!" would generally be repeated several times. Then would come, "Polly wants!" For years "Polly wants!" was the whole phrase in the afternoon or at breakfast-time or bath-time. One day the nuts were very slow in coming, and the parrot screamed, "Polly wants nuts!" At other hours, Poll still only "wants," vaguely. But at tea-time the word "nuts" is added in cases of urgency. If that bird is not using language as a vehicle for thought, I don't know what is human speech! Polly has for a neighbor a cat which swims. She takes to the sea, in the wake of a fishing boat. So remarkable are her performances, said Poll's owner, "that there has been an account of the swimming cat in the island newspapers." But the cat is no "giant gooseberry" of local journalism. I have the account of her prowess in the water (at second hand) from Puss's owner's daughter. The cat will swim to meet the fishing boat, as well as follow it some way out to sea.

UNNATURAL CATS.

That seems rather an unnatural cat! So does the mother puss in a friend's family. This féline has two kittens now. For fifteen months she and the pointer have been play-fellows. Now, as soon as the dog joins his owners in the morning, he straightway pays his respects to puss and her babes. She welcomes him, allows him to sniff at the kittens to his heart's content, and even permits him to pick them up delicately by the backs of their little necks. Then she fawns on him—perhaps to ensure his kind treatment of her offspring. When the pointer is rambling about near the house, if her maternal duties permit, puss jumps upon the windowsill to watch her play-fellow's movements. Her interest is shown in the changing expression of her eyes, her head movements, and the cocking of her ears. On his return, she rushes to greet him, flashing down the staircase at express cat speed. When it was cold, they nestled close together in any attainable patch of sunshine. Their owners say: "This is against all cat-and-dog traditions!" And at Hales Place, Kent, there is an unusually big and handsome collie, who exhibits an uncanine characteristic or two. He took a fancy to a hen belonging to his master, and invited her to sleep in his kennel through a whole Winter. In Spring she laid an egg, and he was so hospitable as to encourage her making a nest in his house. When the mother and many chicks were there, the collie found his box overcrowded; but, instead of dislodging the guests, he slept outside!

How far the collie's conduct was from dog-in-the-manger-ishness it is unnecessary to point out. As a rule, hospitality is not a canine trait.

I lately met with two new and typical cases of love and fidelity of dogs. An only child was given, by her Austrian uncles, a beautiful and intelligent dog, who became her constant companion. The child fell ill. Her doting parents were terribly anxious about their darling. One day the dog, strangely irresponsive to the gloom of the house, gamboled about alone and barked. The child's father reproached the dog, speaking to him as if to a person. "Are you not ashamed to play like this when Lina is so ill?" he said.

From that moment the dog lost heart. He crept quietly under the sick girl's bed, and could scarcely be induced to move away. After his loved comrade's death he left the room, but not to follow the coffin. He slunk on to the balcony, whence, sighing and whining, he watched the sad procession form and move away. Those heavy, human-sounding sighs continued for days; and his appearance was altogether piteous. For days, too, he could not be induced to touch food. But he was "Lina's comrade," and Lina's parents loved and cherished him, for the child's sake as well as his own. He has taken courage to live, poor dog, now! Not so another faithful dog! A French officer died. His dog had been all devotion to him. The dog went with the other mourners to the grave, and could not be induced to leave it. The Frenchman's daughter told me that, for fifteen days, she took, or sent, food to the dog. At the end of the fortnight the dead man's relations found the dog dead, too. When they first knew that the loving beast would not remain away from the grave they did what was possible to care for and shelter him there, and he ate the food they provided; but there was no possibility of saving the poor fellow. He was heart-broken. The teller of this tale is a Providence for hungry, homeless, or ill-used animals, and has a rarely intelligent sympathy for all quadrupeds.

SNUFFTAKING DEFENDED.

Romantic Discussion of a Dirty Habit—A Little Vice Almost Made to Seem a Virtue.

Sir Edwin Arnold in The London Telegraph.

If Man may, with a respectful wonder and interest, contemplate and criticise the vagaries of feminine fashion. Woman has in turn a claim to note and comment upon masculine habits. Now a rumor has lately spread in regard to these which decidedly concerns her. It is reported that the custom of snufftaking, which seemed to have gone almost entirely out of vogue, is to be widely and generally resuscitated. Dark stories are afloat of large orders received by the manufacturers and of a marked revival in the demand for snuffboxes and the various appurtenances of the habit, including, it is said, a rise in the price of Tonquin beans, so much used for their well-known aroma. This seems rather a serious matter socially. Of course, there never has been any absolute cessation of the practice. Many a good and worthy man, like the late Lord Russell of Killowen, was hardly ever seen without a snuffbox in his hand, and any tobacconist will say that snuff has everywhere a steady, if slow, sale. But what will be thought if the new century really goes back for young and old alike to the fashions prevalent in the days of Queen Anne and the early Georges, when everybody who was anybody carried a snuffbox, and society revolved, politics were debated, and business transacted with a pinch of snuff for the centre of things?

It has never been found enough to denounce snufftaking, either upon hygienic or aesthetic grounds. Those who like taking snuff will, and do, indulge in it, disregarding all protests from that of King James's "counterblast" to such bitter comments as were dropped by wits and moralists. The great Dr. Johnson, when offered a pinch, is said to have repulsed it with the words, "No, Sir; had Almighty Providence created my nose for a dust-bin it would have been turned the other way up!" Dr. Abernethy, consulted by one of his patients as to whether its use might injure the brain, sweetly replied, "Have no sort of fear, dear Sir, on such a score; the man who is fool enough to fill his nostrils with tobacco dust cannot have an ounce of brains to injure." In Scotland, where the habit has always endured, it was once so prevalent and powerful that even ministers thundering from their pulpits could not keep the Highland shepherds and their wives from passing round the "sneeshin'-mull" during Divine service. This was usually a curled sheep's-horn with a "cairngorm" set in the lid, and the Scotch folk employed a spoon to convey the cherished dust, or sniffed it from the palm of the hand. The Kafir, who is much addicted to the habit, carries his snuff in a little gourd, and takes it in immense quantities, women and men sometimes rubbing it upon their gums. In the nature of things it would appear likely that the constant use of snuff would clog and eventually dull the olfactory nerves, but these black people are said not to suffer either incapacity for quick vision or for keen smell. In fact, the snufftaker would lose a considerable element of his pleasure if his sense of smell were impaired by it, for one of the joys of the "pinch" is held to be the delicate odors which accompany the titillation of the nostrils.

All this is the unromantic and unattractive side of the habit. That it once had a graceful, high-bred, and distinguished aspect cannot possibly be denied. A world of courtliness, consideration, and quietness of manners clustered and crystallized itself round the pretty article, which was indispensable and universal. We must a little admire

Sir Plume, of amber snuffbox justly vain,
And the nice conduct of a clouded cane.

In spite of the wise and surly doctor we all know that exquisite things were uttered when Sir Charles Grandison, tapped the enameled lid of his tortoiseshell box, and what a relief it must have been for Sir Joshua, as Goldsmith says:

When they talked of their Raphaels, Correggios, and stuff,
He shifted his trumpet and only took snuff.

It was no doubt the snuffbox which helped most to make snufftaking popular. The little lovely "tabatiere" became to a man of rank almost all that a fan was to a lady of quality. Artists of all kinds vied with each other to render the snuffbox a costly, fanciful, and delicious object. Talk about an amber box—it was a mere bagatelle to the divinely beautiful creations which the goldsmiths and jewelers of Anne and of the Empire put into the happy fingers of those devoted to the cult. They come sometimes now in brilliant and dazzling collections to the London and Paris salesrooms, ravishing specimens in purple and blue and green and rose-pink enamel, in pure chased gold studded with precious gems; in daintily devised shapes of lozenge an oval, heart formed, or circular, miracles of design, with tiny pictures painted upon them as if by fairy draughtsmen, and wonderful ornament of grape or mask or lire or satin slipper embossed upon them, with love posies written in gold.

One need not take snuff to fall in love with many and many among those charming works of the Georgian and Versailles times; some are absolutely triumphs of decorative art, and fitter to hold bon-bons or pastilles for a Princess than to be the receptacle for powdered tobacco. Yet, mind you, the wearers of these fascinating articles carried them bravely. We do not fiddle with our eyeglasses, or nibble at our walking sticks, or jingle the keys in our pockets, with anything like the grace displayed by Sir Plume and his contemporaries, when the lace of their ruffled wrists airily swept the dust away from the amber or agate or gilded cover of their box, as they waved round and round between their fingers, with well-taught gestures, the impending pinch, making almost a religious ceremony out of each occasion. It is to be doubted whether the new century could, even if it tried, renew these accomplishments of the old day. We lack so much by way of background to the custom. We should want the bob-wig, the patches on the face, the peach-colored coats, the long, deep, damasked waistcoats, the silken breeches, the buckled shoes, and the sword to bring the snuffbox in again in all its pristine glory.

Meantime this, it must be remembered, is not the serious and practical part of the question. It possesses a really vast importance from the commercial point of view. Many a person who talks lightly about snuff and snuff taking as elements of a minor vice, trivial and insignificant, would be astounded if made aware of the dimensions to which the trade has before now attained, and of the extraordinary labor and patience beatowed upon the preparation of the article. Do they dream that in France tobacco leaves are piled together in stacks of over 100 tons to make into snuff; that these are left to ferment for six to eight months at a time, being tended more carefully than melon beds or vineyards; that it occupies nineteen or twenty months to bring the leaf and stalk into fit state to be converted into rappee, and that over and over again salts and aromatics, drugs and perfumes, must be introduced into the mass? It will not be too much to declare that mountains of it are snuffed up somewhere or other, for the record of the sales is still kept in hundreds of tons. Even in the United Kingdom, which uses comparatively little, the consumption in ounces for the year 1881 was close upon 50,000,000. The secret passion for a pinch of snuff must be deep ingrained in mankind to furnish these and similar figures.

The Artist's Great Effort.

Visitor—Ah, Antoine, beginning a painting, I see. What is the subject?

Artist—I don't know yet. I've only got my name on the canvas so far."—Chicago News.

Brooklyn Advertisements. | Brooklyn Advertisements.

The first of the series of lectures by MRS. SARAH TYSON RORER will be given Wednesday, Jan. 23, 2:30 P. M.—4th Floor. Subject—"BREAD MAKING."

H Batterman

Broadway, Graham and Flushing Aves.

The Talk of Brooklyn.---

"Our Splendid Reduction Sales the Past Week."

Not a store in this great borough or in Manhattan that equalled our efforts in price cutting and strong values.

The response inspires us. The atmosphere of this establishment has the ring of low prices. Clearing surplus winter lines at about cost, and marking new goods at close margins.

Car lines reach us from every point in Greater New York.

WE OFFER FOR MONDAY.

Spring Dress Fabrics.

This season's materials are extremely fascinating and will sell rapidly—advisable to purchase now.

GRANITE SUITINGS—45-inch wide, all wool (spring weight) in the popular shades; value 75c. yd., Monday, 59c

BLACK PEBBLE CHEVIOT—60-inch wide, all wool, perfect dye and finish; value $1.00 yd., Monday, 69c

NEW SILKS.

BLACK TAFFETA—27-inch; value 60c. yd., Monday, 45c

HABUTAI WASH SILKS—23-inch, all dainty shades, also, white, cream and black; value. 50c. yd, Monday, 39c

Sale of Ladies' Shoes.

Our Best Argument as to the Value is in the Examination of These Goods.

$3.50 and $3.98 Stock Shoe, Monday - - - - - 2.69

They are of fine Glace Kid, with Cloth Tops, kid or patent leather tips, stout or light soles, five assortments of toes; width A to EE; sizes 2½ to 7.

$2.98 SHOES at $1.98.

Widths B to E, sizes 2½ to 7, Dongola kid, patent leather tips, stout or light soles, medium toes, in button or lace.

KID GLOVES—DON'T MISS THIS:

Last week's great sale was heralded far and wide, caused such favorable comment that we feel it a duty to repeat it.

LADIES' KID GLOVES—$1.00 quality; tans, reds, modes, grays, browns, black or white, 50c

$1.50, $1.75 AND $2.00 KID GLOVES—White, black, mode, red, tan, brown, slate, blue or green; size 5¾ only, 98c

AN ASSORTED LOT, GOOD QUALITY KID GLOVES—Tans and reds; regular price $1.00, to close out, 50c

INDUCEMENTS IN HOSIERY.

CHILDREN'S ALL WOOL RIBBED HOSE—Sizes 5 to 8½; per pair 12½c

LADIES' COTTON HOSE—Guaranteed stainless; double heel and toe; per pair, 8c

MEN'S COLORED SHIRTS.

COLORED PERCALE SHIRTS—Sizes 14 to 17 in., 69c

CHINA DEPARTMENT—Basement.

Lowest Prices in Brooklyn.

29c RUDOLSTADT VASES, 15c 49c RUDOLSTADT VASES, 25c

98c RUDOLSTADT VASES, 50c $1.24 RUDOLSTADT VASES 60c

TEPLITZ VASES—All shapes, 48 inches high, richly decorated, gold handles; regular price, $2.98, $1.74

BOHEMIAN GLASS VASES—Entire line ranging in price from 74c. to $3.98; divided into 3 lots and reduced to 49c., 98c., $1.24

JARDINIERES—In assorted colored glazes, 49c

"GOOD THINGS TO EAT"

In Brooklyn's Finest Grocery Department.

"SEND FOR FREE POSTAL CARDS." (BASEMENT.)

FLOUR, "BATTERMAN'S PURE FOOD BRAND"—Fanciest high grade, special price Monday and Tuesday, bbl. $4.20; ½ bbl., 53c

MACARONI AND SPAGHETTI—Just received 9c. grade; special Monday and Tuesday, 1 lb. pkg., 7c

FANCY EVAPORATED PEACHES—Splendid quality and flavor; special Monday and Tuesday, per lb., 9c

SANTA CLARA PRUNES—Best quality, medium size; special, 4 lbs for 25c

SLICED PEACHES—Just as you would prepare, in heavy sugar syrup, 1½ lb.; special per can 11c

FRESH BEACH NUT SLICED BACON—½ size, glass jar, 14c

FANCIEST ELGIN CREAMERY BUTTER—"Our renowned," per lb. brick 24c

ARABOGA COFFEE—The old original, per lb., 30c.; 5 lbs., $1.40

TEAS—New season's pickings, 89c. quality, special Monday and Tuesday, per lb. 53c

Mail orders filled in all Departments.

Broadway, Graham and Flushing Aves.

Brooklyn Advertisements. | Brooklyn Advertisements.

A. D. Matthews Sons

HALF-PRICE SALE of MEN'S, YOUTHS', AND BOYS' CLOTHING

HALF-PRICE SALE of MEN'S, YOUTHS', AND BOYS' CLOTHING

A Group of Tempting Attractions.

We bring forth at this time odd lots which must be cleared up. Each is a money saving offering to you. Many other attractions will hold your interest, at which we can only hint.

Clearing Sale of SHOES.

Not all sizes in every style, but in most cases your size will be found in some of the styles. A saving of over One-half to you, no matter what your selection may be, and it means for us a clearing up of our stock before inventory.

At $1.55 a pair, 450 pairs of Women's Kid Button and Lace Shoes, with stitched heavy and medium weight extension soles, round, opera, and bulldog toe shapes, with patent leather tips, every pair serviceable winter shoes and will give excellent service. Shoes of equal qualities would cost you $3 or more a pair elsewhere, (broken sizes only,) to close out promptly . . . at $1.55 a pair

$1.97 a pair. A splendid bargain, made of Vici and glazed kidskin, good heavy plump Winter Shoes; 4 stylish lasts to choose from, in button and lace with patent leather or kid tips, military and opera heels, the fit, trimmings and finish are of the best. There are only 950 pairs of them; all sizes in some one of the styles. If bought regularly they would cost you $3.00 to $3.50 a pair. But they are unusually low priced here, at . . . . . $1.97 a pair

An Important Move---In Cloaks & Suits.

Women's Tourists Suits, made of fine coverts and cheviot cloths, colors are castor, black and Oxford, regular prices, $18.00, $20.00, $21.00 and $25.00. Special Monday, $12 50.

Another lot of Fine Kersey Jackets to close at $7.75.

We have 10 very fine Velour Capes, very elaborately trimmed with jet and braid, some of them have fur on edges of collar and down front. They are all good styles, but they must be closed out before inventory, and have been Marked One-Half the Regular Price.

All our fine Silk Dress Skirts will be put on sale Monday morning at one-third off regular price.

Special bargains in Persian Lamb Jackets and Fur Neck Scarfs and Muffs.

MANUFACTURER'S STOCK SALE OF

Overcoats, Suits, Trousers, Etc.

All high-class merchandise, made up in anticipation of an extraordinary Fall and Winter business, which owing to weather conditions did not materialize.

We secured the stock at our own figures and have MARKED the goods at prices that are less than the manufacturer's usual cost. These are only a few of the many bargains.

Men's Trousers, $3.50 to $5.00 Kinds, at $2.48 a Pair.

1,500 pairs in the handsomest and dressiest stripes and checks of worsted and cassimeres, the fit and make are perfection: just think of it, trousers made to sell at $4.00 and $5.00, all sizes here at..... $2.48

Men's Suits, $12.00 to $15.00 Kind, at $7.48.

Here are hundreds of the season's best and most popular suits, in up-to-date stripes and mixtures of worsteds, cassimeres and cheviots, made to sell from $12.00 to $15.00, our price now (all sizes)..... $7.48

MEN'S OVERCOATS.

$10.50 Kind at $7.50; $14.00 Kind at $10.50; $18.00 Kind at $12.50.

Meltons, kerseys, vicunas and chinchillas, in Oxford, blue and black.

Youths' Clothes, 14 to 19 Years.

$10 Overcoats at $6.98.

Of fine all wool kersey, made like the men's, in the popular box style.

$12.50 Overcoats at $8.98. In a superior grade of Oxford, vicuna, tailored in faultless style.

$10.00 and $12.00 Suits at $6.98. Of fancy patterned cheviots and cassimeres, and blue and black worsteds and cheviots, made to sell at $10.00 to $12.00, choose at..... $6.98

CHILDREN'S CLOTHES—Separate Knee Pants.

The greatest aggregation of well made, well wearing pants ever offered at such low prices,

39c. kind at 29c. 69c. kind at 49c. $1.00 kind at 75c.

CHILDREN'S CLOTHES—More of the 29c. Pants.

1,000 pair of them, the best we ever sold, in plain blue and nice mixtures, splendidly made, ages 4 to 14, at..... 29c

TABLE ON MAIN FLOOR.

Double Breasted Suits—(ages 7 to 14).

$2.75 kind $1.98. $3.75 kind $2.98. $5.50 kind $3.98.

$5.00 Reefers at $2.98—(ages 3 to 8).

Of strictly all wool Germania Chinchilla, made to sell at $5.00; our price now.....$2.98

OVERCOATS.

$4.00 kind at $2.98. $5.50 kind at $3.98.

Hats. $1.00 Scotch Tams at 29c. Made of pure wool, in pleasing patterns for boys or girls, 10 dozen, to go at..... 29c

Fulton St., Gallatin Pl., Livingston and Smith Sts., Brooklyn.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Large Dealings Show Activity in Many Different Sections.

BUSINESS PROPERTY A FEATURE

Sales by Brokers—Quality of Auction Offerings Improving—Complete Schedule for This Week.

Those who have anticipated or predicted an active Spring market have had every reason to be satisfied with the reports of last week, and if the business told of in these reports has not been of a spasmodic character—and there is no reason to suppose that such is the case—the next three or four months will show a volume of dealing which has not been approached during any similar period in many years. The activity, moreover, is general, and no section which has the slightest claim to attention seems to be neglected. A Lower Broadway corner, a 60-foot frontage on Malden Lane, a Wall Street building, properties on Union Square, large plots in the Longacre district and in the Upper Fifth Avenue section—transactions in so many different classes of property in so widely separated sections, certainly indicate the variety in current business.

That special interest which always attaches to a sale of Lower Broadway property gives to the sale of the southeast corner of Broadway and Malden Lane the position of first importance among the week's dealings. Many of the minor details of this operation are yet to be arranged, but it may be safely said that the project is in such hands as to insure the rapid completion of a tall office building on that site.

The acquisition of the entire block front on the east side of Broadway, between Fifty-sixth and Fifty-seventh Streets, by the Central Real Estate Bond and Trust Company gives some idea of the scale on which business is going on along that section of Broadway, between Longacre Square and the Grand Circle. Two other transactions of good proportions were also closed in the same section, involving the southeast corner of Seventh Avenue and Forty-ninth Street, and the property 1,540 and 1,542 Broadway, with an "L" at 171 West Forty-fifth Street.

The Central Realty, Bond, and Trust Company, it may be noted in passing, also figured in three other deals which were among the most important of the week, and the fact that this corporation has been fit to engage in these operations is significant as showing that the market presents an attractive outlook to those who are admittedly among the city's shrewdest observers of real estate conditions and possibilities. The transactions referred to were the purchase of 31 Union Square and of the Madison Square Presbyterian Church property, at Madison Avenue and Fifty-third Street, and the resale of 4 and 6 East Forty-ninth Street as the site for a bachelor apartment house.

Charles A. Gould's purchase of 64 Wall Street, that of George C. Boldt at 440 Broadway, and the sales of 101 Fifth Avenue, of 10 West Eighteenth Street, and of the Union Square corner just mentioned, make up a budget of news involving business properties that is very creditable, at least in comparison with the recent dearth of dealing in that class of holdings, and is perhaps one of the best indications of the substantial character of the present revival.

Anticipating a still further demand for residence sites of the first class, operators have renewed attention to the upper Fifth Avenue section. Joseph Hamershlag bought three lots on the avenue between Eighty-ninth and Ninetieth Streets, and Gustavus L. Lawrence acquired from Francis K. Pendleton a frontage of 127 feet on Eighty-seventh Street, just east of Fifth Avenue. Three lots in a similar position on Eighty-eighth Street also changed hands. Too far north, perhaps, to be included in this group of transactions, but none the less interesting, was J. Hooker Hamersley's purchase of two lots at the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and One Hundred and Eleventh Street.

Sales of five dwellings also added considerably to the successful week's business. Terence Farley's Sons disposed of the last of the houses built by them on the old Columbia College block, 439 Madison Avenue, while just around the corner Charles Buek found buyers for 41 and 43 East Forty-ninth Street.

Latest Sales by Brokers.

Charles Brendon & Co. have bought from Edward B. Adams the lot on the south side of Fifty-first Street, 175 east of Madison Avenue, 25 by 100.5, and will erect thereon a modern five-story American basement dwelling.

Blakeslee Barnes has sold to Elias Kempner the two-story frame building, 110 East Fifty-second Street, on lot 25 by 100.5.

Max Marx has sold, through Solomon Marcus, to August Oppenheimer three lots on the east side of Eleventh Avenue, 25 feet south of One Hundred and Seventy-fourth Street, 75 by 100, taking in exchange the five-story flat with stores, 2,3,2? Seventh Avenue, 25 by 100.

Leopold Sinsheimer is the buyer of the building, 714 Broadway. He gave in part payment the three 4-story tenements at the southwest corner of Third Avenue and One Hundredth Street.

It is reported that Jacob Cohen has sold the four-story dwelling, 945 Madison Avenue, 18.6 by 100.

The Miller estate has sold the four-story tenement, 950 Second Avenue, 20 by 75.

John Peters has sold for Philip Boyer to H. B. Rexer the four-story and basement dwelling 304 East Fourteenth Street, 19.6 by 51.6.

The Auction Room.

Auction sales are gradually assuming a more diversified character, and the bidding in and withdrawal of several voluntary offerings of indifferent sort last week need not be made the basis of unfavorable comment. The auction market has been subjected to no adequate test since the first of the year, and it is not surprising that attempts to sell properties for which there is no speculative demand and the investment value of which is questionable, should result unfavorably.

A large offering announced for Tuesday of next week, Jan. 29, by Bryan L. Kennelly, consists of forty-three parcels belonging to the estate of the late Philip Herrman. The properties are situated on East Fourteenth Street, between First and Second Avenues, and on West Fourteenth and Fifteenth Streets, near Ninth Avenue. The block bounded by Park and Willow Avenues, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Streets, Hoboken, is also included in the sale.

Several executors' sales are on this week's schedule. On Tuesday Auctioneer Ryan will offer 4 Baxter Street, the dwelling 215 East Fifty-second Street, and vacant property on Intervale Avenue, Tiffany, and One Hundred and Sixty-seventh Streets. The large plot included by Third and Lincoln Avenues, the Southern Boulevard, and the Harlem River, including valuable waterfront privileges, owned by the estate of Bryan Lawrence, will be sold on the same day by James L. Wells. An offering by L. J. Phillips & Co. will include the tenements 268 Rivington Street, and 243 and 245 West Twenty-ninth Street.

For Wednesday there are executors' sales of 4 West Twenty-second Street, the 30-foot apartment house, 13 West Sixty-fifth Street, and the five flats, 2,074 to 2,079 Seventh Avenue, southeast corner of One Hundred and Twenty-fouth Street.

There were recorded last week 202 mortgages, for $4,884,947, of which 97, for $1,326,306, were at 5 per cent.; 122, for $1,091,141, were at more, and 73, for $2,467,500, were at less. In the corresponding week last year there were recorded 326 mortgages, for $4,175,548, of which 101, for $1,288,472, were at 5 per cent.; 150, for $1,339,776, were at more, and 75, for $1,537,300, were at less.

AUCTION SALES THIS WEEK.

To Take Place at 111 Broadway, Unless Otherwise Specified.

MONDAY, JAN. 21.—By William M. Ryan, foreclosure sale, Charles D. Olendorf, referee, 531 West One Hundred and Forty-fifth Street, north side, 258.8 feet east of Broadway, 23 by 99.11, five-story brick flat; Due on judgment, $31,691.

By Philip A. Smyth, foreclosure sale, J. M. Rosebery Long, referee, 220 and 228 West Seventy-eighth Street, south side, 225 feet west of Amsterdam Avenue, 20 by 100, six-story stone-front flat. Due on judgment, $19,156; subject to other mortgages for $77,500.

By Samuel Goldsticker, foreclosure sale, Leopold Wallach, referee, 105 to 117 West One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street, running through to 104 and 116 West One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Street, 438 feet east of Seventh Avenue, 187 by 100.10, seven five-story brick and stone-front flats. Due on judgment, $74,736.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., partition sale, Elbert Crandall, referee, 327, 329, and 331 East Eleventh Street, north side, 225.4 feet west of First Avenue, 71.3 by 87.5 and irregular, three three-story brick tenements; 213 Second Avenue, northwest corner of Thirteenth Street, 26 by 77.3, four-story brick flat, with store; 176 Second Avenue, east side, 25.9 feet north of Eleventh Street, 25.10 by 100, four-story brownstone-front building.

TUESDAY, JAN. 22.—By William M. Ryan, executors' sale, 4 Baxter Street, southwest side, about 90.2 feet northwest of Park Row, 23 by 83, two-story and attic building, with store; 215 East Fifty-second Street, north side, 176 feet east of Third Avenue, 16 by 110.10, three-story brick and stone-front dwelling; 333 East Thirty-first Street, north side, 380 feet east of Second Avenue, 20 by 98.9, four-story brick building with store; Intervale Avenue, northwest side, 475 feet south of One Hundred and Sixty-ninth Street, 25 by 120, vacant; One Hundred and Sixty-seventh Street, northwest corner of Tiffany Street, 15.8 by 92.10 by 33.5 by 97.7, vacant; One Hundred and Sixty-seventh Street, north side, adjoining the foregoing on the west, 30 by 97.7, vacant; One Hundred and Sixty-seventh Street, north side, adjoining the foregoing on the west, 30 by 100.3, vacant.

By William M. Ryan, foreclosure sale, Wilbur Larremore, referee, 512 West One Hundred and Forty-second Street, south side, 423 feet east of Broadway, 15 by 99.11, four-story brick dwelling. Due on judgment, $14,808.

By Bryan L. Kennelly & Co., partition sale, William N. Cohen, referee, 36 East Fifty-seventh Street, south side, 125 feet east of Madison Avenue, 24.6 by 100.5, four-story stone-front dwelling.

By Bryan L. Kennelly & Co., foreclosure sale, Franklin Blen, referee, 4,175 Third Avenue, west side, 82 feet north of One Hundred and Seventy-sixth Street, 20 by 95.10 by 20 by 96.10, four-story brick flat, with store. Due on judgment, $10,272.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., sale to recover dower, Thomas C. O'Sullivan, referee, 2,325 Second Avenue, west side, 49.10 feet north of One Hundred and Nineteenth Street, 20 by 80, three-story brick tenement, with store.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., foreclosure sale, William T. Emmet, referee, 369, 371, and 373 West One Hundred and Sixteenth Street, north side, 150 feet west of Manhattan Avenue, 28, 36, and 38, respectively, by 100.10, three seven-story brick flats. Due on judgment, $140,732.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., foreclosure sale, S. Kohn, referee, 100 West Seventy-eighth Street, south side, 106.3 feet west of Columbus Avenue, 23.9 by 100.6 by 20 by 100.11, four-story stone-front dwelling. Due on judgment, $32,717.

By L. J. Phillips & Co., executor's sale, 243 and 245 West Twenty-ninth Street, north side, 250 feet east of Eighth Avenue, 31 and 25, respectively, by 98.9, two four-story tenements, rear buildings; 208 Rivington Street, northeast corner of Columbia Street, 25 by 70, four-story tenement, with stores.

By James L. Wells, executors' sale, Third Avenue, Southern Boulevard, Lincoln Avenue, and the Harlem River, the block, together with various brick and frame buildings, 241.10 feet on Third Avenue, 333.2 feet on the Southern Boulevard, 430 feet on Lincoln Avenue, and 518.3 feet along the Harlem River.

By John T. Boyd, foreclosure sale, Edward J. McGean, referee, 306 East Seventy-eighth Street, south side, 99.9 feet east of Second Avenue, 25.3 by 102.2, four-story brick tenement. Due on judgment, $13,552.

By Thomas C. Smith, foreclosure sale, John E. Duffy, referee, 248 West Thirty-sixth Street, south side, 285 feet east of Eighth Avenue, 19.2 by 98.9, four-story brick dwelling. Due on judgment, $3,661.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 23.—By Bryan L. Kennelly & Co., executor's sale, 4 West Twenty-second Street, south side, 110 feet west of Fifth Avenue, 26.3 by 98.9, four-story brownstone-front dwelling.

By Bryan L. Kennelly & Co., public auction sale, 13 West Sixty-fifth Street, north side, 250 feet west of Central Park West, 30 by 100.5, five-story brick double apartment house.

By Bryan L. Kennelly & Co., sale to close a partnership, 2,071 to 2,079 Seventh Avenue, southeast corner of One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Street, 20.5, 20, 20, 20, and 20.6, respectively, by 75, five four-story brick single flats.

By Bryan L. Kennelly & Co., public auction sale, 347 and 349 West Forty-fourth Street, north side, 145.6 feet east of Ninth Avenue, 27 and 27.6, respectively, by 100.5, two five-story brownstone-front flats.

By Bryan L. Kennelly & Co., public auction sale, 225.4 feet West Seventy-third Street, south side, 285.8 feet east of West End Avenue, 20 by 102.2, four-story brick and stone dwelling, with two-story extension.

By Bryan L. Kennelly & Co., foreclosure sale, Sylvester L. H. Ward, referee, 142 Cherry Street, north side, 314.9 feet east of Catharine Street, 25 by 104.10, six-story brick tenement, with five-story brick tenement at the rear. Due on judgment, $2,262; subject to other mortgages for $22,500.

By Herbert A. Sherman, foreclosure sale, Emil Goldmark, referee, 64 Eldridge Street and 105 Hester Street, being the northeast corner, 19.6 by 50.8, five-story brick tenement, with store. Due on judgment, $20,442.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., foreclosure sale, C. Donohue, referee, 414 to 420 East Sixtieth Street, south side, 250 feet east of First Avenue, 187 by 100.5 and irregular, one-story brick buildings. Due on judgment, $14,720.

By Charles A. Berrian, public auction sale, King's Bridge Road, northwest corner of Decatur Avenue, 90.10 by 24.9 by 89.5 by 97.5, two-story and one-story frame buildings.

By William M. Ryan, public auction sale, Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn, southwest corner of New Jersey Avenue, 28 by 82.8 by 25 by 84.7, three-story brick and stone flat, with two stores.

THURSDAY, JAN. 24.—By Philip A. Smyth, foreclosure sale, Isaac Rothschild, referee, West One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street, running through to West One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Street, 178 feet east of Seventh Avenue, 200 by 100.10, twenty five-story brick flats. Due on judgment, $200,257; subject to other mortgages for $145,000.

By William M. Ryan, foreclosure sale, Louis Adler, referee, 4 Washington Place, southeast corner of Mercer Street, 100 by 49.9, five-story brick hotel. Due on judgment, $166,647.

By Bryan L. Kennelly & Co., foreclosure sale, Joseph C. Levi, referee, 181 Chrystie Street, west side, 75 feet north of Rivington Street, 25 by 92, four-story brick building. Due on judgment, $12,317; subject to another mortgage for $5,000.

By William Kennelly, foreclosure sale, George W. Ellis, referee, 54 West Ninety-seventh Street, south side, 500 feet west of Central Park West, 20 by 100, four-story brick dwelling. Due on judgment, $21,554.

By James L. Wells, foreclosure sale, Grenville B. Winthrop, referee, 532 West One Hundred and Forty-ninth Street, south side, 341.8 feet west of Amsterdam Avenue, 16.8 by 99.11, three-story stone-front dwelling. Due on judgment, $13,000.

By Richard V. Harnett & Co., foreclosure sale, Augustus H. Vanderpoel, referee, 235 West One Hundred and Third Street, northwest corner of Broadway, 77 by 101.0 by 63.7 by 100.11, eight-story apartment house, with stores. Due on judgment, $22,225; subject to other mortgages for $163,000.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., foreclosure sale, John H. Judge, referee, King's Bridge Road, east side, 265.10 feet south of One Hundred and Sixty-fifth Street, 106 by 149.6 by 99.11 by 102.5, two two-story brick dwellings and vacant; One Hundred and Sixty-fourth Street, north side, 100 feet west of Amsterdam Avenue, 50 by 99.11, vacant. Due on judgment, on the former parcel, $37,663; on the latter, $16,042.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., foreclosure sale, Edward B. La Fetra, referee, 634 West One Hundred and Forty-ninth Street, south side, 358.4 feet west of Amsterdam Avenue, 16.8 by 99.11, three-story stone-front dwelling. Due on judgment, $1,793.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., foreclosure sale, Sampson H. Reinhardt, referee, 23 Hamilton Terrace, east side, 221.6 feet north of One Hundred and Forty-first Street, 17 by 76.11, four-story brick dwelling; 33 Hamilton Terrace, east side, 328.3 feet north of One Hundred and Forty-first Street, 18.0 by 84.7, three-story brick dwelling; 37 Hamilton Terrace, east side, 346.8 feet north of One Hundred and Forty-first Street, 18 by 85.10, three-story brick dwelling. Due on judgment, on each, $15,010.

By Peter F Meyer & Co., sale by order of Walter B. Boice, as trustee, 186 Reade Street, running through to 203 Chambers Street, 37.10 feet east of West Street, 23 by 55.5 by 24.9 by 46.6, five-story brick building.

FRIDAY, Jan. 25.—By Philip A. Smyth, foreclosure sale, Julien M. Isaacs, referee, West Farms Road, northeast corner of Forrest Street, 50 by 100, two-story frame dwelling. Due on judgment, $6,836.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., foreclosure sale, S. Kohn, referee, 48 Edgecombe Avenue, northeast corner of One Hundred and Thirty-seventh Street, 20 by 68, three-story brick dwelling. Due on judgment, $22,027.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., foreclosure sale, Arthur D. Truax, referee, 167 East Ninety-ninth Street, north side, 150 feet west of Third Avenue, 25 by 100.11, two-story brick tenement. Due on judgment, $13,268.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., foreclosure sale, George W. Ellis, referee, 431 Riverside Drive, northeast corner of One Hundred and Fifteenth Street, 103.7 by 87 by 100.11 by 110.6, seven-story brick flat. Due on judgment, $22,027; subject to other mortgages for $76,000.

By William M. Ryan, foreclosure sale, Louis Adler, referee, 4 Washington Place, southeast corner of Mercer Street, 100 by 49.9, five-story brick hotel. Due on judgment, $166,647.

By Bryan L. Kennelly & Co., foreclosure sale, Joseph C. Levi, referee, 181 Chrystie Street, west side, 75 feet north of Rivington Street, 25 by 92, four-story brick building. Due on judgment, $12,317; subject to another mortgage for $5,000.

By William Kennelly, foreclosure sale, George W. Ellis, referee, 54 West Ninety-seventh Street, south side, 500 feet west of Central Park West, 20 by 100, four-story brick dwelling. Due on judgment, $21,554.

By James L. Wells, foreclosure sale, Grenville B. Winthrop, referee, 532 West One Hundred and Forty-ninth Street, south side, 341.8 feet west of Amsterdam Avenue, 16.8 by 99.11, three-story stone-front dwelling. Due on judgment, $13,000.

By Richard V. Harnett & Co., foreclosure sale, Augustus H. Vanderpoel, referee, 235 West One Hundred and Third Street, northwest corner of Broadway, 77 by 101.0 by 63.7 by 100.11, eight-story apartment house, with stores. Due on judgment, $22,225; subject to other mortgages for $163,000.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., foreclosure sale, John H. Judge, referee, King's Bridge Road, east side, 265.10 feet south of One Hundred and Sixty-fifth Street, 106 by 149.6 by 99.11 by 102.5, two two-story brick dwellings and vacant; One Hundred and Sixty-fourth Street, north side, 100 feet west of Amsterdam Avenue, 50 by 99.11, vacant. Due on judgment, on the former parcel, $37,663; on the latter, $16,042.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., foreclosure sale, Edward B. La Fetra, referee, 634 West One Hundred and Forty-ninth Street, south side, 358.4 feet west of Amsterdam Avenue, 16.8 by 99.11, three-story stone-front dwelling. Due on judgment, $1,793.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., foreclosure sale, Sampson H. Reinhardt, referee, 23 Hamilton Terrace, east side, 221.6 feet north of One Hundred and Forty-first Street, 17 by 76.11, four-story brick dwelling; 33 Hamilton Terrace, east side, 328.3 feet north of One Hundred and Forty-first Street, 18.0 by 84.7, three-story brick dwelling; 37 Hamilton Terrace, east side, 346.8 feet north of One Hundred and Forty-first Street, 18 by 85.10, three-story brick dwelling. Due on judgment, on each, $15,010.

By Peter F Meyer & Co., sale by order of Walter B. Boice, as trustee, 186 Reade Street, running through to 203 Chambers Street, 37.10 feet east of West Street, 23 by 55.5 by 24.9 by 46.6, five-story brick building.

FRIDAY, Jan. 25.—By Philip A. Smyth, foreclosure sale, Julien M. Isaacs, referee, West Farms Road, northeast corner of Forrest Street, 50 by 100, two-story frame dwelling. Due on judgment, $6,836.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., foreclosure sale, S. Kohn, referee, 48 Edgecombe Avenue, northeast corner of One Hundred and Thirty-seventh Street, 20 by 68, three-story brick dwelling. Due on judgment, $22,027.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., foreclosure sale, Arthur D. Truax, referee, 167 East Ninety-ninth Street, north side, 150 feet west of Third Avenue, 25 by 100.11, two-story brick tenement. Due on judgment, $13,268.

By Peter F. Meyer & Co., foreclosure sale, George W. Ellis, referee, 431 Riverside Drive, northeast corner of One Hundred and Fifteenth Street, 103.7 by 87 by 100.11 by 110.6, seven-story brick flat. Due on judgment, $22,027; subject to other mortgages for $76,000.

THE BUILDING DEPARTMENT.

List of Plans Filed for New Structures and Alterations.

Morris Park Avenue, south side, 50 feet west of Taylor Street, for three two-and-one-half-story frame dwellings, 20 by 36; Charles Bjorkegren of 2,143 Mapes Avenue, owner; J. W. Limer of 2,557 Third Avenue, architect; cost, $8,400.

City Hall Place, southwest corner of Pearl Street, for a six-story brick tenement, 22.2 by 86.2 by 96.4; Mandel & Maran of 1,039 Third Avenue, owners; M. Bernstein of 245 Broadway, architect; cost, $30,000.

Alterations.

New Chambers Street, southwest corner of New Bowery, extending to 400 Pearl Street, to a six-story brick factory and store; C. G. Hoyt, Ithaca, N. Y., owner; Dodge & Morrison of 41 Wall Street, architects; cost, $1,000.

No. 784 Eighth Avenue, to a five-story brick dwelling and store; Richard Mock of 784 Eighth Avenue, owner; J. H. Kimble, architect; cost, $400.

Third Avenue, northeast corner of Westchester Avenue, to a three-story frame store; F. A. Wilcox of 1 Broadway, owner; A. Arctander of 362 Alexander Avenue, architect; cost, $8,000.

No. 316 West Seventy-second Street, to a four-story and basement brick dwelling; Marie L. Pancoast, owner; H. F. Cook of 109 West Forty-second Street, architect; cost, $400.

No. 110 Rivington Street, to a three-story brick dwelling and store; D. Finklestein, premises, owner; M. Bernstein of 245 Broadway, architect; cost, $100.

No. 46 Third Avenue, to a two-and-a-half-story brick dwelling; Helena Bornstein of 248 East Twenty-third Street, owner; Horenburger & Straub, architects; cost, $1,500.

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

In the following list "mtg" stands for mortgage and "R. S" for revenue stamps. The war revenue law provides that stamps shall be placed on all conveyances at the rate of 50 cents for each $500 of consideration. This "consideration" has been held to mean only the equity above the mortgage, except in the rare cases where the purchaser assumes payment of the mortgage. The amount of the mortgage plus 1,000 times the value of the revenue stamps on the conveyances should therefore show the true consideration:

Saturday, Jan. 19.

BLEECKER ST, 126, e s, 25x100; Henry L. Morris to Margaret L. Zborowski, (R S $8.50, mtg $40,000)..... 48,500

BRIGGS AV, s e s, 211.11 ft n e of Travers St, 16.6x100; Mary A. Costello to Nellie Donohue, (R S $1, mtg $2,500)... 1

BROADWAY, e s, at centre block, between 103d and 104th Sts, runs s 50.8x e 18.11x n w 55.9; Alexander M. McLeod to John H. Flagler, (R S 50c.)..... 1

BROADWAY, e s, at centre line between 103d and 104th Sts, runs s 1ux e — to Bloomingdale Road x n — x w —; Alexander Mitchell and another to Alexander M. McLeod, (R S 50 cents)..... 1

BROADWAY, e s, adjoining s line of premises of Alexander M. McLeod, runs s — to land of Morgan Jones x e — to e s old Bloomingdale Road x n — x w — Charles E. Elekhoff to Alexander M. McLeod, (R S 50 cents)..... 1

BROOK AV, w s, 25 ft n of Elton Av, 49.9x97.1x50.5x72.10; William H. Welher to Lorenz Welher, Sr., (R S $5, mtg $25,000)..... 1

CALDWELL AV, w s, 136.10 ft n of 156th St, 150x117.7; Mary Benson to Joseph Benson, (mtg $1,370, R S $2)..... 1

CLINTON AV, corner of Spring St, runs w — x s 100 x e 100 to av x n 100; Jennie C. Stoeckel and another, executors, to John C. Stevens..... 100

HICKORY ST, e s, part of Lot 77, amended map of Bronxwood Park, William's Bridge, —x124x40x128.5; Commercial Building and Loan Association to Emma L. Wilson, (mtg $1,400)..... 1

JAY ST, 14, e s, 25x87.6; Jay St., s s, 75 ft w of Staple St, 0.10x89.2; Jay St, s s, 175 ft e of Greenwich St, 0.6x88.8; Barbara A. Simpson to Hugh Getty, (R S $40)..... 40,000

LUDLOW ST, w s, Lot 97A, map of Nicholas Gouverneur, 25x87.6; Caroline J. Abelman and others to Max Wachsmann, (R S $21)..... 21,000

MADISON AV, e e, 22.5 ft s of 68th St, 18x95; Beatrice B. Rutter to Edmund D. Schaley and another..... 1

MANHATTAN AV, s w corner of 107th St, 100.11x55; Paul Mayer to Simon E. Bernheimer and another, (R S $65, mtg $60,000)..... 125,000

NORFOLK ST, 141, w s, 25x100; 72 Columbia St, e s, 25.1x99.11; Max Berger to Morris Berger..... 1

ST. NICHOLAS AV, 165, w s, 63.11 ft n w of 118th St, 31.8x67.1x27; Louis W. Dinkelspiel to Regine Dinkelspiel, (R S $12, mtg $15,000)..... 1

WEST END AV, n w corner of 91st St, 25x100; Hugh J. Grant to Edmund Coffin, (R S $30)..... 1

1ST AV, n e corner 3d St, 24x94.11; William J. A. McKim, referee, to City Real Estate Company, (R S $52.50)..... 52,250

1ST AV, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 20x100; William J. A. McKim to City Real Estate Company, (R S $29)..... 29,000

2D AV, s e corner of 104th St, 25.11x74; Barbara Tischler to M. M. Tischler, (R S $10, mtg $17,250)..... 1

3D AV, e s, 50.2 ft n of 58th St, 25.1x105; Thomas Adelson and another to Isaac Sokolski, (mtg $36,000, R S $25)..... 100

70TH ST, 313 East, 31.5x100.5; William J. A. McKim, referee, to City Real Estate Company, (R S $8, mtg $16,000)..... 24,000

21ST ST, 41 East, 25x98.9; Walter M. Feinbach to Joseph H. Claffy, (R S 50c.)..... 1

86TH ST, s s, 70 ft w of Park Av, 17.10x102.2; William H. Welher to Lorenz Welher, Sr., (R S $5, mtg $16,000)..... 1

113TH ST, n s, 50 ft w of Park Av, 25x100.11; William Dattelbaum and another to Louis May, (R S $5)..... 4,500

114TH ST, s s, 281.3 ft e of 2d Av, 18.9x100.11; William Dattelbaum and another to Louis May, (R S $3, mtg $9,000)..... 3,000

136TH ST, 135 West, 10x99.11; John J. Bell to Mary W. Beckman, (R S 50 cents)..... 1

149D ST, n s, 506.8 ft e of Alexander Av, 106x50; Stephen S. Marshall to John M. Linck, (R S $20.50)..... 26,100

165TH ST, s s, 18.11 ft w of Stebbins Av, 54.9x91; Prospect Av, s e corner 165th St, 37x85; Charles W. Hall, referee, to Laurie L. Levey, (R S $20)..... 20,000

Recorded Leases.

COLUMBUS AV, 680 and 682, n w corner of 93d St; George W. Eggers to the New York Produce Exchange Bank, 5 years.. 4,500

FULTON ST, 252; Mary E. Jackson to Ellen Daly, 3 years 7 months 12 days, (R S $1)..... 1,500

MADISON ST, 133; Mayer Lefkowitz to Max Goldstein, 5 years..... 2,976

MERCER ST, 297; the Steward, Howe & May Company to Edward E. Francis & Co., 2 years..... 2,500

117TH ST, 406 East; Louis Lippman to Santo Venauzini, 5 years..... 3,600

58TH ST, 2 and 4 East; the Plaza Bank to Automobile Club of America, 2½ years..... 4,000

Recorded Mortgages.

Interest is at 5 per cent., unless otherwise specified.

DONOHUE, Nellie, to Mary A. Costello; Briggs Av, s e s, 211.11 ft n e of Travers St, 3 years..... 59¢

GAULT, William J., to John O. Bennett; Travers Av, n e s, 77.7 ft n w of Briggs Av, demand, 6 per cent..... 1,150

GETTY, Hugh, to Esther A. Pyle, and others; Jay St, 14; also all title to adjoining strips, &c; re-recorded, 5 years, 5½ per cent..... 30,000

HEIDTMANN, Ernst, to William B. Ewing; Eagle Av, n e corner of 161st St, 1 month, 6 per cent..... $700

HILDEBRANDT, Barbara, to Carl Lafrents; 7th St, s s, 325 ft e of Avenue A, all title, leasehold, 7 years, 4 per cent. $500

HOEFLER, Hugo F., to John W. Hearen; Amsterdam Av, s e corner of 118th St, demand, 6 per cent..... 9,000

LINCK, John M., to Title Guarantee and Trust Company; 143d St, n s, 506.6 ft e of Alexander Av, 50x106 to Willis Av, 1 year..... 40,000

McGUIRE, Mary E. and James J., to Christina Sackman; Lot 50, map of South Washingtonville, 3 years..... 1,500

McKELVEY, John, to Mary Dymock; 7th Av, n e corner of 65th St, 2 years 6 per cent..... 11,000

McVICKAR, James, to Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank; 10th St, s s, 120.6 ft w of 7th Av, demand, 4 per cent..... 3,000

ROSE, Hudson P., to Dollar Savings Bank; Lots A, B, C, 38, 40, 49, 50, 61, 64, 65, 66, 72, 87, 88, 92 to 98, 101, 103, 105, 106, 113, 123 to 126, 128, 129, and 130, map of property of H. P. Rose, St. Raymond's Park; also, Lots 145, 146, 149 to 152, 164 to 170, 173 to 178, 181, 182, 187 to 201, map of Section 2, St. Raymond's Park, 1 year..... 12,000

SOKOLSKI, Isaac, to Bertha Guttenberg and another; 3d Av, e s, 50.2 ft n of 58th St, 5 years..... 38,000

WACHSMANN, Max, to Caroline J. Abelmann, and others; Ludlow St, w s, Lot 97A, map of Gouverneur property, 3 years..... 18,000

WILSON, Emma J., to Commercial Building and Loan Association of Newark, N. J.; Hickory St, e s, part of Lot 77, amended map of Bronxwood Park, installments..... 1,400

Assignments of Mortgages.

CLOCKE, T. Emory, executor, &c., to Moses G. Wright..... $2,000

CONRAD, William P., administrator, &c., and others to Caroline J. Abelmann and others..... 25,000

JUNG, Philip and Jerome, to George W. Bostwick..... 1,000

LOEW, Edward V., to Mary F. Moorhouse, (assigns six mortgages)..... 12,000

PUTZEL, Joseph, to Lillian H. Abbett.. Nom.

SALISBURY, Nelson H., assignee, &c., to Harry Carpenter..... Nom.

THOMAS, Rowland W., to Charles E. Bigelow..... 3,800

THE STATE TRUST COMPANY to Catherine W. Loney..... 10,000

WITHEY, Calvin W., to David Scott.... 510

Mechanics' Liens.

AMSTERDAM AV, n e corner of 146th St, 100x100; Samuel Smith against Nells Hansen, owner; Vincenzo Valenti, contractor..... $35

AMSTERDAM AV, n e corner 146th St, 100x100; New York Moulding Manufacturing Company against Niels Hansen, owner; Valente & Sorrentino, contractors..... 81

BOSTON ROAD or AV, s w corner of 168th St, 52.2x100; Olsen & Co. against Evelyn H. White and George J. Kelly, owners; Joseph White, contractor..... 140

CROTONA AV, 113 and 116; Manhattan Heating, Lighting and Ventilating Company against Herman Schoene, owner and contractor; Jacob Maibach, contractor..... 366

ST. NICHOLAS AV, w s, 29.7 ft n of, 117th St, 109x45.11x109x7d; Olsen & Co. against John F. Scannell, owner and contractor..... 188

WASHINGTON AV, w e, 285.11 ft s of 180th St, 100x146; Olsen & Co. against Charles Wagner and William F. Sawyer, owners and contractors..... 55

20TH ST, 11 West; the Alignum Company against Estelle G. Spitzer, owner and contractor..... 1,617

86TH ST, 81 to 89 East, Thomas F. Gaynor against Mary E. Dempsey, owner and contractor..... 2,979

129TH ST, s s, 125 ft e of Park Av, 100x200 to 128th St; George G. Youngs against Adelbert S. Nichols, owner; Edward Anderson, contractor..... 19

145TH ST, s s, 300 ft w of Amsterdam Av, 100x99.11; Olsen & Co. against John F. Scannell, owner and contractor..... 45

122D ST, 3 and 5 West; New York Moulding Manufacturing Company against Etta Blinn, owner; Charles Blinn, contractor..... 96

BUILDING LOAN CONTRACTS UNDER CHAP. 78, LAWS OF 1900.

7TH AV, e s, 75.5 ft s of 56th St, 75x100; also 55th St, n s, 100 ft e of 7th Av, 25x117.2x25.1x115.2; John O. Baker with Charles F. Rogers, 13 payments..115,000

57TH AV, e s, 50.5 ft s of 113th St, 25.3x100; Charles F. Ballard with Hulda and Joseph Wittner, 9 payments..... 25,000

Lis Pendens.

CATHEDRAL PARKWAY, s s, 200 ft w of Amsterdam Av, 100x70.11; Samuel H. Stone and others against Francis J. Schnugg and another, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorneys, Wolf, Kohn & Ullman.

PARK AV, n w corner of 130th St, 199.10 to 131st St x 90; James C. McGuire against Charles W. Hall, (two actions to foreclose two mechanic's liens;) attorneys, Ward, Hayden & Satterlee.

3D AV, e s, 54.9 ft n of 172d St, 150x100; Josephine Wandell against Henry Weiss and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorney, T. Wandell.

5TH AV, 218; Robert Alexander against Adelia D. Ireland and others, (foreclosure of mechanics' lien;) attorney, J. S. Gailand.

7TH AV, n w corner of 133th St, runs w 178x n 199.10 to 139th St x w 178 to avenue x e 25x e 100x s 149.10x w 100 to 7th Av x s 25 to beginning; John W. Rapp against Marie and Peter Muller, (action to impress trust, &c.;) attorneys, Phillips & Avery.

13TH ST, n e s, 348 ft n w of 6th Av, 20.6x103.3x irregular; tha Mutual Life Insurance Company against Margaret V. Smith and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorney, C. E. Miller.

109TH ST, n s, 200 ft w of Amsterdam Av, 50x100.11; Samuel H. Stone and others against Francis J. Schnugg, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorneys, Wolf, Kohn & Ullman.

125TH ST, s e, 279 ft e of Broadway, 107x100.11; Henry C. Braker against Stefano Greco and others, (foreclosure of mortgage;) attorney, W. C. Arnold.

145th St, s s, 130 ft e of Amsterdam Av, 32.99x11; J. Hampden Dougherty and another, trustees, &c., against Francis J. Schnugg and others, (foreclosure of two mortgages, two actions;) attorney, J. H. Dougherty.

THE SHOTWELL-WHITE FEUD.

WILLIAMSBURG, Ky., Jan. 19.—More than 100 witnesses have been summoned to appear before the Grand Jury here next Monday, when it is expected that members of the Shotwell and White families, who were engaged in the troubles at Corbin this week, will be indicted.

After the arrest last night at Corbin of Paris Shotwell, Willis Cochran, John Bryant, and Clay Kincaid, the last two negroes, and all belonging to the Shotwell faction, it has been quiet here to-day. Each faction is still accusing the other of preparing for violence, and there are some who apprehend collisions when court convenes here Monday.

Although the troops have been withdrawn, the Sheriff has a large force of deputies, and it is generally believed that he is able to maintain peace.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

New York City.

CALAUM & BLACKLEDGE.—Schedules of Calaum & Blackledge, wholesale dealers in salt fish at 188 Duane Street, show liabilities of $2,585, nominal assets of $727, and actual assets of $547.

JAMES WEST.—Schedules in bankruptcy of James West, dealer in carpets, formerly at 396 Hudson Street, have been filed by I. Gainsburg, representing some of the creditors, which show liabilities of $6,883 and assets of $3,500 in real estate at Peekskill and Irvington, N. Y.

Out of Town.

DANVILLE ROLLING MILLS COMPANY.—The Danville Rolling Mills Company of Philadelphia has made an assignment for the benefit of creditors to John N. M. Shimer and William H. Staake. The deed is dated Jan. 12, but conveys no real estate. The company was one of the concerns controlled by Charles R. Baird, who was recently declared a bankrupt.

PETITIONS IN BANKRUPTCY.

ARNOLD COHN.—Arnold Cohn, residing at 69 East Eighty-seventh Street, has filed a petition in bankrupt

Real Estate at Auction.

30c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

Bryan L. Kennelly, Auctr

BRYAN L. KENNELLY & CO.
WILL SELL AT AUCTION

Tuesday, January 29, 1901,

At 12 o'clock Noon, at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, 111 Broadway, New York City.

Absolute Trustee's Sale of 43 Parcels,

By order of James S. Herriman, Esq., trustee of the Estate of Philip Herriman, Deceased.

320 West 14th Street,

4-story and basement brick and brownstone trimmed single flat; well rented; size of lot, 24.8½x103.1½.

321 and 323 West 14th St.,

two 4-story and basement brick and brownstone single flats; size of each, 25x103.1½ and 25 x125.

333 West 14th Street,

4-story and basement brick and stone single flat; size of lot, 25x125.6½.

336 and 338 West 14th St.,

Two 4-story and basement brick and stone private dwellings, with extensions, well rented; size of each, 15x103.3.

340 West 14th Street,

4-story brownstone private dwelling, with extension; size of lot, 10.11x103.3.

405 and 407 West 14th St.,

Two 4-story and basement brick buildings, with extension; used for business and apartments; size of lots, 25x129 each.

404 and 406 West 15th St.,

Two 4-story and basement brick double tenements; size of lots, 25x88.6 each.

425 and 427 West 17th St.,

Two 4-story brick double tenements, with stores; size of lots, 25x92 each.

531 and 533 East 134th St.,

Two 5-story brick and stone double tenements, with stores; size of lots, 24.11x100 and 25x100.

South Side 135th St.,

225.01 Feet East Lincoln Av., Two Choice Lots, 25x100 each.

HOBOKEN, N. J.

26 CHOICE LOTS,

TO BE SOLD SEPARATELY.

Situated on 13th and 14th Streets, Park and Willow Avenues. Comprising entire block.

RICHARD T. GREENE, Esq., Attorney for Trustee, 41 Park Row, New York City.

Maps and further particulars at office of Attorneys, or with Auctioneers, Kennelly Building, 7 Pine St., New York City.

BRYAN L. KENNELLY, Auct'r.
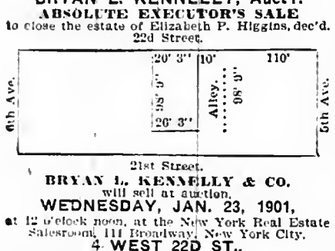
ABSOLUTE EXECUTOR'S SALE to close the estate of Elizabeth P. Higgins, dec'd. 22d Street.



BRYAN L. KENNELLY & CO.
will sell at auction,
WEDNESDAY, JAN. 23, 1901,
at 12 o'clock noon, at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, 111 Broadway, New York City.

4 WEST 22D ST.,

four-story and basement, high-stoop brownstone building, with two-story extension, with stores, offices, and studios; size of lot, 25.3x98.9; building covers lot. Title Guarantee and Trust Co. policy furnished.
JAMES TAYLOR LEWIS, Esq., Atty. for Estate, 120 Broadway.
Maps, etc., at Attys.' or at Auctioneers' offices, 7 Pine St.

BRYAN L. KENNELLY, Auct'r.
BRYAN L. KENNELLY & CO.
will sell at auction,
Wednesday, Jan. 23, 1901,
at 12 o'clock noon, at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, 111 Broadway, New York City.

2071-2073-2075-2077-2079 7TH AVE.,

CORNER 124TH ST.,
five four-story brick single Apartments, with stores; size of plot, 100.11x75.
EZEKIEL FIXMAN, Esq., Atty., 141 B'way.
Maps, &c., at Auctioneers' office, 7 Pine St.

BRYAN L. KENNELLY, Auct'r.
BRYAN L. KENNELLY & CO.
will sell at auction,
Wednesday, Jan. 23, 1901,
at 12 o'clock noon, at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, 111 Broadway, New York City,

254 WEST 73D ST.,

handsome four-story basement and cellar brick and stone Dwelling, with two-story extension; magnificent gas fixtures, andirons, &c.; decorated and handsomely trimmed in hard woods; size of lot, 20x102.2.
Maps, &c., at Auctioneers' office, 7 Pine St.

BRYAN L. KENNELLY, Auct'r.
BRYAN L. KENNELLY & CO.
Will sell at auction,
WEDNESDAY, JAN. 23, 1901,
at 12 o'clock noon, at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, 111 Broadway,

13 WEST 65TH ST.,

5-story and cellar brick double apartment house, arranged for 7 rooms and bath to each apartment; steam heat, hot-water supply, etc.; size of lot, 30x100.5.
Maps, etc., at auctioneers' offices, 7 Pine St.

JAMES L. WELLS, Auctioneer,

at 111 Broadway, N. Y. Real Estate Salesroom,
TUESDAY, JAN. 22, NOON,
EXECUTORS' SALE.
By order of Executors of
Estate of Bryan Lawrence, Deceased,

CHOICE BUSINESS PROPERTY,

BEING ENTIRE BLOCK BOUNDED BY

HARLEM RIVER
SOUTHERN BOULEVARD,
3d Avenue,
Lincoln Avenue,

3d & Lincoln Aves.,

Together with
Water Front and Bulkheads.

70 PER CENT. CAN REMAIN ON MORTGAGE AT 4½ PER CENT.

Apply for maps to JAMES L. WELLS, Auctioneer, 141 Broadway, or to
WILLIAM C. ORR, Esq.,
Attorney for Executors, 51 Chambers St.

L. J. PHILLIPS & CO.,

AUCTIONEERS,
WILL SELL AT PUBLIC AUCTION,
ABSOLUTE SALE,
To close the estate of Simon Bing, Jr.,

TUESDAY, JAN. 22d, 1901,

At 12 o'clock noon, at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway, N. Y. City,

268 Rivington St., Cor. Columbia St.,

4-story tenement, with stores; lot 25x70. Also

243 & 245 W. 29TH ST.,

2 four-story flats, with rear buildings; 56x98.2. For terms and further particulars apply to L. S. BING, Atty., 237 B'way, or Auct'rs, 158 B'way, N. Y. City.

CHAS. A. BERRIAN, Auctioneer, will sell at auction on

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 23, 1901,
at 12 o'clock noon, at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway, New York City, VALUABLE BUSINESS PROPERTY,
KING'S BRIDGE ROAD, COR. DECATUR AV.,

FORDHAM,

24TH WARD, NEW YORK CITY.
KING'S BRIDGE ROAD, northwest corner Decatur Av.—Two-story frame store and office building, with plot of ground 90x77x89x24 feet.
Maps and full particulars with Auctioneer, No. 141 Broadway, New York City.

Real Estate.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

$120,000—PRINCIPALS ONLY.—Party with acceptable references and this amount can secure equal interest in best real estate offered for years, directly in line of this city's northward growth; money completes purchase; title guaranteed; no time or commissions for brokers, but ample returns assured principal, active or silent. References and details at interview only. Address E., Box 184 Times.

Real Estate at Auction.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

HERBERT A. SHERMAN, Auct'r,
WILL SELL AT AUCTION,

THURSDAY, FEB. 14, 1901,

At 12 o'clock noon, at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, 111 Broadway.
ABSOLUTE SALE WITHOUT RESERVE.
FOR PARTITION.
Estate of JOEL WOLFE, Deceased.

No. 305 Fifth Ave.

28.9 feet north of 31st Street; 4-story, basement and cellar brownstone store building, with one-story extension; 2-story stable on rear of lot. Lot 28x150 feet, together with right of way over alley to 31st Street.

No. 121 West Houston St.

Near Sullivan Street, 4-story building, with one-story extension; lot 25x95 feet.

No. 124 West Houston St.

Near Sullivan Street, 6-story building and lot 25x100 feet.

Village of Wakefield,

In the Borough of Bronx, 11th and 12th Aves., near 3d St.
SIX LOTS.

Staten Island.

Richmond County. Farm at Princes Bay, Town of Westfield, about Eighty-one Acres.

All titles guaranteed by Title Guarantee and Trust Company, free of charge to purchaser.
Sixty per cent. of the purchase price may remain on bond and mortgage, for three years, at 4%, or seventy per cent. at 4½%.

SHEARMAN & STERLING, 44 Wall St.:
EDWARD W. SHELDON, No. 45 Wall Street;
GEORGE E. GARTLAND, 11 Wall Street:
A. E. ACKERMAN, 140 Nassau Street, Attorneys.

For Maps and further particulars apply to SHEARMAN & STERLING, Attys., 44 Wall St., or HERBERT A. SHERMAN, Auctioneer, 9 Pine Street.

City Real Estate for Sale.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

FIFTY-SEVENTH STREET,
BETWEEN 6TH AND 7TH AVS.
A very attractive medium size house, in thorough order. Can be bought at a very reasonable figure. (8390)

GEO. R. READ,
1 Madison Ave., at 23d St., Or 60 Cedar Street.

FOR SALE.
Close to 5th Ave., below 64th St.,
A handsome extra wide brownstone house in fine order. Can be bought reasonably.
APPLY TO (8393)

GEO. R. READ,
No. 1 Madison Ave. & 60 Cedar St.

A full-width dwelling in the vicinity of 79TH ST. AND 5TH AVE.

Recently built, exceedingly well arranged, very roomy, has eight bathrooms. Handsomely decorated, and appointments perfect in every detail. For full particulars and arrangements to view, address, (8387)

GEO. R. READ,
1 Madison Avenue and 60 Cedar Street.

64th St., N. W. Cor. Madison Ave.

Very desirable corner house, 20 feet wide, 3 rooms deep; sanitary plumbing. Newly decorated. (8381)

Permits and particulars,
GEO. R. READ,
1 Madison Ave., cor. 23d St., Or 60 Cedar Street.

A SUPERB 5TH AV. CORNER RESIDENCE, NEAR MT. MORRIS PARK, FOR SALE AT A GREAT BARGAIN ON LIBERAL TERMS. VERY LARGE HOUSE IN PERFECT CONDITION, WITH IMMEDIATE POSSESSION. NO TRADES ENTERTAINED. IDEAL LOCATION FOR PHYSICIAN OR DENTIST. PRINCIPALS ONLY APPLY TO PHILIP A. SMYTH, 11 PINE ST.

AGENTS AND BROKERS, NOTICE!
Nos. 51, 53, 55 East 129th St.,
Plot 75x99.11, with two good Dwellings, value of land.
J. L. O'BRIEN, Owner, 217 West 125th St.

Attention, Investors!—Five-story, 25-foot single flat, 8 rooms and bath; first-class tenants; west of 5th Av.; paying over 10 per cent.; $16,500, mortgage $10,000, 4½ per cent. BERNHARDT, 110 East 125th St., Room 12.

A palatial residence for sale; perfect in all its appointments; 30 rooms, 5 baths, elevator; having four-story annex beautifully arranged for club; Melrose Union Square; no brokers. C. R., Box 74, 1,242 Broadway.

Willis Av.—Magnificent five-story corner, four stores; always rented; finest tenants; corner liquor store for sale if desired; bargain; prices, $45,000; fast growing in value.
THOMAS P. PAYNE, 96 Broadway.

MADISON AV. Corner below 42d St.; size 75x100; finest site in the city for apartment hotel. J. EDGAR LEAYCRAFT & CO., B'way, cor. 44th.

11th Av., near 48th St.—Fine full-sized corner building, with store; always rented; bargain; $25,000; 8th Av. bargains.
THOMAS P. PAYNE, 96 Broadway.

Cold-water tenement, with stores, 100th St., near 8th Av.; always rented; finest tenants; $2,100; price, $21,500; easy terms. THOMAS P. PAYNE, 96 Broadway.

$22,000.—Park Av. corner, in Seventies, elegant four-story high-stoop brownstone private dwelling, 20x45x52.
THOMAS P. PAYNE, 96 Broadway.

Sacrifice.—Three-story and basement high stoop private dwelling; 11 rooms and bath, suitable two families; perfect condition; $6,500. ANDREWS, 514 East 117th St.

149 West 82d St.—Cozy dwelling; only $5,000 required; cash mortgage $12,000 at 4½ per cent.; great sacrifice bargain. JOHN PETERS, 200 East 14th St.

Amsterdam Av.—Central location, corner building, with store; rental $3,500; price $40,000; mortgage 4; growing fast in value; bargain.
Thomas P. Payne, 96 Broadway.

Builders—Notice.—Seven lots, 25x105, where apartments are in immediate demand; price low; terms to suit; loan if desired. Burlock, 203 Broadway.

Attention! Bargain, only $17,000, rental $2,100, mortgage to suit; 5-story double tenement, 2 stores; perfectly new, fully rented; nets $1,000. Rexer, 31 Nassau St.

A1 5-story double flat, 2 stores, best location Madison Av.; 4½ per cent. mortgage, bring clear 12 per cent.; sell cheap if sold this week. Levor, 1,705 Madison Av.

Attention.—Desirable plots, Gramercy Park, 30x 184; price reasonable; 20th St., near 3d Av., 44x92; price $30,500; offers wanted.
FOLSOM BROTHERS, 835 Broadway.

Bargain!—5-story corner, Madison Av., near 116th St.; with latest improvements; mortgage 4½ per cent.; brings 12 per cent. net. Levor, 1,705 Madison Av. Tel. 1319 Harlem.

Brokers or Principals, Attention.—Six-story elevator apartment; A1 condition; equity $40,000. Submit offers, part cash, balance smaller equities, to Joseph Toch, 165 Broadway.

Desirable houses, 8th to 12th St., inclusive, near 5th Av.; prices reasonable.
FOLSOM BROTHERS, 835 Broadway.

Exceptionally fine corner plot, 5th Av., near 23d St., 61x140; prices reasonable.
FOLSOM BROTHERS, 835 Broadway.

Desirable plots and lots in choice location, with building loans; prices reasonable.
FOLSOM BROTHERS, 835 Broadway.

Attractive residences in Murray Hill section; prices ranging from $15,000 to $75,000.
FOLSOM BROTHERS, 835 Broadway.

Attention.—Desirable plot, 48x103.3; 11th St., near 5th, $55,000; offer wanted.
FOLSOM BROTHERS, 835 Broadway.

Actual Bargain.—Full lot, 40th St., near 10th Av., $6,500; offer wanted.
FOLSOM BROTHERS, 835 Broadway.

Lots; Bronx bargains; Tremont, Woodycrest, Aqueduct Avs., Fordham Road, Woodlawn corner, others. George Purvis, 156 Broadway.

A1 5-story corner, 8th Av., near 116th St.; best investment property; 4½ per cent. mortgage. Levor, 1,705 Madison Av. Tel. 1319 Harlem.

A property about 69x170, strong buildings, near Printing House Square, for sale at a great bargain. Ruland & Whiting, 5 Beekman St.

Beautiful modern residence, near 125th St. Station, only $13,500; others magnificent locations, $7,000 upward. Gibson, 55 Liberty St.

A Bargain.—Park Av., near 86th St.; corner building; suitable for improvement. Full particulars from Joseph Toch, 165 Broadway.

A bargain in choice flat, 104th St., near station, Columbus Av.; rent $3,000; price $27,500; easy terms. Address OWNER, Box 906 Post Office.

Elberon.—For sale, a tract of land adjoining depot on Lincoln Av. Apply to OWNER, 20 Broad St., Room 1,005.

Remarkably cheap; private dwelling, West 97th St.; handsomely decorated; title searched free. Stockdale Co., Amsterdam, 93d.

21st St., Near 3d Av.—Three-story dwelling, 20x 92; price, $13,000. JOHN PETERS, 200 East 14th St.

Two very desirable lots, Broadway, near 149th St.; price right; terms to suit. George Purvis, 156 Broadway.

Lots, $300 each, 24th Ward.—Handy to cars; terms to suit. Graham, 3,743 3d Av.

City Real Estate for Sale.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

I have a block of three family Houses, all well rented; my equity in these houses is $150,000; will exchange the same for some free and clear country Property or something free and clear in New York or Brooklyn, or I will sell the same for cash; whatever the deal may be, I must realize $60,000 in cash, as I need this money very much for my business; I will give all brokers full particulars of the property and will pay them full commission if they can carry this deal through for me; everything sent to me will be kept strictly confidential. Address J. HAMER, P. O. Box 1941, New York City.

$5,000 cash and $4,500 mortgage will buy a beautiful home consisting of a large house and barn, also a variety of fruit trees. Size of the plot 25x162. This place is only a short distance from 155th Street "L" station. For full particulars, call on GEO. W. CAMPBELL, 122 W. 103d St, any evening from 5 to 9.

$8,500 cash and $18,000 mortgage will buy a very fine four-family house. For further particulars call on GEO. W. CAMPBELL, 122 W. 103d St., any evening from 5 to 9.

FOR SALE.

A beautiful new 20-foot five-story American Basement House,

NO. 310 WEST 107TH STREET,

close to Riverside, on the highest ground and in the choicest restricted location of the upper west side, has reception hall, basement billiard room, drawing, music, and dining rooms and library; six family bed rooms, three bathrooms, and servants' stairs; select and convenient location, with fine view of the river.
PRICE ONLY $37,000.
CHARLES BUEK, OWNER AND BUILDER, 109 West 42d Street.
Three-quarters may remain at 4½ per cent.

53D ST., NEAR 8TH AVE.,

4 and 5 story bldgs., 53 front, adapted for light manufacturing; carriage lift, driveway. ASHFORTH & CO., 1,509 BROADWAY.

37th St., bet. 8th & 9th Aves.,

25 lot with front and rear buildings; reasonable. ASHFORTH & CO., 1,509 Broadway.

FOR SALE—23 WEST 12TH ST.
9 ST. MARK'S PLACE.
18 EAST 11TH ST.
ROBERT LAWSON, OWNER,
55-57 WHITE ST.

A1 5-story double flat store property, 5th Av., near 116th St.; all improvements; sell cheap this month. Levor, 1,705 Madison Av. Tel. 1319 Harlem.

46th St.; great sacrifice; tenements; two full lots; rental, $3,800; price, $33,000; estate must sell. JOHN PETERS, 200 East 14th St.

Bargain; handsome private dwelling, East 50th St., near 2d Av.; little cash needed. George Purvis, 156 Broadway.

Investors, Builders.—Plots on and near Broadway, 14th to 59th St. THEO. ROGERS BRILL, 351 West 59th St.

$4,500.—6-room cottage; full lot; near elevated; owner leaving city. Stricker, 3,048 3d Av., 150th St.

677 East 135th St.—Three-story, private, brick house, 25x100; price, $8,300; easy terms; great sacrifice.

Stable in Harlem; convenient to Speedway and elevated station; sell at sacrifice. Box 906, Post Office.

Bronx plot; free and clear; 378x63; make an offer; sell cheap. Stockdale Co., Amsterdam Av. and 93d St.

Forsyth St.—New six-story four-family tenement; stores; $45,000; rent $4,500. Thomas Payne, 96 Broadway.

$3,000 cash and one mortgage $19,350 buys 37 West 114th St., five-story double flat.

Jerome Av. and 181st St.—34 lots; must be sold. Thom & Co., Fordham, New York.

Three valuable lots, 75x100, in East 35th St. Gurnee & Hopkins, 134 West 23d St.

Brooklyn Real Estate for Sale.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

OWNERS OF PROPERTY
in the Bedford-Stuyvesant district will confer a favor by letting me know early in the Spring their offerings for rent.
The renting inquiry begins on Lincoln's Birthday, (February 12th,) and is fairly under way by Washington's Birthday.
This activity lasts until about March 15th, falling off rapidly thereafter.
Don't wait till the market is over before asking your tenants their intentions. Have it settled with them all the first week of February—or before if you can.
The best business people are early in the field for homes. That's the kind you want for tenants, and will get if you follow my advice.
CHARLES E. HOTALING,
REAL ESTATE BROKER & MANAGER,
441 SUMNER AV., COR. McDONOUGH ST.
Your Patronage and Business Solicited.
(Office Not Open Evenings.)

2 AND 3 STORY HOUSES,

all modern improvements, swell and square fronts, box stoops, foyer and saloon parlors, restricted neighborhood, near Prospect Park, on Midwood Street, just off Flush Av. Prices low; terms to suit. Send for illustrated booklet. W. A. A. BROWN, owner, Brooklyn, 583 Flatbush Av.; New York office, 149 Broadway.

CALL ON HENRY C. VAIL
at the office of the late HENRY W. SHERRILL
13 WILLOUGHBY STREET, BROOKLYN,
for large, handsome house, overlooking Prospect Park South, with all its magnificent improvements; corner plot, 50x100.

Several plots, fine lots, fronting on trolley in Jamaica, $60 to $125; street graded; fine cement sidewalks, electric lights; $5 down, $1 per week; Title Guarantee policy free. Edwards, 1,258 Broadway, Brooklyn.

18% Investment.—Ninth St., near 5th Av.; 4-story brick, double; 5 rooms, bath, each apartment; actual rental, $1,584 year; mortgage, $7,000; price, $14,500; make offer. Failmezger, Hart Building, Gates and Broadway.

Price $35,000, leased for $3,960; corner on Prospect Park West; modern in every detail; four stories, stone; inspection by investors solicited. Geo. E. Lovett & Co., 28 and 30 Court St., Brooklyn.

$3,000, only $300 down, balance payments to suit, buys two-story brick dwelling, 25th Ward, near L and trolleys. Ketcham Bros., 1,565 Broadway.

Corner Smith Street, $9,800; three-story brick, 2 stores; best business location. Geo. E. Lovett & Co., 28 and 30 Court St., Brooklyn.

Westchester Real Estate for Sale.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

Fine 8-room cottage, with stable, lot 305x75—$7,500. Easy terms. Apply to CHAS. H. NOXON, Lawyer, 21 Park Row. Tel. 3681 Cortlandt.

Country Houses to Let—Unfurnished

Nyack-on-Hudson.—Very desirable cottage; eleven rooms; all improvements; river front. Cornish, 119 West 125th St.

To Let.—Large boarding house at New Paltz, N. Y.; fine location. Cochrane, 2 West 125th St.

Winter Resorts.

20c. per line $4.50 per line for 30 times.

GOLF. HUNTING. FISHING.

FLORIDA GULF COAST HOTELS

PLANT SYSTEM.

Excellent Golf Courses, with Turf putting greens and tees, connected with hotels.
Professionals in charge.

TAMPA BAY HOTEL, TAMPA, FLA.,
A. E. Dick, Manager. Open Jan. 15th.
Hotel BELLEVIEW, Belleair, on the Gulf, Fla.
J. F. Champlin, Manager. Open Jan. 15th.
SEMINOLE HOTEL, Winter Park, Fla.
Edw. R. Swett, Lessee and Prop. Open Jan. 15th.
OCALA HOUSE, Ocala, Fla.
P. F. Brown, Manager. Open Jan. 15th.
HOTEL KISSIMMEE, Kissimmee, Fla. Now Open.
THE INN, Port Tampa, Fla. J. H. Murdick, Manager.
NEW YORK OFFICES, 12 West 23d St., and 290 Broadway. Also TRAVELERS' INFORMATION CO.,
3 Park Place and 25 Union Square.

Not least among the glories of NEW ORLEANS is that here begins the ROYAL MARCH of the SOUTHERN PACIFIC—QUEEN AMONG RAILROADS.

Its three Routes.—Shasta, (Northern,) Ogden, (Central,) Sunset, (Southern,) each traverses more Scenic Loveliness than is to be found bordering any other railroad on earth, and all who have ever been its guests, whether for health, recreation, or for rest, attest its sumptuous equipment, service, and cuisine.
"SUNSET LIMITED" is merely its BEST TRAIN, where ALL are GOOD.
For full information, free illustrated pamphlets, maps, and time tables, lowest rates, sleeping car and steamer reservations, baggage checked, etc., apply to SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY, 349 Broadway, or 1 Battery Place, (Washington Building,) New York City.

Real Estate for Exchange.

$10,000 Equity in Private House and $25,000 equity in some very fine lots on Staten Island. What can you offer in exchange for these equities? Send particulars to Geo. W. Campbell, 122 W. 103rd Street, or call any evening from 5 to 9.

$20,000 Equity in Fine Flat House
situated on a leading street near Central Park West. Will trade for private house and some cash. Send full particulars to Geo. W. Campbell, 122 W. 103rd Street, or call any evening from 5 to 9.

$38,000 Equity in Two Fine Flat houses with large stores, situated near 28th Street and 6th Avenue. What can you offer in exchange for the same? Send full particulars to Geo. W. Campbell, 122 W. 103rd Street, or call any evening from 5 to 9.

$40,000 Equity in a Piece of manufacturing property leased to one tenant who does all repairs and pays the Croton water rent. What can you offer in exchange for the same? Send full particulars to Geo. W. Campbell, 122 W. 103rd Street, or call any evening from 5 to 9.

$60,000 Equity in Three Fine
apartment houses. Will trade for lots. Send full particulars to Geo. W. Campbell, 122 W. 103rd Street, or call any evening from 5 to 9.

$120,000 Equity in a Gilt Edge corner on Columbus Ave., rents for about $2,300 a year. Whatever you offer me in exchange for this property I must realize about $50,000 in cash to make the deal. Send full particulars to Geo. W. Campbell, 122 West 103d St. Call any evening 5 to 9.

Free and clear. "Long Branch." Residence modern Improvements, Barn, Stable, Servants' Cottage. Corner Property, 100 feet on Driveway. 100 feet on Shrewsbury River Front. Bulkhead 474 feet on Street. Covering entire Block. Fruit. Flowers. Shrubbery. 5 minutes from Ocean and Depot. Cash Price, $15,000. Legitimate Exchange Entertained. Brokers Commission. Offers. State full particulars. Call see Photograph. "Owner" Furniture Factory, 99 Sixth Ave., New York.

THOMAS P. PAYNE, 96 Broadway, has many parcels, large and small, of the finest city and country properties for sale and exchange; flats, tenements, business property, lots, private dwellings, all sizes and all sections; suburban houses and farms; cash buyers for bargains; bargains for cash buyers; money on mortgage at lowest rates. Call or write.

RARE BARGAIN.—Have fine steam-heated flat in elegant location, rented for over $3,200, and paying over $1,300 per year net; mortgage $22,000 at 5%; can sell for $25,500, or $6,500 over mortgage, if sold at once. C. E. HEALD, 1,934 Madison Av., cor. 124th.

Have elegant 10-family apartment, fine block, actually rented for $3,220. Price, $34,000; mortgage, $22,000, at 5 per cent. Will exchange for good farm, stocked, in good location. C. E. Heald, 1,934 Madison Av.

AT GREAT SACRIFICE,
beautiful Residence and Lots near New Haven, let, equity $35,000, for income or cash offer.
PERCY WINTHROP MEAD, 47 Cedar St.

Have fine corner flat of five lots in Bronx, value $36,000, mortgaged for one-half, at 5%; want Harlem flats. C. E. HEALD, 1,934 Madison Av., cor. 124th.

Handsome corner apartment, 100x100, Central Park West; any reasonable offer accepted. Stockdale Co., Amsterdam, 93d.

$20,000 equity; choice private dwelling; 86th St., west side; fully furnished; bargain.
THOMAS P. PAYNE, 96 Broadway.

$100,000 equity elegant seven-story new apartment house; finest location west side.
THOMAS P. PAYNE, 96 Broadway.

Narragansett Pier.—Fine modern, shingled cottage opposite the Casino; free and clear, for city property. GEO. MINER, 20 Broad St.

20 Acres, 24th Ward, adjoining Bronx and Pelham Parkway, for improved income property. OWNER, 20 Broad St., Room 1,005.

Want Atlantic Highlands property in exchange for Harlem private house; good opportunity. WELLING, 2 West 125th St.

$50,000 equity in handsome Brooklyn residence. What can you offer? Opportunity. Address A., Box 170 Times Office.

Bronx corner, 75x100, free and clear; price, $7,900; want flat, Manhattan Island. Stockdale Co., Amsterdam, 93d.

Equity in one or two double flats for private dwelling; title searched free. Stockdale Co., Amsterdam, 93d St.

$10,000 equity 15-family apartment house, 65th St., West; well rented; exchange. Thomas Payne, 96 Broadway.

Free and clear Bronx corner; four lots; want cheap flat; Manhattan Island. Stockdale Co., Amsterdam, 93d.

Real Estate Wanted.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

$2,500 to loan in Brooklyn; $3,500, $5,000, and $2,500 in Bronx; $120,000 at 4%, Manhattan only; $25,000 to $34,000 at 4½%. Manhattan. Richard Dickson, 120 Broadway, Room 36.

Wanted.—Private houses, either for sale or rent, below 59th St.; owners only.
FOLSOM BROTHERS, 835 Broadway.

House, not less than 20 feet front, between 5th and Park, 40th to 80th St.; cash customer.
M. K. MILLER, 242 West 14th St.

Attention! $500 bonus for $2,000 second mortgage, first $14,000; rental, $2,100; owner's bond. Rexer, 31 Nassau St.

Attention! $500 discount for sale of $3,000 second mortgage, first $9,000; rental, $1,700. Rexer, 31 Nassau St.

Houses, farms, lots anywhere that are bargains. What have you? Investor, 846 Hancock St., Brooklyn.

Factory site, with or without buildings, waterfront, near New York. Vernon Miller, 150 Nassau St.

Wanted—A good Columbus or Amsterdam Av. corner. Address Cash Buyer, Box 906 Post Office.

New Jersey Property for Sale.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

$17.00 A LOT.

Adjoining Lakewood, N. J., the famous health and Winter resort, we offer plots containing five lots, $85.00. Small weekly payments. Particulars and tickets to visit the property, Sunday, January 27th, from R. HALLEY & CO., 2 East 125th St., N. Y.

A Sacrifice if Sold Quick.—Arlington pretty cottage, 9 rooms and bath, (furnished complete;) also one 8 rooms and bath, and large house, 18 rooms, (improvements,) stable, 40 lots, 4 blocks from depot at Rutherford; 10 per cent. down, balance monthly. E. D. Cordts, 235 Broadway, N. Y.

6-room house, water in kitchen, in Hackensack; good barn; plot, 40x125; in fine order; good street; $1,500; $600 down, balance on mortgage; long term. WILLIAM E. TAYLOR, 123 Liberty St., New York.

$200 cash, $3.50 weekly, buys a nice, cozy 6-room house; handy to all ferries; 15 minutes trolley; healthiest section of Jersey City Heights. Call or write, A. A. Siegfried, 203 Broadway.

Choice investments offered in private dwellings, brick flats, with stores, on Jersey City Heights; no brokers. Vernon J. Miller, 150 Nassau St., New York.

Demarest Station.—Charming Queen Anne house, eight lots, perfect order; cheap, $4,500.
THOMAS P. PAYNE, 96 Broadway.

Englewood and Vicinity!—Houses for sale or rent. Weatherby & Co., opp. station, Englewood, N. J.

Long Island Real Estate for Sale.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

Handsome shore front property, all sizes; easy terms. Write for particulars.
J. S. LEWIS, Northport, L. I.

Staten Island Property.

COMMERCIAL WATER FRONTS, FACTORY property, houses, with large grounds, worth $75,000, free and clear; exchange for city property. D. CORNELL, Stapleton, S. I.

Apartments to Let—Unfurnished.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

The EL NIDO

N. W. Cor. 7th Ave. Drive and 116th St.

HARLEM'S FINEST APARTMENT HOUSE

Suites of 7 and 8 large, light rooms and bath. Select families are respectfully requested to examine the apartments and judge for themselves. Rents exceedingly moderate. Apply to Superintendent on premises.

OPEN EVENINGS

THE IOWA,

135 West 104th St.

JUST COMPLETED.
ELECTRIC ELEVATOR AND HALL SERVICE. THE FINEST 6 & 7 ROOM APARTMENTS. With all up-to-date, modern improvements; every room large, light, and beautifully decorated; large, handsome entrance hall and reception room, richly and tastefully furnished, about 300 feet from 104th St. station; express trains; Broadway and Amsterdam Av. electric cars. For further particulars apply on premises.
Builders
PAUL R. PUGH & CO., and Owners.
STABLER & SMITH, AGENTS,
674 COLUMBUS AVE., 93D ST.
TELEPHONE 79 RIVERSIDE.

Country Real Estate for Sale.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

FOR SALE,

A GENTLEMAN'S COUNTRY RESIDENCE

in a refined neighborhood, on the shore at Bryam Point, consisting of (2½) acres of high land on the open Sound, on the New Haven Railroad, (7) minutes' drive to station, and only (39) minutes from Grand Central Depot, with a Colonial Style house, built of yellow Nova Scotia stone and frame, handsomely decorated, all the latest improvements, open plumbing of the finest manufactured Stable for (4) horses and ample space for carriages.
An excellent Dock and a 50-foot Boathouse, bathhouses, beach. The grounds are beautifully laid out. All in the best of order. For other particulars call or address THOMAS N. COOKE, P. O. Building, Greenwich, Conn.

FOR SALE—1,000 acres choice Maine seashore land; best harbor in State; near Bar Harbor; suitable to put into stock company or for man of means; choice roads, fishing, hunting, canoeing, swimming, etc., etc. Waterworks, steamboat line, and hotels adjoining. Address Box 1,730, Boston, Mass.

FOR SALE.—Fine country home, one hour from New York; house French roof; improvements; 26 acres, with orchard, fine fruit, outbuildings, and land A1; high ground; very healthy. I. FAULKNER, 18 Jacob St., New York.

New cottage; all improvements; nickel plumbing; seven rooms and bath; opposite Castle Residence Park; price, $4,900. George H. Dorr, owner, New Rochelle, N. Y.

Sale, Rent—Allenhurst, Elberon, Hollywood, Monmouth Beach, Rumson Road; desirable furnished cottages. WILLIAM LANE, Long Branch.

West End and Elberon, Ocean Av.; two desirable furnished cottages for sale, $22,000, $25,000; others on Cedar Av., $20,000, $25,000. WILLIAM LANE, Long Branch.

Farms, New Jersey, New York; many bargains; some exchanges. John W. Gardner, Metropolitan Building, Newark, N. J.

Farm on Hudson River; 3,000 acres; stocked; 400 acres tillable; creamery; good buildings. ATWATER, 156 Broadway.

Yonkers.—1 acre ground; house, 12 rooms; near Hampton Driving Park. Stricker, 3,048 3d Av., 156th St.

Country residence for sale or exchange for city lots or business property. D. A. Clarkson, Newburg, N. Y.

Brooklyn.

Hicks St., 368, Brooklyn.—Large store, with dwelling rooms; will decorate to suit; $16.

To Let for Business Purposes.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

CORNER BUILDING TO LET

Three-story and basement, 50x100.

78-80 WALKER ST.

Building is steam heated, well lighted, and admirably adapted for publisher, being at present occupied by the Dry Goods Economist, who will vacate February 1st, 1901, their business having outgrown the premises; exceptionally favorable lease will be made at an extremely reasonable rent by applying to THOS. H. ELLSON,
409 BROADWAY.

UNION SQUARE NORTH,
ADJOINING BROADWAY.
LOFT 184 FEET DEEP.
Building has entrances on two streets.
Inquire at 31 East 17th St., or
J. EDGAR LEAYCRAFT & CO., B'way, cor. 44th.

Attractive up-to-date three-story buildings, adjoining 3d Av., 206-208 East 56th St.; 35x100; finely lighted all sides; open plumbing; extra large elevator; suitable storage automobile and wine warehouse, bottler, factory, express, stable, laundry, builder, undertaker, dyer, private stables; also fine offices, stores, eight-room residence attached. Apply premises, or Leon S. Altmayer, 11A E. 83d.

307 WEST BROADWAY.

STORE AND FIRST LOFT.

Strong building. Good light. Power, if required.

Close to 14th St. and Broadway, corner lofts, 50x100, at moderate rentals.
J. EDGAR LEAYCRAFT & CO., B'way & 44th.

CORNER 12TH ST. & THIRD AV.—Extra deep store, with large basement.
J. EDGAR LEAYCRAFT & CO., B'way, cor. 44th.

144 PARK ROW,

THREE-STORY BUILDING, $1,500.
ASHFORTH & CO., 1,509 Broadway.

BUILDINGS, STORES, LOFTS, AND OFFICES TO LET IN NEARLY ALL DOWN-TOWN STS. RULAND & WHITING, 5 BEEKMAN ST.

STORES, LOFTS, AND OFFICES
TO LET AT LOWEST RATES.
JACOB A. KING, 491 B'WAY—81 E. 125TH ST.

Corner store, suitable for cheap cash grocer, dry goods, barber; altered to suit tenant; elegantly situated. Mrs. Mills, 691 East 158th St.

Buildings, Stores, Lofts, Offices.—Exceptionally fine list, this and other desirable locations.
FOLSOM BROTHERS, 835 Broadway.

Desk room, office facilities, separate room; outside windows. American Tract Building, 150 Nassau St., Room 2,020.

826 Canal St.—Third and fourth lofts, 25x55; good light; $40 and $30.

Business Opportunities.

20c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

ADDITIONAL CAPITAL SUPPLIED.
Stock Companies Organized.
Business Sold Privately.
Stocks and Bonds Placed.
Meritorious Inventions Financed.
DANIELS & COMPANY,
Bankers, 6 Wall St.

PATENTS Secured and sold all over the If you have an invention send for our WORLD HINTS TO INVENTORS.
This book may help you to make MONEY.
CLARK, DEEMER & CO.,
235 BROADWAY, N. Y.

STATISTICS SHOW THAT THE SALE OF toilet articles in the United States amounts to MORE than $40,000,000 annually. Do you desire a fortune? Here is your opportunity; I want a partner with capital, or a person with capital to form a stock company for the purpose of increasing manufacture and exploit of seven Turkish Toilet articles, now on the market, for ladies. Highest recommendations; handsomest packages. Address, Col. J. F. MILLIKEN, 287 Broadway, N. Y. City.

MANUFACTURING SITE
NEAR NEW YORK, ON ADVANTAGEOUS TERMS; OWNER'S PLANT ADJOINING; CAN FURNISH LIGHT, HEAT, POWER, AND TRACK FACILITIES; CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED. MANUFACTURING, BOX 379, 1,269 BROADWAY.

MAIL ORDER ADVERTISERS.
Send for my Advertisers' Pocket Guide of money making lists of leading dailies, weeklies, and monthlies; valuable and interesting to beginners; sent free. RUDOLPH GUENTHER, Newspaper and Magazine Advertising, 106 Fulton St., New York

$15,000—PRINCIPALS ONLY.—Party with acceptable references and this amount can secure equal interest in best real estate offered for years, directly in line of this city's northward growth; money completes purchase; title guaranteed, no time or commissions for brokers, but ample returns assured principal, active or silent. References and details at interview only. Address E., Box 184 Times.

Why be hard up or out of business? We have a sure road to wealth. Our coin-controlled machines are the best made and are quick sellers, or can be placed on the percentage plan. Write for particulars. The best chance ever offered to make big money on a small investment. Address The Callie-Schlemer Co., 1,429-1,459 Woodward Av., Detroit, Mich.

Partner with $1,500 to invest in legitimate corporation, with or without services; take charge of office, (Greater New York;) no opposition; large territory; experience not necessary; no scheme, but a practical business, where money can be made; business now in operation. WINN, 132 Nassau St., Room 317.

Wanted—An associate in a going and well-established, paying manufacturing and supply business in Western Pennsylvania. Three to four hundred thousand dollars required to control. Senior partner retiring. Closest investigation. Deal only with principals. Address D., Box 194 Times Office.

$1,000.00 OR MORE INVESTED
In a novel manufacturing business can be doubled annually with good salary; bear investigation. AUTO. PIC. CO., 88 Wall St.

Incorporate Your Business.—Buy Organization and Management of Business Corporations. Gives Methods, Costs, Advantages, Details, Price, $1.50. Send for Announcement. Ronald Press, 52 Broadway.

Ready, reliable, regular Income secured by the "Storey Method of Investments"; always succeeds; no risk; two beautifully illustrated books FREE. Storey Cotton Co., 137 Bourse, Philadelphia.

An established manufactory wishes practical mechanic or business man with few thousand dollars to take working interest in development. Manufactory, Box 190 Times.

Foundation.—A business without limit. Want party with some money to make stock company. Address Machinery, Wagner's Advertising Agency, 2,263 7th Av.

$3,000 wanted for 1 year to be used to enlarge profitable manufacturing business; good security or interest in business and position if wanted. E. L., Box 101 Times.

WESTERN LANDS AND MORTGAGES PURchased large or small tracts; Dakotas, Kansas, Nebraska preferred. HOLLAND, 115 B'way.

Advice Free; Patents promptly procured; Inventors' Guide Free. Edgar Tate & Company, Patent Attorneys, 245 Broadway.

Partner wanted, with small capital and services, manufacturing and retail jewelry business. 806 Atlantic Av., Brooklyn.

Active office man desires to invest $3,000—$5,000 in mercantile business; New York or vicinity. A. K., Box 182 Times.

D. Theodore, dealer in old metals, rubber, and paper stock; copying press for sale. 61 Ann St.

Printing Office For Sale.—1 cylinder, 4 jobbers, type, &c. Price, $1,500. 198 William St.

Printers—Hoe Drum Cylinder Press, 22x29, for sale, $275. 198 William St.

For Sale.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

CREDIT TO ALL
DIAMONDS and WATCHES on small weekly or monthly payments; lowest prices; best quality; goods guaranteed.
NATIONAL DIAMOND WATCH CO.,
177-179 BROADWAY. Take Elevator.

We make wringers fit stationary tubs; allow something for your crippled wringer if it cannot be put in condition for use in our hospital; latest improved Bissell carpet sweepers. Send postal and our ambulance will call for wringers or sweepers needing repairs. American Wringer Co., 7-9 East 125th St.

TYPEWRITERS.—Remingtons, Smith Premiers, and all standard makes rented, kept in repair; stands and ribbons free. Sold 25% to 75% less than manufacturer's prices. No relics of past ages carried in stock. Every machine sold kept in repair for one year free. F. S. WEBSTER CO., 317 Broadway. Telephone, 1,338 Franklin.

IDEAL CLIP.—Have this clip attached to your eyeglasses and you will agree that it is the only one that gives entire satisfaction. MEYER & ELTING, Opticians, 617 Sixth Av., near 36th St., New York.

5c A POUND Paid for old Rubber Shoes, Bicycle Tires, &c. Anything made of rubber bought, 5 pounds or 5,000 pounds bought. BORNSTEIN, 84 Centre St.

Giving up house, offer exceedingly low all elegant new furniture, brilliant upright piano, fine parlor, dining, bedroom sets, folding beds, mirrors, &c.; suitable entering housekeeping; house for sale cheap. 109 East 55th St.

CROTON WATER IS PURIFIED THROUGH LINKE'S ACORN SELF-CLEANING STONE FILTER; BEST MADE. LINKE, 1,559 BROADWAY.

"Gold Chairs," warranted French leaf, only $2.50; large assortment; also regilding picture frames, fancy furniture; reasonable charges. Gold Furniture Manufacturers' "Show Rooms," 99 6th Av.

SAFES.
New and second-hand, of all kinds and makes; safes bought, exchanged, and repaired. J. M. MOSSMAN, 72 Maiden Lane. Tel. 1,421 John.

Typewriter, (new,) $40; remodeled Remington, Smiths, $35; rentals reduced; repairing, (telephone.) CONSOLIDATED TYPEWRITER EXCHANGE, 241 Broadway.

TYPEWRITERS.—Remingtons, Smiths, Blickendorfers, Hammonds, Williamses, Jewetts, Franklins, Calligraphs, sold, rented, exchanged, repaired. GORMAN, 79 Nassau St.

Special.—Edison Phonographs and Records; CLEVELAND and TRIBUNE BICYCLES; kodak and camera supplies. SCHNABEL BROTHERS, 153 West 125th St.

TYPEWRITERS REPAIRED BY EXPERTS; rented, sold, exchanged. Telephone for estimate. DURRANT, McLEAN & CO., 265 Broadway.

BRITANNICA ENCYCLOPAEDIA, 25 VOLS., last edition, $22.50; Real Estate Insurance Atlas N. Y. City, 6 vols., $30; bargain; also old books bought. 147 6th Av.

At Eble's Art Gallery, 105 West 42d St., near 6th Av.—Antiques, curios, old jewels, silverware, rare fans, paintings, miniatures, and weapons. Old gold bought.

Desks, Rolltops, Partitions, Railings, Tables, Counters, Shelvings, Safes, Stores, Offices fitted. FINN BROTHERS, 28-32 Centre St.

TYPEWRITERS RENTED, BOUGHT, SOLD; expert repairing. R. & G. TYPEWRITER CO., 202 Broadway. Telephone, 990 Cortlandt.

Typewriters sold and rented; expert repairing done. General Typewriter Exchange, 1 Park Place. 'Phone, 1573 Cortlandt.

Goodyear's Rubber Goods, Mackintoshes, Clothes Wringers, Carpet Sweepers, &c., at lowest prices. Call 105 West 125th St.

TYPEWRITERS—All makes; guaranteed; rented $2, $3 monthly; ribbons, stands free. CENTRAL TYPEWRITER EXCHANGE, 203 Broadway.

HIGHEST CASH PRICES PAID FOR SECOND-hand furniture, carpets, pianos, &c. Address LENOX, 61 West 125th St.

Navajo Indian rugs, blankets, curios, burnt leather pictures, baskets, beaded work, novelties. Riggs, 41 University Place.

F. Sorensen, upholsterer, decorator, 2,071 7th Av., near 124th.—Slip covers cut, made; mattresses made over.

Miss I. Reid, superior hair-dressing; face, bust massage; electric scalp treatment; moles. 54 West 125th.

At 344 6th Av. and 172 West 23d St.—Foot Knitting Co.; stockings refooted; underwear repaired.

The only Harlem Office for Genuine Welsbach Lights, 129 West 125th St., opposite Koch & Co.

Examine Stock. Reduced rates. Going out of business, at 231 Washington Street.

Teas.—Choice teas, 25c. per lb.; choice coffees, 25c. per lb. DUNCAN, 110 Wall St.

For Sale.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

IT WARMS THE LARGest room in five minutes. The Improved Fire Vase Gas Heater for warming rooms and light cooking; fits on ordinary gas burner as easily as a chimney on a lamp; requires no pipe or hose; the gas flame is increased 500 per cent.; no explosion, odor; economical. Introduction price, small size, $1.25; large, $1.50; money refunded within twenty-four hours if not found satisfactory. The KING INCANDESCENT STUDYING LAMP beats any lamp in this market; burner, 100 candle power; double strength mantle chimney and shade. Introduction price, 75c. Mail orders filled everywhere. Sole agents for the improved Fire Vase Gas Heater, and distributers for the King Incandescent Lamp.

1,079 3d Av.,
Between 63d and 64th Sts.

I BUY OLD METAL.
Have you any old LEAD, BRASS, COPPER, ZINC, PEWTER, TEA LEAD, OLD TYPE, ELECTROTYPE, STEREOTYPE, OLD BOOKS, PAPERS? SEND POSTAL CARD. I WILL CALL.
BORNSTEIN, 84 Centre St.

Eye Classes Free
THIS WEEK our opticians will examine your eyes and sell you a pair of our $2.50 gold spring eye glasses for $1, and give you a gold plated eyeglass chain with a safety hook, also leather case, "absolutely free." It's a $3.50 outfit for $1. Spectacles at the same price. KEENE'S OPTICAL CO. 140 Fulton St, New York, (near Nassau St.) Hours, 8 to 6.

Desks, rolls, bookkeepers; tables, railings, partitions, cabinets for typewriters; low prices. Harburger, 454 Canal St., near Hudson.

Credit, diamonds, watches, oil paintings, weekly payments, lowest prices, confidential. MANHATTAN DIAMOND CO., 37 Maiden Lane.

Phonographs bought, sold, and exchanged; cash or $1.00 weekly; gramophone records, $2.50 dozen. 148 East 58th St.

Good paying grocery; established 10 years; East Orange, N. J.; owner has other business. R. F. Morhous, Room 1,409, 150 Nassau St., New York.

Bicycle taken apart, thoroughly cleaned, for $1; repairing, enameling, taken and delivered. TUXEDO CYCLE COMPANY, 27 West 125th.

Worn-out gold and silver bought by R. Longman's Sons, Gold and Silver Refiners, 8 John St.

$10.00 Bargains This Week.—Domestic, New Home, Singer Sewing Machines. Cash buyers. Brown, 39 West 125th St.

All kinds of moving picture machines and supplies at bargain prices. 117 Nassau St., Room 34.

Watches and Jewelry.

WEEKLY PAYMENTS; FINE DIAMONDS, watches; goods guaranteed; lowest prices; business confidential. WATCH SUPPLY, Three Maiden Lane.

EASY PAYMENTS.—Watches and diamonds; reliable goods only. AMERICAN WATCH AND DIAMOND CO., 19 Maiden Lane.

Diamonds, Watches, Jewelry delivered; convenient payments accepted; representative will call. Syndicate Watch Co., 11 E. 14th St.

For best workmanship and reliable goods go to the leading Harlem jeweler, Otto Goldsmith, 114 West 125th St.

LINDO BROS., Broadway, Corner 29th St.—Diamonds, Watches, and Jewelry bought and sold; old Gold bought.

Good Will and Interest for Sale.

Grocery.—Large, light double store, extra large stock fine goods; established trade and a money maker; want to leave the city. 214 St. Nicholas Av.

Religious Notices.

AT TEMPLE BETH-EL, 5TH AV. AND 76TH St., regular Sunday services at 11 A. M. Rev. Dr. S. Schulman will lecture on Conscience.

HOLY TRINITY CHURCH, NEW YORK, LENox Av. and 122d St.—Rev. H. P. Nichols, Rector.—Services, 10 and 11 A. M. and 3:45 and 8 P. M. The Rev. Dr. Brown of Brazil will preach in the morning.

TEMPLE EMANU-EL, 5TH AV. AND 43D Street.—Sunday services for the season will be resumed on Sunday next, the 20th inst., at 11:30 A. M. Dr. Silverman will lecture on "The Vices of Our Time." (1st, "The Lust for Money.")

FIVE POINTS HOUSE OF INDUSTRY, 155 Worth St., William F. Barnard, Superintendent.—Service of song on Sunday at 3:30 P. M. Singing by the choir of children of the Institution. Public cordially invited. Donations of clothing and shoes solicited.

SOCIETY FOR ETHICAL CULTURE, SUNDAY, Jan. 20, 1901, at 11:20 A. M., at Carnegie Music Hall, corner 57th St. and 7th Av. Address by Dr. Felix Adler. Subject: "Gambling Passion and its Consequences." All interested are invited.

Dancing.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

Remey's Central Park Dancing Academy, 915-919 8th Av., (54th St.)—We guarantee the Waltz, Polka, Two-step, Schottische, and Lanciers all for $5.00 in 5 private and 4 class lessons. Private lessons any hour. Classes daily. Circulars.

GEORGE W. WALLACE,
Leslie Rooms, 260 West 83d Street;
Ellerslie Rooms, 80-82 West 126th St.
Class and private tuition. See circular.

Harvard Dancing Academy, 158-162 West 125th.—Waltz, schottische, two-step, polka, lanciers, waltz quadrille guaranteed 5 private, 4 class lessons, $5; 4 class lessons, $1.

Macdonald's Knickerbocker School for Dancing, 44 East 14th St., near Broadway.—Private and class lessons daily; send for circular; receptions every Wednesday and Saturday.

BRADY'S 1,408 Amsterdam Av., 135-137 West 125th St. WALTZ

COLUMBIA DANCING ACADEMY,
59th and 6th Av.—Classes forming; 4 lessons, $1; 24, $5; private, (any hour,) $1. Prof. S. Warner.

Lester's Colonial Academy, 101st and Columbus Av.—Class and private lessons daily; receptions Wednesday and Saturday.

Auction Sales.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

DAMAGED BOOKS.
At 12 o'clock daily and 6 o'clock evenings, at salesroom, 148 Fulton Street, near B'way, there will be sold, AT AUCTION, a lot of the complete works of Darwin, Huxley, Spencer, Tyndall; Appleton's "Applied Mechanics"; art books; Encyclopedias; Warner's World's Best Literature; Historic Court Memoirs, edition de grande luxe, published by the Grolier Society, and a great variety of the standard authors, all in good but slightly soiled bindings; interiors intact and perfect; sale positive and without reserve.
"SPOUTER NEVINS," Auctioneer.

Dentistry.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

Artificial teeth of continuous gum highly improved.—These teeth represent the highest art in dentistry. They restore form and expression to the face. The gums and roof of mouth, without seam or crevice, (all one piece, porcelain on platinum,) are a perfect reproduction of nature, even in color. Dr. DEANE, Dentist, 454 Lexington Av., corner 45th St.; received highest award Columbian Exposition.

Dogs and Birds.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

DOG AND CAT HOSPITAL.
New York Canine Infirmary, 146 West 53d St., H. K. MILLER, Veterinarian.—Treatment, board, washing, clipping of Dogs; exercising grounds; accommodations for country boarders; dogs called for and delivered. Telephone, 851—Columbus.

Boston terrier, (Little Dan,) at stud; handsomely marked fox terrier puppies. Musgrove, 235 West 125th St.

TOY BLACK AND TANS, MINIATURE KING Charles spaniel, female, $35. 331 E. 41st St., basement.

Purchase and Exchange.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

Books of every description bought, sold, and exchanged; small parcels or libraries purchased; highest cash prices paid; call at residences free; send postal. LOVERING'S NEW YORK BOOK EXCHANGE, 823 Broadway, near 12th St. Open evenings.

Household furniture, contents of houses and flats, pianos, carpets, &c. J. L., 113 University Place.

Millinery and Dressmaking.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

Dress cutting, ladies' tailoring, millinery, thoroughly taught; $5 starts you. McDOWELL SCHOOL, 310-318 6th Av. Evening school Monday, Wednesday, Friday. $2.50 starts you.

Europe.

NAPLES, (Italy.)
PARKER'S HOTEL.
English sanitation. Electric light. Lift. Inclusive terms.

Patents.

Inventors—Prosecute your own patent applications; avoid needless attorney fees, delays, unfair treatment; simple, highly indorsed plan; consult ALBERT C. TANNER, 127 Broadway.

Instruction.

20c. per line $4.50 per line for 30 times.

PERNIN SHORTHAND SCHOOL,
WORLD BUILDING.
DAY CLASSES.
EVENING CLASSES.
MAIL CLASSES.
Full course of shorthand and typewriting, three months.
Simplest system in use, therefore quickest learned. No shaded lines, no position for letters, no failures in this system. Used by thousands of stenographers.
Write for circular and sample lesson.
S. L. HAYWARD, Principal.

MANHATTAN COLLEGE,
Broadway and 131st St., New York City.
NAVAL ARCHITECTURE
Studies to begin in February leading to B. S. in Naval Architecture. Growing demand for this course. Regents of the University and Bureau of Construction U. S. N. approve the course.
For Syllabus apply to the Secretary.

HEFFLEY SCHOOL,
243-245 RYERSON ST., BROOKLYN,
receives State University diplomas for business, shorthand and high school courses, and certificates for law, medical, and dental students. It is the only school that fits students for all these credentials; day and evening; begin any time.

SACRED HEART ACADEMY.
Select Catholic Boarding School; thorough academic and commercial course; athletics, military drill; terms moderate; 2nd term begins Feb'y 1st. Address BROTHER AUGUST, West Chester, N.Y.

HOW TO GET STRONG.
Handball, boxing, fencing, baths, &c. Wood's Gymnasium, 6 East 28th St. Entrance, $5.00; monthly dues, $2.00.

REGENTS' Examinations. Central Preparatory School, 18 E. 42D ST. SEND FOR HANDBOOK.

R. D. CORTINA,
ACADEMY OF LANGUAGES,
44 WEST 34TH ST., NEW YORK.
All depts. under celebrated Native Specialists.

A Highway to Practical Literary Culture.—Join the Free Educational Trust League, 25c annually. The John Prendergast Literary Training School, 150-156 Carnegie Hall.

ISAAC PITMAN SHORTHAND; PRIVATE and class lessons; best instruction; reasonable rates. METROPOLITAN SCHOOL, 289 4th Av.

TUTOR.—One or two pupils will be instructed in college preparatory studies by an experienced tutor. Address R. C. S., Box 180, Times.

French Academy, 106 East 23d St.—Also fencing for ladies, boys, girls; $1.00 monthly.

Musical.

10c. per line 3 times 24c 7 times 42c Double for display.

INCORPORATED 1878.
NEW YORK COLLEGE OF MUSIC
128-130 E. 58TH ST.
ALEXANDER LAMBERT, Director.
Private Instruction in Piano, Singing, Violin, 'Cello, and all branches of Music by a Faculty unsurpassed for its excellence.
Special Department for Beginners.
All Instrumental and Vocal Students receive free instruction in Harmony, Counterpoint, Vocal Sight Reading, Ensemble Playing, and free admission to Concerts, Lectures, &c.
The College Building has been entirely renovated and fitted out with 16 new Steinway & Sons' pianos.
STUDENTS RECEIVED DAILY.
CATALOGUE SENT ON APPLICATION.

GRAND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC
256 West 57th St., bet. 8th and Columbus Avs. The foremost musical school; 23 years on 23d St. Special course for teachers and professionals.
Dr. E. EBERHARD, Pres.

FIRST AMERICAN TOUR
of Leipsic Philharmonic Orchestra,
CONDUCTOR,
HANS WINDERSTEIN.
Direction of Mrs. Norma Knupfel, 138 5th Av.

AT 112 EAST 18TH ST.....
.....The ONLY N. Y. CONSERVATORY, 112 East 18th, ...BETWEEN 4TH AV. and IRVING PLACE. The FAMOUS MUSIC SCHOOL.....
.....The FIRST in the COUNTRY. Lessons DAY and EVENING...Years on 14th St. ...GRADUATES PROVIDED with POSITIONS.

Mrs. Henry Smock Boice,
Vocal Instruction, (Monday and Thursday.)
Miss Susan Scofield Boice,
(Westminster Church, Elizabeth.)
Mrs. Lucie Boice Wood, for concerts.
(St. James Church, Madison Av., City.)
Studio 138 Fifth.

VOCALIZATION AND PIANOFORTE.
Highest instruction given by John E. Webster, English Song composer, at his Studios or pupils' residences in New York or Brooklyn. Fees extremely moderate. Salaried Positions guaranteed to clever Vocal pupils. Address 299 Carlton Av., Brooklyn.

C. B. HAWLEY,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION. NEW STUDIO.
489 5th Ave., Near 42d St.

DUDLEY BUCK, Jr.
STUDIO CARNEGIE HALL.

THE BELL SCHOOL OF SPEECH,
BERKELEY LYCEUM,
23 WEST 44TH ST.
MISS MARY S. THOMPSON, Director.

JOSEPH JOACHIM VIOLIN SCHOOL.
GERALDINE MORGAN, Director.
Violoncello and Orchestral Department.
PAUL MORGAN, Carnegie Hall, New York.

ALFRED Y. CORNELL,
TENOR. VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
503 CARNEGIE HALL.

THE HILD CONCERT COMPANY,
Concert, musicales, or church entertainments. Gertrude Ruhlman, contralto; Theo. Wendling, basso, baritone; John Spargur, violinist. Mme. Hild, accompanist and director, 233 East 18th St., New York.

The Repertoire School of Church Music can furnish quartet singers to churches of all denominations. The evening class meets Thursdays, the afternoon class Fridays, at Mr. Dempsey's Studio, 2 West 33d St.

Mme. OGDEN-CRANE,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
STUDIO, 3 EAST 14TH STREET.

S. C. BENNETT,
ART OF SINGING.
PURITY OF TONE A SPECIALTY.
836 CARNEGIE HALL.

Mr. CHARLES LEE TRACY
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Certified Teacher of the Leschetizky Method.
Studio: Carnegie Hall, New York City.

HEINRICH MEYN,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION,
200 WEST 57TH ST.

PERRY AVERILL,
BARITONE,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
220 West 59th St., New York.
Telephone No. 1,097 Columbus Av.

VIOLIN ARTISTICALLY TAUGHT, EITHER residence; terms reasonable; not payable in advance; references exchanged. CHADWICK, 2 Chambers St.

SIGHT SINGING Lessons by correspondence. Send for circulars. MORGAN'S SCHOOL OF MUSIC, 150 5th Av., N. Y.
PIANO TECHNIC, JUDITH MILLER, Pupil of Leschetizky, Send for circular. 251 Fifth Av.

MAX KARGER,
Violinist. Pupils accepted. 489 5th Av.

Carleton Conservatory, 128 West 23d St.—Violin, piano, singing, mandolin, banjo, guitar; lessons, 50c., 75c.; contracts with fine voices; instruments furnished; piano practice, hour, 10c.

ARTHUR D. WOODRUFF, Voice Culture. 136 FIFTH AV.

VIOLIN INSTRUCTION BY JOSEPH GOLDatein, pupil of Cologne Conservatory, Germany. Terms moderate. 250 Sixth Av., Brooklyn.

GUSTAVE REHN! PIANIST!—Desires a few more pupils; thorough instruction; very moderate terms. 1 East 112th St.

MISS GERTRUDE CAMPBELL WILL GIVE INSTRUCTION ON THE PIANOFORTE. Carnegie Hall, Tuesday and Friday Afternoons.

PIANO; LADY, EXPERIENCED TEACHER, instructs at pupil's residence; 40 cents per lesson. TEACHER, Box 80, 1,242 Broadway.

Something New!—Piano taught in 3 months without notes; accompaniments a specialty. Promontory, 150 West 14th St.

JEANNE ARONE, AUTHORIZED BY FLORenza d'Arona to teach her method vocal instruction. 1,219 Madison Av.

Apply to the Music Exchange for everything appertaining to music. Miller Building Broadway and 65th St.

Banjo, Mandolin instruction 10 weeks private lessons free, for annual concert. Dobson, 17 East 125th St.

120 W. 97TH ST., N. Y. CITY.—G. E. Griffith, teacher of singing; director and baritone soloist.

Detective Agencies.

BAYER'S INTERNATIONAL DETECTIVE Agency, former detective Police Department, licensed and bonded, 320 Broadway, Rooms 717-718; telephone 1631 Franklin; all civil and criminal cases attended to by expert detectives; male and female.

Detectives (Licensed)—Shadowing, investigations; confidential; established 1891. Dunn & Jewesen, 150 Nassau St. Telephone, 2389 John.

Auction Sales. | Auction Sales. | Auction Sales. | Auction Sales.

The American Art Galleries,

Madison Square South, New York.

ANNOUNCEMENT EXTRAORDINARY!!

The Undersigned Invite Attention to the Following

Forthcoming Absolute Public Sales.

Events of Unusual Importance and of Special Interest to the Connoisseur, Amateur, and Public in General.

MODERN PAINTINGS

BY PROMINENT

AMERICAN

AND

FOREIGN ARTISTS

BELONGING TO

THOMAS KIRKPATRICK

Discontinuing the art branch of his business.

To Be Sold Wednesday and Thursday Evenings Next at 8 o'clock

AT THE AMERICAN ART GALLERIES

TO-MORROW, (MONDAY) AFTERNOON,

AND FOUR FOLLOWING DAYS, BEGINNING AT 2:30 O'CLOCK, EACH DAY,

ANTIQUE AND MODERN JAPANESE ART OBJECTS,

Weapons, Textiles, Paintings and Curios,

The Private Collection of

PROFESSOR CAESAR CESARONI

SAN FRANCISCO

On Tuesday Afternoon, January 29th,

AND DURING THAT WEEK AND THE WEEK FOLLOWING

AT 894 AND 896 BROADWAY, CORNER OF 20TH ST.

BY ORDER OF

MESSRS. HERTS BROTHERS

ON ACCOUNT OF THE

Expiration of Their Lease and Removal,

MAGNIFICENT FURNITURE,

COSTLY TAPESTRIES,

RICH UPHOLSTERY AND STUFFS, RUGS, WALL COVERINGS, ARTICLES OF VERTU, AND NUMEROUS OBJECTS OF ADORNMENT AND UTILITY

ON EXHIBITION

Four Days Previous to the Date of Sale.

ON THE EVENING OF FEBRUARY 7TH,

By Order of the Executor's,

VALUABLE PAINTINGS

of the

MODERN SCHOOLS

Belonging to the Estate of the Late

EDWARD KEARNEY

ON EXHIBITION DAY AND EVENING

Beginning Saturday, February 2d.

ON OR ABOUT MARCH 12TH

AN EXTRAORDINARY COLLECTION OF SUPERB OLD CHINESE PORCELAINS, ANTIQUE GREEK ART

AND

BEAUTIFUL ANCIENT GLASS

NOT BEFORE PUBLICLY SHOWN.

THE PRIVATE COLLECTION

OF

VALUABLE MODERN PAINTINGS

BELONGING TO

MR. GEORGE N. TYNER,

HOLYOKE, MASS.,

WHICH INCLUDES A NUMBER OF

IMPORTANT WORKS

OF THE

BARBIZON AND IMPRESSIONIST SCHOOLS

To be Sold on the Evening of February 1st in the Grand Ballroom of the WALDORF-ASTORIA.

ON FREE VIEW, DAY AND EVENING,

BEGINNING MONDAY, JANUARY 28TH.

On the Afternoons of February 11th and Four Following Days

AT THE AMERICAN ART GALLERIES

A Grand Collection of

SUMPTUOUS TEXTILES

ANTIQUE SPANISH AND ITALIAN EMBROIDERIES, BROCADES, VELOURS, LACES, AND SILVER LAMPS, EXCLUSIVELY OF THE 15TH, 16TH, 17TH AND 18TH CENTURIES, Productions Not Heretofore Shown in America.

TO BE SOLD BY ORDER OF

VITALL BENGUIAT

OF LONDON,

AN EXPERT OF TWENTY-FIVE YEARS' EXPERIENCE, WHO MAKES THIS SALE FOR THE PURPOSE OF MORE FULLY ESTABLISHING HIS BUSINESS INTERESTS IN THIS COUNTRY.

On the Afternoon of Monday, Feb. 25th,

and Five Following Days,

RARE AND VALUABLE ANTIQUE FURNITURE,

OLD SILVER, BRONZES, RARE MARBLES, TAPESTRIES AND EMBROIDERIES, PAINTINGS AND OTHER VALUABLE PROPERTY

BELONGING TO

JOSEPH BENSUSAN

DISCONTINUING BUSINESS.

During the latter part of March,

BY ORDER OF EXECUTOR,

The Valuable Art and Literary Property

COLLECTED BY THE LATE

PROFESSOR CHARLES E. WEST,

BROOKLYN.

RARE GREEK, ROMAN AND OTHER COINS, SCARCE ENGRAVINGS AND ETCHINGS, ANTIQUES, CURIOS, ETC.

FURTHER PARTICULARS AND CATALOGUES WILL BE FURNISHED BY

The American Art Association, Managers,

6 East 23d Street, Madison Square South, New York.

MAYOR'S WORDS RESENTED

Bridge Commissioners Will Reply to His Criticisms.

SECRETARY BELL'S STATEMENT

Allegations Made at the Board of Estimate Meeting He Calls "Malicious Lies."

The new East River Bridge Commissioners yesterday resented Mayor Van Wyck's criticism. Here is what Mayor Van Wyck said at the last meeting of the Board of Estimate about the commission:

"If only the Commissioners would exercise some of their energy to try and complete the bridge, and not run around trying to buy small pieces of property they would do better, and the bridge might be finished some time."

Here is the answer to the criticism of the commission, made by Secretary James D. Bell, a Commissioner, and speaking after a talk with his fellow-members, President Lewis Nixon and James W. Boyle:

"The statements made at the meeting of the Board of Estimate were outrageous, malicious lies, and known to be so by the men who made the statements. I was appointed a member of the East River Bridge Commission by Mayor Van Wyck, but he can have my place as soon as he wants it."

There was talk yesterday that a special meeting of the new East River Bridge Commission was to be held yesterday afternoon, and the word was passed around that Mayor Van Wyck's criticism would be answered in "no uncertain tones."

Lewis Nixon, Chairman of the Tammany Anti-Vice Committee, did not arrive at the office of the new East River Bridge Commission, but Secretary Bell had a talk over the telephone with him.

The resolution introduced by Mayor Van Wyck and passed by the Board of Estimate is as follows:

Resolved, That the Commissioners of the new East River Bridge forthwith take steps for the acquisition of land by condemnation proceedings, and immediately vest title to the city of property to be acquired for the approaches to the new East River Bridge.

CALLS CRITICISMS IDIOTIC.

Referring to this matter, Secretary Bell said:

"It is a comic resolution of that most serious body, the Board of Estimate. The criticisms of the new East River Bridge Commission are supremely idiotic."

"Will an official reply be sent to the Board of Estimate?" was asked.

Commissioner Bell laughed and said:

"The official copy of the resolution of the Board of Estimate will, I suppose, be sent to this board. Then, of course, an answer will have to be made. Mayor Van Wyck is a member of this commission, and he took part in the official acts condemned by the wise Solons of the Board of Estimate."

Then Commissioner Bell had a hearty laugh at the idea of Mayor Van Wyck introducing a resolution criticising a commission which, as a member, he should take part in answering. Commissioner Bell then said:

"I earnestly hope we will receive an official copy of that resolution. It has raised a good, hearty laugh, anyway. It would be too bad if the official copy of that resolution was not sent to this commission, so that a reply could be sent to the Board of Estimate, of which Mayor Van Wyck is also a member."

"Will Mayor Van Wyck attend the meeting of the East River Bridge Commission and take part in the commission's answer to his criticism?" was asked.

"Mayor Van Wyck has attended meetings of this commission at which matters he referred to were acted upon."

Commissioner Bell then talked of the official proceedings of the East River Bridge Commission in the taking of lands for bridge purposes. He said:

"It was assumed by members of the Board of Estimate, according to the printed accounts, that this commission could enter upon lands needed for bridge purposes four months after an application had been made to the Supreme Court for the appointment of Commissioners of Estimate in condemnation. The fact is that we cannot enter upon the lands until four months after the appointment and qualification of the Commissioners of Estimate by the Supreme Court. In Brooklyn the application was made to the Supreme Court nine days after the application was made in New York County. The Commissioners in Brooklyn were appointed and took office on Nov. 9, 1900, and on March 9, 1901, we can enter upon the lands needed in Brooklyn. The Supreme Court in New York has as yet failed to appoint the Commissioners of Estimate. Maybe the learned solons of the Board of Estimate can explain why these appointments have not been made in New York. Therefore, there is no way this commission can tell when it will get possession of the lands."

"Has there been any delay on the part of your commission?" was asked.

DENIES ANY DELAY.

"No, Sir. The proceedings began on March 29, 1900, when a resolution drawn by the Corporation Counsel was presented to the Board of Estimate, asking for permission to acquire lands needed on both sides of the East River for the approaches and the plazas. The Controller objected to including the lands for the plazas, and the resolution was amended and returned to the Board of Estimate. On July 10 the Board of Estimate passed the amended resolution. The resolution was then sent to the Corporation Counsel, who is also the counsel to this commission, for him to make application in the courts of Manhattan and Brooklyn for the appointment of Commissioners of Estimate. I do not know of any delays or neglects with which this board can be charged, and I wish more of the learned pundits would investigate and find out where the blame lies. The statements made at the meeting of the Board of Estimate are supreme idiocy."

"Does President Nixon feel the same as you do over the criticisms made by the Mayor and the Board of Estimate?" was asked.

"I cannot talk for him. He telephoned to this office and I hardly expect him to attend at the board rooms this afternoon."

"When do you expect to receive the official record of the Board of Estimate proceedings?"

"I rather doubt whether we will ever receive it. I do not see why officials would care to become a laughing stock, especially those who are members of this commission and members of the Board of Estimate also. It may be that we will never receive the official documents so that no official reply can be returned."

Commissioner James W. Boyle, former Tammany leader of the Seventh Assembly District, was also outspoken in resenting the criticism of the members of the Board of Estimate.

"This commission has done its work well and with as little delay as possible. No official can charge that we Commissioners have been derelict in our duty, or that we have not expedited the building of the new East River Bridge in every way in our power. Mr. Nixon is President of this commission, and this may explain some of the criticisms which have been heaped on this commission."

Mr. Nixon made a statement last night in which he said:

"As regards the East River Bridge matter, I have nothing to say other than that the resolution which we were requested to pass yesterday was passed by us months ago. I am satisfied that if I could proceed untrammeled in acquiring property hundreds of thousands of dollars could be saved to the city."

On all the letter paper of the new East River Bridge Commission the name of Robert A. Van Wyck, Mayor, appears at the head of the list of Commissioners. The others are Lewis Nixon, Smith E. Lane, and James W. Boyle, Borough of Manhattan, and Julian D. Fairchild, John W. Weber, and James D. Bell, Borough of Brooklyn.

The present commission was appointed by Mayor Van Wyck soon after he took office. The old commission was appointed under authorization of the Legislature by Mayor Strong. The Tammany members ousted their predecessors from office in an unceremonious manner when they took office.

Mother and Son Buried Together.

There was a funeral of mother and son yesterday from a house at Utica Avenue and Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn. William Dodge, thirty years old, died at the Kings County Hospital on Wednesday of pneumonia. The following day his mother, Mrs. Ann Dodge, died at her home from the same disease. The mother was not told of her son's death. Both were buried side by side in Holy Cross Cemetery.

"It goes right to the spot" where the rasping cough hurts, and cures it—Jayne's Expectorant.—Adv.

New "Dry Stem Ginger" just arrived. It's free from fibre. 60c. a can.

支那 Vantine's 日本

ORIENTALISTS & JEWELLERS.
BROADWAY & 18TH ST.

Third and Fourth Floors.

Material Reductions in Antique Rugs & Carpets From All the Orient.

Many of the Antiques were specially collected for the Paris Exposition, and have never been shown before.

200 Anatolia Mats Worth $5.50. — $3.75

175 Very Fine Bokarahs From 2x4 to 4x5.6 ft. Exceptional value. — $8.00 to $14.00

100 Fine Silky Beloochistans In soft, golden browns, 3x4 to 4x6 ft., — $9 $10 $12 up

150 Choice Cashmeres From 3.6x5 to 5.6x7 ft., — $15 to $22

150 Extra Fine Persian Iran Senna and Shiraz Rugs Averaging 4x6 ft., Worth $60 to $75, — $60 to $75

200 Fine Silky Khiva Bokarahs From 6x8 to 8x10.6 ft., now At $40, $50, $55, $60 up

Also:

74 Turkey, India and Persian Carpets at savings of from $20 to $40 on a carpet At $30, $45, $50, $65, $85 to $120

Very decided price lowering on overdue shipments of:

Fans — Porcelains — Cushions
Pictures — Bronzes — Screens

The New Catalogue sent free: "Objects of Art and Utility."

HOME FOR WOMEN'S WORK

The New York Exchange to Buy Property It Occupies.

Fund of $60,000 Ready to Pay Down—Mrs. Choate Talks of the Exchange's Success.

The New York Exchange for Woman's Work, after twenty-three years of labor and waiting, is to own its own home. On the 1st of February it will hold the title deeds for the property which it now occupies at 334 Madison Avenue.

During its entire period of work the exchange has increased annually in the volume of its business and the amount of money paid to consignors. There has been a notable increase since its removal to its present quarters, a year ago last May, and at the annual meeting on Friday last the large gathering of members of the Board of Managers voted unanimously to purchase the building. It is the property of Mrs. J. P. Kennedy, and was leased to February of this year, with the option of buying. This last month has brought in large contributions, and $60,000, which may be increased between now and the day of the purchase, will be paid down, and a mortgage given for the remainder of the purchase price.

The house is exceptionally well constructed, being built for the occupancy of its original owner. With the purchase of the property, the managers of the exchange will be enabled to undertake alterations which will make it more available for their work. The location, within a short distance of the Grand Central Station, opposite one of the entrances of the Hotel Manhattan, easily accessible to Fifth Avenue, convenient for the exchange's wealthy patrons who live above Forty-third Street, is a valuable one. It was on the advice of some of the best authorities on real estate in the city that the purchase was finally decided upon.

Among the donors to the building fund are:

George F. Baker, Treasurer	$5,000	Miss Grace Scoville	$500
J. Pierpont Morgan	5,000	Frederick Vanderbilt	500
Mrs. William E. Dodge	5,000	Joseph H. Choate	500
William V. Lawrence	5,000	Charles Stewart Smith	500
Charles T. Terry	2,500	James Speyer	500
Mrs. Charles E. Sherman	2,000	E. Ellery Anderson	250
Mrs. C. T. Hamlington	1,000	Cornelius N. Bliss	250
W. G. Choate	1,000	Heber R. Bishop	250
William T. Wardwell	1,000	Isaac N. Seligman	250
		Levi P. Morton	200

"The fact that this work has grown and spread all over this country and abroad," said Mrs. William G. Choate, the founder and President of the exchange, "seems to me to prove conclusively that it has a good foundation and that the work was needed. There are now eighty-five exchanges for women's work, founded along the lines of our organization. Others are constantly making their appearance, and I am at the present time discussing the work with a woman who has spent much of her life in Greece, and hopes to make one more visit to that country and leave a practical benefaction to show her interest in the people. She hopes to start a woman's exchange in Athens, where she says such a work is much needed.

"During the many years of our work we have kept always in mind the best interests of the consignors and have done our best to use wisely, carefully, and conscientiously the money intrusted to us for the benefit of needy gentlewomen. It has been a great educational work, and we have taught hundreds of women the principles of different branches of employment and how to bring them to a state of perfection which would insure their finding a good market. In this way we have lifted many women from abject poverty and placed others on their feet and made them self-supporting. That while making money for our consignors we have not done the same for ourselves is due to the fact that we take only a 10 per cent. commission on the work which passes through our hands. This has been criticised at times by business men, who have no comprehension of the small profit on the handiwork of women. Ours is eminently a benevolent society.

"The work of the exchange is conducted carefully upon a business basis. On the catalogue which we issued last September we made $1,200, money which will go toward the support of the work. From the advertisers' point of view this catalogue has been so successful that we will issue another on the 1st of March. Through the courtesy of a New York merchant we have a supply department where notions of all kinds are sold, and for the convenience of our customers we will take orders for anything that can be found in a large department store. The character of the exchange patrons and donors should be an indorsement of its work to people who have not hitherto been familiar with or interested in the exchange."

HELD FOR SPITTING IN CARS.

Harry Nearman Would Not Stop on Request and Was Arrested.

Harry Nearman of 240 West One Hundred and Fourteenth Street, charged by Henry W. Hardon of 56 Wall Street with spitting on the floor of a Ninth Avenue elevated train in violation of the health laws, was held in $100 bail for trial by Magistrate Hogan in the West Side Court yesterday.

Mr. Hardon, who was formerly an instructor at Columbia University, stated in an affidavit made to Assistant Corporation Counsel Thompson that on Saturday he had remonstrated with Nearman for expectorating in a train in which both were passengers. Nearman took offense at Mr. Hardon's remarks, and, in defiance of the conductor's commands to desist and of Hardon's threats of arrest, continued to spit vigorously in the car aisle. Mr. Hardon learned his name and address and obtained a summons for his appearance in court.

To the Magistrate Nearman said that he had resented the tone in which Mr. Hardon made his request for a cessation of his expectorations, and that he had called at Mr. Hardon's house to apologize, but was denied audience with him. "When Mr. Hardon said he would have me arrested," said Nearman, "I took it as a threat, and to show that I was not afraid I did spit. I was angry, and acted somewhat hastily."

Mr. Hardon showed no disposition to withdraw his charge, and Magistrate Hogan said that he could do nothing but hold Nearman for trial. The latter had no bondsman in court, and was paroled until to-day.

Mr. Hardon stated that he had received many letters commending his procedure in the case. One was from Eastman Johnson, the artist, who said: "I wish as one of thousands to thank you for your public spirit in the interest of common decency as shown in the matter of the vile spitter in cars. I trust you will have the support of enough citizens who are of your way of thinking to bring this matter to such a conclusion as will have the desired effect."

GETS HIGHER DAMAGES.

Verdict in Mrs. Barry's First Suit Was Set Aside as Excessive.

Mrs. Robert M. Barry of Jersey City yesterday secured a verdict of $12,000 in the Hudson County Supreme Court against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for injuries received in a collision near Philadelphia on Sept. 24, 1890. The same jury gave Mr. Barry $3,000 for the loss of his wife's services. The company's defense was that Mrs. Barry was only slightly injured by the accident, and that her subsequent condition was really the result of improper treatment at the hands of Dr. Gordon K. Dickinson in an illness that occurred just before the accident. The testimony of medical experts on this subject occupied nearly five days.

At a previous trial Mrs. Barry was awarded $10,000, but the verdict was set aside as excessive.

CORNELL WOMEN AT LUNCHEON.

President Schurman and Members of the Faculty Their Guests.

The women graduates of Cornell had their annual luncheon at the Hotel Manhattan yesterday afternoon. Nearly 100 were present—a much larger percentage of the Cornell women living in this neighborhood than the men of Cornell mustered at the Waldorf-Astoria one year ago. Miss Elizabeth Carss presided and the invited guests included President Jacob Gould Schurman, Dr. Lewis Stimson of the Cornell Medical School, in this city, and Mrs. A. B. Comstock of the Faculty of the university. The tables were decorated with flowers, ferns, and the Cornell colors.

The hour was midday, but the shades were drawn, so that the lighted apartment bore every aspect of an evening dinner rather than a luncheon—an illusion further heightened by the elaborate nature of the repast. Addresses were made by all of the guests. Miss Ruth Putnam, one of the Trustees of the university also spoke. It was 5 o'clock when the large gathering dispersed.

Stern Brothers

will place on sale to-morrow, a large collection of the Highest Class

French Handmade Lingerie

in Original and Exclusive Styles, consisting of

Chemises, at $2.75, 4.25, 5.95
Night Robes, " $4.50, 5.85, 7.50
Corset Covers, " $1.75, 2.50, 3.65
Drawers, " $2.50, 3.95, 4.50
Flannel Dressing Sacques " $1.90, 2.98, 3.75

Very much below their real value

Dress Goods Sections

250 Pieces Printed All-wool Challies in Navy Blue, Black and Light Grounds with Polka dots and other new designs, Value 50c yd. — 29c

2000 Yards Imported Printed Velveteens in the most desirable effects and shades for house and evening wear, at 48c

2500 Yards 50 inch Plaid Black Cloths in Navy Blue, Brown, Gray and Oxford, Value $1.25 yd. — 79c

Silk Departments Unusual Values

3400 Yards Japanese Corded Wash Silks, at 35c
1850 Yards Colored Crystal Cord Bengalines in the most desirable shades, Value 95c yd. — 63c
2000 Yards Black Peau de Soie and Satin Duchesse, Value $1.38 yd. — $1.00

Cloak Departments Final Reduction of Prices in

Ladies' Tailor-made Coats Double-breasted or Fly-front, Silk Lined, at $6.50, 7.95, 10.25
Golf Capes of English Reversible Plaids, $6.25, 7.50

Ladies' House Gowns Exceptional Values in

Cashmere Regular value $6.00 to 10.00 — $3.95, 5.75, 6.95
India Silk, elaborately trimmed with lace and ribbon, Real value $15.00 — $10.50

Boys' Suits & Overcoats

Well made and of desirable materials
Such values have not been offered this season

Double-breasted Suits of Imported Cheviots, cassimeres and worsteds, 9 to 16 yrs. Heretofore $6.75 to $8.90 — $4.50
Sailor and Russian Blouse Suits of English Serges and Cheviots including a number of styles with extra silk collars and shields, 3 to 11 yrs. — $5.00
Russian and Box Coats of English Kerseys, Vicunas and Cheviots, 2 to 8 yrs, Heretofore $8.90 to $12.90 — $4.95

Lace Departments A Large and Important Purchase of

Real Renaissance Lace Robes Black & Cream at $22.50, 32.00, 38.00, 47.50
Heretofore sold for from $40.00 to $98.50

Black and Gold Spangled Robes Former Price $175.00 — $69.50

Real Renaissance Lace All-overs 18 inches wide, Former Price $5.00 to $10.00 yd. — $2.95, 4.75, 5.50

Ecru Venise Applique Bandings 2 to 4 inches wide, Formerly from $1.38 to $3.50 yd. — 65c, 95, $1.25, 1.75

Ladies' Shirt Waists

In addition to their largely augmented lines of exclusive styles of Imported Batiste Brilliantes, Grass Linen, Madras, Silk and Cotton Mixed Fabrics, White Lawns, Embroidered and Hemstitched Effects

They will place on sale to-morrow

Colored Striped Madras Waists with bishop sleeves and soft band cuffs at 78c
White Embroidered Pique and Lace Striped Lawn Waists with bishop sleeves at 89c

Special Values in

Lace, Net & Muslin Curtains

Ruffled and Fluted Muslin Pr. 85c, $1.25, 1.45
Ruffled Net with Lace Edge and Insertion Pr. $1.25, 1.65, 1.95
Louix XIV, Lace Curtains Pr. $2.95, 5.75, 8.75

West Twenty-third Street

EXHIBITION OF CHILDREN'S WORK

Artistic Examples Will Be Displayed in the Mechanics' Library.

The National Exposition of Children's Work, under the auspices of the Child-workers' Protective Association, an organization having for its object the betterment of juvenile street workers under sixteen years of age, will be opened on Monday, Feb. 18, in the Mechanics' Library building, in East Sixteenth Street.

The Executive Committee, consisting of R. W. Frost, Rossiter Johnson, Magistrate Crane, and Ossian Lang, stated in a circular issued yesterday that the exhibits will include children's handiwork, mechanical and artistic, contributed from all parts of the United States and Cuba. Arrangements are in progress for representative exhibits from Mexico and Canada. The Indian schools will also be represented.

HER SUICIDE PLAN FAILED.

Marie Burtin's Notice to the Coroner Received in Time to Save Her.

Marie Burtin made all preparations for successful suicide yesterday, completing the arrangements by notifying Coroner Zucca to call at 228 East Thirty-fifth Street, fourth floor, front room, and view the dead body.

The Coroner received the letter in his morning mail. It had been posted at 10 o'clock Friday night. Capt. Delaney of the East Thirty-fifth Street Station was notified and sent three men to Miss Burtin's room. They found her lying in bed unconscious. By her side was a sponge saturated with chloroform. She was revived and said she was a dressmaker, without relatives or friends. Her health failing she deemed it best to end at once her struggles against adversity. She will recover.

John Daniell Sons & Sons

Just added, a lot of New Stock to our Women's Muslin Underwear Sale.

Avail yourselves of this opportunity to purchase well-made goods at moderate prices.

MEN'S DEPARTMENT.

Third Week of a Great Unlaundered Shirt Sale.

LOT 1—Fine Muslin, felled seams, 3-ply set-in bosom, reinforced back and front.
At 35c. each; 6 Shirts for $2.00.

LOT 2.—Extra good shirt, Wamsutta and New York mills muslin, long or short bosoms, open or closed fronts, reinforced back and front, linen bosoms.
At 47c. each: 6 for $2.70.

In Ordering by Mail State Size of Collar Worn.

7,000 Dozen Irish Linen Collars and Cuffs.

Made to our special order in the latest and best styles only.
COLLARS, half dozen, 48c.——CUFFS, half dozen pairs, 95c.

Broadway. 8 and 9 Sts.

Le Boutillier Brothers

ARE SHOWING
EXCLUSIVE DESIGNS IN

Figured SATIN FOULARDS

49c., 59c., 69c. and up.

Also

COLORED BENGALINES and SATINS (large variety of colorings) at

69c.

Reduced from prices ranging from 89c. to $1.50 per yard.

Le Boutillier Brothers

West Twenty-Third Street.

Arnold, Constable & Co

Oriental Rugs.

About one hundred Oriental Rugs in odd sizes, from 8x10 feet to 14x21 feet,

30% Reduction.

Broadway & 19th Street.

INVESTIGATING A PROSECUTOR.

Grand Jury in Jersey City Inquiring Into Mr. Erwin's Action in Case Against Freeholders.

It was learned in Jersey City yesterday that the Grand Jury devoted several hours on Friday to an investigation of Prosecutor James S. Erwin's course in procuring an indictment of the Freeholders by a previous Grand Jury for exceeding their appropriations, and then going before the court and procuring a nolle in the case.

The matter was finally postponed until the Grand Jury can inquire as to its powers to compel members of a previous Grand Jury to reveal the nature of evidence taken before them.

Prosecutor Erwin says he has no fear of any investigation the Grand Jury may make. He says that when he procured the indictment of the Freeholders there was prima facie evidence against them that they had exceeded their appropriation. Subsequently he learned that the excess was caused by the payment of bills incurred by a previous board. This made it impossible for him to secure a conviction, and to carry the case to trial would only have been a waste of time and money. For this reason he had the indictment quashed.

NEGRO'S COLD AND PERILOUS RIDE

Found Unconscious on Railroad Car Truck After 29 Hours' Journey.

Stephen Gray, thirty-six years old, colored, of 212 Bowery, Manhattan, went to Florida recently to get work in a hotel. He was disappointed. When his money became exhausted he started to walk home. He finally became tired and secreted himself on the truck of a Pennsylvania Railroad car. In this cramped position he rode for twenty-nine hours, and when the train reached Jersey City soon after 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon he was unconscious.

He was taken to the City Hospital, where it was said he was merely suffering from cold and exhaustion. Under proper treatment he soon recovered sufficiently to tell his story.

YOUNG EDISON'S PREDICAMENT.

May Have to Go to Jail for Not Turning Over Certain Stock.

Thomas A. Edison, Jr., son of the great inventor, may have to go to jail unless he turns over to William McMahon, a promoter, $400,000 worth of stock in the Steel and Iron Process Company, which McMahon says was floated by him for Edison and William Holzer.

McMahon sued Holzer and Edison for the recovery of the stock, and recovered judgment by default. Edison refused to give up the stock on the ground that it was in the possession of Holzer, who is in Europe. He also denied that McMahon floated the corporation.

McMahon then brought his suit, which resulted in having Edison declared guilty of contempt.

FLINT'S FINE FURNITURE

PECULIAR PRICE CHARMS

for our artistic left-overs. But what are "left-overs?" Odd suites and single pieces in rich, beautiful woods, some perhaps painted, carved, or inlaid—all the wondrous handiwork of sympathetic artists. Also Oriental and Occidental rugs, draperies, etc. Lots of room must be made for Spring daintiness that will soon clamor for admission.

Our mark-down revel gives everybody an opportunity to learn how economical it is to

"BUY OF THE MAKER"

GEO. C. FLINT CO.

43 45 AND 47 WEST 23RD ST
NEAR BROADWAY.
FACTORY 154 AND 156 WEST 19TH STREET

WILLIAM CAGGER'S FUNERAL.

Burial Will Be in a Brooklyn Cemetery —An Aunt His Sole Heir.

The body of William Cagger of Brooklyn, who died in Richmond, Va., on Thursday, was brought to Brooklyn yesterday. The funeral will be held from St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church to-morrow morning. The burial will be in Holy Cross Cemetery, Flatbush.

Mr. Cagger's only relative here is Miss Mary Cagger, a cousin, who is in the Sacred Heart Convent at Albany. Miss Treacey, an aunt of Mr. Cagger, who, it is said, will inherit his fortune, estimated at more than $1,000,000, is at present living in Paris.

REQUIEM MASS FOR A NUN.

One Hundred of Sister Graduate's Pupils Acted as Pall Bearers.

A requiem mass was celebrated yesterday in the chapel of St. Catharine's Hospital, Brooklyn, for Sister Mary Gaudentia, a member of the Order of St. Dominic, who died in the hospital on Wednesday last. Sister Gaudentia was twenty-seven years old and for ten years had been a nurse. For the past two years she was in charge of the boys' parochial school of St. Barbara's Roman Catholic Church, at Bleecker Street and Central Avenue. A week ago she contracted the grip, from which she died.

The mass was attended yesterday by six priests, and there were present many of the Sisters of St. Dominic and all the boys of St. Barbara's School. One hundred of these boys, dressed in black, acted as pall bearers. The boys marched ahead of the hearse after the mass to the Bushwick station of the Long Island Railroad. The burial was in a plot owned by the St. Dominic Order in Amityville.

HA Sunday
January 20, 1901

Daily, 1 Cent. The New York Times. Sunday, 3 Cents.

Part Two Pages 17-28

Horner's Furniture.

IMPORTANT REDUCTIONS.

Following our annual inventory, we have reduced the prices on several Bedroom, Dining Room and Parlor Suites, as well as on many single pieces of Furniture, in order to effect their clearance and make needed room for incoming goods——an announcement which means a material saving from regular prices on every suite and piece included in the "mark down."

Houses and apartments can be promptly furnished from our large and unequalled stock, and in any style desired.

R. J. HORNER & CO.,
Furniture Makers and Importers,
61, 63, 65 West 23d Street
(Adjoining Eden Musée.)

ESTABLISHED 1871.

BINDSEIL'S Sacrifice Sale of Fine Furs.

Retiring From Business.

Affords to Purchasers a Saving of 50 Per Cent.

We have a full assortment of FINE SKINS, from which orders will be taken at COST.

Stock still large and being constantly added to until skin stock is exhausted.

ALL BELOW COST.

Goods Made on Premises.

H. S. BINDSEIL,
861 Broadway, near 17th St.

CHICAGO'S MONEY STRAITS

Novel Plan to Mortgage the Water System for $13,000,000.

Smallpox More Prevalent and Likely to Increase—"Divine Healer" Dowie to Have Shoe Factory.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—A novel plan is being agitated to meet one of the most insistent demands upon the city—that of the removal of river obstructions. The proposition is to raise the necessary funds by mortgaging Chicago's water system, its revenue, and its plants. If the Corporation Counsel, after investigation, decides that the water fund may be burdened with this responsibility the bonds will be issued and a speedy clearing of the river will be brought about—independently of the suit brought by the city to compel the Union Traction Company to lower the street railway tunnels and of the plans of the Drainage Canal Board for river improvement.

Mayor Harrison is the author of the suggestion, and broached it publicly to the Street Railway Commission. The only question raised about the scheme was as to its legality. Arrangements for the refunding the debts of the water fund have been under consideration by the Controller and Alderman Mayor, Chairman of the Finance Committee. The Mayor proposes to include bonds for tunnel lowering in this deal. It was decided at the meeting to make the attempt.

The Union Traction Company will be asked to lower the tunnels on condition that if the franchises of the company be not renewed on expiration, the money used in the improvement would be refunded. A second plan advanced was that the River Improvement Association advance the money, to be repaid by the city. No action was taken on these propositions. To refund the debts of the water fund and to include money sufficient for the improvement of the river, will require the floating of nearly $13,000,000 in bonds.

One victim of the smallpox in Chicago, Lieut. Mary Kopische, an officer in the Salvation Army, stationed in the levee quarter, and who is now detained at the isolation hospital, contracted the disease through self-sacrifice of a marked kind. In spite of the exposure to contagion in the tenements and lodging houses, she had refused to be vaccinated. This was not because she did not favor such a precaution, but because she would not risk being made ill by the vaccine for fear it would incapacitate her for the discharge of her self-imposed labor of mercy.

Smallpox is become decidedly more prevalent in Chicago. This is admitted by Dr. Spaulding, chief diagnostician of the Health Department, and he expresses the fear that it will be on the increase for several weeks. Four cases is the largest number reported thus far in a single day. The health officers are more impressive than ever in their plea for the vaccination of everybody. Nearly all of the local cases reported have started with headache and chills, speedily followed by fever and prostration.

The position of auxiliary Bishop of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Chicago, which has been vacant for several months owing to the resignation of Bishop McGavick, is to be given to the Rev. Father P. J. Muldoon, formerly Chancellor of the diocese, and at present pastor of the Church of St. Charles Borromeo. The appointment has not been made officially, but the fact that it has been decided upon has been admitted by assistants of Archbishop Feehan. Upon the retirement of Bishop McGavick, practically all the greater responsibilities of the diocese fell upon the shoulders of Archbishop Feehan, and since he is beginning to feel the weight of his years his close advisers have urged to take steps for the filling of the vacant office. The post is not that of Coadjutor. It is purely a personal appointment by the Archbishop, and is subordinate and not coordinate. The functions of the assistant Bishop are limited to the Chicago Diocese and are not coterminous with the Archbishop's. In other words, the assistant has no authority beyond the frontier of the Chicago Diocese.

John Alexander Dowie, the "divine healer," who has been mobbed in various parts of Australia, America, and Europe, has returned to his thriving Chicago institutions and announces that he is to become an American citizen. The "doctor," who has commercialized faith healing to such an extent that he is many times a millionaire, admitted to a meeting of his followers that he is tired of stowing away in his strong boxes good, hard American dollars and at the same time owing allegiance to Queen Victoria. In addition to this expatriation, Dr. Dowie is going to branch into another industry, that of shoemaking. So that the two infant industries of the City of Zion, which he will erect on the shores of Lake Michigan, near Waukegan, will be an immense lace-making plant and a big shoe factory. The artisans who are to manufacture the lace are now on the way here from the East, having been admitted finally to this country by the Immigration Commission, while local labor will be drawn on to operate the shoe factory. Union workmen, however, the divine healer has announced, will be ignored.

R. B. P.

SIMPSON, CRAWFORD & SIMPSON.

The series of remarkable January offerings shows no slackening. Another week of rarest values.

FRENCH AND DOMESTIC UNDERWEAR.

We shall institute, Monday, a great Single-Price Sale of choice Underwear. The very fact of French Underwear being sold at 85c. is an unparalleled feat of retailing. Taken in conjunction with the elegant new garments of domestic make (models of choiceness and conspicuously dainty) we control a combination of values unequalled at any time, anywhere.

85c. Gives selection from an immense collection of styles, our standard, best shaped, fullest and newest UNDERWEAR. 85c.

French Hand Embroidered Chemise, with plastron fronts, vine effect. French Hand Embroidered Drawers and French Hand Embroidered Corset Covers. — 85c

Gowns—Of Nainsook and Cambric, square yoke, back and front of Torchon, Valenciennes and Point de Paris Laces, fine embroidery insertion and edge—Empire style, yoke of insertion and lace—low neck Gowns, with lace yoke — 85c

Chemise—Nainsook and Lawn Marguerite, with extra long trimmed skirts, solid yoke of Torchon, Valenciennes and fine embroidery — 85c

Drawers—Regular and extra sizes, in Nainsook and Cambric, Spanish ruffle, umbrella flounce, rows of all lace and deep embroidered edge — 85c

Corset Covers—Over 15 models: French; Marie Antoinette; straight front; entire front of lace insertion and strappings; bayadere effects and lace yokes; low neck, with ribbon ties, for evening wear — 85c

White Skirts—All new cut style and fitted tops. Cambric, with Spanish flounce, Torchon insertion and ruffle; or Spanish flounce, with deep embroidered ruffle — 85c

MISSES' UNDERWEAR.

Misses' Drawers, hem and tucks, 1 to 16 years — 15c
The same, with embroidered ruffle — 25c
Canton Flannel Drawers, 1 to 8 years — 12½c
Misses' Skirts, Hemstitched ruffle, 4 to 16 years — 25c

DRESS GOODS IN WOOL.

Colored 54-inch all wool Homespuns, three shades of gray, brown, castor and blue. Readily and uniformly sold for $1.25 yard here, for this one occasion at — 55c

Colored 52-inch all wool Broadcloth and Venetians; show a variety of correct new shades and black. All strong $1.25 values; marked for a day or so at — 95c

Black 46-inch shaggy Camel's Hair Suiting; leads the season's rough fabrics and is commonly sold for $1.00. Doubly inviting at to-morrow's price — 55c

DRESS GOODS IN COTTON.

The Mercerizing process (silk finish) has established itself firmly, and many new cotton fabrics are all the handsomer therefor. Foulardettes and Grenadines aptly illustrate. French, English, Scotch and German makers send charming novelties—Swisses, Organdies, Mouselines de L'Inde, Zephyrs, Madras Linen Shirtings and Skirtings; in fact, more than we can hope to catalogue.

THIS FOR A STARTING SPECIAL.

15,000 yards of Printed Mercerized Foulardettes; silk in design, weave, appearance, and almost in fibre; exquisite silk patterns adorn grounds of most approved shades—nothing in New York approaches them at — 25c

MOURNING MILLINERY.

A display of New Mourning Millinery with an Individual Tone and Character of Refined Elegance.

Trimmed Mourning Hats, Turbans and Bonnets.
Mourning Flowers, Foliage and Ribbons of most select type.
Untrimmed Black Hats—Chiffon, Maline and Chiffon and Silk combinations.

HANDKERCHIEFS.

Some lines are too large, some too small:
In a nutshell, the reasons for these reductions.

Women's 15c. Fancy Swiss Embroidered and Lace Trimmed — 10c
Women's 25c. Linen Lace Trimmed and Swiss Embroidered — 19c
Women's 12½c. Pure Linen Hemstitched — 10c
Men's All Linen Hemstitched, different hem widths — 11c
Broken Assortments of Men's Silk Initialed—wind up at — 39c

A while ago we held a sale of Handkerchief "Seconds" (very trivial defects). There are left, in plain linen, 45 dozen Men's Handkerchiefs, 45 dozen for women. We will take 9c. apiece now for goods that brought as high as 30 cents. 9c.

TABLE LINENS.

No halt seems likely in the upward trend of import wholesale prices. Now and again (as to-day) chances arise—a mill overfilled an order—a jobber failed to ship on time—we saved a slice of usual cost.

Pattern Table Cloths, original silver bleach damask, natural round thread finish:

2 yds. — 1.25 | 2½ yds. — 1.55 | 3 yds. — 1.85

(Bought regularly would sell from 1.65 to 2.25).

TABLE CLOTHS.

full bleach satin damask.
2½ yds., 2.25; value 2.98
3 yds., 2.75; value 3.48

NAPKINS.

21 square, 1.39 per dozen.
24 square, 1.98 per dozen.
24 square, 2.65 per dozen.

SHEETS AND PILLOW CASES.

Such prices encourage heavy buying for both future and present use:

54x90 Sheets — 29c
63x90 Sheets — 34c
72x90 Sheets — 39c
81x90 Sheets — 43c
90x90 Sheets — 48c
90x99 Sheets — 54c
98x108 Sheets — 57c

PILLOW CASES.

42x36 — 10c
45x36 — 11c
50x36 — 12c
54x36 — 13c

JACKETS AND CAPES.

Here is a fair, plain price chart showing in actual, easily verified figures just what our January Cloak Sales mean:

15.00 Jackets bring 8.95
22.50 Jackets bring 14.75
15.00 Capes and Garments, 10.00
30.00 Capes and Garments, 19.75

Let that be the guide, Monday, in place of our usual detailed items. Furs are correspondingly low priced.

"HEPTONETTE" RAIN CLOAKS.

Repel rain—have no odor and no rubber—are comfortably light and thoroughly porous. Driving, travelling or walking, it is all the same—the "Heptonette" virtues apply to every outdoor pursuit.

THE SHIRT SALES NEARLY OVER.

Up to 6 P. M. Wednesday our special January prices on Shirts will hold—positively not a day longer. Those special prices are:

For our famous Columbia Unlaundered Shirts, 6 for $2.50; ea. — 44c
Yale, 6 for $3.75; ea. — 64c
Harvard, 6 for $4.35; ea. — 75c
Dartmouth, 6 for $4.00; ea. — 70c
Premier, 6 for $5.00; ea. — 85c
Cornell, 6 for $5.25; ea. — 90c

Order by collar size and name of brand.

25c. to Close Out 50c. to $1.00 SHIRTS.

Any and every odd lot size and style in Men's and Boys' Shirts laid upon a 25c. separate bargain counter. We want them out. Included are:

Unlaundered White Shirts, linen bosoms, all sizes.
Men's Muslin Night Shirts—Colored Shirts in odd sizes.
Boys' fancy Percale Shirts with separate cuffs.
Early comers are certain of phenomenal bargains.

CORSETS—Closing All Odd Lots.

Omitting our recognized Specialties, every make and brand now in stock that shows broken sizes and colors must be closed out straightaway. This is done in preparation for new Spring lines shortly to be installed. We cannot guarantee all colors or sizes in any particular style. We do most emphatically guarantee unheard of bargains in Corsets from 18 to 36 inches.

BEST DOMESTIC BRANDS—
C. B., R. & G., W. B., Thompson's and Sonnettes,
79c. to close.

FINE IMPORTED—
All the best known brands and shapes,
1.25 to close.

HIGH GRADE IMPORTED—
Choicest models in silk broche, real whalebones,
2.50 to close.

POSITIVE WRAPPER CLEARANCE.

12.50, 15.00, 19.50 for Model Garments that sold all the way up to Forty Dollars.

POSITIVE SILK WAIST CLEARANCE.

2.98 for all the Waists (broken lots) that heretofore, and right along, were $3.98 to $5.00.

POSITIVE FLANNEL WAIST CLEARANCE.

1.98 for all sorts of good kinds—any kind almost—novelty, plain, tailor stitched, in fact, every broken line.

CLOSING GIRLS' JACKETS.

From 4 to 18 years; it matters not what the age or what the Coat desired, our final prices assure greatest economy all around.

15.00 to 22.00 Jackets (14 to 18 years), 10.00
10.00 to 13.00 Jackets (14 to 18 years), in broken lots, 5.95
6.00 and 6.50 Box Coats (4 to 14 years), 3.95

BOYS' CLOTHING---HALF PRICE.

Takes in all Winter Suits and Overcoats remaining. No explanations are needed—this tells everything.

Vestee, Sailor, Russian Suits.

3.00 Suits, 1.50
5.00 Suits, 2.50
6.00 Suits, 3.00
8.00 Suits, 4.00
and so on up the line.

LONG PANTS and 3-PIECE SUITS.

$8.75 Long Pants Suits — 4.38
$10.00 Long Pants Suits — 5.00
(And so on up.)
$4.00 Three Piece Suits — 2.00
$7.00 Three Piece Suits — 3.50
(And so on up.)

REEFERS and OVERCOATS.

$5.75 Reefers at — 2.85
$7.50 Reefers at — 3.75
$5.00 Overcoats — 2.50
$12.00 Overcoats — 6.00
(Higher priced goods at same rates.)

"MOTHER'S FRIEND" SHIRT WAISTS for Boys.

25c. For choice of 75c. to $1.25 Brand new garments.

Why? Because of round collars, no other reason—a fact scarcely worth consideration in face of the price. Indeed, many parents will buy no other style. All are perfect—fabrics, fit, finish—everything about them as attractive and desirable as good making can supply. Sizes 4 to 14 (omitting 9 and 10), patent adjustable bands, all buttons riveted. There are 700 dozen, medium light and dark—none too many, be sure—the demand will be enormous — 25c.

19th St. Sixth Avenue. 20th St.

PERSONAL TAX LISTS.

President Feltner Will Give Them Out After They Are Arranged.

President Feltner of the Department of Taxes and Assessments announced yesterday that the list of taxpayers assessed for taxes on personal property would not be given out for publication until Monday.

The first plan was for President Feltner to give out the assessments levied on about 500 wealthy New Yorkers. The sensational newspapers kept demanding long lists of assessments, and finally President Feltner said that six demands had been made for long lists and that he would have his clerks compare the lists and give out to all the newspapers all the names demanded by each of the newspapers for publication.

President Feltner was incensed yesterday at the publication in a Brooklyn newspaper of statements regarding the taxing of mortgages. He said:

"The stories are all false. It is a great mistake for any one to claim that mortgages are going to be taxed any more this year than they have been during the past fifteen years."

Divorce Granted to James Mitchell.

Justice Lawrence, in the Supreme Court, yesterday granted a decree of absolute divorce to James Mitchell from Alice L. O. H. Mitchell. Mitchell is said to be a coffee broker. He and the defendant were married in 1894 in Rio Janeiro, and she left him a year ago with a man named Arthur J. Smythe, and went to Europe. The suit was not defended, and the papers in the case were sealed up by order of the Court.

MAILLARD ROBBERY CASE.

The Firm's Cashier Exonerates One Accused Man—Burgess's Excuse.

Detective Binnings of the West Thirtieth Street Station, who was placed on the case of attempted robbery in Maillard's, Broadway and Twenty-fourth Street, Friday night, made a second arrest in the case about 4 o'clock yesterday morning. The man arrested was found at Mills Hotel No. 1, and described himself as Reginald Jackson, twenty-seven years old, a clerk. He was locked up during the early morning hours, and was then taken to Police Headquarters. With him on the way to Headquarters was Edward Burgess, who was the first man arrested after the attempted robbery.

The cashier at Maillard's called at the Detective Bureau later and, after looking at Jackson, said that he was not one of the men engaged in the attempted robbery.

Burgess has told Capt. Titus that he comes from the South, and that he had not previously made an attempt of the sort he tried Friday night. He states that he has only been in the city three or four days, and resorted to crime because he was without funds.

When Burgess was arraigned before Magistrate Deuel in the Jefferson Market Police Court he appeared indifferent. When asked by the Magistrate if he had anything to say in answer to the charge he replied, "Not a word." He was held in bail for trial. Jackson was discharged.

HER HUSBAND A CONVICT.

Mrs. Garrett Learned of His Record After He Had Deserted Her.

When Charlotte L. Jones of 479 West Twenty-second Street was married to Henry D. Garrett, in October, 1895, in Jersey City, she believed that he was a reputable lawyer, with offices at 280 Broadway. Her father, W. P. Jones, a business man of this city, had taken the trouble to look up his future son-in-law, and what he learned was eminently satisfactory to him, for he made no objection to the wedding.

The couple after their marriage lived together for more than a year, when Garrett suddenly disappeared. With him disappeared a bank book belonging to Mrs. Garrett's brother.

Subsequently Mrs. Garrett set about learning more about her spouse, and found that he had gone to Canada, where he was arrested and convicted of forgery. He is now serving a three-year sentence in Kingston, Ontario. Mrs. Garrett learned further that her husband had served time before he married her. On these grounds she applied for a divorce, and yesterday Justice Lawrence in the Supreme Court granted her the desired decree.

Bail for Teller Mason.

The examination of J. Provoat Mason, teller of the Continental National Bank, at 7 Nassau Street, who was accused of stealing $12,000 from the bank, which was to have taken place yesterday before Commissioner Shields, was adjourned to next Saturday morning, owing to the illness of Abraham Levy, the prisoner's counsel. Mrs. Jeannette MacConnell, the accused man's mother-in-law, furnished bail in $10,000, and Mason was released from Ludlow Street Jail, where he had been confined since his arrest on Tuesday night.

Fatal Collision of Truck and Trolley.

Conrad Gresmen of 177 Scholes Street, Brooklyn, died in St. John's Hospital on Friday night from injuries received by falling from his truck, which had been struck by a trolley car. Gresmen was employed as a driver by Bossett & Sons, lumber dealers, and was returning to the yard late Friday afternoon, when his truck was struck by a car of the Ravenswood and Queens County Electric Railway on Grand Street. Gresmen was thrown from his truck and landed on his head. He was picked up unconscious and the ambulance surgeon who took him to the hospital said he suffered from a broken skull. Henry Werner, the motorman of the car, was arreated.

Strikers Assault Non-Union Men.

The men who went on strike in the planing and molding mill of Young & Gerard, in Greenpoint, a week ago for shorter hours are becoming desperate. Many of the non-union men employed by the firm have been assaulted by strikers the past few days. Some have been left unconscious on the sidewalk. The police of the Greenpoint Avenue Station were notified of the assaults, and yesterday sent half a dozen men to the scene. No arrests, however, have been made.

HEARN

West Fourteenth Street.

The Great White Sale

has brought and will continue to bring a Host of Surprises, including phenomenal offerings of Muslins, Linens and Towels——a wonderful sale of Curtains;——fine qualities and great quantities of Ladies' and Children's White Wear at far lower prices than others sell the inferior;——together with special reductions in all departments of all the five selling floors, so that, turn where you may,

Extraordinary Values of this Great Sale Are Everywhere in Evidence.

Fruit of Loom Muslins
Jobbers ask eight cents — 4⅞
Above are in lengths of one to ten yards.
FULL 36-INCH GOODS.
No mail orders.

Dwight Anchor Sheets
90x90—wide hem — .49
The wholesale cost of sheeting alone, unmade, is 62 cents.
NOTE.—Genuine Dwight Anchors are known by white label with gilt anchor.....They are famous for strength and even thread that will not wash up harsh—Consider all things good of "Dwight Anchor." It is the standard to judge others by.
No mail orders.

Wamsutta Pillow Cases
"GOLD MEDAL" WAMSUTTAS.
42x36 — .11
45x36 — .12
50x36 — .13
54x36 — .14
No mail orders filled.
Wamsutta Pillow Cases at above prices are like buying Gold Dollars at Seventy-five Cents.

Muslin or Cambric Gowns
High Neck—eight Val. lace insertings, or fine Emb'y insertings and ruffles.. — .59
Ten other styles at same price.
Regular values 60 and 75 cents.

Fine Muslin Gowns
V, Empire or High Neck—Emb'y, Point de Paris or Torchon lace..... — .78
The Best Gowns elsewhere sold at 98 cents do not equal these.

Ladies' Muslin Skirts
Three lace insertings—5 inch edge to match or ruffle of wide embroidery.... — .95
Full width—showy—great value!

Fine Cambric Skirts
Deep Flounce with tucks and elaborate open work emb'y—real value 2.50.... — 1.69

Fine Muslin Drawers
Wide ruffle of good solid emb'y—tucks above or wide lace ruffle with lace insertings; value .50..... — .39

Ladies' Cambric Drawers
Also fine muslin—wide flounce, 2 insertings of Bow Knot Lace or wide ruffle of embroidery..... — .59
BETTER than elsewhere at 69 cents.

Fine Cambric Corset Covers
Inserting of lace or emb'y cluster tucks. — .37
Eight other elaborate styles, all equally excellent value.

Muslin Chemises
Round, square or open front—12 styles. — .49

Extra Long Cambric Chemises
Two insertings and ruffle of lace, ribbon run—trim'd skirt—value 1.25.... — .79

Maids' and Waitresses' Aprons
Fine lawn—emb'd bib and shoulder bretelles—value .59..... — .39

Ladies' Tailor-Made Suits fine cheviot serge—flare skirt, taffeta silk lined jacket, velvet collar—all sizes—value 12.00..... — 8.48

Ladies' Kersey Box Coats
Black and colors—fine satin lining—high collar—tailor stitched strap seams pearl button trim—until now 9.98..... — 5.98

Fine Broad Cloth Skirts
flare flounce—5 rows stitching—silk band finish—value $7.00..... — 4.49

Ladies' Flannelette Wrappers
Extra heavy—flounced skirt—yoke and shoulder ruffles—were 1.24..... — .79

Ladies' Wool Eiderdown Robes
Satin bound collar and cuffs—were 4.98..... — 2.49

Men's Dress Shirts
Union Linen Bosom—good, heavy Muslin Bodies—double stitched and felled seams—well made..... — .29

Men's Cashmere Half Hose
Entire sample line—natural shades and Black—sizes 10½ only—value 29 to 85.. — .24

Boys' Knee Pants
A grand lot of the most desirable styles in strong all-wool Cheviots and Cassimeres—also Gray Corduroy—4 to 15 yrs.—value 69 cents..... — .39

Boys' Double Breast Suits
Desirable Checks and Mixtures—all wool—7 to 16 years—value 2.98..... — 1.59

Girls' Lawn Guimpes
Insertings with tucks or Hemstitching—4 to 12 years—value .89..... — .39

Clearing Sale Girls' Dresses
Cashmere, Henrietta, Cheviot, Zibeline and fancy Camel's Hair Plaids—silk braid or lace trim; were 6.98 to 9.98.. — 3.98

Babies' Christening Dresses fine Cambric—Fancy Yoke, deep lace insertings, tucks and lace ruffle—Skirt has 2 rows lace inserting, tucks and deep lace ruffle—value 1.75..... — .98

Fine Fancy Dimities
New Century styles and colorings—Allovers, Polka Dots and Dresdens.. — 12½
Compare these crisp beauties with OLD styles elsewhere advertised as "25 cent Dimities."

Yard Wide Percales
firm as linen—white and tinted—best styles—value 10 and 12½ cents..... — .5
It may be a mystery how we can sell them for so little, but we do—and that's enough.

Anderson's Scotch Ginghams and other fine Ginghams and Madras—loop, cord, chain, and plain stripes and checks, also plain colors—32 inch—elsewhere 25 to 40 cents—here..... — .19
This season's best styles and tints.

Braid Stripe Taffeta Silks
Violet, Pink, Blue, Cadet, Rose, Green, Cornflower and Helio with fancy Black stripes—value 69c..... — .39

Fancy Taffeta Silks
Silk and Satin Stripes, also Satin Brocades—light and dark—regularly 79. — .59

Black Taffeta Silks
Full yard wide—soft finish—bright lustre—firm texture—regularly 98..... — .69

Special lot Dress Goods
Pebble Cloths, Granite weaves and large Plaids—dble fold—were 49 and 59. — .29

Fine Sateen Linings leading shades—yd. wide—were 25..... — .15

White Domet Flannels
extra quality—regularly 8⅜ cents..... — 4⅞

New Scotch Lace Curtains
This season's best designs—lock edge—white and ecru—regularly 3.49..... — 1.98

Oriental Draperies
Tamative cross stripes—tinted grounds—real value 50 cents..... — .23

Derby Tapestry Table Covers
All colors—2 yards square—tassel fringe—regularly 1.69..... — .98

Table Oilcloths
White, colors, marbleized, oak and grain—1¼ yard—regularly .22 and .24 — .16 and .18
1½ yard—regularly .29 and .32 — .23 and .25

Heavy White Spreads
Full size—Honeycomb and New Pique stripe—hemmed—value 1.50..... — .98

Linen Damasks
Full bleach—63 inch—were .59..... — .39

Turkish Towels
Pure Bleach—50 inches long—were .24.. — .15

Ladies' Emb'd Handkerchiefs used for Decorating, hence slightly soiled—were 12½ and 15 cents...now.... — .9

Great Lace Special
1,000 pieces Fancy Laces—Platte Val, Renaissance, Duchesse and Point de Paris designs—2½ to 6 inch—regular .12 to .19 a yard..... — .9
For Underwear, Curtains and all kinds of Dress Trimmings.

Ladies' Fine Corsets
Extra fine Coutille and Prunelle—straight front and other styles—value 1.00 to 3.75..... — 1.49

26-inch Umbrellas
English Gloria Cloth—fast Black—Natural and trim'd Handles—steel rod. — .79

Ladies' Kid Gloves
2 Clasp—Gray, Tan, Red, Brown, Mode, Black and White—value .79... — .59

Applique Net Collars with rosers—Taffeta Silk Applique on fine net—Black and White—value 1.98. — 1.39

Surah Silk Shopping Bags
Silk draw strings—lined and interlined—regularly 79 cents..... — .59

4½ and 5 inch Ribbons
Silk Satins and Glace Taffetas—best shades—regularly .29 to .35..... — .19

Fine Linen Stationery
"Swiss Cloth," "Court Netherland" and Vellum finish—Cream Blue, Lilac and Gray—quire box—value .39..... — .24

Borine Tooth Wash
Antiseptic—new size—regularly .10..... — .7

Genuine French Briar Pipes
Cellulaid, Rubber and Bone Bits—curved and straight—variety of shapes—were .25 and .35—to clear..... — .9

Chatelaine Bags and Purses

Beaded, Gun Metal, Silver, French Gilt—
Were.	Now.	Were.	Now.
14.98.	9.98	3.25.	2 49
8.98.	6.98	2.25.	1.49
4.49.	2.98	1.49.	.98

Stamped Pillow Shams
two inch hem—Ten designs—were .24... — .15

EDISON'S STORIES OF HIS INVENTIONS

Funny Experiences in Development of His Incandescent Light.

TRIUMPH AFTER MANY ERRORS

Reminiscences of His Experiences in the First Central Station.

From the Electrical Review.

Mr. Thomas A. Edison is not an easy man to find at home. During the day, and often far into the night, he is at the big brick laboratory building in Orange, N. J., and this building is surrounded by a very high and discouraging picket fence, in a remote corner of which is a gate and near-by a push-button. Once through this—and it is hard to get through it—various dragons lie in wait for the bold person who undertakes to interrupt one of the busiest men in the world.

Once inside, the visitor is conducted into a spacious and lofty library, where he waits. Here, after a time, comes to him the genius of the place, and so it was when Mr. Edison talked with one of us the other day, about the starting of the Pearl Street station in New York City and the birth of electric lighting as an industry.

The passing of time has left few marks upon the veteran inventor; perhaps his hair is a little grayer, but he entered the library with a springing step that would have done credit to a boy, and hailed his visitor with a flash of old-time enthusiasm.

"So you want to talk about the old days at Pearl Street," said he. "Well, I hardly know where to begin. It was something like this: the central station idea struck me all of a sudden in 1878. In those days, you know, we had are lamps. I had been down to see Prof. Barker at Philadelphia, and he had shown me one. A little later I had seen another one—I think it was one of Brush's make—and then the Jablochkoff, dynamo, and one or two lamps, was traveling around the country with a circus. At that time Wallace and Moses G. Farmer had succeeded in getting ten or fifteen lamps to burn together in series. It happened that I was comparatively at leisure then, because I had just finished working on the carbon button telephone, and this electric light idea took possession of me. It was easy to see what the thing needed: it wanted to be subdivided. The light was too bright and too big. What we wished for was little lights and a distribution of them to people's houses in just the same way that gas is sent around and burned at your fixture when you want it. I remember, along about then, Grosvenor P. Lowry thought perhaps I could succeed in solving the problem and he raised a little money and formed the Edison Electric Light Company. We started the laboratory at Menlo Park. The way we worked it was that I got a certain amount of money a week and employed a certain number of men, and we went ahead to see what we could do."

MAKING INCANDESCENT LAMPS.

Replying to an inquiry as to how he went at the problem, Mr. Edison laughed and said: "Why, it was easy. It was easy enough to see that the subdivision never could be accomplished, unless each light was made independent of every other. Now, it was plain enough that they could not burn in series, hence they must burn in multiple arc. It was with this conviction that I started. I was fired with the idea of the incandescent lamp as opposed to the arc lamp, so I went to work and got some very fine platinum wire drawn. As well as I remember it was made by Johnson, Matthey & Co., of London. We tried to make the platinum work, but it didn't stand. Then we tried mixing in about 10 per cent. of iridium with the platinum, but we couldn't force that high enough without melting it. After that came a lot of experimenting, covering the wire with oxide of certum and a lot of other things such as the Welsbach people use nowadays. Then I got a great idea; I took a cylinder of zirconia and wound about 100 feet of the fine platinum wire on it, coated with magnesia from the sour nitrate. What I was after was getting a high-resistance lamp, and I made one in that way that worked up to forty ohms, but the durned oxide developed the phenomena that Dr. Nernst has run up against lately—I didn't see it then as he does now—and the lamp short-circuited itself.

"After that," continued the inventor, warming to his subject, "we went fishing around and trying all sorts and shapes of things to make a filament that would stand. We tried silicon and boron and a lot of things that I have forgotten now. The funny part of it was that I never thought in those days that carbon would answer, because a fine hair of carbon was so sensitive to oxidation. Finally I thought I would try it because we had got very high vacua and good conditions for it. There were quite a lot of us in those days that used to talk things over together at Menlo Park. There was Charlie Hughes, Ludd Bachelor, and Upton, and poor Kruesi. C. S. Bradley came with us a little later, on our central station work.

SIMPLE CARBON THE THING.

"Well, we sent out and bought some cotton thread and carbonized it and made the first filament. We had already managed to get pretty high vacua, and we thought maybe the filament would be stable. We built the lamp and lighted it; it lit up, and in the first few breathless minutes we measured its resistance quickly and found it was 25 ohms—all we wanted. Then we sat down and looked at that lamp; we wanted to see how long it would burn, where was the problem solved—if the filament would last. The day was—let me see—Oct. 21, 1879. We sat and looked and the lamp continued to burn, and the longer it burned the more fascinated we were. None of us could go to bed, and there was no sleep for over forty hours; we sat and just watched it with anxiety growing into elation. It lasted about forty-five hours, and then I said, 'If it will burn forty hours now, I know I can make it burn a hundred.'

"There we were. We saw that carbon was what we wanted; the next question was what kind of carbon. I began to try various things, and finally I carbonized a little strip of bamboo from a Japanese fan and found that that was what we were seeking."

FIRST DISPLAY OF THE LAMP.

It was evident that Mr. Edison was pleased as he recalled these early days of the incandescent lamp and the joy of creation that he must have felt in reaching his desideratum at last, but the lamp was by no means all. He continued: "I had the central station in mind all the time. I wanted to use 110 volts. Now, there is no use for you to ask me why, because I don't know, but somehow that figure stuck in my mind, and I had calculated that, if we could get the voltage that high, the copper cost would be somewhere within sight. I got an insurance map of New York City. Did you ever see one? Many big fat volumes, full of plates, with every elevator shaft, and boiler, and house top, and fire wall in town set down and duly colored in its place. I laid out a district, and figured out an idea of the central station to feed that part of the town from just south of Wall Street up to Canal and over from Broadway to the East River; but what I wanted to know was whether my lamps could be made in quantity and depended upon. We went to work and made up a lot of them. W. J. Hammer had charge of the tests, and they seemed to work out all right. Then it was that we invited the Board of Aldermen out to Menlo Park." Here Mr. Edison chuckled. "It was a great day," he said, "or a great night, rather. I have forgotten the exact date, but it was either the 2d or 3d of January, 1880. The Aldermen came out in special train from New York, and the first thing they saw were the streets of Menlo Park all lit up with incandescent lamps. You know," he explained, apologetically, "that there was a land speculation out there then. We had the lamps strung along on two big wires, and we could light or extinguish one without affecting the others, and this was a thing that seemed magic to the Aldermen. I remember that Mr. Hiram Maxim was at this exhibition."

From the way he smiled at the remembrance Mr. Edison must have enjoyed the Aldermanic visit. He went on: "The station idea was still mighty strong with me. Why, I knew where every hatchway and bulkhead door in that district of New York was, and what every man paid for gas. How did I know? Simplest thing in the world. I hired a man to start in every day about 2 o'clock and walk around through the district noting the number of gas lights burning in the various premises; then at 3 o'clock he went around again and made more notes, and at 4 o'clock, and every other hour up to 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning. In that way it was easy enough to figure out the gas consumption of every tenant and of the whole district. Other men took other sections. Simple, wasn't it?

"I found there were 750 freight hoists. Like Sellers, I figured, every one would have a motor.

AFTER "IMPOSSIBLE" ENGINES.

"We were now fairly committed to the lighting project and started in to build a central station. You can't imagine how hard it was. There was nothing that we could buy or that anybody else could make for us. We built the thing with our hands, as it were. We went to work at Menlo Park and started a lamp factory. Poor Kruesi [Mr. Kruesi died recently] was set to work making the tubes over in Washington Street, and we hired a kind of second-class machine shop in Goerck Street and there started out to make the dynamos. We went at it with our own money and credit." Here Mr. Edison's eyes twinkled and he said: "I believe it was mostly credit. Anyhow, we struggled along and we got the money put up for the Pearl Street station by starting the New York Edison Illuminating Company. I planned out the station and found where it ought to go, but we couldn't get real estate where it was wanted. Why, man, they charged us $75,000 apiece for two old bum buildings down in Pearl Street, where we finally settled. I tell you, it made my hair stand on end. We had very little room and we wanted a big output. There was nothing else for it but to get high-speed engines, and, as you know, there were no high-speed engines in those days. I had conceived the idea of a direct-coupled machine and wanted to hitch the dynamo direct to the engine without belting. I couldn't see why, if a locomotive could run at that speed, a 150-horse power engine could not be made to run 350 turns a minute. The engine builders, when I asked them about it, held up their hands and said 'Impossible!' I didn't think so. Finally I found C. H. Porter and I said to him: 'Mr. Porter, I want a 150-horse-power engine to run 700 revolutions per minute.' He hemmed and hawed a little while and finally agreed to try to build it—if I would pay for it. I believe he charged me $4,200 for it. He got it finished finally and sent it out to the Park and a fellow of the name of Ennis along with it. He was one of the nerviest chaps I ever saw. We set the machine up in the old shop and on him had some idea of what might happen, so we tied a chain around the throttle valve and ran it out through a window into the woodshed, where we stood to work it. Now, if you remember the old shop you know it stood on top of one of those New Jersey shale hills. We opened her up and when she got to about 300 revolutions the whole hill shook under her. We shut her off and rebalanced and tried again, and after a good deal of trouble we finally did run up to 700, but you ought to have seen her run. Why, every time the connecting rod went up she tried to lift that whole hill with her! After we got through with this business we tamed her down to 350 revolutions, (which was all I wanted,) and then everybody said, 'Why, how beautifully it runs, and how practicable such an engine is.' Now, don't you know, I knew they would say that. Didn't you ever find out that trying to do the impossible makes about half the impossible seem easy?

"We closed a deal for six engines, and I went to work in Goerck Street to build the dynamos on to them. Of course, we built them by guesswork. I guessed at 110 volts—and didn't guess enough. That's why, if you want to know, the extra pole pieces were put on those old machines. They managed to lift the voltage to what I wanted."

THE START AT PEARL STREET CENTRAL STATION.

Going back to the Pearl Street station idea, Mr. Edison said: "While all this was going on in the shop we had dug ditches and laid mains all around the district. I used to sleep nights on piles of pipes in the station, and do you know I saw every box poured and every connection made on that whole job? There wasn't anybody else who could superintend it.

"Finally we got our feeders all down and started to put on an engine and turn over one of the machines to see how things were. My heart was in my mouth at first, but everything worked all right and we had more than 500 ohms insulation resistance. Then we started another engine and threw them in parallel. Of all the circuses since Adam was born, we had the worst then! One engine would stop and the other would run up to about a thousand revolutions, and then they would seesaw." Mr. Edison's eyes twinkled with animation at the thought.

"What was the matter? Why, it was those durned Porter governors! When the circus commenced the gang that was standing around ran out precipitately, and some of them kept running for a block or two. I grabbed the throttle of one engine and E. H. Johnson, who was the only one present to keep his wits, caught hold of the other and we shut them off. Of course, I discovered then that what had happened was that one belt was running the other one as a motor. I then put up a long shaft, connecting all the governors together, and thought this would certainly cure the trouble, but it didn't. The torsion of the shaft was so great that one governor still managed to get ahead of the others. Well, it was a serious state of things, and I worried over it a lot. Finally I went down to Goerck Street and got a piece of shafting and a tube in which it fitted. I twisted the shafting one way and the tube the other as far as I could and pinned them together. In this way, by straining the whole outfit up to its elastic limit in opposite directions, the torsion was practically eliminated, and after that the governors ran together all right.

SOME TRIALS IN EARLY LIGHTING OPERATIONS.

"About that time I got hold of Gardiner C. Sims and he undertook to build an engine to run at 350 revolutions and give 175 horse power. He went back to Providence and set to work and brought the engine back with him to the shop. It worked only a few minutes, when it busted. That man sat around that shop and slept in it for three weeks until he got his engine right and made it work the way we wanted it to. When he reached this period I gave orders for the engine works to run night and day until we got enough engines, and when all was ready we started the engines. The date was Sept. 4, 1882—a Saturday night. That was when we first turned the current on to the mains for regular light distribution, and it staid on for eight years, with only one insignificant stoppage. One of those first engines that Sims built ran 24 hours a day, 365 days in the year, for over a year before it was ever stopped."

Questioned about the details of the work in those now ancient days, Mr. Edison said: "Of course, we had the whole thing to design in gross and in detail and everything to standardize. There were meters, safety catches, fuses, and all the rest of it, but somehow we managed to work it out. At first we had horrible mismanagement. The only cause for quietness that such a concern had was its ability to make money, and we didn't seem to make any at first. Finally I went to Chinnock—of course you know who C. E. Chinnock is—and told him that if he would take hold of the thing and make it work I, personally, would give a good bonus besides his salary. Well, Sir, that man pitched in, and inside of eight or nine months had earned and received his bonus.

"I don't remember who it was that wanted to connect in a lot of places that used the light only occasionally, but some such establishments were on our mains, and one of them was the Stock Exchange. Now, the Stock Exchange isn't lighted very often, and there were a good many lamps there. I remember that one day—along in the holidays, I think it was—we were loaded pretty well up to our limit, and I was terribly afraid that that Stock Exchange would have its lights turned on and overload us irretrievably. I was in that part of the town, and all at once noticed that the Exchange people had turned on their lights. I got to a telephone and called up Chinnock and asked him how things were.

"'How is it with you at the station?' said I.

"'Oh, bully,' says he.

"'Are the machines standing up to it?' I asked him.

"'Sure,' says he; 'but everything's red-hot, and the ammeter has made two revolutions!'"

PRIMITIVE METERS IN COLD WEATHER.

Mr. Edison went on to recount some of the details of the work. Those were the days of the old chemical meter, which, as every one remembers, contained two jars of a liquid solution which might, of course, if the weather became cold enough, freeze. "Those meters," said the inventor, "gave us a good deal of apprehension. I was afraid they would freeze, especially in the water-front neighborhood, where the commission houses are. You know those people there keep the front door open all the year round, and it gets pretty cold inside their places in the Winter time. So I went to work and put an incandescent lamp in each meter case, with a thermostat strip that would make a contact through the lamp when the temperature fell to 40 degrees. Well, you ought to have seen the trouble that that simple thing got us into. There came along a cold snap of weather, and the first thing I knew the telephone began to ring about every five minutes and people would say:

"'Our meter's red hot; is that all right?'

"Then another one would call up and say:

"'Our meter's on fire inside and we poured water on it. Did that hurt it?'"

Asked about measuring instruments and methods of keeping the station up to an accurate and uniform voltage, Mr. Edison said: "Voltmeters? We didn't have any. We used lamps. Once, down there, we found our insulation resistance had gotten down to 100 ohms; the Directors seemed to be scared, but I told them that if it didn't get below one ohm we were all right. I used to have a good deal of trouble with mathematicians at that time, but I found after a while that I could guess a good deal closer than they could figure, so I went on guessing. Why, in our early work there we used to hang up a shingle nail, tie it on a string alongside one of the feeders, and use that for a heavy current ammeter. It worked all right. When the nail came close to the feeder we screwed up the rheostat a little and kept the lamps in the station looking about right.

"That was the time that I conceived the notion of pressure wires running back from the distribution centres of the various feeders. You know, in those days," Edison said with an apologetic smile, "our lamps weren't rugged at all. What they wanted was just 110 volts, and not another volt.

"Yes, we were a good deal troubled with getting fixtures and sockets and small trimmings of that kind built right. Bergmann had a little place on the east side where he made gas fixtures, and he went into making sockets and fixtures for us and did well with them."

DEVELOPING THE DYNAMOS.

Here the conversation turned to days even older than those of the Pearl Street station, and we talked a while about dynamo building in the Dark Ages. "When I started making dynamos," Mr. Edison said, with an introspective look, "I was told that to get the best effects the resistance of the machine must be equal to that of its load! Did you ever hear of such foolishness? I thought it was darned strange to lose half of the energy I generated in the machine, because what I was after was to get the stuff out and sell it! I had an old Gramme machine, and I worked over it. It had a terribly high resistance. I figured out that if one turn on that armature would give one volt, the way she stood, by making great big magnets I could get more volts. I went ahead on that line, and remember I made one little machine that had a small armature about as big as your fist and about two tons of cast-iron in its field magnets. It might not look like much to-day, but it worked all right when the outside resistance was thirty times as big as that in the machine. That was what started me on the large field magnets. I remember at a dinner on the other side talking to Werner Siemens and Hefner von Alteneck and telling them that what we needed was a great big magnet to bring the juice out of the armature. They agreed with me, but," and here he chuckled, "do you know, both of them said they had thought of it before? When I got back I went to work and made my magnets big and made them long—made them too long, as Dr. Hopkinson found out for me. It was a great man and understood the job. He figured out that making the magnets short and cutting down the air space was the thing, and he was right. After all, in those days all of us were guessing—and I happened to be a pretty good guesser."

EDISON'S BRIGHT ASSISTANTS.

We were led to speak at this point of the recent death of Mr. William R. Moore, who was once associated with Mr. Edison. This started Mr. Edison on some reminiscences of the hunt for materials for the filaments at the time when bamboo seemed the most promising. "Why," said he, "I sent a school teacher from Orange—I have forgotten his name—to Sumatra, and another fellow up the Amazon. He got stuck somewhere up there, but worked his way over to Bolivia, through or back. Finally, Moore went to Japan and got the real thing there. We made a contract with an old Jap to supply us with the proper fibre, and that man went to work and cultivated and crossfertilized bamboo until he got exactly what we wanted. I believe he made a fortune out of it. I tell you, in those days the boys hustled hard. One man went down to Havana, and the day he got there he was met with the yellow fever and died in the afternoon. When I read the cable message that told of it in the shop about a dozen of the boys jumped up and asked for his job! Those boys were a bright lot of chaps, and sometimes it was hard to select the right ones for a particular piece of work. I once got an order from England to send over fifteen men expert in telephone work, so I went to work and rigged up some telephones and did all sorts of things to 'em. I would stick the point of a jack-knife through the insulation in spots and cut a wire, and in various ways introduce 'bugs' into those instruments before they were set to work to find out what was the matter with them. If a fellow could find out ten times inside of ten minutes what the various troubles were he got his passage paid and was started. About one out of three of the boys managed to stand this test, and I believe that every one of them who went abroad made money. This was back in 1878 or 1879."

TELEPHONE AND ELECTRIC RAILWAY.

Asked about his early inventions before he began to work on the electric light problem, Mr. Edison said, "When I struck the telephone business the Bell people had no transmitter, but were talking into the magneto receiver. You never heard such noise and buzzing as there was in those old machines. I went to work and monkeyed around and finally struck the notion of the lampblack button. The Western Union Telegraph Company thought this was a first-rate scheme and bought the thing out, but afterward they consolidated and I went out of the telephone business."

Asked about the invention of the fuse wire, Mr. Edison laughed as he recalled the first occasion for its use. "Why," he said, "the night those Aldermen came out to Menlo Park I figured that an interruption would be serious, and had thought out the scheme of putting some fine copper wire in as fuses in various places. There was a fellow in the party—I won't mention his name—and he had a little piece of heavy wire in his hand. While the Aldermen were looking at some lamps strung between two bare mains this fellow walked up and short-circuited the mains with his velox. I believe I was the most surprised man of the party, because only three lamps went out. The reason that led me to think of the fuse wire was that we weren't flush of dynamos in those days. I had burned out two or three and I saw that something was needed to prevent that happening again. After my experience with my short-circuiting friend, I had fuses put in all over."

The talk turned to the early days of the electric railway, and Mr. Edison said: "Yes, I was in that, too. I had a three-mile road out there in 1883, and we used to pull freight cars up to the laboratory on it. We made as much as forty miles an hour at times. Now that railroad project seemed to me to be a mighty good thing. You know I had a Board of Directors in those days—men with bulging foreheads—fellows that thought away ahead into the future, and I went at work and carefully elaborated all the ideas I had for electric railways and submitted them to the board. They considered the subject carefully and fully, and unanimously decided that there was no money in the electric railroad, and that they would let it alone!

SOME INVENTIONS THAT WERE NOT WANTED.

"What was my first electrical invention? You would never guess. It was a machine to record votes in Congress. It was a mighty good invention. I had a lot of iron type, each member's name being set up in a line, and these lines were controlled by push buttons and electro-magnets, so that each man could bring his name up on the 'yea' side or the 'nay' side, as he pleased. I used chemically sensitized paper to record them, and the thing worked fine. A brother telegraph operator named Sam—I have forgotten the rest of his name—and myself were dead sure that we were going to make $50,000 out of it. He took the thing before a Congressional committee, and the first thing they told him was that if there was anything on earth the members of Congress did not want it was just that kind of thing, because the only right the minority had was to delay the game! After that experience, which was in 1869, I knew enough not to invent anything again until I was sure it was wanted."

Going back to his own early history and the story of his connection with the electrical field, Mr. Edison said that one of the first things he went into was a messenger call box, or domestic telegraph system. "We got the thing into shape," he said, "and made 200 instruments, and then sent two men out to get subscribers, but they tramped around without avail day after day, and our hopes sank and sank further and further. Finally a man named Brown came along, and the first day he tackled the job he got six. This sent our hopes up again, and after he got the lines loaded up with subscribers we sold the scheme out and realized a good profit on it. After that I worked out the stock ticker.

"What were my principal patents? Good gracious, man! Oh, you don't mean patents—inventions? Why, first and foremost, the idea of the electric lighting central station; then—let me see, what have I invented? Well, there was the mimeograph, and the electric pen, and the carbon telephone, and the incandescent lamp and its accessories, and the quadruplex telegraph, and the automatic telegraph, and the phonograph, and the kinetoscope, and—I don't know—a whole lot of other things."

NAVAL SALUTES MAY BE FIXED BY CONFERENCE

Different Regulations Among Powers Often Lead to Friction.

NATIONS JEALOUS OF RIGHTS

Origin of Saluting with Guns—United States' Struggle for Recognition—The American National Salute.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Our new navy has grown conscious of its fuss and feathers and right to speak up in matters pertaining to nautical fashion and ceremony; and the Navy Department purposes starting the new century and the year by inviting an international conference to discuss the methods and amenities of future maritime ceremonies.

To the layman this may seem to needlessly dignify a frivolous side of naval life, but to the naval man intrusted with the responsibility of upholding the honor of his country's flag on every sea the question has a very serious side. While the commanding officer of to-day is in no sense the swashbuckling trouble hunter of the past, still he does carry the wee-est sort of a chip upon his shoulder when it comes to the point of personal salutes in his official capacity, for recognition then is but another form of national recognition, and of that he cannot be too particular.

We can all recall the instance of a few months ago when the second flag officer of our fleet in the Orient was saluted with two guns fewer than those allowed his grade by our regulations. According to the British regulations the saluting English ship, in honor of the small honors of a Rear Admiral, not Commander in Chief. Had he been the latter, by their regulations, he would have received two guns more—the number prescribed by us for any Rear Admiral without regard to his being first, second, or third in command. It is easy to see how a mishap of this sort, under strained relations, might engender a feeling easily conducive to strife, and it is needful that something be done to secure uniformity for harmony's sake, especially when a station is dignified by three flag officers, as our Asiatic fleet soon will be.

The German, Italian, and Austrian practices agree with ours, the Admiral receiving 17 guns, the Vice Admiral 15 guns, and the Rear Admiral 13. The Russian regulations are different, providing 19 guns for the Commander in Chief of the navy, 17 for Admiral in command of fleet or squadron, 15 for Vice Admiral or chief in command of a fleet or squadron, and 13 for a Rear Admiral if chief in command of a fleet or squadron, and two guns less when the officer is not in command or only second in command. The French regulations are somewhat more complex, the flag officers receiving fewer guns at home than when abroad, and all flag officers second in command abroad receive two guns more when not in sight of their Commander in Chief. On foreign stations the Admiral, Commander in Chief, receives 19 guns, the Vice Admiral when Acting Admiral 17, and 15 when chief in command of a fleet or squadron, while a Rear Admiral, chief in command, receives 13. The difference between the home and the foreign French salute is said to lie in an effort toward economy, but it is more likely to be due to the domestic perpetuation of a historical practice, just as the Chinese internationally follow the general European salutes, while never exceeding three guns domestically, the custom from time immemorial.

The British rule prescribes 17 guns for the Admiral of the fleet, 15 guns for Admiral, 13 guns for Vice Admiral, and 11 guns for Rear Admiral, and flag officers acting as Commanders in Chief receive two guns more.

Without going into the further refinements of all these regulations, of which there are many, it is easy to see how difficult is the task of the saluting officer when new to the station, for the arriving ship must salute first, beginning by saluting the national flag or the flag of the senior flag officer present representing the nation, and then following by doing the honors to the flag officers present of other nations, taking them in turn according to rank and agreeably to their national regulations. It was just such a thoroughly mixed-up state of affairs that existed at the mouth of the Pei-ho last year, and it is to avoid further mistakes and to reconcile all the regulations that the Navy Department proposes a conference.

DIFFICULTY OF LONG STANDING.

Pretty nearly 100 years ago the powers foresaw the consequences of difference in salutes between nations, and a protocol of the conferences at Aix la Chapelle in 1818 suggested that as "doubts having arisen touching the principles to be observed in regard to sea salutes, it has been agreed that each of the courts signatory of this protocol transmit to the ministerial conference at London the regulations observed by them up to the present in the matter, and that afterward the other powers be invited to communicate similar notions in their behalf, in order to devise general regulations in the matter." This document was signed by no less distinguished personages than Metternich, Richelieu, Nesselrode, Castlereagh, Hardenberg, Capo d'Istria, Wellington, and Bernstorff, but search fails to show that anything came of it.

The origin of salute with guns dates back at least four centuries, and, in the beginning, it was not what might be termed properly a salute. It was the practice then as it was with us in time of war during the days of our muzzle-loading ordnance, to keep some if not all of a ship's guns charged and ready for immediate service. Coming within range of a friendly power's forts or superior squadrons, it was the custom for the approaching vessel or lesser fleet to discharge all loaded guns to manifest by that voluntary act submission and peaceful intent. In those days the compliment was incomplete if the guns were unshotted, and instance upon this later wrought harm and havoc when the salute was ill-timed and the ships near enough to be hit. And even long after this dangerous courtesy had become to a great degree obsolete, the practice was revived at times of great fervor, and for a long time after warships ceased to salute in that way. It was considered the proper acknowledgment of merchantmen to a naval craft's return of a merchantman's salute.

From the wholesale discharge of a weaker or visiting ship's battery the custom lapsed into a formal or perfunctory greeting of one, three, or five guns, and later grew to a firing of three, five, or seven pieces. It will be noticed that odd numbers were the rule, and the same is the custom to-day. The superstitious mariners of centuries back had a dread of even numbers, and they were never used in greeting, save to tell of death aboard the vessel. The ancient nautical funeral honors all prescribed an even number of guns, but with us to-day the custom is to give the dead officer the number of guns allowed his grade in life only they are to be fired as minute guns instead of in the usual rapid saluting order.

In the lusty times of Elizabeth and right on down to the beginning of the eighteenth century British Captains carried the question of salute with a high hand, especially in what they were pleased to term the "narrow seas." More than one diplomatic mission was nearly upset by the high-handed conduct of these gentry, and we are told that the Spanish Admiral bringing Philip of Spain to England in 1554, was minded of the salute he should fire by round-shot sent through his rigging by the irate English Admiral. From a feature of friendly submission, the salute with guns evolved into the lightest of compliments and added noise for convivial meetings long before pretty severe regulations were passed putting an end to all but the courtesies prevalent to-day. In 1628 the fleet lying at Portsmouth, England, shot away £100 worth of powder in one day in drinking healths, every toast being punctuated by a discharge of cannon. In one British gunner's account we find: "One faucon when the master's wife went ashore. * * * One minion the master commanded to be shot off to a ship his father was in. * * * We shot two faucons in healths and three when Master Newton went ashore," and of another gunner it was remarked: "He cannot write, yet presents the account here inclosed," in which you see the King's powder spent in salutations of ketches and oyster-boats. In 1627, of the 653 lasts of powder issued to English forts during the two years preceding the June of that year, no fewer than 300 had been spent in saluting.

Some time during the reign of Charles I. the twenty-one-gun salute was established for the King and his flag. Just why this number should have been settled upon it is difficult to say, but as the maximum number for a great many years was seven, with five and three as complimentaries, it can be justified by naval expansion.

For many years, because a ship carried more guns than the average fort, it was the custom for the ship to give several more guns in salute; as the ships grew in might the forts likewise were made larger, and this thing went on until we find regulations prescribing seventeen instead of seven guns for the Admiral, fifteen instead of five for the Vice Admiral, and thirteen instead of three for the Rear Admiral. With a spirit of thrift upon them, it is easy to understand the regulation that followed allowing nineteen to the Admiral of the Fleet and twenty-one for members of the royal household. The example set in this thing by the British easily explains the practical uniformity following later in Europe—for the British as masters of the sea would give no honors in excess of those to their own crowned heads.

As for us, we inherited, of course, the British practices, but it was a long time before we could enforce them abroad in recognition of our flag. The first instance of international recognition of our flag was that gained by John Paul Jones in 1778. On the 13th of February of that year he anchored in Quiberon Bay at a considerable distance from the French squadron, commanded by M. de Lamotte-Piquet. Jones informed the French Admiral by note that he was the superior sea officer belonging to the United States of America then in European waters, and that he purposed saluting the French flag if M. de Lamotte-Piquet would return it with an equal number of guns. M. de Lamotte-Piquet answered that he would return the salute in the same manner as the French returned the Dutch or any other republican salute, namely, with four guns less. After some hesitation Jones fired thirteen guns, and a return received nine. The salute to the flag of France was then undoubtedly the salute to the French Admiral personally. In 1799 Commodore Thomas Tingey was cruising in the West Indies. He says: "Previous to my entering St. Thomas Harbor I sent an officer on shore to the commandant, requesting liberty of the port and proposing to salute their flag (Dutch) on proviso only of a return of gun for gun. He wished to make a small difference, but on information that it was decided it was agreed to, and I saluted their fort with fifteen guns, which number was duly and promptly returned." Again that so-called salute to the Dutch flag was nothing more than a personal tribute to the Dutch commandant—fifteen guns being the proper compliment.

The question asked over and over of the Navy Department is "What is the origin of our twenty-one-gun salute?" And up to date the answers have pretty generally briefly put it "Custom."

DIFFERENT "NATIONAL" SALUTES.

The British Navy regulations of 1772 give the salute to the King or Queen and their flag as twenty-one guns, and twenty-one guns were fired, so it is said, by the Constitution's battery, then on shore, when that good ship was launched in October of 1797, but the spirit of republican independence for many years led our naval officers to interpret the salute as they saw fit, and it varied from one gun for each State to the generally recognized international salute of twenty-one guns. This international salute for a great many years has been twenty-one guns, and it was to agree with that the navy regulations of 1865 were made, and it must have been that salute the army regulations had in view in 1895 when it said "National" salute instead of international—perpetuated in the regulations of 1899 while looking to the exigencies of our island possessions and international exchanges of courtesies at military posts within them.

The army and the navy are but two branches of the same Government service, and before we undertake to regulate the matter of salutes internationally it would seem fitting to secure uniformity at home. The navy's twenty-one-gun salute and the army's one gun for each State, fired on the Fourth of July, are to the same Union and to the same flag as its emblem, and the term "National" salute is meant to express only the Nation in the widest and most limited senses of the word. Either one salute is many guns too many or the other is correspondingly too few; but whichever it be, each service should render the same homage to the flag and to the Nation, and, because of the international nature of the twenty-one-gun salute, the fewer guns would seem to answer better, especially when it is the spirit rather than the noise of such demonstrations that counts most.

So far as the interchange of naval courtesies goes, it would certainly be making toward simplicity to limit the number of guns, especially as the lowest salute—that to a Captain or junior commanding—is now seven guns, the same that an Admiral some centuries back was gratified to receive; and it is highly likely that those of the majority who have to listen at close range and without personal compliment to the noisy bang of the modern 40-pounder would be only too glad if the racket was limited, while economy certainly would be served.

ROBERT G. SKERRETT.

[Copyright, 1901.]

GROWTH OF GERMAN CITIES.

All but One of the Larger Places Show Increase in Population.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Frank H. Mason, Consul General at Berlin, reports the following populations of thirty-two German cities having more than 100,000 inhabitants and the percentage of increase since 1895, when the last preceding census was taken:

	1900.	Increase since 1895. Number.	Per Cent.
Berlin	1,884,345	207,041	12.3
Hamburg	704,669	79,117	12.7
Munich	498,503	87,502	22.4
Leipsic	455,120	55,169	13.8
Breslau	422,415	49,240	13.2
Dresden	395,340	58,909	17.5
Cologne	370,685	49,121	15.2
Frankfort	287,813	58,534	25.5
Nuremburg	280,743	98,357	60.6
Hanover	250,886	24,432	12.1
Magdeburg	229,732	15,308	7.1
Dusseldorf	212,949	36,964	21.0
Stettin	209,988	69,264	49.2
Chemnitz	206,584	45,597	28.3
Charlottenburg	189,300	56,925	43.0
Koenigsberg	187,186	14,290	8.3
Stuttgart	176,318	17,997	11.4
Altona	160,885	11,941	8.0
Bremen	160,823	18,929	13.3
Halle	156,631	40,327	34.7
Elberfeld	156,503	17,166	12.3
Strassburg	150,268	14,600	17.5
Dortmund	142,418	31,180	28.0
Barmen	141,435	14,443	11.4
Mannheim	140,384	42,604	43.0
Danzig	138,108	12,603	10.0
Aix ta Chapelle	135,287	24,736	22.2
Brunswick	126,052	10,914	9.5
Posen	118,151	42,012	58.6
Kiel	107,071	21,405	25.0
Crefeld	106,887	*384	*0.3
Cassel	105,055	23,703	29.1

*Decrease.

To these may be added Essen, the exact statistics of which have not yet been published, but which is known to have passed the 100,000 limit, its present population being reckoned at 110,000.

Palestine Commandery's Reception.

The Masons of Palestine Commandery will give their twenty-third annual reception Wednesday evening, Jan. 30, at the Waldorf-Astoria, and incidentally celebrate the fiftieth birthday of the commandery as a chartered organization. The first Commander, A. Colo Veloni, who is still living, will be a guest at the reception. Among other guests will be Gov. Odell and a delegation from the Newburg Commandery, the officers of the Grand Commandery, York Commandery, Columbian Commandery, and Mecca Temple.

FOREIGN TRADE IN CHINA

Promise of a Record Year Broken by Hostile Disturbances.

American Trade Growing in Spite of Drawbacks—Bankers Refuse Credits—How Business Is Done.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 1.—When merchants who handle the foreign trade for China strike their balance sheets at the end of the year, the showing in the aggregate will hardly reflect the depressed condition of general business. In the first half of the year imports were larger than for any corresponding period. Since then they have run along abnormal lines, the Chinese buying little and the troops creating an extraordinary demand for goods usually not sold here in large quantities. Hence the go-downs, as warehouses in treaty ports are called, are packed with goods shipped for regular trade before the disturbances became acute. Interest, storage, and insurance count up as rapidly in China as anywhere else in the world, and as native trade is not likely to make up in the coming year for this year's slack, some of the foreign merchants feel themselves entitled to a share of the sympathy that is lavished on the missionaries.

There were collected last year in customs 27,000,000 taels, a tael being worth about 70 cents gold. Customs for the first half of this year were 22,000,000 taels. It would have been a record year had peace continued. It may not fall far short of last year's total as it is, although the tariff was framed to impose only a nominal tax on eatables, which, including things to drink and to smoke, have constituted the bulk of recent imports.

American interest in normal shipments was more than holding its own when the big guns sent business scurrying in a fashion which the native soldiery has since imitated with some success. The foreign banks, which contrive in so many ways to exact toll of those who deal with them that they would drive to bankruptcy communities accustomed to only moderate trade profits, put down the screws here and advised their correspondents to make no advances on bills of lading, as nothing could be done with cargoes except to leave them unprotected on the river banks. Cables carried cancel orders at wholesale, and business along the usual lines came nearly to a full stop.

It is estimated that at this port alone the go-downs have carried on storage for five months merchandise worth $10,000,000. The congestion in the warehouses affected trade in general, and, compared with anticipations, there has been nothing doing since then except in a few native necessities and in provisions and kindred supplies for the military.

Americans have had their share in the new departure, for the Pacific market was the handiest to China, but as nearly every small trader who could afford it became a dealer in provisions, the thing has been overdone, and some of the houses who are regular agents for such goods find themselves so heavily stocked that they are offering bargains that are bound to force the weak to the wall. The season will thus hardly end without a good many small upsets.

NATIVE BANKERS NOT LENDING.

Disinclination among the people to buy foreign articles is more apparent than real. There has been nothing like a boycott by the masses. The native bankers were the ones who put on the embargo. Usually they grant a most elaborate and diffuse system of credits. A merchant with 5,000 taels in cash could come here and get goods to ten times that amount. He had to secure the native banker and pay him from 12 to 36 per cent. for the accommodation, but his customers stood that well enough. When hostilities began the bankers refused to accommodate, and as soon as the merchant found that he had to rely solely on his own cash he became timid. Hence he went inland with little or no stock, and the people had to go without.

It was this state of affairs that hit American trade hardest. Out of total dutiable imports last year of 154,000,000 taels, those credited to the United States reached 20,000,000 taels, of which piece goods were valued at 14,000,000 taels, and kerosene oil at more than 4,000,000 taels, leaving something less than 2,000,000 taels to be divided among flour, lumber, machinery, and various sundries and luxuries. The American piece goods trade reached last year's volume by rapid strides, having been less than 6,000,000 taels in 1899. It bade fair to capture the market for drills, jeans, and sheetings, the promise of Eastern trade having been largely responsible for the establishment of some of the new cotton mills in the South.

Every Chinaman wears cotton, blue blouses and skirts having become almost a national dress. This year there has been no replenishing, and as a Chinaman is a philosopher enough not to cry over what he cannot get, he has wor

SOME HAPPENINGS IN GOOD SOCIETY.

This Winter has been one for débutantes. Seldom in the social history of New York have there been so many entertainments, dances, dinner dances, and similar affairs at which the guests were nearly all young people in their first season. This past week has had a full programme of débutantes' dances, and to-morrow evening the course will be taken up again at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Sloane. The dances of the past week have for the most part been given in honor of the two Vanderbilt débutantes. These young women went out very little in the beginning of the season. In fact, Miss Frederica Webb did not come to New York before the new year. In December those débutantes who had teas given them and who belonged to the Junior Cotillion and the Fortnightly Dances had their turn. This month it is more or less another set. There has been some little good-natured rivalry among the various dancing classes and the mothers of the buds of the season, but this has resulted to the delight and comfort of those who love to dance as well as to the caterers and florists and purveyors of cotillion favors in numerous entertainments.

***

The recall of invitations and the abandoning of the dances which were to have been given for Miss Eleanor Morris made a blank in the programme of the week, which otherwise would have been one of the gayest of the season. The one large ball of next week will be the Assembly, which takes place on Thursday at the Astoria. The second Assembly is never so crowded as the first, and now that all the débutantes have made their bows and have since the first Assembly had a month's experience, there is no doubt but that it will be a very jolly dance. The floral decorations will be a bit less elaborate, but this year very ornate arrangements of flowers are not in vogue. The Assembly is not altogether for débutantes. At the last the young matrons had a very good time. Many do not think of dancing but simply go for an hour, and hold little courts, surrounded by their friends, have supper and leave before the cotillion, in fact, it is considered rather "smart" to depart immediately after supper. The guests will be received on Thursday by Mrs. Duncan Cryder, Mrs. W. Bayard Cutting, Mrs. William D. Sloane, and Mrs. Edmund L. Baylies.

***

The dance to-morrow evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Sloane will be somewhat larger than the dances of last week. Technically, it is a "small dance." There will be a double cotillion, led by Worthington Whitehouse and Munson Morris. This will be the first time that an entertainment of any magnitude has been given in the remodeled Sloane house, which now comprises the two residences known as the Sloane and Shepard houses, on the north side of the twin Vanderbilt residences. The cotillion will take place in the picture gallery in the George Vanderbilt house, which is very well adapted for dancing and which has been the scene of many memorable entertainments in the past. There is also some rumor that Mr. William K. Vanderbilt will open his beautiful Fifth Avenue residence and will give a large entertainment of some kind for his débutante nieces.

***

The Fortnightly dance will be held on Tuesday evening at the Astoria. This week it will not have the rivalry of the Junior Cotillion. Although the patronesses of each of these dances, in a pleasant way, lay claim to their own class being the most advantageous, many of the members of each move in the same set. The Junior Cotillion, perhaps, represents more of the Southampton element than the Fortnightly. The latter has among its patronesses some of the representatives of the Knickerbocker set, and among those who take an active interest in it are Mrs. Lewis L. Delafield, Mrs. John C. Jay, and Mrs. Alexander Shaw, who was Miss Gallaudet, and others. The Junior Cotillion and the Fortnightly will clash for the last time on Feb. 5, when they will both hold sessions.

***

Tuesday will be an evening of dinners. Many hostesses are giving series, taking a particular evening. Mrs. Astor will be one of the dinner givers on Tuesday, and her son-in-law, James J. Van Alen, will also entertain on the same date. Mr. Van Alen's dinner will be for young people. Mrs. Pembroke Jones will have a dinner on Tuesday evening. Other hostesses who have been entertaining at series have been Mrs. I. Townsend Burden, Mrs. Elbridge T. Gerry, Mrs. James A. Burden, Jr., Mrs. Ogden Mills, and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish.

***

Another large dance of the week will be given by Mr. Heber R. Bishop on Friday evening. At the Bishop residence, 881 Fifth Avenue, there is one of the most artistic ballrooms in New York, and it will be arranged to have the favors for the cotillion of the evening correspond to the era and style of this apartment, which is Louis XV. The guests will include most of Mrs. Ogden Mills's list. Mr. Bishop gives a dance every year.

***

Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Gurnee, Jr., are also going to give a dance at their residence, 8 East Thirty-third Street, on the 23d. The Gurnee residence is the one occupied for many years by William Waldorf Astor when he lived in New York, after his marriage to Miss Paul of Philadelphia. It is small, according to the modern idea, but quite well adapted for entertaining on a moderate scale. The Gurnee dance will not be large. It is given for the Misses Gurnee.

***

The arrival in New York of Mrs. Arthur Paget this week creates something of a flutter. Mrs. Paget will not remain long in this city, as she is to join a party of friends who are doing the West Indies in a yacht. It is several years since Mrs. Paget has been in this country. She has now a young daughter in society, but this young lady does not accompany her mother to America. Mrs. Paget's visit, of course, is not unconnected with business of the estate. The recent death of Mr. John L. Melcher, who married her half-sister and who had charge of the estate, has required her presence in New York. She is to be entertained very extensively. To-day Mrs. Paget holds quite an enviable social position in England, and her entertainments are considered very much the vogue in London. Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Ismay are coming over on the same ship. Mrs. Ismay is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George R. Schieffelin, and she will be entertained by them.

***

The weddings of last week were more than usually interesting. The three couples who have attracted so much attention are passing their honeymoons in quite different parts of the globe. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt are in Canada, where they have arrived in time for the midwinter sports. Mr. and Mrs. William V. B. Kip, who were married on Wednesday, have gone to Florida, and this week will be among the palms and tropical gardens of the far South. Mr. and Mrs. B. Parmelee Prentice are to stop a short time at Tarrytown, and then are to be for the remainder of their honeymoon at the Rockefeller residence at Cleveland.

***

Heavy travel has not yet set in toward Canada. There are, however, quite a number of New Yorkers and more people from the West in Florida, and the Winter colony at Aiken, S. C., is beginning to be very gay. Col. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor are to join it very shortly. Mr. and Mrs. James Lawrence Breese, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Whitney McVickar, Mr. and Mrs. Butler Duncan, Jr., and Mrs. Duncan Elliot are among the latest requisitions. Golf has begun at St. Augustine, where Mr. and Mrs. William V. Chapin have established themselves, and Mr. Chapin has undertaken the Presidency of the club there. Mrs. Henri M. Cutting is at her Palm Beach, where she has a country place. Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Gould are expected shortly at Jekyl Island.

***

The death, which has been announced, some time since, by cable, of the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Forbes Leith of Fyvie, and formerly of New York, in South Africa, revives the old Highland tradition about the manor house. The saying is that there will never be a direct male heir to the estate until a certain stone is recovered from its resting place. The legend is one which, through coincidence, has been constantly brought to mind at various times.

***

The Duchess of Manchester and her sister, Lady Lister Kaye, are in Paris for the Winter. Miss Yznaga has gone on a yachting trip in Southern waters with Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Drexel.

***

Mr. and Mrs. George Vanderbilt have left Paris and have gone to Dresden for a short visit. Mr. Columbus O'Donnell Iselin was in Paris a fortnight ago, and at the Ritz Hotel in that city were Mr. and Mrs. T. Shaw Safe. They have been visiting Mr Safe's relatives in England. Mr. Levi P. Morton and his daughters have arrived at Cannes, where they intend to stop for some time.

***

Philadelphia has been very gay, and the Paul ball there on Friday evening was one of the handsomest private entertainments given in that city for a long time. Mr. and Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse and other New Yorkers went over for it. In Washington there has been one round of dinners, and in the beginning of the week Senator Depew gave a large dinner dance. On Thursday in that city will take place the wedding of Miss Katherine Beale Owen and Mr. Marion Crawford of this city. Mr. Marshall J. Gasquet of New York will be best man, and the ushers will include Mr. Acosta Nichols and Mr. Albert Fairfax, both of this city.

***

Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Shaw of Boston have been visiting New York and were here for the different dances of last week. Mrs. Shaw was Miss Phillys Langhorne of Virginia and a sister of Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson. Miss Elizabeth Lawrence was also here.

***

Chicago is nothing if not original. Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Eddy recently gave a dinner in that city at a restaurant, one of the rooms of which, for some reason, is known as The Limited. Guests were requested to meet at 7 so as to catch the Limited. Strict punctuality was asked, and the address given was a great gateway in the rear of the hotel. The guests suddenly found themselves in the anteroom, which had been fitted up as a railway station, and they were given tickets—first, second, and third class—and sent upon the train. The train was simply The Limited dining room, made up exactly as if it were a dining car on a vestibule train. Conductors and porters and all the entourage of such a conveyance were present. Dinner was served at little tables, and to keep the illusion up whistles were blown and bells rung, and the dinner occupied but the time in which The Limited makes a two-hundred-mile run. The spirit of the affair was kept up and the dinner has been described as being very jolly indeed. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer and Mr. and Mrs. Caton.

***

Mr. and Mrs. Lucius K. Wilmerding (Miss Caroline Murray) gave at their residence, 18 East Seventy-seventh Street, "a small and early" dinner dance last evening for Miss Caroline M. Wilmerding, their débutante daughter. The dinner guests numbered forty, and were seated at five small tables, decorated in pink, red, yellow, and white flowers. About twenty young people came in after dinner for the dancing—a cotillion of twenty-five couples, led by Munson Morris, who had Miss Wilmerding for his partner. The favors were pretty trifles suitable for a small dance, and consisted of varicolored ribbons and rosettes, gilded wands tipped with different flowers, orders, canes, fans, &c. The cotillion was danced in the drawing room on the second floor. The guests were received by Mrs. Wilmerding, gowned in delicate blue velvet, and Miss Wilmerding, who wore white satin, veiled with tulle and trimmed with flowers. The cotillion was followed by a supper. Among the guests were included Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mackay, Mr. and Mrs. Burton Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Tucker, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Mortimer, the Misses Gladys Brooks, Helen Barney, Leila Stone, Florence Twombly, Justine Cutting, Rosamond Street, May Goelet, Alice Olin, Sarah Van Alen, Kathleen Neilson, Sophie Langdon, Sybil Douglas, Miss Cryder, Miss Kernochan, and Creighton Webb, Alexander M. Hadden, Barclay Kountze, Townsender M. Hadden, Barclay Kountze, Townsend Lawrence, Ogden Bishop, Arthur Iselin, Coster Wilmerding, William Whitehouse, R. Payard Cutting, Jr., Bradish Johnson, Jr., I. T. Burden, Jr., Archibald Harrison, H. W. Bull, and Messrs. Robbins, Street, Howland, Robinson, and others.

***

The Saturday Evening Dancing Class, now in charge of Mrs. Charles R. Huntington, had one of its semi-monthly meetings at Delmonico's last night. Mrs. Charles R. Huntington, assisted by several of the other patronesses, received. The cotillion was led by Russell Landale, and the favors were Japanese fans for the girls and briarwood pipes for the men. This is a very jolly class, and its members are young married people and the older girls, among whom are the Misses Satterlee, Lewis, Jay, Leverich, Herrick, Post, Huntington, Delafield, Smith, Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Parish, Mr. and Mrs. William Brevoort Potts, Mr. and Mrs. Leopold Francke, Horace Stebbins, John Harsen Rhoades, Russell Landale, John Jay, Alfred Boardman, J. Howard and Jesse Slade, Henry A. Schroeder, B. F. Tilton, and F. K. Stevens.

***

At Sherry's last night, in the small ballroom, there was a meeting of Mrs. Dallas Bache Pratt's class of girls who are not yet out, but who are to make their débuts next season and the following Winter season. There are about 100 members, including the boys. Last night's cotillion was led by William O'D. Iselin, and the favors were crowns and fancy courtplaster cases for the girls, and for the boys burned leather piperacks and sachet boutonnieres.

***

Mrs. Charles R. Henderson, Mrs. J. Pierrepont Edwards, Mrs. Dallas Bache Pratt, and Mrs. Frederic Gallatin all have cards out for large dinners on the evening of Monday, Feb. 11, on which date Mr. and Mrs. Gallatin are to give a dance for their daughter, Miss May Gallatin. This is to be a larger dance than the one given in December, owing to the fact that Mrs. Gallatin recalled the cards issued for the one scheduled for Jan. 10, on account of the illness of a valued servant. Owing to the John Hones and Henry Lewis Morrises being in mourning, Mrs. Edwards and Mrs. Pratt are to entertain their dinner guests on the night of the dance.

***

Mrs. Pembroke Jones is to give a large dinner for débutantes on Tuesday evening in honor of Miss Eleanor Jay, daughter of Col. William Jay and Mrs. Jay. Miss Jay is also to have a handsome dance given for her on Feb. 7 at Sherry's. Mr. and Mrs. J. Hooker Hamersley have cards out for a dinner to be given on Wednesday night, and Mrs. Astor, Mrs. Ogden Mills, J. J. Van Alen, and others have cards out for dinners to be given on Tuesday evening. Mrs. F. J. de Peyster has cards out for a dinner to be given on Friday evening. Mrs. J. J. Emery has cards out for a dinner to be given to-morrow in honor of Miss Esther M. Hunt, who is to marry George M. Wootsey next month.

***

Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish has changed the date of her dinner dance and has issued cards for the evening of Tuesday, Feb. 12. This dance will be a handsome affair, and the favors novel and attractive. She is also to give a large dinner on Jan. 28.

***

James Henry Smith is to give a Valentine dance at Sherry's on the evening of Thursday, Feb. 14, and this also will be a brilliant affair, with handsome favors. In fact, these favors are already being discussed, and those who are invited, or who expect to be, and who are addicted to bridge whist, are looking forward to being the recipients in the cotillion of handsome bridge whist boxes.

***

Speaking of bridge whist, recalls the fact that this game is growing, rather than decreasing, in favor. Mrs. Maturin Livingston has a class that meets Mondays; Mrs. F. B. Hoffman has another, and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid another. The Southampton Club, organized by Mrs. Trevor, meets every other week on Wednesdays.

***

Mrs. B. Aymar Sands is to give a seven-handed euchre party on Wednesday next; Mrs. Louis Bell will give one on Friday, Mrs. Lyman Porter will give a bridge whist party on Monday, Jan. 28, and Mrs. Frederic Pearson will give another on Tuesday, Jan. 29.

***

The wedding of John Stewart Barney and Miss Mary Alice Van Nest, daughter of Mrs. Alexander T. Van Nest, is to be celebrated on Tuesday next in Trinity Chapel, West Twenty-fifth Street, and the Rev. Dr. William H. Vibbert, rector of the church, will officiate; Dr. Huntington of Grace Church will read the betrothal service, and Bishop Potter will pronounce the benediction. Owing to the death of Charles Carroll Jackson, an uncle of Miss Van Nest, the wedding reception to follow the ceremony will be a small and quiet one, limited to immediate relatives and intimate friends. Miss Van Nest's maid of honor will be her cousin, Miss Helen Storer of Boston. She will have no bridesmaids. James De Wolfe Cutting is to be Mr. Barney's best man, and the ushers selected are Norman Walker, Phoenix Ingraham, W. Rhinelander Stewart, Henry O. Chapman, Robert T. Varnum, James Henry Smith, Romain Smith, William V. B. Hoffman, and William Lawrence Green of Albany. The bride's cousin, G. W. Van Nest, will escort her to the chancel, and her mother will then give her away. Mr. Barney gave his bachelor dinner for his attendants last night at the Union Club.

***

At the wedding on Feb. 12 of Charles Dewar Simons, Jr., a nephew of E. H. Harriman, and Miss Jessie Vanderbilt McNamee, a granddaughter of the late Capt. Jacob Vanderbilt, the attendants, as announced in Friday's TIMES, will be as follows: Miss Effie Vanderbilt Cæsar will be the maid of honor, and the Misses Florence Vanderbilt Twombly, Adella McNamee, Mary Harriman, Barbara Ford, Amy Willetts, Mabel Park, Mary E. Simons, a sister of Mr. Simons, and Miss Dufrield will be the bridesmaids. Mr. Simons's best man will be his brother, E. H. H. Simons, and he has selected Reginald E. Bonner, Frank H. Lord, Gustav Hemeken, Jr., William A. Evans, Charles H. Bleecker, T. Bache Bleecker, Ward Campbell, and Ralph Monell as his ushers.

***

Mrs. Wilber A. Bloodgood has cards out for a breakfast in honor of Miss de Neufville, one of the débutantes of the season, on Saturday, Feb. 22 at her residence.

***

Miss Callender and Miss De Forest, who give their regular informal reception today, will hold it for the Marquis de Souza, who is to make his début as a singer on Thursday next in this city.

***

The Charity Ball will take place on Tuesday, January 29, at the Waldorf-Astoria. The entire ballroom floor will be utilized. There will be no elaborate decorations, only the legend "Charity" in electric lights above the platform where the committee and the patronesses will be seated. Alexander M. Hadden will be the leader of the committee. The ball will open with a quadrille, danced by the patronesses and the committee. Among the names of those who are to serve on the committee are:

Col. John Jacob Astor,	G. S. Dunn,
Charles Appleton,	Henry C. Adams,
Grosvenor Atterbury,	Loring T. Hildreth,
S. D. Babcock, Jr.,	Douglas Campbell,
James D. W. Cutting,	Arthur S. Wiley,
J. R. Delafield,	Bayard Dominick, Jr.,
Edward H. Delafield,	Mansfield Patterson,
F. A. de Peyster,	George H. Sullivan,
Langdon Irving,	Arthur King Wood,
William Foulke,	Arthur E. Coe,
John A. Hadden, Jr.,	Eugene Southack,
Erskine Hewitt,	Thornwell D. Perrin,
Stephen P. Nash,	D. Litchfield,
Edward C. Parish,	John S. Tanner,
Wainwright Parish,	Dwight W. Taylor,
K. Van Rensselaer, Jr.,	Edward L. Tinker,
T. J. O. Whitlaker,	William A. Watson,
Harry P. Robbins,	E. Victor Loew, Jr.,
Joseph L. Stevens,	Henry Schroeder,
Arthur Schermerhorn,	Richard Swartwout,
Schuyler Schieffelin,	Franklin A. Plummer,
R. W. G. Welling,	J. Insley Blair,
Evert J. Wendell,	Thos. Colgate Kinney,
William Greenough,	Grosvenor Nicholas,
Harry Y. Day,	William P. Field,
B. T. Babbitt Hyde,	James C. McGuire,
George Parmley Day,	David M. Milton,
Lawrence L. Gillespie,	A. L. Loeremus,
Edward Nicoll Crosby,	Harry T. Peters,
Rudolph Neeser,	H. Tuthill Spence,
Arthur Goadby,	R. E. L. Lewis,
Renwick C. Hurry,	Dr. Crosby Whitman,
Barrett H. Shepard,	Guy Van Amringe,
R. F. Goldsborough,	Oscar Pizzland Moure,
Walter Coles Cabell,	Leonidas Westervelt,
William H. Owen, Jr.,	Col. Wm. H. Rowe, Jr.,
Heth Lorton,	Wm. R. McLaughlin,
J. H. Falconer, Jr.,	De Ruyter Hollins.
Frank Johns,

SOCIETY NOTES.

The engagement of Miss Annette Martin Black to Herman Warendorf is announced.

Mrs. Richard Rodriguez of 160 Lexington Avenue receives informally the second and fourth Thursdays of January and February.

Mrs. Heinrich Meyn (Miss Agnew) will give two "at homes" on Mondays, Jan. 21 and 28, at her studio, 58 West Fifty-seventh Street, from 4 to 7 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Judge will give an "At Home" on Wednesday evening, Jan. 30, from 8:30 to 11:30 o'clock, at their residence, 27 West Ninety-fourth Street.

The wedding of Abigail Henriques Fritsch, daughter of Christian Fritsch, and Dr. John Hamilton Potter Conover will be celebrated on Wednesday, Jan. 30, at 12 o'clock, at St. Matthew's Church.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Sultzer of 7 West One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Street left Thursday on their regular Winter tour of Florida. It is their intention to visit Jacksonville, Palm Beach, St. Augustine, and Miami before their return.

The wedding of Mr. Joseph Castelberg and Miss Cornelia Adler, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Adler, will take place on Monday evening at Sherry's. Mr. and Mrs. Adler and their daughter have been living at the Hotel St. Lorenz.

Delmonico's, on Wednesday evening, the 23d, will be the scene of the third of the current series of Wednesday cotillions, the dancing function of the Southern families domiciled in New York. The fourth and final dance is appointed for Feb. 13.

A dance is to be given in the Astoria on Friday evening, Jan. 25, under the patronage of Mesdames Ashbel P. Fitch, E. L. Eaton, William Shrady, Charles W. Dayton, D. Phoenix Ingraham, Abraham Steers, Jacob Shrady, and Clermont H. Wilcox.

Mrs. Charles Eastman Tripler and Miss Tripler of 40 West Seventy-seventh Street will be at home the last three Tuesdays in January. Among those receiving will be Mrs. Lorenzo E. Tripler, Miss Louise Roe, Miss Martie Havemeyer, Miss Alice Clark, Miss Ruth Badgley, Miss Emily Pickard, and Miss Mabel Storm.

The Holland Dames of the New Netherlands will give a wedding breakfast on the occasion of the marriage of Queen Wilhelmina of Holland at the Waldorf-Astoria. In the wedding cake which will adorn the table will be placed a gold ring, with an appropriate inscription, to be retained by the Dame or Sir Knight who may be fortunate enough to find it in his or her slice of cake. The society will hold its regular monthly business meeting Jan. 29, 1901, at 8:30 P. M. at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil L. Boas gave a dinner on the 17th of eighteen covers, at their home, 128 West Seventy-fourth Street, in honor of the German Emperor's guests on the Prinzessin Victoria Luise, of the Hamburg-American Line's new yacht. The guests of honor were Lieut. Col. von Schenck, Major Kocq von Breugel, Privy Councillor Dr. Lehmann and Mrs. Lehmann, County Councillor von Heyking, and Capts. von Wedel and Schulz of the German Army. Among those present were also the German Consul General, Mr. Bünz, and Mr. Bitter, the architect.

VISITORS AT LAKEWOOD.

Crowds of Refugees from and Sufferers with Grip Seek the Health-Giving Air of the Pines.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Jan. 19.—During the past week the trains have brought crowds of refugees who have come to Lakewood to escape grip, or to recover from it. There is something in the air of Lakewood, something which it gets from the pines, that prevents the growth of grip and pneumonia germs, and when added to this are pure water and pure milk, a man's chances for a long life are increased a hundred fold. At the Lakewood Hotel there is another aid to well-being, the hydrotherapy baths. With the growth of the use of water as a therapeutic agent has come perfection of its application, and the management of the Lakewood, has not spared time or money in procuring the best. Had Ponce de Leon come to Lakewood he would have found the fountain for which he vainly sought.

A few of the Lakewood's guests are Mrs. Isidor Straus, Miss Straus, Miss Julian Straus, Mrs. M. Gomprecht, Howell Brisbane, L. J. O'Reilly, E. R. Case, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore S. Baron, Robert B. Reilly, Mr and Mrs. Maurice Rothschild, Miss Clark, H. W. Hyde, J. H. Harper, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Caswell, Mrs. W. Fahnestock, Miss Hanson, William Fahnestock, Thomas Barrett, H. Theodore Leggett, Mr. and Mrs Sam Heller, Mr. Good, Miss Good, from New York; Mrs. George L. Pease, Brooklyn; Charles D. Hornung, Jersey City; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dun Douglas, Orange; M. F. Ross, New Brunswick; W. B. Duffy, Miss Duffy, Miss Morrison, Rochester; Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Wyman, Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Rice, Miss N. H. Smith, Miss C. E. Gutman, Baltimore; Mr and Mrs. T. F. Durham, Philadelphia; Gardiner H. Shaw, Miss Idalene M. Richards, Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Mackay, Mr. and Mrs. B. N. Busch, O. F. Woerz, Mrs. F. Gordon, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Alexander, the Misses Alexander, Mrs. Theodore A. Dodge, W. W. Fuller, J. B. Duke, B. N. Duke, F. H. Ray, John Aspinwall, Mrs. John G. Moore and maid, Mrs. David McClure, A. J. McClure, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stewart, Mrs. Frederick Crocker, J. J. Manning of New York, Prince and Princess Brancaccio, Italy; S. H. Austin, Mrs. R. Colfelt, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Huckel, Jr., Philadelphia; Col. D. L. Brainard, United States Army; Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Estabrook, Boston; Mr. and Mrs. Malden Hutchinson, Clary Ray, Washington, are at the Laurel-in-the-Pines. This beautiful house has been very much favored this season.

The Laurel House claims its own year after year, and is always well filled. This year there are several new faces among its guests. The homelikeness of the house enables it to hold its own against its newer rivals. The guests include the Rev. and Mrs. Bishop Falner, Mrs. F. R. Gilmore, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. O'Keefe, Eugene A. Philbin, Dr. and Mrs. S. O. Vanderpoel, Albert K. Gallatin, Henry Disston, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Pyle, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fanshawe Bloodgood, George J. Kennedy, Hobart Smock, Mrs. Seabury Lawrence, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Julius Helburn, L. N. Roberts, L. A. Roberts, Boston; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Fitzell, Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Warburton, Miss Roberts, Philadelphia; Mrs. C. D. Mills, Miss Danakar, Bridgeport, Conn.

THE NEWS OF NEWPORT.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Jan. 19.—Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt intend to return to Newport after their visit to Canada for a short stay at Harbourview with Mrs. F. O. French, when the proposed trip to Europe will be discussed. It is understood that Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt, accompanied by Mrs. French, will visit Gen. the Hon. Herbert F. Eaton and Mrs. Eaton in England. Gen. and Mrs. Eaton were to sail for England the latter part of the present month, but their plans have been somewhat changed.

The captured Spanish cruiser Reina Mercedes, soon to be refitted as a training ship, is to be sent to the training station here for the use of the naval apprentices.

Henry F. Eldridge has returned to New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Prescott Lawrence have returned from Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew C. Dulles and Mrs. Joseph F. Stone have gone to New York.

Extensive improvements to Rough Point, owned by Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Vanderbilt, will be made this Winter.

The decorators have begun work on the Edward J. Berwind villa.

Mrs. Ed. Bert entertained at her cottage this evening with a dinner, musical, and a "Toy" opera.

SOCIETY IN WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The week came to a brilliant close this evening with a number of dinner parties, a large evening at home at the Legation of Austria-Hungary, and a supper party at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald De Koven, where M. Coquelin was the guest of honor.

Gen. and Mrs. Miles gave their first dinner party of the season, when they entertained Justice and Mrs. Harlan, Senator and Mrs. McMillan, Senator and Mrs. Hale, Senator and Mrs. McComas, Mrs. Slater, Mrs. Hearst, Mrs. J. B. Henderson, Mrs. Audendried, Mrs. Postlethwaite, Senator Bacon, Mr. and Mrs. Glover, and Mr. Moody.

Mr. and Mrs. Richardson entertained at dinner in honor of the German Ambassador. Their other guests were the Austrian Minister and Baroness Hengelmuller; the Netherlands Minister, Baron Gevers; Messrs. Ryand, Woodbury, Blair, Seckendorff, C. Richardson, Miss Clementina Furniss, Mrs. Charles Whelan, Miss Violet Whelan, Mrs. Richard Townsend, Mrs. Henry May, Mr. and Mrs. George Bradley, and Mrs. John Davis.

Representative and Mrs. George B. McClellan entertained at a small dinner party in honor of the French Ambassador.

Mrs. Carl von Mayhoff has joined her brother, Representative Jefferson Levy, at his Vermont Avenue residence, to remain through the season. Mrs. Von Mayhoff will hold her first at home Tuesday afternoon.

AMERICANS IN BERLIN.

BERLIN, Jan. 19.—Andrew D. White, the United States Ambassador, and Mrs. White gave a musicale to-night. One hundred and twenty-five persons were present, among them being Princess Anton von Radziwill, Countess von Osten-Sacken, and Baroness von Gersdorff.

Mr. and Mrs. White will give a dinner next Thursday in honor of the new Spanish Ambassador, Señor de Ruata. Among those invited are the leading diplomats, Count von Posadowsky-Wehner and Count and Countess de Perigord-Talleyrand.

Major John B. Kerr, the United States Military Attaché here, and Mrs. Kerr gave a dinner this evening, to their Berlin friends, at the Reichshof.

LOUIS BERNSTEIN'S ROMANCE.

His Eloquence Attracted Miss Karp, Who Will Become His Bride.

The announcement was made yesterday of the betrothal of Miss Rose Karp, daughter of Mrs. Sophia Karp, prima donna of the People's Theatre, to Deputy Internal Revenue Collector Louis Bernstein. Mr. Bernstein is the Republican Party Captain of the Third (known as the "Banner") Election District of the Eighth Assembly District. The betrothal ceremony took place in the home of Miss Karp, at 65 Seventh Street.

Among the invited guests were ex-Police Commissioner Charles H. Murray, Assemblyman Charles H. Adler, ex-Assistant District Attorney Otto S. Rosalsky, Internal Revenue Collector Ferdinand Eldman, ex-Alderman Thomas Rothman, and Police Captain Diamond. Nearly all made speeches congratulating both the prospective bride and bridegroom.

Miss Karp first saw Mr. Bernstein during an election campaign while Mr. Bernstein was making a speech from a carriage. She was struck with his ability as a speaker and took a liking to him at once, and the speaker caught sight of her and was favorably impressed. They were introduced some days later.

Dinner to Mr. Tappen Postponed.

Because of the illness of his wife, the dinner which a number of bank Presidents of this city intended to give as a compliment to Frederick D Tappen, President of the Gallatin National Bank, on Tuesday next, has been postponed indefinitely. Mr. Tappen recently celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his connection with the bank, and on Tuesday he and Mrs. Tappen will celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary if Mrs. Tappen's health should improve.

Old Guards' Annual Ball.

The Old Guard will celebrate the seventy-fifth year of its existence next Thursday night with its annual ball in the Metropolitan Opera House. No tickets will be sold this year, and any guest wishing a box must see Capt. James F. Weaman, at 12 Old Slip, or at the Old Guard Armory, Broadway and Forty-ninth Street. The commander of the Old Guard now is Major Ellis S. Briggs.

The new Coiffure par excellence for 1901.

"Transformation"

is the most beautiful Coiffure ever introduced. Its many advantages as to comfort and style will be realized upon inspection.

The Newport Coil as made and patented by me is made only of long, natural, wavy hair, with absolutely no stems, thus being incomparably superior in style and comfort to the old fashioned braid or switch.

Wigs and Toupees for ladies or gentlemen. None are allowed to leave my establishment which are not perfect in every way. Wigs when made by me are perfection as to fit, comfort, and illusive appearance.

Hair Ornaments of choicest and most fashionable designs in real tortoise shell, amber, rhinestones, velvets, laces, etc. In fact I have EVERYTHING FOR THE HAIR.

No Branch Stores. A. Simonson No Agents.

933 BROADWAY. 21—22 STREETS.

IN FOREIGN LANDS.

SCHEME FOR AND AGAINST JEWISH COLONIZATION IN PALESTINE.—The Sultan of Turkey has just repromulgated, with renewed emphasis, a decree forbidding Jews to remain in Palestine for longer than three months. The measure in its new form not only applies to pilgrims, but to merchants, and further prohibits the acquisition of landed property by Jews. It is said that even up to the last moment the German Ambassador in Constantinople, Baron von Bleberstein, had every hope that the old decree would even be repealed, for this end, following instructions from Berlin, he has labored to bring about. A short time ago it was semi-officially announced in Constantinople that the decree would be renewed, owing to the fact that the wholesale exodus of Jews from Russia and Roumania had caused the Porte to be apprehensive lest Palestine should become overcrowded. Later it was said that the authorities in Constantinople looked upon the increased activity of the Zionists as a political movement.

It is now believed in Berlin, however, that the more drastic decree has been issued at the instance of Russia, which has long been uneasy over German activity in Asia Minor, and particularly of the scheme of the Kaiser to promote his Near Eastern policy by colonizing Palestine with German-speaking Jews. In Berlin Court circles it is said to have been common talk ever since the Kaiser made his memorable visit to the Holy Land that nothing would please him better than to let Germany patronize the Zionist movement, provided it could be done without arousing religious dissension at home or suspicion among the powers, that thereby German influence was being augmented in the Near East.

What is regarded in Berlin as conclusive evidence showing Russia's hand in the matter of the anti-Semitic decree is an inspired article which, when the German Ambassador was confident of a repeal, appeared in the columns of the Novoe Vremya of St. Petersburg, of which the following is believed to be a significant passage: "It is particularly disagreeable and trying for us Russians to see how the Germans continue to consolidate their possessions in the Near East. We can live at peace with Turkey and help her to dispose of or prevent conflicts between her Mahomedan and Christian population; but that is impossible if in political matters Turkey has councilors whose interest it is to fish in troubled waters."

***

TO CREATE THE RANK OF "GRAND ADMIRAL" FOR THE GERMAN NAVY.—The Kaiser is said to be ready to take steps to create a new rank in the German Navy, that of Grand Admiral, which shall be equal to that of the Field Marshal in the army and carry with it the right to use a baton. The highest rank at present in the German Navy is that of Admiral, which corresponds to that of General in the army. The baton now carried by German Field Marshals while performing duties of distinction resembles a riding whip. The baton for the Grand Admiral will be designed like a telescope, and carried when on duty as the representative of the Kaiser, who is the Commander in Chief of the navy, and when paying official visits to foreign commanders. The creation of this rank will give the incumbent precedence over all active naval commanders in the world; the appointment, however, will not carry with it any special functions or any increase of emoluments, and for this reason it is thought in Berlin that the first "Grand Admiral" will be the Kaiser's brother, Prince Albert William Henry, who is now Vice Admiral and Chief of the First Squadron of the German Navy.

***

A NEW BULGARIAN LOAN TO BE FLOATED IN PARIS AND AMSTERDAM.—A number of agents of the Banque de Paris et des Pays Bas, are in Sofia, negotiating the terms for a new loan to the Bulgarian Government to the amount of 80,000,000f. The loan was first offered to London through the National Bank of Bulgaria and declined, on the ground of the uncertain state of affairs in the Balkans, although it is well known in British financial circles that the present National debt of Bulgaria is not disproportionate to the resources of the country.

As security for the loan the Bulgarian Government is said to have proposed new monopolies in tobacco, salt, and petroleum, of which the first is expected to produce 15,000,000f. annually, while the receipts from the other two monopolies will augment that sum by 10,000,000f. Moreover, an increased revenue is expected from the tithe collected in kind which was recently substituted for the land tax payable in money, from which it is expected to realize 25,000,000f. annually.

The new loan will enable the Government to continue the important public works now in progress, to pay off the Treasury bonds issued a year ago for the purpose of securing an advance of 25,000,000f. from the Länderbank group, to liquidate the internal and external floating debt, and to pay over to the Council of Administration of the Ottoman public debt 2,500,000f., the amount of this year's arrears, for which the Treasury bonds were recently accepted.

***

ATTEMPT OF BELGIAN CLERICALS TO CONTROL PUBLIC SCHOOLS.—The recent union in Belgium between the Clericals and the Socialists, which defeated all Liberal measures, has, according to cable dispatches, been followed by an alliance between the Liberals and the Socialists against the Clericals.

It seems that the Clericals, having assisted the Socialists on several occasions, looked to the latter to help them gain legal sanction for their scheme of controlling the religious instruction in the common schools. This the Socialists flatly refused to do; neither would they remain passive while the question was being founght out between the Clericals and the Liberals, but straightway allied themselves with the latter. A committee made up of members of the newly allied parties recently drew up an appeal to "the Belgian people," which was sent to all the municipal and communal councils in the cities and towns, and which reads in part as follows:

"The claim of the clergy (Catholic) to the religious instruction in the communal schools is the most glaring encroachment hitherto made in our land upon the liberty of public schooling. It comes from those who have hitherto been declared the enemies of our public school system; it threatens the whole character and stability of our present institution of popular education. Hence, it is surely the duty, as well as

AT THE THEATRES

"The Climbers" and "When Knighthood Was in Flower"—Julia Marlowe and Clyde Fitch.

"The Climbers" owes its vitality to the superficial verity of some of its pictures of social life, the strength and interest of some of its episodes, and its scenic ingenuity. Its first act, all except the climax, is worthy of Augier. That great Frenchman never devised a cleverer satirical scene than the opening episode of this new play, or a more humorous passage than the sale of the dresses. But neither of these scenes is essential to the dramatic scheme of the play, which involves the effort of Blanche to shield her husband from punishment for his wrongdoing and keep her place in society for the sake of her son, and the help she receives therein from Edward Warden, who secretly loves her. This effort of Blanche is first made plain in the last scene of Act I., in a crudely contrived soliloquy, with illustrative "business," an ancient theatrical device, entirely out of place in modern realistic drama.

The story is advanced a little in Act II., but the drama not at all. The relations between the husband, the wife, and Warden at the end of this act are, dramatically speaking, exactly what they were at the end of Act I. The audience knows, as it knew nearly an hour before, that Sterling is dishonest and liable to punishment for his crimes, that the wife is determined to save the family honor if possible, and that Warden is trying to help her.

But the old situation has been given a new turn or two, and the spectator has been kept interested. The Christmas dinner and Christmas tree festival have been diverting episodes. Little pictorial touches in these scenes have revealed close observation of life and abundant ingenuity. Mr. Fitch's ingenuity, indeed, shows itself more clearly in his minor episodes than in the conduct of the serious interest of his play.

For instance, in the height of the merry-making, Sterling, having learned from one of his guests that the company in which he has risked all of his own money and all he was holding in trust will be declared bankrupt in the morning, looks nervously at his watch and sends his servant up stairs to get a railroad guide and leave it on a table in the hall. This seems a queer order to give in the circumstances, but much queerer is the remark of Warden to one of his confidants a moment later: "There is a railroad guide in the hall. Sterling is going to try to run away!"

Such a wild jump at a conclusion passes the bounds of probability.

Yet the enforced confession of the defaulter in the dark, and his balked attempt to escape, hold the attention, the weakened illusion is presently strengthened, and the first half of the play is finished successfully.

For his penultimate act the dramatist has invented a sufficiently good reason to take some of his personages to a little-known retreat in the Bronx Borough and to induce others to follow them; and, after some diverting comic scenes, he reaches naturally a scene between a woman and a man, the woman hitherto appearing in a purely comical light, but now revealed as a powerful and designing person, and the man the real hero of the drama, which is quite worthy of Pinero. Through that he arrives, without undue artifice, at a strong climax of the act which would not be despised by Sardou himself.

There is no more story to be told in the play after this climax. Belasco would have contented himself with a mildly sentimental last act, plentifully tinctured with fun, in which neither the dishonest husband nor the purposeful leader of the "fast set" in society should appear. Mr. Fitch has greatly improved his last act, which threatened disaster the first night, by heroically shortening it.

These obvious structural defects in "The Climbers" are pointed out not for the purpose of condemning the play as theatrical entertainment, for it is good entertainment, or predicting its failure, because its reception thus far indicates that it will have a long and profitable run. But the structural faults are there, and the piece has vitality apart from them. The structural faults in "The School for Scandal," for that matter, are equally glaring. That most successful of English comedies has long been regarded as the best object lesson for one desirous to learn how not to build a comedy. All attempts to imitate it have led to deplorable failures. And these exceptions, of plays that succeed in spite of their defiance of the grammar of playwriting, do but prove that the best plays, nine times out of ten, are the best made plays, in which the incidents are evolved naturally from the protasis to the last climax. "The Rivals," "The Road to Ruin," "Caste," "The Shaughraun," "The Two Orphans," "Diplomacy," "Le Gendre de M. Poirier," are among the examples of well-made plays that have outlived whole libraries of brilliant literary or pictorial pieces.

"The Climbers" owes much to the taste and liberality of Miss Bingham, much to its author's really remarkable skill as a director of rehearsals and designer of stage pictures, much to uncommonly good acting. It defies not only the settled laws of construction, but at least one of the tenets of managerial wisdom. Bitter objections to its scene of mock mourning are sure to be urged by persons recently bereaved, who have fresh remembrance of the ghastly routine of funeral observance. They will feel the picture of the return from the obsequies and the succeeding talk as personal affronts. The percentage of recently bereaved persons in any theatre audience, however, must be comparatively small; and, leaving their natural prejudice out of the question, there is nothing in the scene the most sensitive person can object to on the score of good taste.

Much more objectionable, from the managerial point of view, it seems, is the situation in the other new play of last week, "When Knighthood Was In Flower," when the heroine, having for three mortal acts, with big words warmly spoken, vowed she would wed only the hero, remarks plaintively, (the King of England, sword in hand having pursued her from London to Bristol accompanied by six reasonably intelligent spearmen in red,) that she will wed the King of France.

"I'll be his Queen," she whispers to her lover, "but not his wife!"

To what impotent end has our glorious, if somewhat noisy, revival of romantic drama come? All the real interest in the play at the Criterion Theatre precedes this scene. After it, not ermine and rare old renaissance fixings, not sacerdotal music, nor the most audacious devices of melodrama can save it from dullness.

The era of "When Knighthood Was In Flower" is new to the contemporary stage. It is novel to hear Anne Boleyn, less woman than girl, wishing she was a Queen and to see her stooping, in her capacity of maid of honor, to mean trickery to gain advancement; it is new to see the great and puissant Wolsey as Bishop of Lincoln, without his Cardinal's hat, yet the constant adviser of the young King. It ought to be a fascinating sight to gaze on that great soldier and clever statesman and patron of rare art, Francis, the very minute the death of weak Louis XII. makes him King. It would surely be worth looking on bluff King Hal at twenty-three and the fair sister of Charles V. if they were not both represented as aged and uninteresting persons.

There is no historical atmosphere in this play, in spite of the verisimilitude of its scenery, its picture of old Windsor and the blossoming apple trees, and the correctness of the costuming. And the play's chief claim to respect lies in its capable theatricalism in its first three acts. The purely sentimental scenes are good, and the scenes of bustle and confusion are not bad.

But it is Julia Marlowe, and not the play, people will go to see. She has a very difficult part as Princess Mary, and she is not technically quite equal to all its varied demands. There is a lack of royalty in her bearing always, even when she wears the ermine as Queen of France, but certainly any semblance of royalty of demeanor would be out of place in her surroundings. She is admirable in the love scenes, both in the comic passages and the tenderer episodes, and she denotes the fury of the little termagant with good effect. This may truly be called a delightful piece of acting and dismissed with that well-meant word of commendation.

To return briefly to Miss Bingham's experiment as a manager at the Bijou Theatre, the venture commends itself to practical observers of doings in the theatrical field as the most sensible independent movement lately made.

The theatre that does not concern the whole public does not concern a division of the public sufficiently large to justify much newspaper notice. In other words, the occasional production of scrofulous, talky, debilitating plays of foreign origin—plays that have no entertaining qualities at all, but are supposed to be subtly artistic—will never have any influence on the public taste.

Miss Bingham, however, daring to enter into competition with the well-established theatres, hires the best-situated playhouse available, secures a good company, finds a play of sufficient merit and of marketable quality, and seems to be provided with plenty of capital to see her venture through. She is, indeed, a heroine. The manner of the production of "The Climbers" has never been excelled here. If Miss Bingham can continue to do as worthy things in as worthy a manner, she will rank far above the Laura Keenes and Mrs. John Woods and other women managers of the halcyon and palmy days.

EDWARD A. DITHMAR.

THIS WEEK'S PLAYBILLS.

Nat Goodwin and Maxine Elliott will begin their annual New York engagement to-morrow night at the Knickerbocker Theatre. Their first play will be H. V. Esmond's comedy, "When We Were Twenty-one," which was their attraction last season. At the Victoria Theatre the same night will be shared by a new musical comedy which will be presented by Mathews and Bulger, entitled "The Night of the Fourth." It is not positive that the senior member of this farce-comedy team will make his appearance to-morrow night. He has been ill. If he cannot appear, however, Joseph Coyne, who has been rehearsing in the part during the past week, will replace him. Along toward the end of the week at the Savoy Theatre, on Saturday night, Liebler & Co. will present Judge Robert Grant and Leo Ditrichstein's dramatization of "Unleavened Bread." Unlike the many dramatized novels which have lately found their way on the stage, "Unleavened Bread" is laid in modern times, and instead of being a romantic story, is a satirical social comedy.

At the Irving Place Theatre Manager Conried will offer his patrons Lessing's famous drama, "Minna von Barnhelm," for part of the week, while the remaining part will have a farcical modern play entitled "A Carnival Farce."

The bills that do not change this week, but some of which will have their final representations, are Miss Annie Russell and "A Royal Family," who will have only two weeks longer to remain at the Lyceum Theatre. They are doing an enormous business, and there is no other reason why they should leave New York than that they must give up the stage of the Lyceum to another attraction on Feb. 4. The 150th performance will take place next Saturday night. Mr. William H. Crane, with his "David Harum," at the Garrick, is another who is compelled to bring his long season to an end at the expiration of two weeks. "Mrs. Dane's Defence," which gives the Empire Theatre Company so many brilliant opportunities for acting, has settled down for a long and prosperous career. Mr. E. S. Willard will close his present engagement at the Garden Theatre next Saturday night, and during his last week will offer three different plays. On Monday evening he will appear in Henry Arthur Jones's play, "The Middleman," which will be repeated on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday evenings he will present "The Professor's Love Story," and at the Wednesday and Saturday matinées he will repeat his performances of "Tom Pinch."

The last week of "The Burgomaster" is also announced at the Manhattan, and will be followed by Brady and Ziegfeld's production of "Lovers' Lane," the new Clyde Fitch play, the first performance is announced for Friday, Feb. 1, the theatre being closed for rehearsals the earlier part of the week. "The Girl from Up There," at the Herald Square Theatre, will begin its second week.

Miss Julia Marlowe's new play, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," affords the actress varied opportunities, and promises from the interest which has been taken in the play by the public for the first week to continue for considerable time at the Criterion Theatre. Notwithstanding the general depression in theatrical business in New York City, Mary Mannering has played to remarkable attendance at Wallack's Theatre during the past six weeks, and will begin the seventh week of her run in "Janice Meredith" at this playhouse to-morrow night. Miss Viola Allen likewise at the Theatre Republic with "In the Palace of the King" promises to make rather an extended stay in this city. Every night this past week the audiences were larger than the corresponding nights of the previous week. There has been a prompt and generous acceptance of "My Lady Dainty," with Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon, at the Madison Square Theatre. It has been arranged that the play stay several weeks. Arrangements are already being made by the management of "Florodora" at the Casino to celebrate the 100th performance, which occurs early next month, when expensive and appropriate souvenirs will be distributed. Willie Edouin, who played the part of Anthony Tweedlepunch, retired from the cast last night, and will be succeeded to-morrow night by W. J. Ferguson.

"Lady Huntsworth's Experiment," at Daly's Theatre, from the character of the business done by the play, will require no successor for some time to come. It is very probable that the play will complete the present dramatic season at Daly's, and it will form the chief feature of the company's Spring and Autumn tour.

There isn't much to say about Weber and Fields' Music Hall, except that "Fiddle-Dee-Dee" and the travesties of "The Gay Lord Quex" and "A Royal Family" are attended by the same big audiences that have been in attendance since the opening night. This week at the New York Theatre one of the best programmes presented at this house will be offered. In addition to the review of "The Giddy Throng" an excellent vaudeville bill and a new spectacular ballet called "The Devils' Dance" will be given. To-morrow night Stanislaus Stange's version of "Quo Vadis" enters upon the last week of its four weeks' engagement at the Academy of Music.

The plays reproduced at revival and combination houses this week are uncommonly attractive. At the Harlem Opera House Miss Lulu Glaser will return to offer Harlem theatregoers her new comic opera, "Sweet Annie Page." Charles Frohman's big melodrama production, "Hearts Are Trumps," will be presented at the Grand Opera House, and the original of "Sis Hopkins" will be seen at the Metropolis Theatre. Manager Sheldon of the Third Avenue Theatre will have for his attraction "Midnight in Chinatown." Phil Sheridan's New City Sports Burlesquers will be at Dewey's Theatre with a long olio.

"Nell Gwyn," a comedy in four acts by Mrs. C. A. Doremus, will be the offering of the Donnelly Stock Company at the Murray Hill Theatre, while the American Theatre will revive the once popular melodrama, "A Celebrated Case." There was placed on exhibition yesterday a wax group of McAlister, Death, and Campbell, the murderers of Jennie Bosschieter, at the Eden Musee. These figures have been made with the greatest care from photographs, sketches, and actual measurements secured in Paterson. The clothes they wear were duplicated by Paterson tailors and every detail has been perfectly carried out. The wax figure of Alvord, who has just been sentenced, is attracting much attention. Important changes have been made in other wax groups. New moving pictures will be shown hourly during the week.

AT THE VAUDEVILLE SHOWS.

Farces of all styles and kinds play a conspicuous part in the programmes offered by the continuous houses this week, at Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre. Rose Coghlan and Louis Massen will appear in their sketch, called "The Ace of Trumps." In this little drama Rose Coghlan has one of the strongest features of its kind ever offered in vaudeville. The specialties are numerous and excellent, including, the Streator Zouaves, military manouvres and steep wall climbing; Joe Welch, Hebrew character studies; Mlle. Delbosq; Lew Hawkins, minstel jester; Lizzie B. Raymond, singing comedienne; Fields and Ward, repartee comedians; Mr. and Mrs. Augustin Neuville, in the first production of the comedy drama, "How it Ended"; Spencer Kelly, baritone; Kreisel's trained dogs; Three Juggling Barretts. Mr. Proctor has provided for the patrons of his Fifth Avenue Theatre a well balanced entertainment consisting of Clayton White and Marie Stuart in the capital farce "Dickey." Jean Marcel's paintings, marbles and bas-reliefs are retained, and the noteworthy specialties are Ralph Johnstone, "The Dancing Dervish of the Diamond Frame"; John W. Albaugh, Jr., and his company in "Trenton, '76"; Three Mascagnos, European acrobats; Press Eldridge; Dillon Brothers, parody singers; Winona and Banks Winter, singing specialty; Will F. Denny, tenor; Montague and West, musical act; Gaspard Brothers, and many more.

The Russell Brothers will be the stars of this week's bill at Proctor's East Fifty-eighth Street Palace, and will present a new version of their "Irish Servant Girls." Al Leech and Rosebuds will also offer Joseph Hart's musical farce, "Examination Day at School," and other comedy acts are: Mr. and Mrs. Perkins, D. Fisher in the rural playlet, "The Half-Way House"; Jane Whitbeck, singing comedienne; Lew Sully, blackface monologue; Doherty's poodles, educated canines; Johnnie Carroll, dialect singing comedian, and the Martin Brothers, on the rebounding table. Excellent entertainment is promised the Harlem continuous patrons this week at Proctor's, where Papinta will make her farewell appearance in New York this season. Lillian Burkhart will make her appearance in the comedietta, "A Passing Fancy," and the other stars are Harry Watson and his comedy company in the roaring farce, "The Two Flights"; Jess Vernon, clever ventriloquist; Talbot and Davidson, comedians; Frank Urban, musical artist; Losh and Hupp, novelty act; the Kalatechnoscope, and others.

Mr. Keith provides for this week a bill so thoroughly rich in features that it is almost impossible to select the most prominent headliner. Marshall P. Wilder has prepared a new budget of jokes which will be accompanied by some musical effects. Fanny Rice will present a playlet by Robert Griffin Morris on Nell Gwynne, Charles Wayne and Anna Caldwell will offer a farce called "To Boston on Business." Charlie Case will give some talks on various subjects. Others in the bill are Techow's trained cats and dogs, Mlle. Lotty will be seen in a series of poses with novel effects.

Delmore, the dancing marvel, will be the headliner at Huber's Fourteenth Street Museum this week. In the Curio Halls, the leading attractions will be Lala Koola; Harry Harrison, the human Ostrich; Carlos, the Mexican Magician; Jennie Le Roy, aerialist, and Allen's Punch. In the theatre there will be two companies of vaudeville people.

At Koster & Bial's the entertainment for the week will embrace Ugo Biondi, Hope Booth, in new poses; the four Dancing Collinis, Florence Bindley, Dixon, Bowers and Dixon, Artie Hall, Tenley and Simmonds, Maxmillion, and Shields, Clover Trio Jordon and Crouch, Edna Murillo, the nine Toezoolin Arabs, and Mme. Tavary, Julius Perotti, and A. S. Veron, in a scene from "La Trovatore."

YALE'S NEW BUILDINGS.

Dining Hall to be One of the Finest Owned by Any Eastern University.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 19.—Yale's new buildings, which are planned to be ready for occupancy at bicentennial next October, are being pushed ahead at a rapid rate.

Fayerweather Hall, the companion building to White Dormitory, is now completed, with the exception of some interior adornments; Woodbridge Hall is just rising above ground, and the new dining hall is well under way. When the graduates return next Fall for the celebration week they will be confronted with great changes on every side. Unfortunately, the corporation was unable to secure sufficient money pledges to start the erection of the new Memorial Hall and vestibule just now, and this important feature of the new Yale Campus will have to be postponed for some time to come.

The new dining hall will be one of the finest structures owned by any Eastern university, and will be more imposing in many ways than Harvard's famous Memorial Hall, which is used to much the same purpose. The building will be sixty feet high, and will accommodate over 5,000 persons if used as an auditorium. It will be used for this purpose in October, when the celebration of Yale's two hundredth birthday will take place. By the 1st of January, 1902, it is proposed to turn the new hall over to the uses of a general commons for students of all departments. The building is of stone, brick, and steel, and will cost about $330,000, not including the interior furnishings.

Woodbridge Hall, which it is also proposed to finish by next Fall, is being completed rapidly. The building is the gift to Yale of the Misses Stokes of New York City, and is to cost about $60,000. The general offices for the officials of the university will be placed in this building, and when this is done the old Treasury Building on the campus will come down.

On the second campus Fayerweather Hall is practically done. The building faces White Dormitory, with a quadrangle between the two, and is nearly a counterpart of the former building, except that its central wing is somewhat higher than the corresponding part of White. Another structure will in time be built at the end of Fayerweather, to counterpart Berkeley Hall, making of the middle campus an unusually attractive quadrangle. The Post Office of the college will be removed from North to Fayerweather by the Summer, and will occupy a large proportion of the basement rooms of the latter structure.

While the architecture of the various buildings is not at all harmonious, a general scheme that is planned will weld all the structures together into one attractive whole. The centre of each square will be laid out as a garden, with fountains, elms, and shaded walks, and a wide central vista will be constructed to run the entire length of the three squares. To put this into effect it will be necessary to cut an arch under Durfee College, and President Hadley intends to do this.

French Cooks' Ball and Exhibition.

Leading chefs of the city are hard at work formulating artistic exhibits of their skill, which will be among the attractive features of the thirty-third annual ball of the Société Culinaire Philanthropique, better known as the French Cooks' Ball, to be held at Madison Square Garden Feb. 5, the exhibition opening in the afternoon. A number of pieces will be reminiscent of the nineteenth century, and there will be many displays of good things to eat molded into statuary, flowers, animals, and many strange ornamental forms. The proceeds of the ball will go for the benefit of the Widows and Orphans' Fund.

AMONG MUSICIANS

The Office of the Ballet in the Opera—The State of M. De Rezke's Voice.

The heroic figure of Jean de Reszke in "Le Cid" posing chiefly as a foil to the ballet, and the fact that the ballet music is decidedly the best in the score of the work, suggested by force of contrast the unsuccessful attempts of Wagner to raise the operatic ballet above the level of a mere display of pretty women in graceful motion. Wagner wished to make the ballet mean something, and for that reason he refused to introduce it in "Tannhäuser" anywhere except in the Venusberg scene, where it might have a pictorial significance. For this he was crucified by the gentlemen of the Paris Jockey Club in 1861, but we have more respect for him in our land and in our day. But we know very little about the dramatic value of the ballet. Back in the days of German opera some pantomimic ballets were tried, but they were imperfectly done and this public was not ready for them, and saw only the external features of the spectacle. Perhaps we should do better now. Certainly it would be easy to impart to the ballets, which are well enough danced at the Metropolitan, greater meaning and a more direct connection with the scene. But we should hardly reach Wagner's ideal.

Wagner's troubles in this department began with his "Rienzi." In his "Communication" he says: "I by no means hunted about in my material for a pretext for a ballet, but with the eyes of the operacomposer I perceived in it a self-evident festival that Rienzi must give to the people, and at which he would have to exhibit to them in dumb show a drastic scene from their ancient history, this scene being the story of Lucretia and the consequent expulsion of the Tarquins from Rome." He confesses in a note that this ballet had to be omitted from all the stage performances of "Rienzi." Why? Simply because the pantomimic ballet called for imagination on the part of the ballet master and mimetic skill in the dancers. If these elements in the ballet were wanting in Wagner's day, they are almost wholly absent now. Yet, except in cases where the ballet is seen by the spectator to be a mere entertainment for the personages on the stage, as in the garden scene of "Les Huguenots," it ought to have some connection with the drama. That later composers than Wagner have had some desires of this sort is proved by the presence of the Brocken scene in Boito's "Mefistofele," the inferno scene in Franchetti's "Asrael," and other such episodes. But nowhere is there such an opportunity for a highly significant ballet as in the first scene of "Tannhäuser."

Whoever cares to read it, may find in the essay of Wagner on the "Art-work of the Future" a long disquisition on the nature of the dance. In brief, he says that in the dance the material is man himself, and the method of expression is motion. This motion is governed by rhythm, but its purpose is the communication of the essence of the material to the spectator. In other words—not Wagner's—dance approaches speech from one side just as absolute music does from the other. It is a painter of mood pictures, just as an orchestra is. It therefore reaches its highest form in pantomime, or mimetic action. Again, in "Opera and Drama" Wagner tells us at some length how ballet music as written by the conventional opera composer has cramped the development of this beautiful art of mimetic dancing, the very art, in a sense, from which the drama itself originated at the altar of Bacchus. By writing in the prescribed dance forms and rhythms the composer compelled the dancer to confine himself to certain conventional steps and figures. Wagner's ideal was a symphonic poem of motion, mimetic in its essence, following the incidents of a story, and moving to the strains of an orchestral background which should free the dancer from formulas and at the same time paint in tone colors the moods of the pantomime.

The difficulty in the way of realizing this ideal at present is the total separation of the arts of dancing and pantomime. Only a few of the dancers of to-day possess the old-fashioned schooling which would make possible a performance of Auber's "La Muette di Portici." To this unique work Wagner owed much of the food for thought which resulted in his opinions upon the office of the ballet in opera. I have witnessed some representations of this work in recent years—not many—but always with sorrow at the utter inability of the impersonator of the dumb girl to realize the author's conception. She has always been a mere ballet dancer, striving to perform her work on the strict lines of the conventional stage dance. Now what such a part requires is some one who can dance, but who does act. And that is what the Wagner ballet, especially in "Tannhäuser," needs. The conventional ballet steps and arm movements are at once seen to be absurd, or else they make the scene appear so to the thoughtless spectator, who notes only what he sees. To interpret properly the Venusberg scene of Wagner's third opera there should really be a corps of Pilar-Morins. But just here again would come a difficulty. The Pilar-Morins would not be dancers, and, while they might perform an intelligible pantomime, they would obliterate from their work every trace of rhythm, and thus once more be untrue to Wagner's almost intangible, yet not impracticable ideal.

And of course in the end we have to reckon with a public which has no skill in the comprehension of pantomime, and hardly any in the appreciation of the dance. For in this frivolous age of pictorial dramatic art the dance means colored lights and high kicking. Hélas! Yet I still believe that if Wagner's designs in such scenes as that of the Venusberg and the Roman festival in "Rienzi" could be properly carried out, the public would awake to the existence of a poetic and beautifully graphic art which is now quite unknown to it.

***

Some foolish attempts have been made to discredit the statements of the newspapers of this city as to the condition of Mr. Jean de Reszke's voice. Now, there is no ring or cabal among the critics of this town. None of them write in accordance with a policy, other than that of faithfully discharging their duties as reporters. They frequently agree because of that. Sometimes in matters of opinion they disagree. Whether Mr. Jean de Reszke is still in possession of all the notes he used to sing and is able to give them forth with sufficient power and good quality, to sustain his phrases, and to command the dynamics of his voice, are not matters of opinion, but plain facts, which a man must either recognize with his ears or prove himself unfit for the business of chronicling the doings of musicians.

Every reporter of musical matters in this town has recorded that Mr. de Reszke's voice is equal to all the demands of such parts as Lohengrin, Radames, Faust, and Rodrigue in "Le Cid." A man who can sing these parts can sing anything. There are no holes in Mr. de Reszke's voice yet; praise heaven. He can and does still sing from C below the clef up to C sharp above it with free and abundant tone. As for his art, that is another matter. It is not just what it used to be; it is better. Mr. Jean de Reszke is still a student of his profession, and will continue to be till he dies. If Mr. Jean de Reszke had come to America this season a broken-down tenor, that fact would have been recorded in these columns, in great grief indeed, but in perfectly plain type. The contrary being the case, that is printed with unfeigned delight and the best printer's ink in the market.

W. J. HENDERSON.

The Week at the Opera.

The programme for the sixth week of the opera season at the Metropolitan is as follows:

Monday, "La Bohème," Mme. Melba, Miss Scheff, Messrs. Saliza, Campanari, Gilibert, Journet, and Dufriche.

Wednesday, "Don Giovanni," Mme. Nordica as Donna Anna, Miss Scheff as Zerlina, Mme. Gadski as Donna Elvira, Edouard de Reszke as Leporello, Mr. Salignac as Don Ottavio, Mr. Pini-Corsi as Massetto, Mr. Journet as the Commendatore, and Mr. Scotti as Don Giovanni.

Friday, "Tristan and Isolde," Miss Ternina, Mme. Schumann-Heink, the Messrs. de Reszke and Mr. Bispham.

Saturday afternoon, "Tannhäuser," with Mme. Gadski as Elizabeth, Mme. Nordica as Venus, and Messrs. Van Dyck, Blass, and Bertram in their usual parts.

Saturday evening, "Mefistofele," with the same cast as at the performance of Monday last.

To-night the regular weekly concert will be given, the soloists being Mmes. Nordica and Schumann-Heink, Miss Scheff, Mr. de la Tour, Mr. Campanari, and Mr. Plançon. The second half of the concert will be devoted to Rossini's "Stabat Mater."

The American Symphony Orchestra.

No project in the past decade has more warmly enlisted the sympathies of music lovers than the series of three concerts inaugurated this season by Mr. Sam Franko and his American Symphony Orchestra. These concerts have enabled us to hear the old masters' works performed in the spirit in which they were conceived. The masterpieces of Haydn and Mozart were originally produced by a small orchestra in a small hall, and the presentation of such works under modern conditions robs them of their greatest charm and effect. Having established conditions similar to those which formerly existed, Mr. Franko is enabled to reveal in these old works hitherto unsuspected beauties.

The quaint, refreshing programmes, the zeal and excellence displayed in their performance, have excited such wide interest that the well-wishers of Mr. Franko's concerts desire to make them a permanent feature of our musical life. With this end in view, three additional concerts are contemplated for the Lenten season, the dates for which are as follows: Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 26, Tuesday afternoon, March 12, and Tuesday afternoon, March 26, at 3 o'clock, at the Lyceum Theatre.

First Pittsburg Orchestra Concert.

The programme of the first concert of the second season in New York of the Pittsburg Orchestra, Victor Herbert conductor, to be given in Carnegie Hall, Tuesday evening, Jan. 22, is as follows:

Overture, "Leonore," No. 3.....Beethoven
Aria, "Dove Segno".....Mozart
Symphony, No. 5, in E minor.....Dvorak
From "The New World."
Symphonic Poem, "Hero and Leander," Op. 33.....Herbert
(New; first time in New York.)
Songs with Pianoforte—
"Mignon".....Liszt
"Serenade".....Richard Strauss
"Capriccio Espagnol".....Rimsky-Korsakoff

The soloist will be Mrs. Dorothy Harvey, a young soprano singer of New York who has not yet been heard publicly.

Strauss's "Vienna Life."

The coming production of Johann Strauss's operetta, "Vienna Life," (Wiener Blut,) at the Broadway Theatre on Wednesday next, Jan. 23, promises to be an important addition to the attractions at present in the city. The opera is stated by musicians to be the most beautiful that the "Waltz King" has ever written. All through the three acts the strains of "The Blue Danube," "Wine, Woman, and Song," and "Vienna Woods" ripple like threads of fine gold, and the finales arise to the importance of grand operas.

The American libretto, by Glen MacDonough, tells the story of a love complication on the Danube between an Austrian Count and a Viennese dancer. The dancer rents the Count's villa, not knowing it was her lover's, and the arrival of the Countess and a Prince Reuss complicates matters, the Countess being taken for the dancer and the dancer for the Countess. "Pepi," a milliner's model, and "Josef," the Count's valet, have a love episode, which adds to the complications, and they are finally unraveled by the Count and Countess coming together and the Prince marrying the dancer, whose father, Kaegler, is a marplot all through the play. The production will be on an elaborate scale. A grand march of Austrian lancers and a gavotte in the second act are the spectacular features, and the great white and gold ballroom in the second act will rival the famous pink ballroom in "Erminie."

"The Key to Arcadie," "A Mantelpiece Tragedy," and a Hungarian Czardas, song and dance are the principal songs. Mr. Aronson is making a supreme effort to make this offering even better than his well-known productions when he was at the head of the Casino. He wishes to revive the days of "The Queen's Lace Handkerchief," "Fledermaus," and "The Merry War."

Miss Olitzka's Song Recital.

Miss Rosa Olitzka, one of the contraltos of the Metropolitan Opera House company, will give a song recital at Mendelssohn Hall at 2:30 P. M. on Tuesday, Jan. 24. She will sing songs by Marullo, Durante, Schubert, Jensen, Schumann, Brahms, Grieg, Saar, Mackenzie, D'Albert, and Bizet. She will be assisted by Maud Powell, the distinguished violinist, who will play Tartini's sonata, "Didone Abbandonata," and Hubay's "Scenes de la Czardas."

Miss Boxall's Harp Recital.

Miss Avice Boxall, harpist, will give a recital at Mendelssohn Hall on Friday at 3:30, assisted by Gwilym Miles, baritone. A feature of the entertainment will be traditional Welsh melodies for the harp and traditional Welsh songs to be sung by Mr. Miles, with harp accompaniment.

NOTES OF MUSIC.

Hattie Scholder will give a piano recital at Mendelssohn Hall on Tuesday, Jan. 29.

The Marquis de Souza will make his New York début at Carnegie Hall Jan. 24, with a full orchestra under the directorship of Victor Harris. He will sing, among other numbers, the "Credo," from Verdi's "Othello," the prologue to "I Pagliacci," and probably the Toreador song from "Carmen." At this concert will be heard for the first time in New York the great Rachmaninoff concerto, scored for full orchestra, including tuba. This will be played by the eminent Dutch pianist, Martinus Sieveking.

MASCAGNI'S NEW OPERA.

"La Maschere" Badly Received Everywhere but in Rome.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—Mascagni's new opera, "La Maschere," was produced on Thursday, simultaneously in six Italian cities. Only at Rome, where the composer conducted the orchestra, was the audience approving. At Milan the opera was received with jeers and hisses. The audiences elsewhere were large and distinguished, but cold.

Mascagni says the result exceeded his anticipations. He wished to revive the old school of lyrical opera and show the public they tolerated modern monstrosities only because they could find nothing better.

The music is reminiscent of "La Cavalleria Rusticana." The critics say there are beautiful passages, but that it lacks originality.

THE SPITZBERGEN EXPEDITION.

Its Object—to Determine the True Shape of the Earth—Achieved.

Foreign Correspondence NEW YORK TIMES.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 7.—M. Akhmatoff, a member of the scientific expedition sent by the Russian Government to Spitzbergen, is about to publish a work dealing with his explorations during the seventeen months which he spent in the Far North. The principal purpose of the expedition—which consisted of MM. Akhmatoff, Vassilieff, Sergwieosky, Sicora, Pedaschenko, Stelling, Beyer, Bakhund, and Bialiaitsky-Biroulia—was to measure the linear extent of an axis of the meridian in the regions near the pole, the object of these calculations being to determine the extent of the gradual flattening of the globe, and, consequently, the real shape of the earth. This purpose was fully achieved by the expedition, the members of which spent four and a half months of the long polar night in their improvised village of Constantinovskoe.

HEARD ABOUT TOWN.

Young Yale is just now busying itself with what is to many of its students the chief social event of their college year. That is the "Junior Prom." Tuesday is the day fixed for the event, and the big, barren Second Regiment Armory is the place. For a week decorators have been at work putting the armory in shape for the promenade, where the débutantes of this and belles of the last century will disport themselves under the espionage of a lot of chaperons whose names figure prominently in the social life of the whole country. As the students at the university come from all over the country, so do the young ladies who will dance with them on Tuesday night. Every room in every hotel of consequence at New Haven has been engaged for visitors for this week. Saturday saw the first of the arrivals in the City of Elms, a party from St. Louis coming here on a special car which was switched off here and sent on to New Haven over the "Consolidated" Road. The large parties which always attend the promenade from this city, Boston, Philadelphia, Hartford, Pittsburg, and Chicago are due to arrive in New Haven on Monday morning, so as to be there in time for the class and society germans which precede the greater dance of the week. The whole week will be given over to social merry-making, and the list of announced teas and receptions, more or less formal, already are numbered by the score. It is Yale's social week, and the students and their parents and friends make the most of it. It is also one of the most notable assemblages of pretty girls of a year, and there are types of beauty of all sorts that would give Gibson or any of the other illustrators of the American girl material for a year's work. Always there are sure to be present two or three Southern beauties, than whom there are no more striking ones in the whole country. These have an air, a carriage, and a willowy grace so distinctively their own as to make them the envied of their pretty sisters from other localities, not excepting the New York girls. Those Southern girls are a languorous sort whose graces always create havoc among the impressionable young students. So they are sure to receive while in New Haven enough violets—the distinctive Yale flower—to enable them to live during their visit in a bower of these fragrant blossoms. A hundred or more of the more recent graduates now living here are among those who will go to New Haven for the Tuesday evening dance and the attendant festivities.

***

Speaking of those elms at Yale, graduates who go there the coming week will find that time, asphalt pavements, and beetles have worked ravages among them, to which has just been added the destruction of an ice storm a couple of weeks ago, which tore from some of the grand old trees about the colleges and the Green hundreds of sturdy branches that looked able to withstand almost any storm. So serious has the damage been to these famous trees that the city and college authorities have combined forces to try to save what remain of the old ones and replace the ruined giants with young trees. Prof. Brewer of the Scientific School is at the head of a committee that will get to work in the Spring on a systematic plan they have worked out to save the trees, whose worst enemy seems to be the elm beetle. To the recently established Forestry School will be intrusted the work of replacing the dead and ruined trees now in evidence all about the town with young and sturdy trees. These latter are to be removed from the outlying sections where they have thrived, while those in the centre have been slowly going to decay. Particular attention is to be given to what remains of the campus within the college inclosure. There it is proposed to have a miniature grove of the trees, so that the traditional elms shall not go the way of that old fence, which every graduate of more than a score of years misses more than anything else about his Alma Mater.

***

Skating parties at Lake Whitney are always a feature of promenade week. In these the graduate visitors always figure largely, as they furnish marvelously good opportunities for flirtations and social pleasures. This year the "grads" will miss old Mrs. Day, whose house on the edge of the lake has always been a rendezvous for such parties as consider it necessary to indulge in some of her home-made ginger cakes and root beer as a climax to an afternoon's skating. For somewhere about fifty years Mrs. Day had been an occupant of the old Day homestead, and during that time was known to nearly every Yale man who either skated or rowed on the lake. The interior of her little house is a veritable Yale museum, containing as it does photographs of about all the Yale men for more than a generation who have achieved success in any line of sports. There are pictures of all the crews, football, baseball, and athletic teams, including portraits of "Bob" Cook, Julian Kennedy, Walter Camp, "Hal" Ives, Beecher, Bull, Heffelfinger, Charities Commissioner Keller, Louis K. Hull, Richards, and most of the other old-timers, as well as the more recently famous of Yale's athletic contingent. There, too, was and still is, a collection of old playbills and photographs of actors and actresses of the past, these latter the accumulation of "Charlie" Day, a son of the owner of the cottage, and himself for many years the press agent for Barnum, Forepaugh, Lent, and other old-time circus managers. Mrs. Day died about a week ago at the age of eighty-one, and she will be missed by many who remember her kindly and motherly ways and particularly her aversion to whistling students. These latter she would not allow to indulge in their ear-racking music in her cottage, no matter how liberal they might be in patronage of her cake and root-beer counter. It won't seem quite like the old Lake Whitney with Mrs. Day gone, but changes have been rapid and many within the past decade "neath the elms of dear old Yale," and her passing is but one of the least of these.

***

They had been to Florida to escape the rigors of the peculiar weather here that so fosters the grip. "I suppose you had charming weather down there?" queried a friend who was at the station when they returned to find Spring weather prevailing here.

"That's where you will make a serious mistake, if you suppose anything of the kind," remarked the spokesman of the party. "It was colder than it is up here now, and they actually had tents over the trees and oil stoves in full blast under the tents to keep the orange trees from freezing."

***

Newporters are just now in the throes of an agitation that stirs the little town from centre to circumference. It is all because the new Mayor, Garretson, and his Common Council have abolished the official bell ringers of the town. From time immemorial it has been a quaint custom there to ring the church bells at certain hours of the day. This bell ringing has been supposed to tell the people of the sleepy little town of the time when they must go to work, may quite work, when to eat their meals, and, in the evening, when it was time to retire. Permanent residents there have come to regulate their lives by these church bells. To the casual visitor they seemed to be a continuous system of fire alarms. The great Summer colony from this city became used to and rather liked the custom, because it was so quaint and quiet and weird and all that sort of thing. It is a far more serious matter with the resident Newporter. He does not like his customs and habits inter

ANNOUNCEMENTS OF DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL ENTERTAINMENTS.

PROCTOR'S

Five Beautiful Theatres devoted to High Class Continuous Vaudeville—A Policy Established in 1885. Play Houses. Direction of F. F. Proctor, Sole Proprietor and Manager. J. Austin Fynes, General Manager.

23D ST.

12:30 to 10:45 P. M.
TO-MORROW AND ALL WEEK.
Special Engagement.
ROSE COGHLAN
AND LOUIS JAMES
in "The Ace of Trumps"
LEW HAWKINS, MR. & MRS. GUSTIN NEWBURG, MADDEN & WAYNE.
MLLE. DELMORE.
Novel Wire Act.
FIELDS & WARD, WOOD & RAY.
THREE BARRETTS.
JOE WELCH.
In New Character Sketch.
SPENCER KELLY, GEORGIE MACK & NELLIE DEEBLE, LIZZIE B. RAYMOND, the KALATECHNOSCOPE.
PRICES 50c., 25c. & 10c.
Reserved Seats, $1.00.
Continuous Concert To-day, 2 to 10:45 P. M.

5TH AVE.

Broadway and 28th St.
12:30 SHARP to 10:45 P. M.
TO-MORROW AND ALL WEEK.
Vaudeville's Artistic Sensation!
JEAN MARCEL'S
LIVING STATUARY AND BAS-RELIEFS.
J. W. ALGAUGH, JR., & Stock Co.; WILL F. DENNY, WINONA & BANKS WINTER, CLAYTON WHITE, MARIE STUART and Co. in "Dickey."
3 MASCAGNOS, DILLON BROS., MONTAGUE & WEST, GASPARD BROS.
RALPH JOHNSTONE, "The Demon of the Diamond Frame."
PRESS ELDRIDGE, HORNMANN, CARL REINHOLD, CONNORS & BEATTIE, the KALATECHNOSCOPE.
BROADWAY'S LOWEST PRICES—25c. & 50c. Box Seats, $1.00.
Continuous Concert To-day, 2 to 10:45 P. M.

PALACE.

58th St. and 3d Av.
2 to 10:45 P. M.
TO-MORROW AND ALL WEEK.
Special Engagement of
HARRY WATSON
and His Comedy Co. in "Two Flats"
JESS VERNON, the KALATECHNOSCOPE.
RUSSELL BROS.
"The Irish Servant Girls."
JANE WHITBECK, DOHERTY'S POODLES, MARTINE BROS.
Al Leech and 3 Rosebuds.
"Examination Day at School."
LEW SULLY, TRASK & GLADDEN, the KALATECHNOSCOPE.
Mr. & Mrs. Perkins D. Fisher
In "The Half-Way House."
JOHNNIE CARROLL, LEVANTINE, THE HELSTONS, etc.
BARGAIN PRICES: Afternoons, 15 & 25c. Evenings, 15, 25, 50c.
Continuous Concert To-day, 2 to 10:45 P. M.

125TH ST.

2 to 10:45 P. M.
TO-MORROW AND ALL WEEK,
Special Engagement of
HARRY WATSON
and His Comedy Co. in "Two Flats"
JESS VERNON, the KALATECHNOSCOPE.
STREATOR ZOUAVES
Marvelous Military Manoeuvers and Wall Scaling.
THE GOOLMANS, TALBOT & DAVIDSON, FRANK URBAN. Vaudeville's Favorite Actress, LILLIAN BURKHART
In "A Passing Fancy."
LOSH & HUPP, TOM MACK, THE BROWNINGS, etc.
HARLEM'S LOWEST PRICES: Afternoons, 15c. & 25c. Evenings, 15c., 25c. & 50c.
Continuous Concert To-day, 2 to 10:45 P. M.

WALLACK'S

B'way and 30th St. Evenings at 8:20.
SECOND MONTH OF THE GREAT SUCCESS.
MARY MANNERING
in
"JANICE MEREDITH"
Dramatized by Paul Leicester Ford & F. E. Rose.
Special Matinées Feb. 12th (Lincoln Day.) and Feb. 22. (Washington's Birthday.) Seats now on sale.
REGULAR MATS. WED. & SAT. 2:15.

REPUBLIC

42d St., just west of B'way.
Mats. Wednesday and Saturday, 2:15.
FOURTH WEEK
Seats selling four weeks in advance.
VIOLA ALLEN
in
Mrs. Burton Crawford's play,
THE PALACE OF THE KING

GRAND

Prices, 25c., 50c., 75c., $1.00.
Matinees Wed. and Sat., 2:15.
Pop. Wed. Mat. 25c., 50c.
Frohman's $40,000 Production
20 PEOPLE
IN STAGE SCENES.
TRUMPS ARE 14 MASSIVE SCENES.
Big Concert, 10c., 25c., 50c.
JAS. RICHMOND GLENROY, others.

NEW YORK

THIS AFT'N AT 2. TO-NIGHT AT 8:15.
CONCERT (NO HIGHER) 50c
ALL SEATS.
ALL-STAR BILL!!!
Night and Mats. Wed. & Sat.
Features, Followed by Vaudeville, Rosenfeld & Sloane's
THE GIDDY THRONG. STAR CAST.

MENDELSSOHN HALL, TUES., AT 3.

FINAL LECTURE BY W. H.
LAWTON.
The Art of Singing as instituted by Farinelli. Illustrated by Handel, Verdi, Rosa, Clay, and Donizetti. Tickets on sale at Ditson's.

AMERICAN

42D ST. AND 8TH AV.
Evgs. 8:15. 25c., 35c., 50.
Matinee Today. "A CELEBRATED CASE,"
(Arr. Mon.) Next Week—Held by the Enemy.

CASINO

Broadway and 39th Street.
SIRE BROS.....Mgrs.
Every Eve. at 8:15. Matinées Saturday.
ELEVENTH BIG WEEK of the merriest of FLORODORA
All Musical Comedies.
Good Stock Cast.
EDNA WALLACE-HOPPER.
W. J. FERGUSON.
CYRIL SCOTT, FANNIE JOHNSTON, H. E. GRESHAM, MAY EDOUIN.

BROADWAY THEATRE

41st St. & B'dway.
Ev., 8:15. Mt. St. 2:15
JACOB LITT.....Proprietor
RUDOLPH ARONSON PRESENTS ON Wednesday, Jan. 23,
VIENNA LIFE
(WIENER BLUT,)
an operetta in three acts.
Music by
JOHANN STRAUSS.
Libretto by Victor Leon and Leo Stein.
English adaptation and lyrics by Glen MacDonough.
Staged by.....A. F. MacCollin
Musical Director.....Selli Simonson

ADMISSION 25c. SUNDAYS.

WORLD IN WAX
EDEN MUSEE
—NEW TO-DAY—
SPECIAL GROUPS AND FIGURES.
THE PATERSON SENSATION,
McALISTER, CAMPBELL, and DEATH.
This Afternoon and Evening,
NEW TROUBADORS AND ORCHESTRA.

Opens Wednesday Morning

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN.
POULTRY, PIGEON AND PET STOCK SHOW.
WILL RUN ONLY 4 DAYS
NEW YORK POULTRY, PIGEON and PET STOCK ASSOCIATION (Ltd).
12TH ANNUAL EXHIBITION.
9 A. M. TO 10:30 P. M. ADM., 50 CENTS; CHILDREN, 25 CTS.

WEBER & FIELDS' MUSIC HALL.

Evgs. 8:15 Sharp.
Mats. Tues., Sat., 2.
FIDDLE-DEE-DEE and Burlesque of Gay Lord Quex and A Royal Family.

MURRAY

HILL THEA., Lexington Av. & 42d St. Evenings, 8:15. Matinées, 2:00.
One Block East of Grand Central Depot.
3d YEAR, 4TH YEAR, 5TH YEAR, 6TH YEAR
MATINEE 25c. EVERY DAY
HENRY V. DONNELLY STOCK CO.
THIS WEEK
NELL GWYN
BY MRS. C. A. DOREMUS
EVENING—25—35—50—PRICES.
Week of Jan. 28, A SOCIAL HIGHWAYMAN

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

14th St. & Irving Pl.
E. G. Gilmore & Eugene Tompkins..Props. & Mgrs.
LAST WEEK.
QUO VADIS
PRICES, 25, 50, 75c., $1.
Last Matinées, Wed. & Sat. at 2. Evenings, 8.
The London Production IN THE CAST ARE Wilton Lackaye, Elita Proctor Otis, Aubrey Boucicault, Bijou Fernandez, Frank Mordaunt, and over 200 others.
EXTRA—MONDAY EVE., JAN. 28TH, Charles Frohman's Big Production of BARBARA FRIETCHIE EFFIE ELLSLER.
Seats Now on Sale. Popular Prices.

HERALD SQUARE THEATRE

Every Evg. at 8. Mats. at 2 Wed. and Sat.
3D RECORD-BREAKING WEEK.
"'The Girl From Up There' will carry everything before it."—Herald.
"Whooping Success."—Sun.
Charles Frohman's Musical Comedy Co. with EDNA MAY
Presenting Morton & Kerker's
THE GIRL FROM UP THERE

MANHATTAN THEATRE.

Evgs., 8:15. Mats. 33d & B'way. Wed. & Sat.
LAST WEEK THE MUSICAL COMEDY
THE BURGOMASTER.
Fri., Feb. 1, the New Clyde Fitch Play,
LOVERS' LANE.
Presented by Brady & Ziegfeld.
Sale of Seats Begins Mon., Jan. 28.

BIJOU

SECOND WEEK
The distinguished success
AMELIA BINGHAM COMPANY
In Clyde Fitch's latest play
Evenings at 8:15. Matinées Wed. & Sat. at 2:15.
THE CLIMBERS
Seats on sale four week in advance.

HAMMERSTEIN'S VICTORIA

42d St., B'way, and 7th Av.
Evgs., 8:30. Mat. Sat., 2:15. Gen. Adm., 50c.
—BEGINNING—
MONDAY EVE. JAN. 21ST.
Dunne & Ryley's Musical Comedy Co., with
MATHEWS —AND— BULGER
In the NEW Vaudeville,
THE NIGHT OF THE 4TH.
Presented by a company of 60,
Including Joseph Coyne, Josie De Witt, Philip H. Ryley, Maude Courtney, (who sings the old songs,) and
WALTER JONES
Lyrics by J. Sherrie Mathews.
Music by Max Hoffman.
Staged by Ned Wayburn.

KNICKERBOCKER THEATRE.

B'way, cor. 38th
AL. HAYMAN & CO.....Proprietors
TO-MORROW EVG. AT 8:20.
MATINEE SATURDAY 2:15.
MR. GOODWIN
N. C.
MISS ELLIOTT
MAXINE
IN
WHEN WE WERE TWENTY-ONE
H. V. ESMOND'S EXQUISITE COMEDY.

EMPIRE THEATRE.

B'way & 40th St.
Evgs., 8:20. Matinées, 2:15.
"Decided success."—Herald. Mats. Wed. & Sat.
Empire Theatre Company in MRS. DANE'S DEFENSE

CHARLES FROHMAN'S CRITERION THEATRE,

B'way and 44th St.
EVENINGS AT 8:15. MATINEE SATURDAY.
JULIA MARLOWE | WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER.

MADISON SQ. THEATRE.

24th St., nr. B'way.
Mats. Wed and Saturday. Evening, 8:30.
HERBERT KELCEY | MY LADY DAINTY
EFFIE SHANNON

GARRICK THEATRE.

35th St. & B'way
Evenings, 8:15. Mats., 2:15.
Last 2 weeks. Mats. Wed and Sat.
WM. H. CRANE as DAVID HARUM.

GARDEN THEATRE.

27th St. & Madison Av.
Last 6 nights.
Last 2 matinées.
E. S. WILLARD
Mon., Tues., & Wed Evgs. THE MIDDLEMAN.
Mats., Wednesday, Saturday, TOM PINCH.
Thurs., Fri. & Sat. Evgs. The Professor's Love Story

DALY'S

B'way & 30. Begins 8:15. Matinées Wed. and Sat. at 2.
Lady Huntworth's Experiment
2D MONTH.
DANIEL FROHMAN'S COMPANY.
"A Credit to Daly's stage."—Press.
2d DAMROSCH-WAGNER PIANO LECTURE, TUESDAY, 2:30, Walkure; Jan. 25, Siegfried.

LYCEUM

4th Av. & 23d.....At 8:30
Daniel Frohman....Manager
Matinées Thurs. & Sat., 2:15
.....LAST TWO WEEKS.....
ANNIE RUSSELL in A ROYAL FAMILY.
A ROYAL FAMILY.
Feb. 4—HENRY MILLER in "Rich'd Savage."

14TH ST.

Theatre, nr. 6th Av. Mats. Wed. & Sat. Res. orch. cir. or bal., 50c
3D RECORD BREAKING WEEK.
Mr. Chauncey OLCOTT
In his greatest success,
GARRETT O'MAGH
All new songs.
"As the hero in his new play he is seen at his best, and his songs are many and new."—Journal.

CHILDREN'S THEATRE.

CARNEGIE LYCEUM, 57th St. and 7th Av.
Wednesday & Saturday Afts., at 3 o'clock.
"THE CLOWN AND THE LOCKET,"
by Frank C. Drake.
The Funny Donkey, The May-Pole Dance, The Highwayman's Camp.
GOOD RESERVED SEATS, 50c.

IRVING PLACE THEATRE.

—Monday Eve. Benefit for the Library Fund of "Deutscher Verein." Columbia University. Lessing's "Minna Von Barnhelm." Tuesday and every eve. "A Musical Farce" in 4 acts. In the 3d act, "THE JEWISH CAFE HOUSE," "Die Kinbrinsparthie."

HUBER'S 14TH ST. MUSEUM.

10c. TO ALL
Something new daily. Big Continuous Show.
20—BIG STAR FEATURES—20

MLLE. DELMORE,
Hypnotic Dancing Marvel. Greatest spectacular dances ever contrived, including fire dance of death.
LALA KOOLA,
physiological phenomenon.
½ MAN, ½ WOMAN,
Only one known to history.
Clark's Performing Goats.
THEATRE—Ada Jones, Galvins, Newsboys' Quartet, Courtney & Dunn, Walter Hyde, Susie Raymond, Projectoscope, Gracie Dunbar.
SUNDAY CONCERTS. SPECIAL BILL.

SAVOY

34th St., near Broadway.
Matinées Wed. & Saturday.
Sale of Seats Begins
NEXT TUESDAY MORNING for Liebler & Co.'s production of
UNLEAVENED BREAD
A dramatization of Robert Grant's novel, by Judge Grant and Leo Ditrichstein.
THE CAST WILL INCLUDE:
E. J. Morgan, Elizabeth Tyree,
George Fawcett, Eleanor Robson,
George Woodward, Alice Fischer,
Morton Selten, Margaret Fuller,
Malcolm Williams, Virginia Buchanan,

GERMAN CHARITY BALL,

Given Under the Auspices of the Bachelor Societies of the "German Liederkranz"
"ARION"
BEETHOVEN MÆNNERCHOR, AT THE WALDORF-ASTORIA,
JAN. 31, 1901.

THE DEWEY

EAST 14TH ST. BETWEEN 3RD & 4TH AVS.
TO-NIGHT
GRAND GALA "POP"
JOHN W. RANSONE, YORKE & ADAMS, MAUD NUGENT, STANLEY & WILSON, RAE & BROSCHE, 3 RACKETT BROS. MACK & ARMOUR, KITTY RAMPONE, HOFFMAN & MAURICE, Robt. Recker's Harmonists.
Com. To-Morrow, Mon. Mat. & all week
New City Sports Burlesquers.
Basket Ball Players.
NEW LIVING PICTURES.

HURTIG & SEAMON'S

MUSIC HALL 125TH ST. & 7TH AVE. MATS. WED. & SAT.

TO-NIGHT	DAN. E. BANDMAN & CO.
TO-NIGHT	4 Collins, Florence Bindley, Ameta,
TO-NIGHT	Howard's Ponies, Alf Grant, Baker & Lynn, Manning & Davis, and
TO-NIGHT	MILTON & DOLLY NOBLES.
TO-MORROW	THE BEHMAN SHOW
TO-MORROW	Last Vaudeville Appearance of
TO-MORROW	THE FOUR COHANS,
TO-MORROW	Yorke & Adams, John Kerneli,
TO-MORROW	Falke & Semon, Ethel Levey,
TO-MORROW	Hawaiian Queens.
TO-MORROW	ZENO, CARL & ZENO.

1884. 1900.
The AMERICAN ACADEMY OF DRAMATIC ARTS and EMPIRE THEATRE DRAMATIC SCHOOL.
Franklin H. Sargent, President. A practical training school in connection with Mr. CHARLES FROHMAN'S Empire Theatre and traveling companies. Apply to E. P. STEPHENSON, Gen'l Mgr., Room 145, Carnegie Hall.

HARLEM OPERA HOUSE

Evenings, 8:15. Mat. Sat., 2:15.
LULU GLASER IN SWEET ANNE PAGE
Jan. 28th—ANNA HELD in PAPA'S WIFE.

METROPOLIS

THEATRE, 142d St. & 3d Av.
Evgs 8:15. Mats. Wed. & Sat.
ROSE MELVILLE in "SIS HOPKINS."

CARNEGIE HALL Thursday Evening, Jan. 24, at 8:15
First appearance in New York of
Marquis de Souza
The Phenomenal Portuguese Baritone
(By arrangement with Mr. Gustav Thalberg)
WITH Grand Orchestra (VICTOR HARRIS, Conductor,) and Martinus Sieveking
(The Great Dutch Pianist.)
Reserved seats $1.50, $1.00, 50c. Boxes $12 and $15.
Tickets on sale at Schuberth's, Tyson's, Rullman's, and Box Office.
MANAGEMENT.....M. L. PINKHAM
STEINWAY PIANO USED.

KEITH'S

CONTINUOUS PERFORMANCE. E. F. ALBEE - - - General Manager
ALWAYS THE BEST VAUDEVILLE SHOW IN NEW YORK.
MARSHALL P. WILDER, Prince of Entertainers. First Appearance in New York of FANNY RICE, in the Hit of the Season, "NELL GWYN," with a Sumptuous Setting. CHAS. WAYNE & ANNA CALDWELL in "To Boston on Business." CHARLIE CASE, Who Talks About His Father.
JOHN C. BOWKER, "Travelogue" on Paris Exposition. CARROLL JOHNSON, Monologue Humorist CLARICE VANCE, Mlle. LOTTY, Beautiful Poses. TECHOW'S CATS & DOGS. BIOGRAPH. Next week: MAY DE SOUSA, singing "DEAR MIDNIGHT OF LOVE," by Alderman John J. Coughlin, of Chicago, ("Bath House John.")

KOSTER & BIAL'S

W. 34 St. Evgs., 7:45. Mats., 1:45.
½ RATE ½ CUT IN PRICES.
Daily Matinée, com. Monday, and All Week.
25c. Sunday Mat. To-day—To-ngt.
All Orc. Every day. No higher.
Tavary Grand Opera Co., including Mme. Tavary; Julius Perotti and A. S. Veron; Blocksom & Burns, Louis Simons & Co., Harry Le Clair, Windom Quintet, Violet Friend, Annie Hart, Lavender & Tomson, Fox & Foxie, Morrell & Evans, Scott & Wilson, Others.
50c.
All Orc. Every ngt.
Ugo Biondi, Hope Booth, Four Colonials, Florence Bindley, Dixon, Bowers, Dixon, Arty Hall, Tenly & Simmons, Maximilion & Shields, Clover Trio, Jordan & Crouch, Elna Murillo, 9 Mozoomi Arabs, Tavary Opera Co. scene from "Il Trovatore."

CARNEGIE HALL
TWO CONCERTS Tues Evg Jan 22 Tues Evg Feb 12
Pittsburgh Orchestra
Victor Herbert Conductor.
Soloist, Jan. 22, Mrs. Dorothy Harvey. Seats, 50c. to $1.50; Boxes, $12 & $15. Now on sale at SCHUBERTH'S, TYSON'S, HOTELS, and BOX OFFICE.

MENDELSSOHN HALL.
THURSDAY AFT., Feb. 14, at 3.
Piano Recital | Bloomfield-Zeisler
Res. Seats, $1.50, $1. at Schuberth's.
Management.....HENRY WOLFSOHN

Kreisler

THE GREAT VIOLINIST.
Hugo Becker
THE MASTER OF THE 'CELLO.
Available January and February.
Address WOLFSOHN, 131 East 17th St.

MENDELSSOHN HALL.....BOXALL
Friday Afternoon, Jan. 25, at 3:30.
HARP RECITAL | BOXALL
Assisted by Gwilym Miles, Vocalist.
Res. seats $1.50, $1.00 at Schuberth's, 23 Union Sq.
Management.....HENRY WOLFSOHN

MENDELSSOHN HALL OLITZKA
Thursday Aft., January 24, at 2:30.
SO. G RECITAL | Rosa Olitzka
Assisted by Maud Powell, Violin.
Res. seats $1.50, $1.00 at Schuberth's, 23 Union Sq.
Management.....HENRY WOLFSOHN

Dannreuther Quartette

Second Concert—15th Season—1900-1901.
FINE ARTS BUILDING, 215 W. 57TH ST.
THURSDAY EVENING, Jan. 24, at 8:30.
Mrs. GUSTAV DANNREUTHER, Pianist.
Tickets at G. Schirmer's, Union Square.

THE CHARITY BALL

for the Nursery and Child's Hospital, will take place on Tuesday evening, Jan. 29, at the WALDORF-ASTORIA.
Boxes from 11 to 1 at 2 East 35th St. Tickets at 16 W. 11th St. and 19 W. 56th St.

ARION SOCIETY.

GRAND MASQUERADE BALL, MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, MONDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1901.

METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE
GRAND OPERA SEASON 1900—1901
Under the direction of Mr. Maurice Grau.
TO-NIGHT at 8:15 o'clock.
FIFTH GRAND SUNDAY NIGHT CONCERT. In addition to a miscellaneous concert, Rossini's STABAT MATER will be performed. Soloists: Mmes. Nordica, Scheff, and Schumann-Heink; MM. Imbert de la Tour, Campanari, and Plancon. Entire opera orchestra and chorus. Conductor, Mr. Mancinelli.
Mon. Ev'g. Jan. 21, at 8:15—LA BOHEME, (in Italian.) Mmes. Melba and Scheff; MM. Saléza, Gilibert, Journet, and Campanari. Conductor, Mancinelli.
Wed. Ev'g. Jan. 23, at 8—DON GIOVANNI, (in Italian.) Mmes. Nordica, Scheff, and Gadski; MM. Edouard de Reszke, Salignac, Journet, and Scottl. Conductor, Mancinelli.
Fri. Ev'g. Jan. 25, at 8—TRISTAN UND ISOLDE, (in German.) Mmes. Ternina and Schumann-Heink; MM. Jean and Ed. de Reszke, Muhlmann, and Bispham. Conductor, Damrosch.
Sat. Aft., Jan. 26, at 2—TANNHAUSER, (in German.) Mmes. Gadski, Olitzka, and Nordica; MM. Van Dyck, Blass, and Bertram. Conductor, Damrosch.
Sat. Ev'g. Jan. 26, at 8, at Popular Prices—MEFISTOFILE, (in Italian.) Mmes. Marguerite Macintyre and Louise Homer; MM. Cremonini and Plancon. Conductor, Mancinelli.
WEBER PIANOS USED.

WALTER DAMROSCH

DALY'S THEATRE.
PIANO LECTURE, TUESDAY, DIE WALKURE,

CARNEGIE HALL

Thursday Eve., Jan. 31, at 8:15
Major J. B. Pond announces the Last appearance, before sailing for England, of WINSTON SPENCER CHURCHILL, M. P.
War Correspondent, Author, Soldier, Lecturer, and the youngest member of the British Parliament.
Subject: "The War As I Saw It," Including the story of his Capture and Escape. Illustrated with 100 stereopticon pictures taken from photographs of the scenes of Mr. Churchill's exploits in South Africa.
Reserved seats $1.50, $1.00, 75c & 50c. Boxes, Lower Tier, $2.00; Upper Tier, $3.00. For Sale at the Hall & J. B. Pond's, 218 4th Av.

AMERICAN SCHOOL OF OPERA.

Wm. C. Stewart, Gen'l Director.
BERKELEY LYCEUM Theatre, 23 W. 44th St.
TUESDAY EVENING, JAN. 29—8:15 P. M.
CAVALLERIA RUSTICANA and SCENES from FAUST.
Tickets on sale at the school—$1.00 & 50c.

MENDELSSOHN HALL
Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 29th, at 2:30 P. M.
Piano Recital by Hattie Schofield, (9 years.)
Assisted by Mr. Paul Wiallard, Baritone, and Samuel Eppinger, Accompanist.
Seats, $1. Admission, 50c., at Schuberth's, 23 Union Sq.
STEINWAY PIANO USED.

MENDELSSOHN HALL
Monday Afternoon, January 21st, 2:30 o'clock.
PIANO AND VIOLIN RECITAL BY
Mr. and Mrs. Ludwig Breitner.
Reserved seats, $1.00 and $1.50. For sale at Schuberth's Music Store, 23 Union Square.

ON LOCAL BOWLING ALLEYS

Changes in Standing as a Result of the Week's Games.

METROPOLITAN'S VICTORIES

West Side Team Moves to First Place in American National Series—Standings of the Clubs.

The principal feature of the past week on the local bowling alleys was the quadruple victory of the Metropolitan team in the American National tournament which moved them from second to first place in the series, and they have only two more games to play and will probably win both of them, and so obtain first prize in the tournament. The Knickerbocker team still holds high team score in all series.

In the National League tournament the first three places are decided, going to the Imperial, Fidelia, and Greenville teams, respectively, but for fourth place is undecided as it lies between the Garden Rad and Metropolitan teams.

In the Harlem League tournament the Hyperions replace the Knickerbockers in second place as a result of the week's play. The Morrisania Athletics still lead the North Side League, but the Knickerbockers and the Prospects and the Hookers tie for fourth place.

The Mutual Life Insurance second team in its appearance in the Life Insurance League tournament this week and second place, and in the Fire Insurance League series the Underwriters tie with the Germanias for first place and the Phoenix team moves up from sixth to fifth place.

The standings of the teams in the principal bowling leagues follow:

NATIONAL BOWLING [illegible]

	Won.	Lost.	High Score.
[illegible] Bowling Club	[illegible]	[illegible]	1,014
[illegible] Bowling Club	[illegible]	[illegible]	977
[illegible] Athletic Association	[illegible]	[illegible]	981
[illegible] Bowling Club	[illegible]	[illegible]	1,002
[illegible] Bowling Club	[illegible]	[illegible]	1,011
[illegible] Athletic Club	[illegible]	[illegible]	972
[illegible] Royal Arcanum	[illegible]	[illegible]	965
[illegible] Bowling Club	[illegible]	[illegible]	952
[illegible] Bowling Club	[illegible]	[illegible]	965
[illegible] Bowling Club	[illegible]	[illegible]	987
[illegible] Bowling Club	[illegible]	[illegible]	914
[illegible] Bowling Club	[illegible]	[illegible]	925

AMERICAN NATIONAL TOURNAMENT.

	Won.	Lost.	High Score.
[illegible] Bowling Club	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

The New York Times.

"All the News That's Fit to Print."

PUBLISHED EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.

NEW YORK, SUNDAY, JAN. 20, 1901.

OFFICES:

NEW YORK:
Publication Office.....41 Park Row
All American District Telegraph Offices.
WASHINGTON.....515 Fourteenth St.
SWITZERLAND, Geneva: P. Drehmann, Libraire Nouvelle, Rue du Mont Blanc.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.
BY MAIL, POSTAGE PAID.

DAILY, per Month.....$0.50
DAILY, per Year.....6.00
DAILY AND SUNDAY, per Year.....7.50
SUNDAY, per Year.....1.50
MONDAY, with Financial Supplement, per Year.....1.00
DAILY AND SUNDAY, per Month.....0.65
THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW, per Year.....1.00

For postage to foreign countries add 80 cents per month.

TWENTY-EIGHT PAGES.

A SANE AND SOBER PEOPLE.

Nothing but distrust of the American character could have brought ex-President CLEVELAND into his present frame of mind. It is permissible to hope that our administration of the Philippine Islands may prove to be a rich blessing to the native population and of no disadvantage to ourselves. Mr. CLEVELAND has set himself firmly to look at the transaction just the other way. We oppress and shall destroy the Filipinos, and our public and private life will be demoralized in the frenzy of this foreign adventure. Other nations might do better. Certainly England has done better, for all over the world she has colony States of industrious and contented peoples. The fault, therefore, is not in the opportunity. It must be with ourselves. Mr. CLEVELAND thinks we cannot be trusted, we have not the qualities of a just, provident, and successful administrator.

When opportunity confronts a man—or a nation—he can do one of two things—embrace it or turn his back on it. We have passed that stage. We seized our opportunity. But alternative paths still stretch away before us. We can make wholesome and profitable use of our opportunity for expansion, or we can abuse it like a profligate and an incapable. The whole thought and almost every phrase of Mr. CLEVELAND'S Holland Society speech show that he accepts the theory of our incapacity. He foresees the demoralization of the keeper and the ruin of the kept. Distrust of our ability and of our temperament inspires that prophecy. We do not see how it can have any other origin.

To be sure, Mr. CLEVELAND speaks of his reverence for our traditions of conservatism, and he talks of attachment to "frugality and contented homes." These are virtues. As the subject matter of an essay or of a grave poem there is nothing finer than the contentment of a man who, having "arrived," sits down by his fireside with a book and resolves to let the wide world wag as it will. But the world is not much moved by the virtues of frugality and contentment alone. That is the doctrine of deadness. On the spot where and at the time when the ex-President spoke his words of doubt and warning the other night some very dirty red man would have been boiling his frugal pot in aboriginal contentment had the clear spirit of man in all the ages been repressed by fear of untried paths and complacent acceptance of "the good of now and here." We are forced, therefore, to repudiate the suggestion that it is the love of ease and security that primarily has moved Mr. CLEVELAND to the expression of these views. He is not constitutionally opposed to progress. Nothing in his public career indicates that he is opposed to it.

It is distrust that is at the bottom of his pessimism. He does not believe that the American people are capable of administering their new estate. The family acres they can manage. Beyond those safe limits he has no confidence in their husbandry.

What is there in our history, in our career, in our racial traits to engender this distrust? Our industrial and commercial ability has been so fully demonstrated that the chief nations of the earth openly avow their grave concern about our rivalry. We are advancing, rather rapidly, toward supremacy in the world's markets. That proves ability of a sort, say the critics, but it is gross and material, mere money-making ability. Its possession argues nothing for the nobler virtues of justice, honor, and respect for the rights of others. Is it not a barren, academic futility to argue about the justice and respect for the rights of others of a people who a few years ago freely gave their lives and their millions to strike off the shackles of the slave? But this new love of glory and of strange adventures will relax our reverence for the great traditions of our country and betray us into the undertaking of unmeet and perilous missions. Are we, then, so unsteady and unsafe? Is not the sure and sound growth of this Nation, the advancement to undisputed greatness of this people, the chief fact in modern history? Are we not respected by other nations? Do they not take us into account in their dealings? Is it the hazard of nature that has brought us to this stage of power and amplitude? Is it accident, is it blind luck?

If it is open to us to judge the future from the past, and there is no other way to judge it, Mr. CLEVELAND'S fears must be pronounced groundless and unjustified. We have proved ourselves to be an eminently sane and sober people. Our love of justice has so stamped itself upon our National policy that the modern laws of war and modern doctrines of neutrality are largely the growth of our suggestion and practice. We have never tolerated oppressive laws or unjust administration at home. What justification has anybody for asserting, inferring, or apprehending that this people will suddenly develop a fondness for denying to the Filipinos the rights and enjoyments they have so long insisted on for themselves? But we are denying these rights and enjoyments, say the critics. We should, indeed, have shown ourselves to be blind, foolish, and incapable if we had proceeded upon the assumption that the Filipinos, after four hundred years of Spanish rule and unnumbered centuries of anterior savagery and race admixture, had become by the fact of transfer to our sovereignty as sane and sober as, let us say, the people of Massachusetts. If they had all been wise, intelligent, far-seeing, and prudent, their own Legislatures would now be making their laws and their own Executives would be administering them, order would prevail, and a new industrial régime would be on its way to establishment. If that had all come to pass the anti-imperialists would now be getting up the eloquent statistics of our Eastern commerce and painting glowing pictures of our new honors and our unsurpassed National greatness.

This distrust of ourselves has been born of the present unhappy conditions in the Philippines. When the conditions disappear the distrust will disappear. We have no idea that the Administration intends to make those conditions permanent.

THE "CONFLICT" WITH AMERICAN INDUSTRY.

There are two points in the recent rather gloomy discussion of American competition by Lord ROSEBERY, Mr. CHAMBERLAIN, The London Times, and the writers in the quarterlies which are calculated to cause some surprise, when we think how long the study of the problem of trade and industry has engaged the best minds of England. One is the assumption that the relative advance on the part of the United States is due to some especial and temporary advantages enjoyed by us, and the other is that our advance is in some way permanently injurious to the nations who at the time are our rivals.

Lord ROSEBERY, for instance, laid much stress on the habit of American men of wealth in reinvesting their accumulations rather than in expending them for those social luxuries and possessions so eagerly sought in older countries. But, as is clearly pointed out in The Evening Post, this would be of small effect if it were not for the contributions of innumerable outsiders which the commanders of industry are able to secure. Mr. CHAMBERLAIN rests much emphasis on the improved methods of the United States, which only special education can enable his countrymen to rival. But special education provided by the State has been carried much further in Germany and in France than in the United States. What superiority of methods we may possess has been worked out by an entirely different plan and without serious direct aid or interference from the National or the State Governments. Indeed, it is only a short time ago that our own writers, including some in the service of the Government, were bewailing the fact that Germany turned out of her schools a dozen trained industrial chemists, metallurgists, and electricans to one in this country, and KRUPP was thus enabled to keep on hand a large force of this sort, at very low pay, stimulated to the last degree by the hope of even small advance. Perhaps the German way is a good one, but clearly it is not indispensable.

If, now, we turn to the essential elements of advantage that have been enjoyed by the American people, we think that they will be found to be the following: In the first place, we have in the last century come into possession of a vast territory with a greater range and variety of natural resources than any country of the Old World could boast. Of the staples demanded by the prime needs of the race, for food, shelter, clothing—grain and textiles and woods and metals—there has been a practically unlimited supply. With these we had in the early days accessible water power, and, with the later development of steam, we had great stores of coal for fuel. Our population was emigrants or the descendants of emigrants from the Old World, which is to say that it was composed of men and women of more than the usual courage and force of character, since these only would make the venture. On the sturdy English stock were grafted shoots from the best of the European stock. This population, however crude and uncultured in its beginnings, had the precious stimulus of necessity on the one hand and political and social freedom on the other. Its members had from the first the tremendous and fruitful incentive of discontent with their lot and liberty to improve it by their own efforts. Finally the American people have had from the foundation of the National Government the enormous advantage of absolute free exchange over a vaster area, with a greater variety of products, among a constantly growing population. They have worked under the lash and spur of open competition, with no limit to the progress of the successful. These are conditions that have not obtained anywhere else on the surface of the globe. It is not so wonderful that they have produced unexampled advance as it would have been had they failed so to do.

As to the second point, it seems to us too plain to be argued that the progress of this country has been and in the main must be of advantage to all with whom trade is maintained. If we are "invading" the markets of Europe, we are carrying to them the things needed by the people of Europe either at less cost or of better quality. We are not giving them away, we must exchange them, and in the exchange both parties must in the long run profit. Bargaining in which one side was always the loser or was cheated would soon come to an end. If the production and exchange of constantly cheaper commodities were not a profitable occupation, the Phoenicians would never have passed the Pillars of Hercules, and the Indians would still hunt and fish on the Island of Manhattan. For the time there is necessarily disturbance and distress in the process of adjustment, as the English find, but it is of the sort that they have been imposing on their rivals for some three centuries. Their advance, due in part to the same causes as our own, was on the whole beneficent. Our own will prove still more so, because based on more permanent and broader conditions.

THE BRITISH SUCCESSION.

We are in the habit of dating the beginning of modern, as distinguished from mediaeval, history at the sixteenth century. But it seems as if, in political history, we had been antedating it by some centuries. It is only with the American Revolution and the French Revolution and the English Reform bill that the existing political era has come into being. And all these events have tended to one result, the democratization of politics and the diffusion of political power. There was a striking remark about industrial development the other day, in one of the reviews of the century, to the effect that by dint of living before the age of steam, JULIUS CAESAR and NAPOLEON were nearer to each other than the later of them was to us. And, in the same sense, we may say that in respect to political development that the twentieth century is more remote from the eighteenth than the eighteenth from the fourteenth. It is in proportion to their progress toward democracy that we rate the political civilization of nations and call one advanced and another backward.

What could be more impressive than the contrast between what has just taken place at Berlin and what is now taking place at Osborne. A young sovereign has been celebrating in one the completion of the second century of his "house," of his dynasty, dwelling on its triumphs, passing lightly over its losses and its shames, but always emphasizing to exaggeration its influence upon the progress of Prussia. That influence has been and is very great. "So much the worse for Prussia," the enlightened observer is forced to exclaim. We can imagine the tremors that would run through the Bourses of all Europe if it were the German Kaiser who lay a-dying, no man knowing what might now be the policy of Germany. What would be the apprehension of all Europe in such an event was simply the normal condition of all Europe before the period that was marked by the triumph of democracy. Even throughout the eighteenth century the big wars were wars of succession, the politics were dynastic politics. The people had not come to their own.

And now behold the contrast. An aged and revered Queen, the titular sovereign of one-fourth part of the inhabitants of this planet, lies at Osborne, to all appearance dying. But in her islands "freedom," to borrow the words of one of the greatest of her servants, "is indigenous, familiar, and full grown." Her grandfather was the last King of England who succeeded in impressing his personal will upon his subjects as a law, just as his great-great-grandson, the Emperor of Germany, is still succeeding, with a nation politically backward, in doing to-day, to Germany's shame and sorrow. The great effect of GEORGE the Third's conscientious and painful and even Prussian attention to his royal duties, and insistence upon his royal prerogatives, was the loss to England of her American possessions. At home his influence was slighter. Neither his narrowness and obstinacy, says one historian, "nor the incredible baseness of that ignoble voluptuary who succeeded him on the throne," could avail to impede the march of British progress. "We went on our way rejoicing," BUCKLE adds, "caring for none of these things." And now, when it seems that the end of the long reign and of the long life of Queen VICTORIA has come, the British Nation awaits it with a sorrow in which there is no mixture of fear. How happy ought the King of Prussia and German Kaiser to be if by his efforts his personality could be rendered as dispensable as that of the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland and Empress of India.

The moral is too plain to be mistaken. It is that democracy is not only conservative and safe, but the only safety, the only conservatism. The Queen's praises have been best celebrated by the Laureate who will be remembered until the Victorian age is forgotten, and celebrated in verses which it will be happy for Germany when a German poet can paraphrase:

And statesmen at her council met
Who knew the season, when to take
Occasion by the hand, and make
The bounds of freedom wider yet,

By shaping some august decree
That kept her throne unshaken still,— Broad-based upon her people's will,
And compassed by the inviolate sea.

JERSEY JUSTICE.

The relatively short time in which the case just closed in Paterson was tried, with no slightest suspicion that all the requirements of decency, order, and justice were not satisfied, is something that ought to set the Judges and lawyers of this State thinking very hard.

We do not pretend to say why exactly it is at present impracticable to do a like thing in this State, but apparently it is. It takes days instead of hours to get a jury, and we get no better ones. In a case involving, as this one did, expert testimony on each side, there seems no limit to the amount of squabbling that can arise from it, to the confusion rather than to the clearing or convincing of the minds of the jurymen. All testimony appears to be the subject of endless dispute between the counsel or with the Court, and tedious and undignified personalities that prevent rather than promote justice are often indulged in. It is, of course, too soon to say what may be the future course of proceedings in the Paterson case, or how much delay may yet occur on appeal, but the result is not apparently contested, even by the counsel of the prisoners.

Whatever the cause, no one will deny that the general impression on the public mind of such speedy action of the instrumentalities of justice in a peculiarly sensational and exciting matter is far more wholesome than that produced by the mode too prevalent in this State, and especially in this city. Whether it is the law, the Judges, or the lawyers that must be blamed, a radical change is needed and is shown by the experience of New Jersey to be possible.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—In so far as the hazing at West Point took the form of inflicting pain or even humiliation upon victims who for one reason or another could not or would not resist their tormentors, all enlightened, yes, all even moderately respectable, opinion agrees in calling it brutal, cowardly, and not to be endured. Concerning the system of fistic encounters to which some of the cadets still give carefully qualified approval, it is not quite so easy to reach a final decision. We all hope that our civilization is tending toward a condition of things in which fighting of every sort will be indefensible, but we all know, too, that this most desirable condition has not yet been attained, and that both participants in a fight, as such, cannot be condemned off-hand and without regard to its origin and its consequences. One of the combatants must be utterly in the wrong, while the other may have an excuse amounting nearly or quite to justification. It is easy enough to believe, therefore, that some of the personal encounters occurring at West Point involve the allotment of a justice which, while rude, may be without conveniently available substitutes, and consequently to be regarded, if not with distinct admiration, at least with a provisional composure. But the cadets seem to have inaccurate notions as to when a gentleman should and should not fight. They insist that the antagonists shall be of the same size and weight, but they ignore qualifications much more important, such as pugilistic skill and physical training, with the result that they practically force into the ring boys who have no chance whatever of victory. In such cases the fight is not a fight at all, but merely the infliction of punishment, just or unjust, as may happen, and the formalities of battle are then useless complications. The instant resentment of certain insults, the prevention of certain wrongs, do call for the use of fists, sometimes, but they do not call for systematized imitation of the prize ring, an institution which makes fighting an end and has no relation with chivalry or ethics.

—We note with some amusement that The Dundee (Scotland) Advertiser, by issuing as a centennial supplement a duplication of its first number, published Jan. 16, 1801, has given a convincing demonstration that "tabloid journalism," instead of being, as certain people fondly imagine, a new invention and a long step forward into the twentieth century, is merely an imitation of great-great-grandfatherly ideas and standards, and marks, not progress, but retrogression. In almost every essential particular this ghost of 1801 is curiously like the "tabloid" at which only the other day we were asked admiringly to wonder. The size of its eight pages is almost precisely the same, and in the same way its news is reduced to bare bones. Only NAPOLEON'S doings in Germany were deemed important enough to fill more than a column, and almost everything else has to be content with from three to ten lines. Distance lends enchantment—for present-day readers—to some of the items, but they never could have been easy reading, and, though facts of value could have been extracted from the heap of scraps, the process could not have been a pleasant one. A flexible bulletin board is not a newspaper in the modern sense, though it doubtless was in the time when journalism had not established even a remote relation to literature. Strangely enough, the advertisements in this old paper seem much less archaic than its news matter. The advertisers then, as now, took as much space as they thought was necessary for the adequate description of their wares, and their tastes as regards the use of adjectives were about the same as that of to-day's merchants. The Dundee editor may have been something of a Mugwump. At any rate, after promising to give "a faithful and accurate account of the most material occurrences, foreign and domestic," he adds, "and as the advertiser is not meant to be the vehicle of any party politics, facts will appear as they are, leaving its readers to make their own comment."

GENERAL NOTES.

The taking of the census of the Dominion of Canada is to be begun April 1, and is expected to be completed in two weeks.

* * *

Some 250 members of the Georgia Historical Society were dropped from the roll of membership at the recent January meeting for the non-payment of dues.

* * *

The legal rate of interest in Canada is now 5 per cent., the reduction from 6 per cent. having been made by a statute of the Dominion which went into effect Jan. 1.

* * *

Richard Yates, the new Governor of Illinois, is the first native of the State ever elected to his office. He was inaugurated Jan. 14, which was the exact date of the inauguration of his father, Richard Yates, as Governor of the same State, forty years ago.

* * *

Vicksburg, Miss., reports a recent fall of 10.22 inches of rain in thirty-six hours. The fall in twenty-four hours was 7.03 inches, which was the heaviest since the beginning of the Weather Bureau records there, in September, 1872.

* * *

Virginia papers are hopeful that Gen. Fitzhugh Lee will soon be retired with pay sufficiently large to keep him from want for the remainder of his days. One of them says: "His poverty and honors reflect credit upon his State."

* * *

A proposition is being urged in Tennessee to increase the salary of the Governor to $5,000 a year. It is now $4,000. It is thought also that the State should supply an executive mansion for his use, and regret is expressed that President Polk's home was not purchased for this purpose when the opportunity offered.

* * *

Several prominent citizens of Massachusetts form a committee which has been selected to appeal for popular subscriptions to a fund for the erection of a public memorial of the late Gov. Roger Wolcott. It is designed to erect it in Boston, probably on the State House grounds.

CONGRESS AND THE SUBSIDY BILL.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The interest upon the part of the public in the Ship Subsidy bill continues, and the attention of the taxpayer daily increases, and a result indicates a growing popular sentiment against the measure. That no trust has yet been formed pending its passage is natural. That it has been very much in the papers that such amalgamation might be consummated is in the air, and this fact should remain distinctly within the view of Congress, and a continuous modification and opposition be the one predominant thought in its mind; and those in possession of the knowledge and the courage should strenuously offer the necessary opposition for its defeat, for it is simply a presentation of a condition where individuals are acting for their own ends with little thought of their effect on the taxpayer. Congress should ask, What are likely to be the effects of new combinations? This should be the character of their inquiry, otherwise their legislation upon the subject will be unsound. Their knowledge should not be narrow and their inferences crude and prejudiced. They should form their judgment upon facts. "One event is the son of another, and we must never forget the parentage," was the remark made by a Bechuana chief to Casalis, the African missionary.

The arguments presented from which Congress is to draw its conclusion savor of such motif upon the part of those pleading in its behalf that a full and distinct view of the interest is hardly to be possessed, but to attain their end it becomes all but irresistible to garble it in support of a theory. Surveyed in a broad view, the character of the measure becomes one of inconsistency, and little respect may be had in Congress for the bill. Senators and Representatives can with safety face those they represent in their efforts to defeat its passage, and surely grave consideration should attach to such object. The scrutiny to which it is being subjected may well cause our lawmakers to pause. The history of the Pacific Mail scandals is still in the minds of many, for investigation into the means by which these appropriations were secured brought such scandalous corruption to light that no Congressman dared to vote for the continuance of a policy of that kind, and should the bill pass we shall remember, as Dr. Johnson contemptuously said when he had read about the Patagonians and South Sea Islanders in Hawkesworth's "Voyages," "One set of savages is like another."

The hope is, however, strong that Congress will rise to the occasion and furnish this country with an example that upon a subject that yields to no other in its importance they will do the right thing at the right time. They should mistrust the slightest statement of which they know of no parallel and distrust the genuineness of that which they have the slightest reason to doubt. And the pleadings of the advocates favorable to the measure should have the well-merited stamp of authentication, with the mark of quid pro quo upon every passage of the act.

That such considerations are painfully lacking lies open and unconcealed even to those who have but casually investigated. Therefore we trust that Congress will gravely consider the exceptionable manner in which the majority of their constituents view the subject, as is best set forth by evidences of how it breaks out and blazes through the efforts of the American press. Can it be possible that our lawmakers are so intent upon the interest of individuals that they cannot grasp a notion of the idea of that which is due to a community as a totality. G. WEAVER LOPER.

Philadelphia, Jan. 13, 1901.

THE TIVOLI PROPERTY.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A very interesting item of news came to me to-day. I think the good people of New York ought to know about it, so I drop you these lines.

The notorious dive known as the Doré, 147, 149, and 151 West Thirty-fifth Street, is closed and the building has been leased to Messrs. W. T. Ames and Herbert F. Blake.

Several men are at work within the building in which so many men and women have been ruined, doomed, and lost. This building is to be used now as an automobile exchange—the name of which will be the Herald Square Automobile Exchange.

Indeed, Messrs. Blake and Ames by this enterprise are doing much to purify West Thirty-fifth Street. I have made a most thorough investigation; I am reliably informed that every possible effort is being made to reopen the Tivoli, adjacent to the Doré.

I notice that the property was transferred to one Rector of Rector's restaurant, at Forty-third Street and Broadway, on Thursday last.

It was owned by one Annie Ackron, the mother of the former proprietor. I also notice that the property is for sale.

It will be remembered that this property was leased by three Christian gentlemen, and free use of it was given for a Presbyterian church, in which the Rev. Dr. Mingins preached so acceptably for many years.

A few years ago the Presbytery dissolved this church, and the property fell into the hands of the Salvation Army people for some time, and then it came into the hands of its present owner, and has since been used for purposes sinful enough to shock the conscience of the Anti-Christ.

This property is for sale. Why can't some Christian men and women buy this property for business purposes, for a church, or anything else that will redeem West Thirty-fifth Street? Messrs. Blake and Ames have partially redeemed the street by opening a business in the Doré—who will complete its redemption by taking down the sign "Tivoli"?

P. BUTLER THOMPKINS.

New York, Jan. 14, 1901.

THE WAR IN THE TRANSVAAL.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read the letter of J. A. Rooney with great pleasure. The only part of it that seems to call for just a word of criticism is where he appears to imply that our Philippine war and England's war in South Africa are on the same moral level, and as this is a very common error, I would be pleased if you would kindly allow me to point out a few important differences.

The Boers are one people; the Tagals are a tribe among many tribes. The Philippine war is one link in a chain of historical events. The first link was the war for the liberation of Cuba, and when this Nation went to war with Spain it did so with practical unanimity. Both of our great political parties vied with each other as to which should derive the greatest honor from the liberation of Cuba. The South African war is a war of one political party alone.

The Liberal Party of Great Britain has never sanctioned this war, but on the contrary it met in convention and publicly announced, when negotiations had reached a certain point, that there was no cause for war, and if war should follow the Liberal Party would take no share of the responsibility. Throughout the Philippine war and the events leading up to it there have been free speech and free discussion in the United States. England stopped her ears, and, from one end of the island to the other, the opposition was prevented from holding meetings. Even restaurants where a speaker had gone to get a meal had their windows smashed. Damage was done to property even of peaceable Quaker families by mobs of howling jingoes, and a lifelong champion of every movement that has tended toward liberty and justice like Henry Labouchère had his scalp split open.

All this, mind you, after President Krüger had yielded what Mr. Chamberlain afterward declared to have been "nine-tenths" of what England had the right to demand. What had become of Tennyson's England? Where was

The land that freemen till,
That sober-suited freedom chose,
A land where, girt with friends or foes,
A man may speak the thing he will?

Thank God, the nation is coming again to its senses. It is passing through great tribulation, and will be the better for it. There was a meeting held at Clacton the other day in the interests of peace. It was attended by clergymen of every denomination in the town, and not a single fire-eating jingo had the spirit to raise one dissentient howl. "Experience keeps a dear school," says Franklin, "but fools will learn in no other."

I do not defend our own war in the East, but the difference between it and the South African war is great indeed.

J. RYDINGS.

Paterson, N. J., Jan. 17, 1901.

THE SPITTING NUISANCE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why is it that a man thinks he has as much right to expectorate on the floor of a car, in the face of a disgusted public of presumably decent people, as he has in the privacy of his dressing room? Is he allowed the privilege of using the floor of his own house for the same purpose? A short time ago this abominable nuisance lessened, and we fondly supposed that the little Health Board notice had carried some weight when it forbade spitting. Now this is discovered to be useless, and the outrage is as bad as ever. No one seems to have courage to make complaints except through the columns of some paper which is kind enough to print them.

A short time since I sat opposite in a car a very nicely dressed and well-appearing man. Two handsomely dressed women entered and took seats next to the man. Just then, to my astonishment, he had an inclination to spit, and, miscalculating his distance, landed some of the filthy stuff on the light cloth suit of one of the women. He had the grace to look ashamed and to remove to the lower end of the car, while the other woman took out her fine cambric handkerchief and cleansed her friend's dress from the impurity.

I am quite often warned by my neighbor that the end of my skirt is resting in a puddle of tobacco juice or worse. Where is the remedy? There is a story told of a woman whose husband was very profane. Everything and everybody came in for their share of oaths. Mealtimes were especially selected; every article of food was condemned to a warmer place than the kitchen. One day, however, his wife took the initiative, and, having learned her lesson well, she outdid him and reduced the astonished man to silence. It would almost appear as if women would be obliged to do something equally heroic. The poor things are so afraid of making themselves conspicuous or appearing ill-natured that the evil grows instead of being checked. No conductor can help them, and ought not to be asked to do so.

Again I ask of your paper, which is as wise as the lady from Philadelphia, Where is the remedy? A.

New York, Jan. 18, 1901.

RIGHTS OF PROPERTY HOLDERS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Would you be kind enough to inform your many readers about the rights of property holders in reference to the trespass of telephone and other electric companies, who order men to go on the roofs of houses to lay or string wires and make repairs for their system? In my locality, in Brooklyn, men come to the door and say they want to go on the roof. These men are armed with rolls of wire and bags of tools, and if refused, they go to some other door, where some thoughtless servant allows them access to the scuttle. Now on the roof, they tramp over the whole block, if it is necessary or otherwise, stretching wires from chimney and eaves and making common use of private property to enforce the interests of corporate companies. The roofs of most of our houses are covered with tin and have to be watched very closely all the time to prevent leaks.

With the greatest audacity, these men tramp about on our roofs with heavy boots and tools, manufacturing, twisting, fastening heavy wires to any part of this private property in defiance of any protest, causing damage not known or seen till next the storm damages as stated. What rights have they in this matter, and what rights have the owners of private property? Is there no other redress than to treat these men as you would treat any other trespasser—throw him off the roof, or kick him out of the house if you find him going up there? People have no time or money to spare in hunting up the responsible parties to repair actual damage done or that will result from such a wanton trespass. Thousands of your readers are sufferers from this custom, and would be grateful if THE TIMES would throw some light on the subject. It has reached a point of not only being a nuisance, but a very damaging and expensive one.

If they can, without leave or license, do as they are doing, why cannot they enter our rooms, throw open our windows, and fasten anything to accomplish profitable ends to any place on our property that may suit their convenience? It is an interesting question, and would THE TIMES give us information?

A SUFFERER.

Brooklyn, Jan. 17, 1901.

COUNTRY SCHOOL GARDENS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the course of responsible relations to country schools in the Middle West, the writer became impressed with the necessity of some such radical change in rural educational methods as may be found in the Government reports of investigations (made at his instance) of the system of school gardens of Continental Europe.

Notwithstanding the example set, our country (which ought to have led the movement) in thousands of such rural school gardens, there has not, up to date, come to the writer's knowledge so much as one such provision in any American country school district.

He would ask could there be a more appropriate time for the reform than the beginning of a new century or a better place of initiation and dissemination than our great Empire State of New York.

Considering that each season's postponement of the reformed methods deprives over 3,000,000 country children, who have reached the age to enter the wage-earning ranks, of advantages of untold value to themselves and the community of which they are to be the very bone and sinew, such delay should rest heavily on the conscience of each and every one capable of applying a remedy.

One kind of evidence and one alone—the irresistible argument of accomplished facts—can move those who have the destiny of our country schools in their keeping from their immemorial and time-honored ruts, nor can Legislatures be induced to consider any innovation not backed by a formidable array of voters.

In this respect, the situation differs from that in the paternally ruled nations of the old world where the prompt and general establishment of such educational methods is clearly traceable to governmental initiation.

On our side of the Atlantic, such innovations require a popular origin, and this in turn depends on an act of private liberality in the establishment of a model school garden. Such an example might be hoped to lead to a society organization such as foreshadowed in the above caption.

GEORGE HENRY KNIGHT.

New York, Jan. 16, 1900.

THE SUPREME COURT.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is usual for lawyers who have been heard in our highest courts to let their cases rest with the enlightened Judges, not doubting but they will give righteous decisions. It is not usual, neither would it be courteous, for those lawyers who have not had part in those arguments to venture their opinions, except in those actions which deeply concern the public welfare, like those lately argued with such signal ability in Washington, which have drawn out so great discussion, perhaps never so widely since the memorable Dred Scott case.

If Judges go mistakingly contrary in such close Constitutional questions to a right sense of justice, a passionate feeling is aroused which never subsides until such judgment is reversed, of which the Dred Scott opinion is a distinguished instance. Lord Chief Justice Hale was not justifiable in condemning witches, but it grew out of the spirit of the times. If Judges allow themselves to be the recipients of gifts or favors which would have a look of unduly influencing them, they will have the censure of every generation, although their determinations may be just, as in the merited criticisms against Lord Bacon.

But we believe most fully in the wisdom and justice of our highest court. It is one of the three branches of the Federal Government, each distinct, to be free and independent from the others. Those Judges have large capacity, profound learning, and a rich experience, while their integrity is not to be questioned. The schools of politics in which they have grown up may have an unconscious bearing, but they will seek with a praiseworthy industry to examine with thoroughness the authorities cited by the eminent advocates, and they will not stop there, as they will study those deep and intricate and far reaching questions for themselves, which will become historic.

Some of us think none of the cases that have been cited to be at all parallel. The matter is both new and serious as to whether a distinction can or should be made between citizens of our Republic residing in our States, and those resident in our Territories, to determine how far Congress should go under that clause in the Constitution to "make all needful rules respecting the Territories."

ow for the decision, and e ect s just Constitutional v at there may not be a di
J. HE
Fishkill-on-the-Hudson, J

Rowdyism on Str

o the Editor of The New Y

Among the proposed a ty charter, how would n amendment to the fo
"That no terminal sha either end of any brid ructed across the rive attan Borough?"
I suggest some such eing put in the city
ight be an effectua
revent the dangero
yism that the str
n the trolley cars
f the present bridg
Another evil resu ile system is that ases are being tra guards, utterly ind
f the weaker por
he road. I crosse ng Avenue car on ficer 5 P. M., and carcely yet
ion. I was rowd, who ac fans. Then anging his f packed pas t was his rig
o make their ot in being su mall-sized per is rough treat hat if he didn
ould get off t
adn't asked h
The horrible
nd afterward
darmingly con
enger not used lay during the ne that perha harter prohibi might not only prevent it in fu
Brooklyn, Jan.

Training Nurses.

To the Editor of Y

The courage a remaining Mills been singularly and the press.
of Damocles su remained true to ign in a body; th
ation and losing hance of ever
he aforesaid ins

Apropos of Joh discoveries is it
mony against the alcoholic and epi sick who are well world their enemy chance for freedo
Mills Training Sc
on the battlefield has been well af
ferers, and shoul moment, when taken proper and even Mr. Keller's

Let Mr. Keller b
ing denunciation of a grand institu its numberless good graduates hi are as pure and unselfish as he w theirs, and as free from politics.
ing election will show the cause of Mr. Keller's philanthropy.

New York, Jan. 14, 1901.

Thinks "Millionaire" Over

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In a recent issue of your pa prominent front page and in appeared a heading to the effect that a prominent young man addressed a engineers on problems connected new form of locomotive boiler.
the heading was "The Young Addressed," &c.

Why "millionaire"? Is not overworked in the American pa inclined to think that well-bred smile at this sort of thing. A you would seldom find the me
tion of the man of wealth pe out to this extent in the repu journals.

Cannot a law be passed ma
demeanor to use the word in big, prominent headlines?
thing is overdone in the Unite
one feels that the ideal se standards of taste is not one—the "strenuous life"
chief standard of commer (Kipling's "Young Colt of a hand in hand with it sho straining culture of those w the minds of the youth of a growing country.

New York, Jan. 11, 1900.

NUGGETS.

Always Ca

If a young man goes in to look at ladies' rings, in town is sure to step in it.—Atchison Globe.

Admired Him.

The Farmer—Don't tell me you ain't able to work. W'y, I go to work at daylight an' work till dark, and I ain't no younger than you.

The Tramp—No, I guess you ain't, but you are one of them ge Press.

Everything G

"Why do you seem son, Miss Hopkins?"

"Oh, he's the man
your house without window shade, sitting or getting the crack
Free Press.

Has Lost All Confidence.

First Chinaman—But us that the allies couldn
without getting into selves.

Second Chinaman—
since learned to pla ever in the conduct
tions.—Brooklyn Life.

THE OLD AGE AND THE NEW

The New Age comes and joy in The touch of fringed her
The song on plain to
But the strong swell it

The Old Age
she is, yet
Her brows hands are
"Now hail to and gain
Who comes a glory

"Hail to yo down
Lo, I have Queen I have and richest and best;
Thou
kee

"Vision
To
But if
That

"All
Gr
Sin
Je

"T
W
W

MARION COUTHOUY S

Letters From Readers on Various Timely Topics

THE NAVAL ARCH.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Naval Arch is taken down, and Madison Square knows it no more. It was so remarkable a monument, both in purpose and design, that it deserves a better fate than to exist merely in recollections and photographs. This letter is but another word said for it while its memory is yet green; a word which, it is to be hoped, may not be the last one. Let us recall the history of the arch.

The first suggestion of it came from Mr Charles R. Lamb, Vice President of the National Sculpture Society, on the lines of whose first sketch it was actually built. Messrs. Lamb, Ward, Bitter, Warner, and Ruckstuhl acted as a committee to develop the plan. Between twenty and thirty sculptors volunteered to give their entire time to the work. On Aug. 7, 1899, Acting Mayor Guggenheimer read a letter from the committee representing the National Sculpture Society, offering to build the arch according to the plans approved ten days previously, for the cost of labor and materials. On Aug. 15 the Board of Aldermen gave authority to the committee in charge of the Dewey Celebration to begin work on the arch. Carpenters began putting together the framework of the arch in Madison Square.

On Sept. 8 we read in THE NEW YORK TIMES that "sculptors and modelers in the basement of Madison Square Garden are working with almost feverish rapidity night and day." References to this extreme haste were to be found in the papers of the time almost every day. Henry Baerer, sculptor, had a paralytic stroke as the result of his work on the arch. His physician told him he must not continue work on the medallion on which he was engaged.

On Sept. 21 Mr. J. Q. A. Ward's quadriga "Victory" was placed on top of the arch. Sept. 30 was the day of the Dewey parade, when the entire procession passed through the completed arch. These are the bare facts that tell in their own simple but graphic way of a devotion by no means rare in art, but none the less admirable nor less worthy of recognition.

What we saw on Sept. 30, 1899, was a structure as noble and striking in general design as anything of its kind ever made. It was adorned with sculpture that was an original and virile expression of the art life of our time and country, and it was so done that the arch and its ornaments are in our minds inseparable. It was not perfect. But perfection is not possible in such haste. The arch was said to be a copy of that of Titus; but it was not more a copy than most triumphal arches are of some other, or most churches or most buildings, for architecture is an art that lives and grows by imitation; not slavish and petty imitation, but imitation of the spirit and method. All this, the idealization of some of the best things among us, we had before our eyes for more than a twelvemonth, to make permanently our own if we wished, at a cost that so rich a community could not have felt.

What was the price of the Naval Arch to its makers? It cost all of them weeks and months of unremitting toil, not the routine, mechanical toil that is paid for by the week and endured unwillingly for daily bread, but the toil born of zeal and aspiration, the devotion of strength and soul that exalts the spirit, but wears out the body; the toil that cannot rest until its object is attained, until it sees the ideas which are the children of its mind born into the concrete forms of canvas or marble or bronze, so that others may see and rejoice in them. It cost some of its makers broken health. And what did they gain by it? Daily and fugitive notices in the newspapers, admiration of such as read about them and watched their work, in fact, a temporary notoriety which, it is to be hoped, may grow for some of them into permanent fame or enlarge the fame of those of them who needed no advertisement; and then, the rapid waning of interest in their work, propositions to curtail and cheapen it, and finally the demolition of their model, and with it of the hopes of its perpetuation.

This was all they expected; for their work was undertaken and carried through in no expectation of its enduring or bringing any material compensation at all adequate to the labor expended. If later they began to have, not expectations, but hopes of a permanent arch, they were but the hopes of every art lover in the land, suggested and encouraged by those who saw their work in progress and completion, and assured them of the subscriptions that would pour in as soon as they were asked for. Perhaps some may be found to say that these men worked in hope of profit, of money, and for that they can have no prize and lost; that they hid for success and missed it; that they took their own risks and have no cause for disappointment. But what is the life of every artist, or every man who works to develop that which is in him alone but a perpetual bidding for fame and fortune? What is fame but the breath of life to such men, the distinction from others that is their instinct and right, the testimony of their fellows that they have not spent their lives in pursuit of a shadow, nor in imagining a vain thing? What is money but the means of life and freedom from anxiety, the sinews of war and peace, the fuel of art itself, which, if they value unduly, they are but repeating the lesson of the world around them, of those who regard not the possession of things that be above the earth, but only of the gold that is beneath?

Is there not even now, Sir, some hope that we may have the Naval Arch erected, not in terra cotta or granite or in any makeshift material, but in marble? The thing was conceived in terms of marble, and in marble alone can it ever be realized. Is it not somewhat of a disgrace to the richest society that has ever been that so many of our best buildings are of mean and cheap construction? It is perhaps a good thing that many a gross and pretentious city building should have zinc cornices and plaster facings, for thus they will the sooner perish. But, can we contemplate the beautiful decorations of the Herald Building or Madison Square Garden without a certain self-reproach, and a reflection on the value these structures would be to us were their ornaments in marble, the works of men's hands?

It should surely not be a reproach to us any longer that through parsimony or indifference we have let the Naval Arch become a thing of history, that we have so much money to spend on the common and baser things of life and so little for the good ones. The arch should be raised in the best of materials and workmanship, not merely as a monument to the navy and its achievements, but as a National possession, an evidence of the art feeling of the time and of our appreciation of it. It should be placed where it has space to be seen, not belittled by comparison with structures greatly larger than itself, but where it can be contrasted with foliage to set off by its green and mutable masses the white surfaces and serene lines of the arch and its sculptures.

Thus we should ourselves be the gainers by rewarding those who ask and expect no reward, but to whom nevertheless reward is due; for we accepted their offering, and, like the fairy's gift, it turned out to be pure gold; but, like that gift, it has turned to a dry leaf again, thus to remain unless we can do the small deed of devotion that will show us worthy once more to transmute it.

H. A. CAPARN.

New York, Jan. 14, 1901.

LENGTH OF PRESIDENTIAL TERM.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Referring to your editorial opposing a change in the present four-year Presidential term, it might be argued further that the short-term idea is more truly American in essence. It represents the "eternal vigilance" which is the price of our liberty and of our rights, and it puts into effect in our body politic that principle of constant regeneration which is inseparable from life and progress.

If by some chance William J. Bryan had recently been elected to the Presidency, would the conservative element of the country have favored a long term or a short one? In what condition would Lincoln have found the country if there had been two years more of Buchanan? Will not a period of financial depression and general hardship and deprivation always invite the possibility of election of some dangerous character? These thoughts would seem to meet sufficiently the objection of the conservative interests against the "quadrennial upheaval."

As to what might be called the civil service advantages of a single term, these, to my mind, are more apparent than real. A man may do some evil during his first term to secure himself a second, but the fact remains that he can secure the second only after his record has been subjected to the fierce light that beats upon a Presidential candidate. It is possible, nay, probable, that the necessity of the coming test may be a greater stimulus to righteous action during a first term than would the absence of such a future test, and this fact outweighs the evil done by the necessity of dealing with the "bosses." Moreover, the "bosses" are the creation not of the President, but of the people, and the evils that spring from their existence are chargeable to the people, and the remedy is in their hands. Again, if there be no second term, an unscrupulous President would find many other forms of self-aggrandizement that would tempt him to use the opportunities at his command.

The more study one gives to the subject, the more one is impressed with the idea that the conditions surrounding the making of our Constitution were as mysteriously effective as were those which produced the works of Shakespeare and Raphael and the unknown sculptor of the Venus de Milo. The genius of the time seemed to favor in each case the uplifting of the human spirit to a height it seems well-nigh impossible again to approach in the same region of endeavor. Our present life seems less conducive to that calm, penetrating philosophy which, in spite of the tumult and struggle and mutilation accompanying its birth, is the spirit of the Constitution. When one goes to it with a protest, he is made to feel that the protest is against the eternal verities of human life and its well-being—truths which the fathers saw with a gaze that went deeper and higher.

The Constitution is the work of human minds and therefore subject to imperfection and undeserving of superstitious awe; but when I hear improvements to the Constitution lightly proposed, I feel as I did some years ago when I read the airy suggestions of the musical critic of a newspaper of this city for certain improvements in the Ninth Symphony of Beethoven.

G. T. TYLER.

New York, Jan. 16, 1901.

ADVOCATES FREQUENT ELECTIONS

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The proposition to extend the term of the Presidency of the United States seems now to be taking a serious shape. I sincerely hope that the American people will give this matter more deliberate thought before adopting that proposition as a form of government. All that can be said in favor of lengthening the term of the Presidency to six years might probably with equal force be urged to extend it to eight or sixteen or even a greater number of years. And the argument thus used will nearly approach in character the argument urged in support of monarchy.

To give the President a six-year term, an army of 100,000 men, and an empire to rule beyond the United States, only lessens the legal opportunity of the people to call a halt on the ambition and liberty-destroying policy of an unworthy and ambitious President. The history of the world is full of proofs that there have been in the past (and will be in the future) ambitious men who, taking advantage of the powers conferred on them by confiding people, have stepped on to regal and despotic powers. From this fact, which history proves, was evolved the maxim, "The price of liberty is eternal vigilance."

The people can be trusted to give, in general elections, a correct an opinion on public questions as an individual, or popular government is illogical and enduring free government an impossibility.

Are the people of the United States yet prepared to acknowledge that our people cannot be trusted with the ballot? If they can be trusted to use the ballot for the betterment of all the people once in six years, they can as well be trusted every year. Should not the dictum of a Republican Government be: "Keep the election close to the hands of the people"? Would not more frequent elections be safer than an extension of the Presidential term?

Possibly business might be a little more disturbed by more frequent Presidential elections, but what matter the disturbance of business if the fate of all the earlier republics of civilization might be averted by these disturbances?

Is it probable that there would be one-half of the business disturbances in Presidential election years as now if these elections occurred every two years, and if they were to occur every year is it not probable that their very frequency would prevent any disturbance whatever?

The business man's danger is not so much from a new President as from a new Congress, with its restless tariff tinkering.

JAS. A. B. DILWORTH.

New York, Jan. 15, 1901.

A Philosopher Makes a Suggestion.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In an editorial of Jan. 15 about second Presidential terms, you justly discriminate between a President's desire for re-election by the people and his desire for renomination by the politicians. The Presidential question aside, what a pity it is that any of our officers need renomination at all! When a new man has to be found for an elective office, it is evident that we need nominating conventions (or their equivalent) to prevent us from fruitlessly scattering our votes among the thousand Smiths, Browns, and Robinsons whom we severally admire. But when a man has been tried in office it is not evident that we need a nominating convention to tell us whether or not he deserves to remain longer at his post. We need advisers on the question, but a party convention is not our best adviser.

I wish that in some city the experiment were tried of holding two elections, the first to vote "Yes" or "No" on the proposed re-election of the Mayor and others; the second to fill the places of those who have been voted out.

It may be objected that under our present laws a good Mayor can, if he will, defy the politicians and appeal to the people as an independent candidate. I reply, that as an "independent" or "third" candidate many voters would be afraid to support him, lest by withdrawing their votes from the less bad of the "regular" candidates they cause the worse to prevail. In the re-election plebiscite which I advocate, the voters would, on the contrary, have an absolutely free choice between retaining and dismissing him. This plan would make him more responsible to the people and less responsible to the "boss." It is, however, merely the speculation of

A PHILOSOPHER.

Atlantic City, N. J., Jan. 17, 1901.

THE NEGRO LABORER'S STATUS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have just come across an article by one "Prof. P. B. Barringer" in THE NEW YORK TIMES of the 29th ult. on "Negro Culture" that attracted my attention. Not that it contained any brilliancy or evolved any new ideas, but because of the stupendous asinine conceit and cruelty that leads any one to air such views as these. And yet these views are entirely in line with the policy of the people here in the South toward the negroes, but by no means from causes attributed by your correspondent. Our worthy friend forgets that those others of the South fought for their property, and not because they feared the emancipation.

As a class the negroes value their labor higher than do the whites, and are invariably given the preference, from the fact that a white man will resent an insult, drop his work, demand his wages, and quit when abused, whereas generally the darky plods along unmindful of insults unless, which is too frequently the case, affecting the reputation of his mother, when he turns upon his persecutor. And what then? It becomes a race war, with the negro entirely at fault. And yet when a negro utters the same appellation to a white man he is "sent to join the angels," and nothing more.

I have had some experience with all manner of people all over the world, and having been in the retail grocery business right here in the South for twenty years, and having largely had dealings with the colored people cannot say that I find them inclined to live on less than 25 cents per diem, and most frequently exceed 35 cents, and, as compared with white people of same social status, will not and cannot live as cheaply from the fact that they have neither the will nor the understanding to do so. They live fully up to the standard of the better classes of the whites, more from imitative propensities than from necessity. Though as wage earners, when taken as a whole, they far exceed the whites, yet being withal improvident, but few of them ever accumulate beyond their every day consumption, and in that respect they follow the beautiful precepts of Christianity which your correspondent mentioned as having been given them, "take no thought for to-morrow."

The condition of the negroes in America is precisely the same as the condition of the peasantry of Europe a few years ago. They are not permitted to advance, neither was education deemed essential to their progress, hence they remained devoid of ambition and did not aspire to any better condition than that of their parents.

In like manner they take away from the negroes all possibilities of advancement, but unlike the treatment accorded the European peasantry, they curse and revile them because they do not advance. The desire to improve is as inherent in the black race as in the white, and we can not expect to make good citizens of any race or class of people unless we recognize and encourage merit. Of what use can education possibly be to them? As long as they are black they can gain no benefit from such acquisition, and it is apparently a waste of endeavor.

F. MUNK.

Plant City, Fla., Jan. 14, 1901.

HAZING AT WEST POINT.

THE INVESTIGATORS CRITICISED.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have been an interested reader of all that THE TIMES has reported of the investigation of hazing at the United States Military Academy, and have greatly admired THE TIMES's editorials on that subject. The people will be very glad to have the military authorities spurred up to greater efforts to crush out the hazing nuisance, but, for one, I think our Congressional investigating committee is making a disgraceful spectacle. While condemning with long strings of adjectives (evidently taken from the dictionary in alphabetical order) the conduct of upper-class men in taking advantage of an intrenched position to override "plebes," Mr. Driggs has given the young cadets valuable pointers. If ever there was an exhibition of brutal cowardice, this pettyfogging, petty-everything politician has made one in taking advantage of his position to say insulting things to young men who have given him an example of manly truthfulness and fearlessness that he appears incapable of appreciating. And, save ten, all these young cowards, bullies, liars, and reprobates of West Point were carefully selected by Congressmen! That idea had not occurred to me before. Does it not explain their depravity, especially their bullying cowardice?

And now Mr. Allen has made a remarkable discovery, divulged yesterday to the Senate. Hazing at West Point is caused by a desire to drive civilian appointees from the Academy to make room for sons of army officers. The investigation has thus far produced evidence to the effect that the men worst hazed at West Point in recent times are MacArthur, Grant, Sheridan, and Hobson, three of them sons of army officers, and one a brother of a naval officer. And among the worst hazers so far mentioned not one army officer's son appears. The deduction of Mr. Allen, then, is that civilian appointees haze army officers' sons so as to drive civilian appointees from the Academy and make room for more army officers' sons. Truly a strange deduction—so strange that we have a special word describing the cerebral development of a man who believes it true, and another word fitting the case of the man who, not being a fool, makes such a statement. A synonym for the last word is "politician."

FAIR PLAY.

New Rochelle, N. Y., Jan. 18, 1901.

BLAMES OFFICERS FOR HAZING.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It seems to me that the blame for the shameful proceedings at West Point should be placed upon the officers in command rather than upon the cadets, who have been allowed to run riot after the manner of boys of their social class.

Officers, in spite of their origin, are supposed to have acquired a certain training and breeding at the Academy, and it is utterly ridiculous to urge in their defense either that they did not comprehend the cowardice and brutality of the hazing system, or that they were not aware of what was being done every day under their very eyes. It has been shown that after being forced into finish fights, some of the fourth class boys have appeared publicly with disfigured faces and arms in slings, and that no interest in the matter was shown by the officers and no inquiry made. Does any one suppose that these officers, who have themselves been cadets, did not fully understand the meaning of such things?

I fully agree with the gentleman who stated yesterday in the United States Senate that if a volunteer officer was in command he would stop the nonsense forthwith or know the reason why. The course at West Point may or may not be good, but it certainly seems to have produced too many Merciers and too few Picquarts.

For my own part, I am quite sure that had a son of mine been hazed by these cadets in any injurious and humiliating way, I should have promptly squared the account with the hazers and their accomplices.

ANGLO-SAXON.

New York, Jan. 17, 1901.

DEMANDS PUNISHMENT OF HAZERS

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As preliminary to the purification of West Point, would it not be a good move on the part of the Government to dishonorably discharge every officer connected with the institution at the time of the murder of Cadet Booz? Then question each cadet, and if he does not truthfully and fearlessly respond, dismiss him in disgrace and list him as a coward. (Brave men do not fear to tell the truth.) Failing in this way to get the names of the perpetrators of the inhuman outrage, let detectives be employed—the cost should not be considered in this matter—to bring the criminals to justice. The extreme penalty for manslaughter would be a light sentence, and the world would be well rid, for a period, of the creatures too contemptible to be classed as brutes.

The new administration should be held to a rigid accountability for the safety and well being of those committed to its charge. Imprisonment at hard labor for not less than ten years and the name engraved on a tablet dedicated to "cowardly curs" would about fit the case, and the term "hazing" would, with its practice, soon become obsolete.

For manliness, truth, and justice.

H. R. KEARNS.

Arlington, N. J., Jan. 18, 1901.

OBJECT LESSONS FOR HAZERS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Having followed with much interest, as probably thousands have all over these United States, the investigation into the hazing brutalities practiced at West Point, and appreciating how totally inadequate were the seventeen expressive adjectives used by Mr. Driggs of conveying his indignation at the examination of the 16th inst. reported in your columns, it occurred to me that a few wholesome object lessons might not come amiss at this particular time, since object lessons are in high repute in all of our best educational institutions.

If Uncle Samuel would invite the pugilist Fitzsimmons to take a trip to West Point to try his wisdom upon those upper class men who so highly esteem lessons in the fistic art they would probably soon find that there were still heights to which they had not yet attained in pugilism. Since upper class men have admitted that it was expected when a freshman was called out to fight that he was to be "well whipped" by the upper class men an opportunity should be given them for improvement. Our academies and colleges are not supposed to stand still. All are striving to outdo each other in progression. So let West Pointers progress, and give our brave cadets who so dearly love to fight something worthy of their prowess.

Perhaps Fitzsimmons just for the fun of the thing could be induced to take a trip to West Point and give some practical boxing lessons which those of us who are unable to be present at the examination and vent our pent-up feelings in the use of seventeen adjectives would immensely enjoy reading about after the thing was over. Surely an object lesson of this kind seems very much to be needed at the present stage of affairs, as instructors as well as upper class men seem to be of just about the same opinion they were when the investigating committee commenced their labors. As it now looks, any laws Congress might pass upon the subject would in all probability be disregarded, and something radical seems to be needed.

It certainly is to be hoped that the diabolical system of hazing in all of our institutions will soon be a thing of the past. It certainly is a great evil as practiced in many institutions of which not even the beginning has been told. An appropriate chalk talk upon such an object lesson could be given after it was over upon the subject.

"It is more blessed to give than to receive" by the lower class men.

A LOVER OF BOYS AND FAIR PLAY.

New York, Jan. 17, 1901.

SHOULD TAKE AN OATH.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Let each applicant, as a condition of admission, be required to take oath that he will not engage in hazing; that he will promptly report to the proper authorities of the Academy any instance of hazing that may come under his observation, and that he will promptly and truthfully answer all questions put to him in regard thereto.

Each Congressman is privileged to appoint one cadet. The applications for each vacancy are many; the competition to enter is eager. Each applicant would readily take the oath, since without it he could not enter, and he would not make himself obnoxious to his associates by being singular in the matter, as all who preceded him would have taken the same oath. Bound in honor and by oath, hazing would not then be attempted. The students themselves generally would probably welcome the change.

Let the same oath be required of present cadets as a condition of remaining. As public sentiment now sets so strongly and with such unanimity against the practice, and the oath would be required of all, making no one singular in the matter, it, no doubt, would now, at this time, unhesitatingly and cheerfully be taken by all now at the Academy.

THEODORE D. KELLOGG.

New York, Jan. 19, 1901.

CONDITIONS IN THE CITY.

DR. VAN DE WATER'S STATEMENT.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On the same day that one of your able editors lectured to Columbia University students upon the "Religious Aspects of Journalism," the headline in THE TIMES of a report of my address before the First Panel Sheriff's Jury read, "Dr. Van De Water Attacks Reformers."

The report of what I said was in all respects accurate, but not a thing in the report justified the statement of the headline.

One religious aspect of modern journalism is its utter want of any religious, or even ethical, standard in its publication of headings. I never attacked reformers. I have the highest regard for true reformers, but little, if any at all, for those who magnify wrongs and think because one thing needs righting all things have gone astray.

GEORGE R. VAN DE WATER.

New York, Jan. 18, 1901.

Criticises Dr. Van de Water.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The remarks of the Rev. Dr. Van de Water at the annual dinner of the Sheriff's first panel jury, as reported in THE TIMES of to-day, call for some comment. It seems to me that the remarks of the Chaplain of Columbia University were indiscreet, to say the least. At a time when all citizens are horrified by the disclosures of the condition of the east side, and when, as Prof. Adler has said, the stream of vice has overflowed its embankment and is carrying along children in its terrible current, it ill becomes a minister of the Gospel to "hurrah" for the police.

His apology for the atrocities practiced at Bellevue are likewise uncalled for. He says: "Sometimes an drunken patient may be unruly and be ill-treated by a nurse, but is it fair to condemn an entire system for the act of an individual? For one abuse that exists in the hospitals, surely there are a hundred benefits." The condition of Bellevue Hospital has been a matter of common knowledge for some time, and one would hardly expect Dr. Van de Water to submit a brief for the present administration of the city.

It may be added in passing that Dr. Van de Water is a member of the Committee on Public Morality and is well aware of the conditions existing in the Pro-Cathedral district, which is in charge of his friend, Dr. Paddock. It is of course cruel to attribute the minister's remarks to the influence of his environment. The statesmen present were the Hon. J. F. Carroll, the Hon. John B. Sexton, and others of equal rank and importance. But we can hardly blame the cynics when they sneer at "the influence of the clergy."

COLUMBIA.

New York, Jan. 17, 1901.

THE POLICE AND REFORM.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you allow me a few lines on two very important subjects? First, the little speech delivered by the Rev. Dr. Van De Water at the Sheriff's jury dinner, and, secondly, the letter of your correspondent, Robert B. Roosevelt, in to-day's issue.

The Rev. Dr. Van De Water condemns reformers, and says that they hinder reform. I would ask if present indications sustain that assertion? He says there may be wrongs in Bellevue, but there are 100 benefits for every wrong. I will not contradict this statement; every citizen who knows anything about it knows that there are numerous benefits which deserve to be spoken of and commended, but when the one wrong, or the few wrongs, complained of come up to the awful crime of manslaughter or murder, is it not high time to protest and complain and move all the powers that be for a speedy reformation?

The good doctor says there may be wrongs in the Police Department, but there are many good policemen. He is quite right. There are hundreds of good policemen. Heaven forbid that the entire 7,000 should be bad. But when the wrongs that exist are found to be at the heads of the department, and when they are found to consist in protecting vice and crime, and letting lawlessness run loose, why should this good and reverend gentleman assert or insinuate that, as citizens, we ought not to complain?

Dr. Van De Water lives in Harlem, no doubt in a quiet and very respectable locality. Would that he could only come and live for six months in the University Settlement, or the College Settlement, or the Neighborhood House, or even in Politicians' Row on East Seventh Street. How soon he would come to the conclusion that New York is not the paradise he thinks it is, and that complaints and protests are neither too many nor too often made. I would remind Dr. Van De Water that there are other ministers of the Gospel in this section of our city in addition to the Revs. Mr. Paddock, Mr. Kerr, and Mr. Heyder, and that they all love New York with as much fervor as he does; that their very labors in this part of the city prove their love, and that all of them feel that they have kept silent long enough, until silence was no longer a virtue, and in righteous indignation they are protesting against abuses that were getting worse as time went on.

The letter of Robert B. Roosevelt deals with a subject that ought to be considered in police legislation. I believe with him that the reinstatement of policemen by the courts after they have been dismissed from the force on charges is an evil that destroys all discipline. I have written on this subject before, and am glad that some one else has called public attention to it. I hope that THE NEW YORK TIMES, which is a powerful exponent of public opinion, will use its influence to have this matter brought to the attention of our legislators.

MALCOLM R. BIRNIE.

New York, Jan. 17, 1901.

THE VICE CRUSADE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Judging from this evening's papers, interested persons admit the death, or, at least, the moribund condition, of the latest "vice crusade." If with this admission the clergy would retire and politicians would desist in their efforts to make capital for party politics out of existing conditions, a certain number of us would be genuinely rejoiced.

I am as anxious to see our crime-ridden city freed from some (or all) of its vileness as any other citizen. Nevertheless the hysterical efforts which I am called upon periodically to witness are nauseating. I have no doubt of the sincerity of these "crusaders"; all they lack is sound judgment based upon a broad view of the subject. Aiming at the Police Department, rotten though it is, is not a means to the desired ends. The Police Department fattens and grows viler upon policies growing out of our own false modesty and deplorable overniceness. We have spent the closing years of the century in looking at the crime of our city through smoked glasses. It won't do; this crime is not something foreign to us. It is a part of us—has grown up with us, and has come to us through centuries of ancestors.

It is our diseased part which we have got to manage so as to prevent its growth and possibly to bring about its cure. Just so long as we go on deceiving ourselves into the belief that there is really nothing the matter with us; just so long as we refuse to acknowledge the presence of our disease, the disease will continue its growth. Our own attitude toward the subject fosters police corruption.

The cure lies only in taking this thing and isolating it as we would the smallpox—putting it where we can watch each symptom of its course. Then we may be able to stamp it out. We need moral courage ourselves in order to take this step.

JOHN BRERETON.

New York, Jan. 17, 1901.

CHARITY, PUBLIC AND PRIVATE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On viewing the needs of the nether social world and the pains taken for their alleviation by trained workers of social problems, we cannot fail to admire and praise the zeal, the devotion, and, within limits, the success demonstrated.

When we consider, however, that a costly provision is made by both State and municipality for the execution of this same purpose, we conclude that the work that falls upon these private individuals and private charitable enterprises marks a public scandal. Only the failure of the highly salaried official with unlimited resources in money, men, buildings, would make a place for the private enterprise.

The appointment of corrupt men "for their pocket every time" to the management of affairs of which they cannot have an intelligent conception, with its concomitant misrule, misuse of funds, and misuse of the public wards, the poor and the sick, makes the efforts of the men and women who are adequate to the work a necessity. Therefore, the private charity is the public scandal.

Can we conceive of O'Rourke, Brennan, or even Keller doing for the love of their unfortunate human brothers the work that Faure, Cutting, Foulke, Mrs. Charles Lowell, and others of their ilk do?

How then are they fit? Why are not the Faures, Cuttings, and Foulkes selected for the responsible positions for which they are fitted and the power given them that is now squandered by men to whom the purpose of their appointment is absolutely not considered?

Probably no one in the Department of Charity, from Commissioner down, takes his place because of his love of the work or desire to do the best for the poor, the sick, or the criminal and to restore them to a useful place in the social structure.

To the minds of these incumbents all of the public departments are constructed, not for the poor victim of sickness, accident, or moral weakness and poverty, but for a job for the political follower.

So the maladministration and the exhibitions by the public prints follow logically.

Aside from the management of the finances and the protection of property of a great city, what is there left of the administration of the Government but provision for and protection of the sick and the helpless and hapless and the wise management of the criminal?

Hospitals, asylums, prisons, and law department courts and police—charity and correction—counted, and what is left of jobs for the heelers. So we give the whole up to what is practically the criminal class and actually the fosterers of crime to direct.

The Police Department certainly does not wish crime abolished, and the whole Government hates the name of reform. Greed feeds upon the criminal and also upon hospital, asylum, and almshouse. Thirty thousand dollars is demanded by officials to maintain a public bath, and the society of which Mr. Cutting is President offers to bear all expenses, including soap, towels, and attendance, for half the amount.

Why shall we continue the incompetent men in office to spend the appropriations, and then call upon private citizens to contribute money, spirit, and brains to do the work? Why must participeps criminis be the basis of government for the city and crime fostered for the enrichment of the administration?

When men of character and capacity are in evidence proving their competence by doing the neglected work, it is not a difficult matter to substitute them for the greedy incompetents whose sympathies are not with the needy, but are continually with the criminal class.

With these men the means which the taxpayers provide liberally will go for the work it was intended to do, and the scandal of demand for private charities will cease.

GEORGE DACRE BLEYTHING.

New York, Jan. 16, 1901.

THE LATE "SAM" LEWIS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The paragraph in to-day's TIMES respecting the charitable bequests of the late Samuel Lewis is somewhat contradictory of the contemptuous tone pervading the biographical sketch which appeared in your paper of Monday. The spirit which so disposes of nearly one-fourth of a large estate is scarcely in consonance with that of the "flinty hearted," usurious personage such as you described Mr. Lewis to be. You are usually so fair and accurate in your dealings—even with Britishers—that I feel I need not apologize for intruding once more upon your space.

Let us be just even to the men who lend money on interest. I have never been a lender myself—it has been the other way—but I cannot see a world of difference between the fashionable tailor who charges a hundred dollars—not to me, who "cultivates literature on a little oatmeal"—for a suit of clothes worth twenty-five and cost fifteen, and the money lender who so manipulates his gold as to produce 40 per cent. per annum. That is, so far as the morale is concerned. I have nothing to do with legalities, and, besides, we are not discussing them.

It is so easy to talk about a "flinty-hearted usurer" and to compare him with "Shylock," who, by the way, was not flinty-hearted, except on that sublime occasion when he demanded the fulfillment of an absurd contract and was cheated by the pretty juggle of a Venetian lady disguised as an attorney at law. If the whole conception of Shylock's character is not an absurdity, what do you say of the dear little woman, Miss Portia, fooling a whole bench of solemn Judges—clever fellows, too, and just, and not mere Tammany men?

Now "Sam" Lewis was by no means a "flinty-hearted" person. On the contrary, "Sam"—and there are hundreds of men in London at this day who refer to him as "dear old 'Sam,'" was as softhearted and generous a man as a Bishop or a rabbi or a Salvation Captain need be—and probably is not. While you are able to quote cases of a couple of dissolute noblemen to whom he lent money, I could cite very many instances in which "Sam" displayed a characteristic kindness. Strange to say, his charity was unbounded. No deserving case ever appealed to him in vain, and his gifts were accompanied by such genial expressions and such manifestations of good-will that the recipient felt he was doing the donor a favor by taking the money. He often asked me if I knew of any poor fellows to whom a few pounds might be of use. I recollect a young Baronet who, unable to pay a small judgment debt, was locked up in jail in default. He communicated with the "flinty-hearted usurer," who procured his release and gave him £200 to start him afresh. Gave, not lent, be it remarked.

"Sam" Lewis lent money! It is terrible, but there are men in New York to-day who also lend money, never give away a cent, and are regarded as being certain of a seat in heaven by the members of the church they—well, say—pray in. These men may not make quite 40 per cent., but the deficiency is provided by the profits of market rigging.

Do not let us get calling men flinty-hearted out of respect for some abstract code of morals, for it is hard to see where the calling of names is to end if the game is to commence with any sincerity.

New York, Jan. 17, 1901. A. R.

Defends Sam Lewis's Memory.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I do not think your obituary notice on the death of Sam Lewis, the London money lender, published in your issue of the 14th inst., is written either in a spirit of fairness or generosity. At all events, part of the statements you record against him are devoid of truth. Take, for instance, that which accuses him of being responsible for the downfall of Ernest Benzon, known as the "Jubilee Juggins." It is within my knowledge that the only money transaction Mr. Lewis ever had with Benzon was to induce him, at a time when he had nearly reached the end of his tether, to purchase a small weekly annuity, which is all he has to depend on to-day.

The principal portion of the millions left by Mr. Lewis was obtained in a manner never resorted to by other money lenders. He took risks. For instance, a young aristocrat of the Pelican Club, of which Mr. Lewis and myself were members, had nearly four years before attaining his majority, when a splendid fortune awaited him. Mr. Lewis loaned him £100,000, taking his notes for double that amount, payable on attaining his majority. The borrower, being a minor, could have snapped his fingers, had he so minded, when the note was presented at maturity, but in this case it was promptly paid. Most of his wealth clients were young men whose wealth came to them in a similar manner. He had no transactions with the middle classes. Besides the risk of repudiation there was always the risk of death intervening.

His charity contributions were endless, as many members of the Pelican Club can testify to. In that bohemian club his society was ever sought after, for he was known as "an all-round good fellow," a bon vivant, and a patron of sport of all kinds. Mr. Lewis once confided in me that in early life he peddled jewelry in Dublin and began money lending there in a small way. As there are no usury laws in England, and money is looked upon as a mere commodity, or, rather, what it is worth to the needy, it is no wonder that money lenders thrive, but most of them lend only upon collateral, while Sam Lewis alone took risks such as I have above alluded to De mortuis nil nisi bonum, say I.

ROBERT P. NOAH.

New York, Jan. 16, 1901.

THE CHURCH AND LABOR.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In "Workingman's" communication in your issue of the 13th inst., and in his previous article in regard to the non-attendance of workingmen on church services, he advances three distinct propositions, as follows:

1. That workingmen generally believe that the Church is hostile to their struggle to better their condition.

2. That this belief is leading them to withdraw from attendance on the services of the Church.

3. That there are facts to justify this belief as to the hostility of the Church to the cause of the working people.

In this connection he says "organized wealth" is laying unholy hands on our educational institutions, and is having professors dismissed for teaching doctrines offensive to the men whose lives are devoted to the acquisition of money.

Now, how or why this should lead workingmen to abstain from church attendance is not apparent. It would seem irrelevant to the question. As a sociological phenomenon, it has been of limited extent, and each of the few cases that have occurred have been so generally denounced by press, pulpit, and individuals without regard to party or denominational lines that there would seem little danger of its ever becoming a serious public peril.

Taking up the several propositions in their order, the first—that there is a widespread belief among working people that the Church is unfriendly—is unfortunately true. Neither in my previous communication nor in this is the existence of such an opinion disputed. It is an incorrect opinion; it is not justified by the facts, but it incontestably exists.

In regard to the second proposition, it is admitted that a few workingmen, of great earnestness in the cause of labor, have left the Church because they did not think it took a sufficiently advanced position on the labor question, but it is proper to remember that other causes have operated of late years to decrease attendance among all classes. The writer is not unfamiliar with "living, struggling working people," nor has his "personal contact" been limited to one trade or to one locality. His individual impression has been that, taking the whole country over, a fair proportion of working people still attend church services, and that those who are most bitter against the church are usually non-attendants who have taken their opinions second-hand. Working people, like other people, vary widely in intelligence and ideas, and it is not safe to make class generalizations merely from personal experience.

Passing to the third and most important proposition, the existence of facts to justify this belief as to the hostile attitude of the Church, it seems fair as an argument ad hominem to call attention to the inconsistency of mentioning with approval men like Father McGlynn, Dr. Muhlenberg, Phillips Brooks, Bishop Potter, and Cardinal Gibbons, and then insisting that they are not representative of the attitude of the modern Church. They certainly do not represent "Workingman's" belief as to the attitude of the modern church, but the correctness of that belief is the exact point in issue. It is clearly begging the question for him to say that such men do not represent the Church, because they stand for the exact opposite of his idea of the Church. "Workingman" seems to think that Dr. Cuyler, two unnamed Methodist Bishops who during the last campaign indulged in some rather pervid partisan oratory, and an unnamed Secretary of a mission board, whose utterances were open to criticism on other grounds, are typical of the attitude of the modern Church, and that the learned, dignified, and admirable churchmen he has named are not. His judgment in this respect seems biased by his feelings.

The general question, whether the Church is opposed to the cause of the workingmen, should be investigated, as a matter of fact. The best evidence attainable to show the attitude of the Church of to-day is the teachings of its leaders, clerical and lay. These are to be found in books written on social problems, in the pages of its representative periodicals, and in the utterances of its pulpits. If the Church is for or against the workingman in his struggle to better his condition, it will appear in these several means of expression. Then the measure of practical achievement may be ascertained by noting the proportion of her ministers, teachers, and laymen who are engaged in the varied movements for social betterment. The professions of sympathy and interest will undoubtedly exceed the corresponding practice of clergy and laity, as the ideals and teachings of a living, developing church must always be in advance the actual attainment of its membership, but they will show clearly and unmistakably the direction in which the Church is moving.

Space will only allow the plan of investigation to be outlined, but if the results could be given, they would show that the feeling of the working people against the Church is unfounded, and is not based upon facts. It should also be emohasized that this is the only way in which the truth can be discovered. To go to "the great heart of the common people" would tell only their feelings, and we want to know is whether these feelings are justified by the real attitude of the Church, or whether they are the fruit of mistake and misunderstanding.

This is not intended to convey the impression that the Church is doing her full duty; she has never done that yet, in this or in any other matter. Any association of human beings must be faulty. Even labor organizations are not perfect. There probably are congregations that are merely rich men's clubs, where the grinding employer, the landlord of slum tenements, the usurer, and the avaricious can slumbrously worship without having ever a piercing truth cut into their pachyderm consciences. There may be truckling creatures in nulpits who pander to opulent pew renters and dare not call their souls their own, and others, again, who, dull, slow-witted, and uninformed, dread anything that shall throw them out of their old, familiar grooves of thought.

All these may be, but the assumption that these unworthy elements are or represent the great, growing, evolving American Church is as false as to facts as it is pernicious in effects. The vast membership of the Church of Christ have pledged adherence to certain moral standards and to certain divine ideals of conduct. Just so

FINANCIAL.

Hanover National Bank
Capital $3,000,000. Surplus and profits, $5,000,000.
9 and 11 Nassau St.

Central National Bank
320 Broadway.

The Nassau Bank
Corner Beekman and Nassau Streets.

Colonial Trust Company
CAPITAL, SURPLUS, AND UNDIVIDED PROFITS, $2,000,000.00
ST. PAUL B'LD'G, 222 B'way.

Washington Trust Company
Stewart Building, 280 Broadway.

Bankers' Cards.

KOUNTZE BROTHERS,
BANKERS,
Broadway & Cedar St., NEW YORK,
BUY AND SELL
Investment Securities.
Receive accounts of Corporations, Firms and Individuals on favorable terms.
Make loans against approved collateral.
LETTERS OF CREDIT.

G. Sidenberg & Kraus,
BANKERS & BROKERS.
20 BROAD ST., NEW YORK.
Members N. Y. Stock Exchange.
Orders Executed for Stocks and Bonds for cash or on margin.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSIT.
Investment Securities.

HENRY CLEWS & CO.,
BANKERS,
11, 13, 15, and 17 Broad St.
MEMBERS N. Y. STOCK EXCHANGE.
Orders executed for investment or on margin. Interest allowed on deposits, subject to check at sight. Act as Financial Agents for Corporations and Investors. Industrial Combinations Organized. Government and other Investment Bonds bought and sold.
BRANCH OFFICES:
22 W. 33d St., op. Waldorf. | 202 5th Av., cor. 25th St.
487 B'way, Silk Ex. Bldg | 56 Worth & 39 Thomas Sts.
67 Hudson St., Merc. Ex. | 16 Court St., Brooklyn.

DOUGLAS & JONES,
Members New York Stock Exchange.
ESTABLISHED 1856.
24 Broad St., New York City.
STOCKS AND BONDS BOUGHT AND SOLD ON COMMISSION AT THE NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE AND CARRIED ON MARGIN.
Daily Market Letter on Application.
CORRESPONDENCE INVITED.

Vermilye & Co.,
BANKERS,
New York and Boston.

SIMON BORG & CO.,
BANKERS,
No. 20 Nassau St., New York
INVESTMENT SECURITIES.

Henry L. Wardwell. Edward L. Adams.
Telephone 3243 Broad.
WARDWELL & ADAMS,
STOCK BROKERS.
16 BEAVER ST., NEW YORK.
Members N. Y. Stock Exchange.
Stocks, Bonds, & Investments

P. J. Goodhart & Co.,
Dealers in
Bank & Trust Co. Stocks
Members N. Y. Stock Exchange.
38 WALL STREET.

JACOB BERRY & CO.
MEMBERS CONSOLIDATED STOCK EXCHANGE.
11 and 13 Broadway, New York.
ESTABLISHED 1857.
STOCKS, BONDS, GRAIN, COTTON.
A commission house working in the interest of clients, executing all orders upon the exchange and giving names of Brokers with whom transaction is made in every instance. We issue upon request a book describing accurately the above marks and influences governing them. Also monthly fluctuation sheets and market reports.
COMMISSION 1/16. MODERATE MARGINS.

Established 1869. Tel. call, 2365 Cortlandt.
FRED. H. SMITH,
STOCK BROKER, 8 BROAD ST., N. Y.
Member New York Con. Stock Exchange.
Stocks, Bonds and Grain.
Bought, sold, and carried on margin.
COMMISSION 1-16TH.
Book of Railway Statistics upon application.

Stoppani & Hotchkin,
Members New York Consolidated Stock Exchange.
66 BROADWAY, N. Y.
Telephone 3,078 Cortlandt.
Orders executed for investment or on margin.
STOCKS, BONDS, GRAIN, COTTON,
Branch Office, N. E. cor. Broadway and 30th St.

FINANCIAL.

TO THE HOLDERS OF
First Mortgage Five Per Cent. Refunding Gold Bonds of 1948
OF
The Indiana, Illinois & Iowa R.R.Co.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that The Indiana, Illinois and Iowa Railroad Company has exercised the option reserved to it in its First Mortgage Five Per Cent. Refunding Gold Bonds secured by its First Mortgage Five Per Cent. Refunding Gold Bond Mortgage, dated October 1, A. D. 1898, to Continental Trust Company of the City of New York, and Joseph D. Oliver, Trustees, to redeem said bonds and each of them at any time, at its option, by paying to the Trust Company, Trustee in said Mortgage, or to the lawful holders of said bonds, par and ten per centum premium thereon and accrued interest, and that it intends to redeem all of said bonds then outstanding, on the First (1st) day of February, A. D. 1901, by paying therefor on said date to the Continental Trust Company of the City of New York, or to the lawful holders thereof, at the office of the said Trust Company, Number 30 Broad Street, in the City of New York, par and ten per centum premium thereon and accrued interest.

Thereupon, under the provisions of said mortgage and the bonds secured thereby, INTEREST WILL CEASE TO ACCRUE THEREON AND SAID BONDS WILL BE FULLY PAID.

BY ORDER OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS.
The Indiana, Illinois and Iowa Railroad Company.
By T. P. SHONTS, President.
R. P. AHRENS, Secretary.

HARBOR AND SUBURBAN BUILDING AND SAVINGS ASSOCIATION
34-36 Wall Street, N. Y.
Under Supervision New York State Banking Department.
Pays 6% per annum on Permanent Investments.
Pays 5% per annum on Temporary Savings.
Assets January 1st, 1901 . . $631,054.07
Guarantee Fund and Surplus . 106,100.18

FINANCIAL. | FINANCIAL. | FINANCIAL.

ARIMEX CONSOLIDATED COPPER COMPANY.

Capital. . . . . $5,000,000.

This company was organized under the laws of the State of New Jersey for the purpose of purchasing and operating copper producing properties.

Its capital is $5,000,000, divided into 200,000 shares of common stock of the par value of $25 each. It has no bonds or mortgage debt.

Of this capital 120,935 shares, or $3,023,375 of the capital stock, has been issued in payment for certain properties. The balance of 79,065 shares remains in the treasury of the company.

The company owns the following properties:

1,750,000 shares out of a total of 2,000,000 of the par value of $5 each, of the Table Mountain Copper Company of Illinois	$8,750,000
90,000 shares out of a total of 100,000 of the par value of $10 each, of the Angang Copper Company of New Jersey	900,000
500,000 shares out of a total of 500,000 of the par value of $10 each, of the Oxide Copper Company of New Jersey	5,000,000
	$14,650,000

The Oxide Copper Company owns the Copper Prince group of copper claims, located in the Silver Bell mining district, Pima County, Arizona, comprising thirty claims. Early in the Spring of the year 1900 a contract was entered into by the company for extensive developments by sinking a shaft five hundred feet, which, with cross-cuts, would develop a large part of the property, and in other ways. At the present time this shaft is down about 370 feet, and work is being vigorously pushed.

The Table Mountain Company owns twenty-seven claims, situated in the Bunker Hill Mining District, Pinal County, Arizona.

The Angang Copper Company consists of about four hundred mining claims, situated at Zituacuaro, in the State of Michoacan, Mexico, known as the Chirlanganguceo Mines. Development was planned early in the year on a large scale, and Mr. Adolphe Rock, the resident director and general manager of the company, has devoted himself to this work. These mines were worked many years ago by Mexicans in a very desultory manner, large bodies of ore having been taken out and large dumps remaining, showing the extent of the former operations. Mr. Rock has unwatered the shafts, built houses for the workmen, buildings for the company, begun work on the roads, and generally begun a systematic development of the property on a large scale.

During the year 1900 development work on an extended scale has been carried on vigorously on the property at the Angang and Oxide Companies, and to a smaller extent on the properties of the Table Mountain Company, under the supervision and direction of the President of the Arimex Company, Mr. Charles H. Dickey of Baltimore, Md. The development has proven the property to be so rich as to warrant immediate extension of development operations on a very large scale, which operations, in the opinion of the Directors, will give enormous net returns.

From the fact that this property has been in charge of practical copper mining men, and that the chief executive officer, Mr. Dickey, is also President of the Parrot Company—which, since the formation of the Amalgamated Copper Company, has been one of that company's largest producing copper properties—the chances of mistakes have probably been reduced to a minimum.

For the purpose of placing all these properties upon a dividend earning basis in the shortest time possible, the Board of Directors have voted that 60,000 shares of the treasury stock of the company be sold by subscription at par, $25.00 per share, by Messrs. E. N. Morison & Company, Bankers, Baltimore, Md., and any other selling agents they may select.

American Loan & Trust Company, Boston, Transfer Agents.
International Trust Company, Boston, Registrars.

CHARLES H. DICKEY, President.
Jan. 12, 1901. HARRY A. NORTON, Secretary and Treasurer.

OFFER FOR PUBLIC SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Notice is hereby given that offers for public subscription for 60,000 Shares, of the value of $25 each, of the stock of the will be received at the office of either of the undersigned until the twenty-third day of January, 1901, at the rate of $25 per share. Subscriptions must be accompanied by certified check for 20 per cent. of the amount of such subscription, the balance to be payable within ten days after notice of allotment.

ARIMEX CONSOLIDATED COPPER COMPANY

Temporary negotiable receipts will be issued, on payment of sums due on allotment, exchangeable for certificates of stock as soon as same can be engraved.

We reserve the right to allot any or all of the above-named amount at any time on or before January 23.

We also reserve the right to allot or reject any subscription in whole or in part.

Subscription blanks sent on application.

We respectfully refer intending subscribers in Baltimore, Washington, and Philadelphia, who are more or less unfamiliar with the investment quality of copper stocks generally, to the following statement of Thomas W. Lawson of Boston, Mass.:

COPPERS IN THE PAST.

Four years ago I publicly called attention to "Coppers"—to the fact that although they had been actively dealt in on the Boston Stock Exchange for over fifty years, and had been and were still the basis of a large portion of New England's wealth, their merits as first-class and semi-speculative investments were almost unknown to investors and speculators in this country and Europe; to the fact that investigation would prove that an investment in the stock of any of the good producing "Coppers" would give much larger yearly net returns, with a surer guarantee of permanency for a longer period of time, than a like investment in any other class of stocks, and I stated my belief that so soon as these facts became known to investors and speculators throughout this country and Europe, there would begin a "scramble" for "Coppers" unparalleled in the history of the stock market, with the result that the price of such stocks then for sale in the open market would multiply, that this increased value would hold and be further increased for years to come.

At this time, and in all my subsequent statements, the following were named as some of the leading "Coppers" which would multiply in price: Butte & Boston, then selling at $2 to $14; Boston & Montana, then selling at $50 to $75, and Calumet & Hecla, then selling at $225. So radical did these views seem that they were adversely criticised by those interested in financial matters, and more particularly by professional financial critics, but it is now known and admitted that my predictions erred on the conservative side only, for the present prices of the "Coppers" then called to the attention of the public show an increase in value of hundreds of millions of dollars, or more than has ever accrued to any other class of stocks in a like period. The prices of the three named, Butte, Montana, and Calumet, alone show an increase in value of $115,000,000.

It is now known that never in the history of stocks has there been a parallel to the "scramble" for "Coppers" which carried the price of Butte from $2 to $108 per share, Montana from $50 to $400 and Calumet from $225 to $900, and others in like proportion, or another instance where such a tremendous increase in price held and became permanent. The fact that the public were so quickly educated, that such a great increase in values came in such a short time, and that this increase has held and is still advancing, and that seven out of every ten persons interested in financial matters in this country and Europe are now familiar with the merits of "Coppers," when four years ago not one in one thousand had even an intelligent idea of their worth, in my opinion proves the following statement, which was used in all my public utterances:—

"Owing to a peculiar combination of conditions, this great industry, copper, is the only one of all the great staples that has absolutely escaped the march of modern progress—escaped it for fifty years, until to-day it is possible for capital to be invested in this business on a basis that will give to it 100 per cent. net profit on all gross business—a business where the working of a natural law of supply and demand, not the artificial law of arbitrary combination, allows the producer to make his selling price such as will give to him from 100 to 150 per cent. net profit on his entire product."

THE FUTURE OF "COPPERS."

Intending purchasers of "Coppers" for investment or for speculation should first find a correct answer to these questions:—

(1) Will the earnings of "Coppers," at the present price of the metal, allow of larger net returns than can be secured from any other class of stocks?

(2) Can the permanency of production of copper mines be as surely ascertained as the future earning capacity of corporations which are the basis of other stocks, and,

(3) Will the present price of copper, the metal, be maintained? The answer to these three questions will enable one to decide whether "Coppers" are a purchase at present prices. A cursory investigation of "Coppers" will prove that no other class of business will give as large net earnings as are at the present time derived from "Coppers" at the ruling price of the metal.

A careful investigation of the present method of conducting the copper mining business will prove that in no other industry can the future earnings be as surely ascertained for so long a time in the future as "Coppers."

The reason for this is that all good producing copper mining companies first, that is, before beginning to "produce," "block out" for years in advance the copper ore which they afterwards are to "produce," and each year thereafter add to this reserve an amount of ore equal to from 50 to 100 per cent. of their yearly production; in other words, "Coppers," while paying the very large dividends they do pay, set aside each year in the form of blocked-out ore, 50 to 100 per cent. additional dividends.

So consistently has this been practiced, that mines like the Boston & Montana can at any time after their ore has "run out" pay to their stockholders a sum equal to the present selling price of their entire capital stock.

A thorough investigation will prove conclusively that the present price of copper, the metal, is permanent, that is, that it will surely be maintained for years to come, and that it will be maintained through the working of the natural law of supply and demand.

The present selling price of copper, the metal, is about 17 cents per pound. The cost of production is from 5 to 7 cents, yet with this enormous disproportionate net profit, the consumption throughout the world is so rapidly and steadily increasing beyond the possibility of production as to insure for years to come this or any other price which does not actually prohibit the use of this metal.

The only factor that can adversely affect the selling price of copper, the metal, is the discovery of new mines.

Demonstrated facts indicate conclusively that the entire production of all new mines for the coming ten years will probably not equal what has been taken from the old ones in the past three years.

The answers to these questions prove that no purchase of stocks can be made which will be so free from the risk of loss, so sure to pay for the present and for the future such large returns, and consequently so sure to give such large profits as "Coppers." In my opinion, the purchase of good, producing "Coppers" at present prices will give as large, if not larger, returns in the coming two years than have been realized in the past four.

"COPPERS" AS AN INVESTMENT.

In buying "Coppers" for speculation or investment, intending purchasers should, if possible, confine their purchases to the stocks of established, producing mines, for while such stocks are freer from the risk of loss than any other class of stocks, there is no greater risk than that which attends the purchase of the stocks of new copper mines.

No investment in a gold or silver mining stock, the stock of a land company or an industrial based upon patents, is attended with so great a risk, as an investment in the stock of a new copper mine. At least 499 in each 500 of the new copper mines whose stocks are offered for sale publicly are worthless, a large proportion of them being swindles of a most flagrant character, organized and conducted for the sole purpose of selling stock.

The reason for this is self-evident; to mine copper and legitimately conduct a copper mining business at the present time calls for the investment of a very large amount of cash capital. No new copper mining company can begin business, under the necessary modern methods, without the expenditure of at least $1,000,000 to $5,000,000 cash before any dividends can be earned, making it the most uninviting field for small capitalists who intend to conduct the business legitimately, and the most inviting field for schemers, whose only purpose is to sell stocks on promises which can never be redeemed.

As an illustration of the difficulty of securing new copper mining properties: "During the past few years it has been necessary for me to closely follow all alleged discoveries of copper mining properties in the United States, Canada and Mexico. Of these there were four hundred and eighty odd which appeared to have sufficient merit to warrant investigation. Of the four hundred and eighty investigated, in only forty odd instances did they have sufficient merit to justify the expenditure necessary for complete investigation by the employment of engineers and mining machinery, and of these forty odd only three met all the requirements necessary for the establishment of a legitimate copper mining business."

E. N. MORISON & COMPANY,
BANKERS,
212 East German St., Baltimore, Md.

BROWN, RILEY & CO.
Bankers and Brokers,
Members Boston and New York Stock Exchanges.
20 Congress St., Boston.

LAWSON, ARNOLD & CO.
Bankers and Brokers,
Members Boston and New York Stock Exchanges,
33 State St., Boston.

FINANCIAL. | FINANCIAL.

M.40,000,000
Three Per Cent. Government Annuity Bonds
of the
KINGDOM OF SAXONY.

This issue will be offered for public subscription in Germany on January 22d next. The bonds will bear April and October coupons, the first coupon maturing April 1st, 1901.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, 83.60 PLUS INTEREST.

MESSRS. KNAUTH, NACHOD & KUHNE, LEIPZIG, HAVE BEEN OFFICIALLY appointed to receive subscriptions for the above issue. We shall, therefore, be pleased to receive applications here and to cable them to our Leipzig house free of charge. Such applications must be in our hands not later than Monday, January 21st next, P. M.

The right is reserved to reject applications and to allot smaller amounts than applied for.

NEW YORK, JANUARY 17TH, 1901.

KNAUTH, NACHOD & KUHNE,
11 WILLIAM STREET.

ANNUAL STATEMENT
OF THE
Harbor & Suburban Building & Savings Association
34 AND 36 WALL STREET, NEW YORK.
JANUARY 1ST, 1901.

RESOURCES.		LIABILITIES.
Bonds and Mortgages and Outstanding Contracts for Real Estate	$314,422.61	Due Shareholders on Shares, &c.	$501,281.86
Real Estate Purchased for Members	301,520.23	Bills Payable	8,767.06
Stock Loans	1,138.50	Due Directors	11,119.71
Bills Receivable	3,530.64	Dividends and Interest Accrued	3,785.26
Furniture and Fixtures	1,894.50	Guarantee Fund, Surplus, and Undivided Earnings	106,100.18
Advanced for Insurance and Taxes	2,355.37
Cash on Hand and in Bank, Jan. 1, 1901	6,192.22
	$631,054.07		$631,054.07

UNDER SUPERVISION NEW YORK STATE BANKING DEPARTMENT.

We pay 6% per annum on Permanent Investments.
We pay 5% per annum on Temporary Savings.

REDEMPTION OF
Duluth, Missabe & Northern Railway Co.
First Consolidated Mortgage Bonds, dated Jan. 1, 1893.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that seventy-nine (79) of the First Consolidated Mortgage Bonds of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern Railway Company were this day drawn for redemption in accordance with the requirements of Article Five of the Trust Mortgage, numbered as follows, viz.:

11	1505	1868	2152	2624	2874	3176
20	1630	1875	2243	2633	2906	3201
1275	1646	1886	2244	2651	2909	3248
1277	1648	1905	2290	2716	2918	3277
1295	1689	1914	2292	2733	2962	3309
1341	1693	1920	2372	2787	3073	3362
1374	1744	1928	2387	2791	3110	3372
1378	1750	1938	2422	2813	3114	3430
1380	1781	1967	2435	2821	3124	3449
1387	1800	2020	2462	2827	3145	3462
1435	1808	2114	2591	2846	3162	3499
1441	1831

All future interest of any of the bonds so designated ceases January 29, 1901, in accordance with the terms of the mortgage.

CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK, Trustee.
By G. SHERMAN, Vice President.
New York, January 17th, 1901.

We, the undersigned, hereby certify that the seventy-nine (79) bonds were designated by lot in our presence as above stated.

FRED C. RANDALL,
With Central Trust Company of New York.
E. V. CARY, Asst. Sec'y,
Of Duluth, Missabe & Northern R'y Co.
FRANK B. SMIDT,
[Seal.] Notary Public, New York County.

In accordance with the foregoing certificate, said mentioned bonds will be paid at this office on or after the 29th of January, 1901, at 105 per centum and interest, say $1,054.67 per bond.

CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK, Trustee.
By G. SHERMAN, Vice President.

AN ASSURED 7% INVESTMENT
(Interest January and July)
Positive Certainty of Large Additional Dividends.

An exceptional opportunity for safe and unusually profitable investment, in the shares of a Corporation which at present controls prosperous Western properties, and which has extraordinary opportunities for increasing its holdings and earnings, and do so upon an absolutely safe basis.

The investment offered contemplates the purchase of 7 per cent. cumulative preferred stock at par, and with it, full paid and non-assessable common stock, as a part of the same consideration. The payment of the dividends on the preferred stock, when and as stipulated, and commencing with the current year, is fully assured and definitely provided for.

Such Company has the active co-operation and support of one of the most important railway systems of the country, and by recent arrangements is assured of controlling interests in a large number of important dividend earning properties.

The sale of these shares is to enable the Company to acquire the above interests and extend its operations. As the earnings upon industries already under such company's control will provide ample income to pay dividends on the preferred stock, any earnings from these additional properties will go to the common stock, which, it is safe to assert, will commence to earn liberal dividends at a very early day.

A careful investigation will satisfy conservative investors that the Preferred shares offered, afford an absolutely safe investment, and that the common shares promise to, very soon, become very valuable.

Full information furnished on application to

AMERICAN FINANCE AND TRUST CO.,
Park Row Bldg., New York City.

AMERICAN SMELTING AND REFINING CO.
Notice of Special Meeting of Stockholders.

A SPECIAL MEETING of the stockholders of the American Smelting and Refining Company will be held at its office, No. 83 Montgomery Street, Jersey City, New Jersey, on Saturday, the sixteenth day of February, 1901, at eleven o'clock in the forenoon, to take action upon an amendment to the Certificate of Incorporation of said Company, which has been declared advisable by its Board of Directors, increasing the capital stock of said Company from the present authorized capital of sixty-five million dollars ($65,000,000) to an authorized capital of one hundred million dollars, ($100,000,000,) one-half of such increase to be preferred stock and one-half thereof common stock.

The stock transfer books of the Company will be closed at twelve o'clock noon on January 26th, 1901, and reopened at ten o'clock A. M. on February 18th, 1901.

Dated New York City January 19th, 1901.
BY ORDER OF THE BOARD,
EDWARD BRUSH, Secretary.

OIL—INVEST IN OIL—Greatest opportunity to make a great amount of money from small investment in Oil since the days of Pennsylvania Oil excitement. We have 1,900 acres of Oil lands near the great 7,000 barrel gushers in the wonderful Sand Fork Oil Fields, in Lewis County, W. Va. Portion of our stock offered at 5c. on the dollar. Money to be used in drilling wells. Property all paid for and non-assessable. For further particulars address SAND FORK OIL & GAS CO., Peabody Building, Wheeling, W. Va.

BROWN BROTHERS & CO.,
NO. 59 WALL ST.,
ISSUE INTERNATIONAL CHEQUES, COMMERCIAL and TRAVELERS' CREDITS AVAILABLE IN ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

$200,000
First Mortgage 5% Gold Bonds
CENTRAL BREWING COMPANY
CENTRAL BREWING COMPANY

Capital Stock, ... $500,000
Total Bond Issue, ... $200,000

The Farmers' Loan & Trust Company, Trustee.

PRICE PAR AND ACCRUED INTEREST.

Dated July 1, 1900. Maturing July 1, 1905. Bonds of $1,000 each. Principal as well as interest coupons (July and January) payable at the office of the Trustee, 22 William Street.

These Bonds are a First Lien on the Real Estate, Buildings and Fixtures of the CENTRAL BREWING COMPANY, located on East 68th Street and the East River, N. Y. City, consisting of 16 lots and the new buildings thereon used as a Brewery, and valued at over $600,000.

We recommend the above Bonds as especially desirable for small investors.

Fred'k Southack & Alwyn Ball, Jr.
Real Estate and Investment Securities.
Phone 2760, Franklin. 111 & 401 Broadway.
BOND AND MORTGAGE DEPARTMENT.

MINING NOTICE.

A proposition in gold and silver mining is being privately offered, involving the following exceptional features:

(1) THE EXISTING FACT—
100% PROFIT ASSURED TO BEGIN WITH, AND ABSOLUTE SAFETY OF PRINCIPAL WITH 6% INTEREST SECURED BY MORTGAGE.

(2) THE PROSPECT—
1,000% PROFIT, COMBINED WITH ABSOLUTE SAFETY OF PRINCIPAL WITH 6% INTEREST SECURED BY MORTGAGE UPON

(3) ASSETS IN—
REAL ESTATE, GOING PLANT AND ORE, GREATER IN VALUE THAN THE SUM OF CAPITALIZATION OF COMPANY.

Investors will find in this proposition that which thousands of people are now seeking, namely:
THE ESSENTIALS OF SAFETY IN A MINING ENTERPRISE.
An investigation entails no risk and will be well repaid. AN OPPORTUNITY OF THIS CHARACTER DOES NOT OCCUR VERY OFTEN. For further particulars address "SAFETY," Box 79, TIMES OFFICE, New York.

HAIGHT & FREESE CO.,
53 Broadway, N. Y. City.
Branches { 85 State St., Boston, Mass. / 402 Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.
Bonds, Stocks, Grain & Cotton bought and sold on commission, either for cash or on moderate margin.
Government & Municipal Bonds bought & sold, and estimates furnished for purchase, sale or exchange of same.
Write or call for our daily and weekly market letters.
A line of dividend-paying investments always on hand.
HAIGHT & FREESE CO.

J. L. McLean & Co.
Members { Consolidated Stock Exchange, N. Y. / New York Produce Exchange.
60 BROADWAY, N. Y.
35 Congress St., Boston. 435 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.
DAILY MARKET LETTER sent upon application. CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED.

EAST SIDE
BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION,
136 E. 42d St., near 3d Ave.
A GOOD AND SAFE INVESTMENT.
EARNED 7½ % FOR PAST 12 YEARS.
Weekly deposits 50c. to $15.00. Call or send for report. Office open Wednesday evenings 7:30 to 9:30

Composite Type Bar Co. Stock.
DAVID PFEIFFER, 18 Wall St.

FINANCIAL.

Investments

NEW YORK CENTRAL & HUDSON RIVER RAILROAD.
$150,000
West Shore Railroad Company
1st Mtge. Guar. Gold 4s.

$100,000
Utica & Black River Railroad Co.
1st Mtge. Guar. Gold 4s.

$25,000
Beech Creek Railroad Company
1st Mtge. Guar. Gold 4s.

$50,000
Cleve., Cin., Chic. & St. Louis
1st Mtge. Gold 4s.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD CO.
£10,000
Pennsylvania Railroad Company
Sterling 6s, 1905.

$200,000
Pittsburg, Cin., Chicago & St. Louis
Con. Mtge. Guar. Gold 4s.

$100,000
Pittsburg, Cin., Chicago & St. Louis
Con. Mtge. Guar. Gold 4½s.

$50,000
New York & Long Branch R. R. Co.
1st Mtge. Guar. Gold 4s.

$100,000
Chicago & Northwestern R'way Co.
Genl. Mtge. Gold 5½s.

$50,000
Chicago & Northwestern R'way Co.
1st Mtge. Extension 4s.

$50,000
Chicago & Northwestern R'way Co.
Debenture 5s, 1933.

$50,000
Chicago, Mil. & St. P. R'way Co.
Genl. Mtge. Gold 4s.

$90,000
Fargo & Southern Railway Co.
1st Mtge. Gold 6s.

$50,000
Chicago, Bur., & Quincy R. R. Co.
Nebraska Extension 4s.

DELAWARE, LACK. & WESTERN
$50,000
Morris & Essex Railroad Co.
1st Mtge. Guar. 7s.

$100,000
Morris & Essex Railroad Co.
Con. Mtge. Guar. 7s, 1915.

$100,000
Warren Railroad Company
1st Mtge. Guar. Gold 3½s.

$100,000
Minneapolis & St. Louis R. R. Co.
1st Ref'd'g Mtge. Gold 4s.

$100,000
Chicago & East Illinois R. R. Co.
Genl. Consol. Mtge. 6s.

$100,000
Kentucky Central Railway Co.
1st Mtge. Guar. Gold 4s.

$100,000
Second Ave. R. R. (N. Y. City)
1st Mtge. Guar. Gold 5s.

100 Shares
Pitts., Ft. Wayne & Chic. Stock
7% Guar. Pa. R. R. Co.

100 Shares
Cleveland & Pittsburg Stock
7% Guar. Pa. R. R. Co.

200 Shares
Morris & Essex Stock
7% Guar. Del., Lack. & Western.

100 Shares
N. Y., Lackawanna & Western
7% Guar. Del., Lack. & Western.

125 Shares
Kan. City, St. L. & Chic. Pfd. Stock
6% Guar. Chicago & Alton.
FULL PARTICULARS ON APPLICATION.

Redmond, Kerr & Co.
41 WALL ST., N. Y.

MORTON TRUST CO.
38 NASSAU STREET.
Capital, Surplus & Undivided Profits, $5,000,000.
Levi P. Morton, President. Thomas F. Ryan, V.-Pres. James K. Corbiere, 2d V.-P. H. M. Francis, Sec. W. Redmond Cross, Treas. H. B. Berry, Trust Officer.

EXPERT
Accounting and auditing by an experienced bank clerk. Third Teller, Box 198 Times Office.

MONEY TO LEND ON BOND AND MORTGAGE at four, four and a half, and five per cent. Principals only.
MACLAY & DAVIES,
67 & 69 Wall Street.

Meetings and Elections.

PRESSED STEEL CAR COMPANY.
NOTICE OF ANNUAL MEETING.
71 Broadway, New York, December 24th, 1900.
The annual meeting of the stockholders of Pressed Steel Car Company will be held on the 23d day of January, 1901, at 12 o'clock noon, at the office of the company, 243 Washington Street, Jersey City, New Jersey, for the purpose of electing a Board of Directors, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the meeting. The transfer books of the company, for both preferred and common stock, will be closed from three P. M. on December 26th, 1900, until 10 A. M., January 24th, 1901. W. C. DE ARMOND, Secretary.

CONSOLIDATED GAS COMPANY OF NEW YORK, 4 Irving Place.—December 31st, 1900.—The Annual Meeting of the stockholders of this Company for the election of the Trustees to serve during the ensuing year will be held at this office Monday, Jan. 21st, 1901. Polls open from 12 M. to 1 P. M. Transfer books will close Saturday, January 5th, at 12 M., and reopen Tuesday, Jan. 22d, 1901.
C. F. ZOLLIKOFFER, Secretary.

FINANCIAL.

Dividends.

THE COLORADO FUEL & IRON CO.
Denver, Colorado, January 19th, 1901.
Preferred Stock Dividend No. 17.
At a meeting of the Board of Directors held this day the following resolution was adopted:
Resolved, That a dividend of FOUR PER CENT. (4%) be declared upon the Preferred Stock of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company for the six months ending December 31st, 1900, such dividend to be payable February 15th, 1901, in cash to stockholders of record January 28th, 1901. Transfer books will close at 12 noon January 26th, and will reopen at 10 A. M. February 16th. JOHN L. JEROME, Treasurer.

DIVIDEND NOTICE.
American Tin Plate Company.
A dividend of Eight (8) Per Cent. has been declared upon the Common Stock of this Company, payable quarterly during 1901. The first quarterly payment of two per cent. (2) will be paid on February 15th, to Stockholders of record at close of business January 25th.
The transfer books will be closed as to the Common Stock from January 26th to February 15th, both days inclusive.
F. S. WHEELER, Treasurer.
New York, January 15th, 1901.

The New York, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad Company,
GRAND CENTRAL STATION,
New York, Jan. 17, 1901.
The Board of Directors of this Company has this day declared a dividend of five per cent. upon the First Preferred Capital Stock, and a dividend of two per cent. upon the Second Preferred Capital Stock, payable at this office on the 1st of March next to stockholders of record at 3 o'clock P. M. on Thursday, the 24th of January. The transfer books will not be closed.
CHARLES F. COX, Treasurer.

Ninety-second Semi-annual Cash Dividend.
Illinois Central Railroad Co.
The Board of Directors has this day declared a dividend of THREE PER CENT. in cash, payable March 1st, 1901, to the holders of the Capital Stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company, as registered at the close of business February 1st, 1901.
The stock transfer books will be closed for the purpose of the above dividend from February 1st until February 25th, 1901.
A. G. HACKSTAFF, Secretary.
New York, January 16, 1901.

THE TRANSFER BOOKS OF THE GENERAL First Mtge. 4 Per Cent. Registered Bonds of the Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis & Chicago Ry. Co. will close at the office of the Central Trust Co. of N. Y., Monday, Jan. 21, 1901, at 3 o'clock, preparatory to the payment of the quarterly interest thereon due Feb. 1, 1901, and will reopen Feb. 1, at 10 A. M.
E. F. OSBORN, Secretary.
Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 15, 1901.

THE TRANSFER BOOKS OF THE GENERAL First Mtge. 7 Per Cent. registered bonds of the Columbus & Toledo R. R. Co. will close at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., N. Y., Monday, Jan. 21, 1901, at 3 o'clock, preparatory to the payment of the semi-annual interest thereon, due Feb. 1, 1901, and will open Feb. 1st, at 10 A. M.
WILLIAM N. COTT, Treasurer.
Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 15, 1901.

CLEARING HOUSE RETURNS.

The Clearing House returns for the week ended Jan. 19, telegraphed to The Financial Chronicle, make the following showing:

	1901.	1900.	P. C.
New York	$1,455,114,893	$834,312,711	+ 74.2
Boston	123,699,355	115,007,490	+ 12 8
Philadelphia ...	80,322,190	79,809,578	+ 11.9
Baltimore	19,022,620	16,058,788	+ 17.5
Chicago	121,185,072	113,488,683	+ 6.8
St. Louis	36,131,466	28,880,457	+ 25.1
New Orleans...	11,801,256	11,006,019	+ 6.4
Seven cities, 5 days	$1,861,103,889	$1,199,532,726	+ 55.2
Other cities, 5 days	236,164,926	203,706,492	+ 15.8
Total, all cities, 5 days	$2,097,358,815	$1,403,549,218	+ 49.4
All cities, 1 day	407,011,014	274,548,278	+ 48.2
Total, all cities, for week	$2,504,369,829	$1,678,097,496	+ 49.2

Complete returns for the week ended Jan. 12 show, compared with the corresponding week in 1900, a gain of 49.4 per cent., with the same week in 1899 a gain of 73.8 per cent., and with 1898 an increase of 84.1 per cent. Outside New York the increase, as compared with 1900, was 12.7 per cent., the excess over 1899 reaches 18.3 per cent., and making comparison with 1898, the increase is seen to be 39 per cent.

Water Company's $1,000,000 Mortgage.

A second mortgage of $1,000,000 has been executed by the Citizens' Water Company of Newtown, L. I., to the Colonial Trust Company of Manhattan, trustee, as security for an issue of 1,000 4 per cent. twenty-year gold bonds of $1,000 each. The mortgage covers the company's land, buildings, machinery, and franchise. Half the bonds are to pay for land purchased in Newtown and Flushing, and the other half will be reserved for the payment of lands to be acquired and pumping stations to be built in Newtown, Jamaica, and Flushing.

Meeting of the Consumers' League.

David Bispham will read some poems at the annual meeting of the Consumers' League of the City of New York, to be held to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, in Assembly Hall, at 150 Fifth Avenue. Mrs. Frederick Nathan, President of the league, is to preside at the meeting, and short addresses will be delivered by Dr. Annie S. Daniel, Mrs. Florence Kelley, and John Graham Brooks.

The London and Globe Corporation.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The petition recently presented for the compulsory winding up of the affairs of the London and Globe Finance Corporation, Limited, has been withdrawn, and the Court has ordered the voluntary winding up of the company's affairs to proceed under the supervision of the Court.

Gold and Silver Exports.

Exports of gold and silver from this port to all countries for the week aggregated $1,115,000 silver bars and coin and $1,664,672 gold, a total of $2,780,631, against a total of $1,545,259 gold and silver in the same week last year. Since Jan. 1 the exports of gold have been $1,709,612 and silver $3,343,675, against $5,654,487 gold and silver in the corresponding period last year.

NEW CORPORATIONS.

The Upper Cigar Company of Buffalo; capital, $15,000. Directors—C. O. Upper, R. R. Williams, and W. F. Smith, all of Buffalo.

Manhattan Mortgage Company of New York City; capital, $25,000. Directors—A. B. Carrington, C. B. Pierce, and C. L. Acker of New York City.

Michael Printing Company of New York City; capital, $50,000. Directors—F. H. Throop of Brooklyn and R. P. Hamerschlag and A. J. Rathermel of Manhattan.

The Money Point Oyster Company of New York City; capital, $2,200. Directors—J. O. Fordham, Jerome Bell, and Thomas Collins of City Island, New York City.

Star Hygeia Ice Company of Tarrytown, N. Y.; capital, $100,000. Directors—C. B. Culver of Yonkers, J. W. Free of Tarrytown, and James McCourt of New York City.

The Noxon New York Law and Realty Company of New York City; capital, $25,000. Directors—H. Noxon and Charles Noxon of Manhattan and H. T. Smith of Brooklyn.

Sheffield-on-the-Sound Company of New York City, to conduct suburban resorts; capital, $50,000. Directors—Charles P. Geddes, M. F. Smith, and J. T. Easton of New York City.

James F. Hughes Company of New York City, to manufacture electrical supplies; capital, $10,000. Directors—J. F. Hughes and H. E. Bailey of Brooklyn and Nathaniel Webb of Greenwich, Conn.

Incorporated in New Jersey.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 19.—The Federal Mica Company, with a capital of $300,000, filed articles of incorporation with the County Clerk today. The object of the company is to purchase, lease, or otherwise acquire mines, mining rights, and land in New Hampshire, New Jersey, and other States. The incorporators are William Grange, Philadelphia; O. E. Thurlier, New York; John M. Lay, Newark, and William E. Gray, East Orange.

Articles of incorporation of the American Directory Company were also filed, with a capital of $100,000. The incorporators are C. A. and H. R. Waite, East Orange, and Charles Beebe, New York.

Incorporated in Delaware.

Special to The New York Times.

DOVER, Del., Jan. 19.—Certificates of incorporation were filed here to-day as follows:

Milwaukee-Montana Mining Company of New York; capital, $1,000,000.

The Dominion Mining Company of Baltimore; capital, $500,000.

The Pulp Reclaiming Company of Jersey City; capital, $100,000.

The Robinson Motor Company of New York; capital, $100,000.

The C. C. White Toilet Paper Company of New York; capital, $100,000.

Priestman & Boine, Incorporated, Philadelphia, to make decorating supplies and wallpaper; capital, $20,000.

Regret at Col. Burt's Removal.

A resolution was adopted at a meeting of the Council of the National Civil Service Reform League, held Friday evening, expressing profound regret at the removal of Col. Silas W. Burt from the office of Civil Service Commissioner of the State.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION

Wall Street speculators have suffered a bad shake up during the past week. All long of stocks, and most of them heavily overloaded, they have been confronted with a reaction which day by day has grown more vigorous. The setback scored represents in conspicuous stocks a recession of tens of millions of dollars.

No specifically depressing news of importance has been chronicled to account for this break in market prices, but the very absence of disclosed factors has made the decline the more notable. Disturbing reports of Queen Victoria's danger, announcement of National aggressiveness against Venezuela, and a variety of less consequential affairs have been much under discussion; but of all the active, direct, dominating market influences there has been not one adverse enough to warrant anxiety. Upon the other hand, many developments have had inspiriting character. Especially encouraging are the continuing records of railway earnings. They keep on increasing, not only uniformly, but in an extremely substantial way. If railway returns are entitled to consideration as a fair barometer of current business conditions there certainly is little left to be desired, for not only are gross receipts tremendously extending over what was the record a year ago, but net figures are similarly satisfactory.

Iron and steel trade affairs have commanded more attention than anything else during the past week—more than most of other things put together. Mr. Andrew Carnegie and Mr. J. P. Morgan have been much represented in adverse and in conciliatory attitudes day by day. Mr. Carnegie threatens to extend his manufacturing plant, threatens to invade territory hitherto controlled by other corporations, and not before touched by any of his own enterprises. Not one project, but several of this sort are attributed to the great ironmaster of Pittsburg; and from the making of ships to the making of metal tubes Carnegie plans are much discussed in Wall Street. That he can do any and all of the things with which his ambition is credited is not to be questioned; beside Andrew Carnegie there are no other ironmasters in the land—others are but amateurs, most others have old plants, antiquated machinery, while Carnegie undertakings command always what is most modern and best. Thus when Mr. Carnegie projects himself and the capabilities of his enterprise into new iron and steel trade branches, Wall Street (holding securities in other properties) becomes attentive. Clever theorists urge that "it is all a game," that Mr. Carnegie's declaration of extension is but the preliminary to a giant consolidation; and much endeavor is made to make it appear circumstantially that negotiations are on foot for a merger of the Carnegie interests—all the Carnegie properties—with lesser iron and steel companies into one tremendous metal trust. But Wall Street finds slight warrant for confidence in any dream of this sort.

Mr. Carnegie "at a price" would undoubtedly be willing to sell; and this is not a new discovery, as options of eighteen months ago made clear; but "the price" obstructs, is greater even than the plunging athletes of finance care to tackle; and though negotiations have undoubtedly been undertaken, it can be stated upon the highest authority that progress has not been made.

Of more direct interest than any other iron and steel development during the week has been the result of the Federal Steel meeting. In every aspect its results are discouraging. Two bad disclosures are presented. One is that, though the 5 per cent. dividend on common stock declared a year ago is finally ordered paid, no further disposition to recognize the company's common capital stock is to any extent or in any way made. A technical obstacle embarrasses the declaration of common stock dividends out of current earnings; this was made clear in the litigation a year ago—"blackmailing litigation," so Directors characterized it then. All that was in the way, they said, was a matter of verbiage in the charter and that they would have remedied forthwith. A year goes by, they make no change, they show no disposition to seek a change; the obstructive technicalities still obtrude and the Federal Steel Directors announce that they are restrained in their disposition to make a common stock dividend. They have earned it, they insist, but they cannot disburse it because some trifling defects in the language of their charter interferes—this defect being no new discovery, but the same defect which restrained them a year ago and which they a year ago proclaimed their intention to correct. Corporation conduct of this sort, described truly, is disingenuous. Stockholders were promised something, and the promise is not kept. Mr. John W. Gates is not the culprit this time. They who are guilty of this have been the most vociferous critics of Gates.

Though an annual meeting is held, no annual report is issued by the Federal Steel's Board of Directors. Here is another broken promise. Superior in personnel and superior in their declaration of purpose, the Directors of the Federal Steel Company at the very outset of the property's Wall Street career were pledged to open accounting. Yet they maintain secrecy, they make their property as much a blind pool as the Sugar Trust or any of the others which work in the dark. They semi-officially announce lines of policy, the building of new plants, the intrusion into the Carnegie Steel Company's field, and the making of a fight upon the Steel and Wire Trust, and they intimate that during the past year they earned from 15 to 20 per cent. dividends; but at the same time they arrange to issue mortgage bonds. In all this is confusion. In it all there is no possibility for fair accounting; in it all are invitations to distrust. During the past week the common stock has lost a fourth to a fifth of its market value. This represents just so much illicitly taken from the pockets of investors who felt they had the right to have confidence in the character of such a Board of Directors as control the Federal Steel Company.

Money market conditions are satisfactory; call rates are under 2 per cent., and time money for three months can be had at 3 per cent. In consideration of this showing gold exports are not consequential. That we have the yellow metal to spare is thoroughly understood by everybody, and even if shipments continue, the result cannot be very serious. Yesterday's bank statement was in a variety of ways surprising. Though the loan item mounted to large figures, deposits far outran in volume, disclosing, doubtless, the return to the banks by the big trust companies of funds which were congested during recent apprehensions of stringency.

An extensive short interest is in the market. Many of the lesser traders—the room traders—are short of stocks. After a weak opening to-morrow it would not be strange (would not be unprecedented) if important interests should take affairs in hand and cure some of the sorrows which have been upsetting quotations—in the railway list.

SATURDAY.

Stocks weak.

STOCK TRANSACTIONS.

	Shares.
Jan. 19	634,792
To date this year	21,281,330
Corresponding date last year	7,100,092

BOND TRANSACTIONS.

Jan. 19	$2,348,500
To date this year	$49,869,450
Corresponding date last year	$30,528,500

Money rate: Collateral loans on call, 2 per cent.; at three months, 3¾ per cent.; at six months, 4 per cent. Commercial paper, sixty to ninety days, 3½@4 per cent.

***

Net changes in stocks of one-half of 1 per cent. or more were:

Stocks Advanced.

Adams Express	8	Nat. Biscuit pf	½
Am. Car & Fdy	⅝	Nat. Steel pf	½
Am. Steel & Wire pf	½	Pressed Steel Car	½
Cent. R. R. of N. J.	½	Rep. Steel pf	3
Chi. Term. Tr. pf	½	Texas Pac. Land Tr.	2
Cleve., L. & W.	½	U. S. Leather pf	½
C., C., C. & St. L. pf	1⅞	U. S. Rubber pf	½
Federal Steel pf	⅞	Wabash pf	½
Great Northern pf	2	Wabash pf	1
Int. Paper	½

Stocks Declined.

Amal. Copper	⅜	Int. Power	½
American Ice	½	Int. Pump pf	½
Am. Smelt. & Ref.	¾	Kan. & Mich.	1½
Am. S. & R. pf	½	Kan. City So. pf	½
Am. Sugar Ref.	1¾	Laclede Gas pf	1
Am. Tin Plate	1	Lake Erie & W.	1
Am. Tobacco	1¼	Louis. & Nash.	1¼
Anaconda Copper	2⅜	Manhattan	2½
At., T. & S. F.	⅞	Met. Street Railway	2½
At., T. & S. F. pf	⅞	Mexican Central	⅜
Balt. & Ohio	1⅜	Minn. & St. L.	1⅝
B'klyn R. T.	3⅞	Mo., Kan. & T. pf	⅞
Ches. & Ohio	⅞	Nat. Salt	1⅜
Chi., B. & Q.	1¼	Nat. Steel	⅝
Chi. Gt. W.	1⅝	Nat. Steel pf	⅞
Chi. Gt. W. pf., A.	2⅜	N. Y. Cent. & W.	½
Chi., Ind. & L.	¾	Northern Pacific	⅜
Chi., M. & St. P.	2⅞	Pacific Mail	½
Chi., R. I. & Pac.	⅝	Penn. R. R.	⅞
Chi. Term. Trans.	1⅛	People's Gas	½
C., C., C. & St. L.	1⅜	Pressed Steel Car pf	½
Col. Fuel & Iron	⅝	Reading	⅝
Consol. Gas	1⅜	Reading 1st pf	½
Cont. Tobacco	⅝	Reading 2d pf	⅝
Del. & Hudson	⅝	St. L. S. W. pf	½
Den. & Rio Grande	½	Southern Pacific	⅞
Des M. & Ft. D.	¼	Southern Ry. pf	⅞
Erie	1⅛	Third Avenue	⅜
Erie 1st pf	1⅝	Union Pacific	1⅛
Erie 2d pf	1½	West. Un. Tel.	2¼
Federal Steel	⅝

***

Net changes in bond quotations of 1 per cent. or more were:

Bonds Advanced.

L. & N., N. O. & Mob. 1st us.	3	Wabash deb., B.	2⅝

Bonds Declined.

C., B. & Q. a. f. 5s.	½	Mo., K. & T. 1st	1⅛

YESTERDAY'S MARKET.

After early steadiness, in spite of lower prices sent over by London and selling from that quarter, the stock market in the last half hour broke sharply under bear pressure, which in its turn induced liquidation in many of the speculative issues. The reported alarming illness of Queen Victoria and the unexpectedly large increase in the loan item, shown by the bank statement, which the bears construed as unfavorable, were seized upon as factors warranting a savage attack upon values. As on recent days, the larger supporting interests in the market continued as buyers of stocks, but made no effort to conduct an aggressive bull campaign or to advance prices.

The early features of the market were Federal Steel and Steel and Wire, which opened up each over a point on the story put out from Chicago that Federal Steel had obtained control of Steel and Wire by purchasing largely into the common stock. Both issues, however, fell sharply off when the story failed of verification. Inside selling continued on both issues, and it was said that the story was put out merely with the object of lifting the stocks in order to establish a higher selling level.

The local railway shares continued weak, and it was again declared that "a well-known operator" was getting rid of his holdings. According to the gossip of the Street, this operator is practically the only man on the Street who is doing any selling at all.

The copper shares were extremely weak, Amalgamated at one time breaking nearly five points, and Anaconda three in sympathy, so it was declared, with the London decline in Anaconda. As a matter of fact, Amalgamated interests themselves are understood to have been sellers of that stock.

The railroad list generally was weak, room traders offering down the standard railway shares in order to convey the impression that Morgan interests were sellers. Missouri Pacific was a conspicuous exception, opening up nearly two points and reviving the talk of a "corner" in the stock.

Colorado Fuel Directors have declared a dividend of 4 per cent. on the preferred stock for the six months ended Dec. 31, 1900. A dividend on the common stock is confidently expected in the near future.

THE BANK STATEMENT.

The bank statement, issued yesterday shortly before the close of business, was generally a surprise to the Street. The gain of over $13,000,000 in cash, made up of an increase of $11,495,300 in specie and $2,476,000 in legal tenders, was more than the known movements of money had led to expect, while the increase of no less than $22,841,000 in loans was altogether beyond expectations, particularly in view of the stock market liquidation during the week. The increase is in large measure explained by the payments on account of the Pennsylvania Coal Company transfer and by loans made abroad. Deposits increased $36,451,000 and surplus reserves $4,858,550.

***

Previous to the publication of the statement the market had held comparatively firm and steady, but when the figures were made public traders, contending that the large increase in loans was an unfavorable fact, raided the market, inducing not a little liquidation. The close was heavy.

***

The week's averages of the banks compare as follows with the same date one and two years ago:

	1901.	1900.	1899.
Loans	$836,873,400	$680,817,200	$720,351,600
Deposits	921,787,200	765,518,100	849,074,100
Circulation	30,973,200	16,294,600	15,439,300
Specie	184,652,800	152,807,800	157,078,100
Legal tenders	73,050,600	62,957,400	59,889,100
Total res.	$257,703,400	$215,765,200	$246,962,200
Reserve req'd.	230,448,800	191,379,525	212,268,525
Surplus res.	$27,256,600	$24,175,675	$34,693,675

EASY MONEY TO CONTINUE.

According to all banking authorities, continuing ease in money, both call and time, is assured, some predictions indeed having it that even lower than a 2 per cent. call rate, reached last week, will rule. This ease, it is explained, is due to the large inflow of money from the interior, the gain in the cash holdings of the banks in the last two weeks alone running close to the $25,000,000 mark, largely due to these interior receipts. Even in the event of gold exports on a large scale, it is not believed that this would in any material way affect the local situation. Some views on the subject follow:

***

An officer of the National Bank of the Republic—"While it is not a welcome condition of things for the bankers who would prefer to get more for their money, it is a fact, nevertheless, that rates, easy as they are now, are tending easier. Western money is largely coming this way, Western banks in some cases buying paper and making loans a full ½ per cent. below the New York banks. We would welcome gold exports if only for the reason that they would to some extent relieve the congestion here, though I still think rates would hold easy."

***

An officer of the Fourth National Bank—"There have been very large receipts of interior money for the last few weeks, and all the indications point to a still heavier inflow. Under the circumstances, therefore, it is only reasonable to expect easy money for some time to come, though it may be that there will be such an active demand for business purposes that later the rates will stiffen. For the immediate future, gold exports or not, easy money will rule."

***

An officer of the First National Bank—"There is little need to discuss the matter, for the conditions speak for themselves. The banks have been steadily gaining in cash, while rates, even in the face of gold exports, actual and prospective, have been steadily declining. We look for easy money for some time."

***

An officer of the Continental National Bank—"So far as we can see, the outlook is for even easier rates, due to the continued inflow of money from the interior and the active competition in the loan market of Western institutions which seem to have an abundance of money on hand."

GOLD EXPORT OUTLOOK.

Foreign exchange bankers, discussing the outlook for further gold exports, are generally agreed that shipments are likely to be renewed in the near future, perhaps this week, but it is not believed that the total outgo will in any case exceed $15,000,000. In the present condition of the exchange markets these exports, as did last week's, will go to Paris, the gold exporting point to London being still some distance off.

***

Discussing the matter, a member of the firm of Lazard Frères says:

"The whole situation, so far as this coming week is concerned, may be summed up by saying that if Europe sells American stocks this week gold will be shipped, whereas if no selling comes from that quarter there will be little, if any, gold sent out. It is too early to tell what will be done, but the chances seem to favor shipments. Certainly, shipments later on are certain."

***

L. Zimmermann of Zimmermann & Forshay says:

"It is not improbable that some ten or fifteen millions of gold will go out, but in view of the remarkable ease of the money market here this may be considered a small shipment and will have no effect whatever on local rates. In fact, exports will be a good thing, in that they will relieve the situation abroad and improve the tone there."

***

C. Schumacher of C. Schumacher & Co. says:

"It may seem surprising that gold should go to France, where it is not needed, instead of to England, where it is so much needed, since in London the discount rate is 4⅛@4¼ per cent., and in Paris only 3 per cent.

"It looks for all the world as if the Bank of France was playing a game for some purpose or another. Its stock of gold is already the largest of any in Europe, and its strength such as to give it the whip-hand over all the financial institutions in Europe. What its aim may be can only be conjectured. Gold exports from here are not guided by sentiment. The gold simply goes where it yields the best profit to the shipper, and while the Bank of France can keep the sterling price in Paris down to as ridiculously low a figure as 25.11 and 25.12, gold must continue to go there instead of to England. Just how many more millions of our gold may be required in Paris to absorb the stock of sterling held there and to raise the price to a point where gold could be shipped to England on equal terms, remains to be seen.

"With the supply of commercial bills as small as at present, and our accumulations of exchange, as well as our balances in Europe, probably mostly exhausted by this time, there is no reason why gold should not continue to be shipped abroad or why exchange here should not continue to rule within a fraction of the gold-shipping point until the situation changes."

SOME MARKET OPINIONS.

Herewith are a number of market opinions, as put out by representative Stock Exchange firms:

***

R. L. KEEN of R. L. Keen & Co.—The market has had a severe reaction, more from technical causes than from any change in the situation, but on the decline there was excellent buying by prominent interests and from all we can see the result has put the market in a strong position. The shipments of gold do not promise to be large, as the money market abroad shows signs of relief. Our money market continues easy with the banks gaining in strength daily from Southern and Western shipments to this centre. The large increase in earnings of the Southwestern roads has been reflected in the buying of St. Louis and Southwestern, Missouri, Kansas and Texas, and especially in the case of Missouri Pacific, in which there are various rumors as to dividend prospects. There is talk of closer relations between New York Central, Northwestern, and Union Pacific, thus giving a through line to Portland and by means of the Central Pacific to San Francisco. We think this will be the next deal under consideration and will place the Vanderbilt group in a position to hold their own with the combinations in the Northwest. The sharp break in the market just before the close to-day was due to a rumor of the death of the Queen of England. We do not think her death would warrant a big decline in our stocks, as it has been largely discounted."

***

EDWARD L. ADAMS of Wardwell & Adams—Although there has been no material change in the general situation, the stock market has sustained a very considerable decline, and the public sentiment has changed from a feeling of aggressive confidence to one of depressing uncertainty, (or, in other words, every one who is long of stock is scared to death.) Prices had evidently been advanced to a basis at which the general public would not follow further, and some large operators, appreciating this, evidently thought it time to secure some of their paper profits, and the recession caused by this selling forced out what weak holdings there were in the market, and aggressive selling by a bear clique did the rest. The possibility of a fight between the Carnegie and the other steel companies has had a most depressing effect on the industrial shares, and has had an additional demoralizing effect on the general market. Many of the late sensational advances were caused by baseless rumors, and when these were disproved the reflex movement wae only natural. The vital question now arises, Has this market received its death blow, and will stocks decline to a still lower level, to be followed by a period of lethargy? I cannot believe this to be the outcome of the present situation. General conditions promise to be too favorable for the continued prosperity of the railroads. Money is already becoming almost a drug in this market, and the supply of it promises to increase from now on, and it is improbable that these large lines of money will be allowed to lie practically idle for any length of time, when it is possible to invest in sound properties making most satisfactory returns for the money invested. Another point is that a continued depression in the market would greatly mitigate against the large new issues in which the great financial powers are principally interested, and it would not surprise me to see their material support evident in the market on any further recession. Railroad earnings continue to show excellent increases. The bank statement shows $4,858,000 increase in reserve, notwithstanding the shipment of $1,600,000 gold to Europe.

***

NATHAN J. MILLER of Miller & Co.—Room traders of bearish proclivities seem to entirely overlook the utter absence of developments, which might be characterized as positively unfavorable, and base their onslaughts on negative bases, consisting in the main of lack of confirmation of various rumored consolidations. Those who think that these plans have been abandoned will in all probability soon find that they have reckoned without their host, more especially so as careful observers are convinced that the so-called larger interests in the Street have, if anything, welcomed this reaction. Easy money and the generally favorable conditions must ultimately establish a much higher plane of value than we have yet seen. For the immediate future I look for a readjustment of values, in which process it seems natural to expect stocks of undoubted merit (which have not yet enjoyed proportionate advances) to show radical improvement. Prominent among such is the stock of the Southern Pacific Railway Company. Its earnings are most gratifying, and yet its advance, if such it might be termed, has been smaller than that of any railway property whose securities are dealt in on the Exchange.

***

W. G. McKINLEY of McKinley & Sherman—In forecasting the immediate future of the market, it must be remembered that prices have had quite a large reaction from the highest quotations, and although it has become evident that the larger interests have sold stock at the higher level, it now becomes a question at what quotations they will consider it attractive to take back their holdings. While the market may remain unsettled for some little time, we believe that if it opens weak on Monday morning, and there is no definite disturbing news from foreign quarters, good middle and low-priced railroad stocks should be a buy, as well as many of the good industrials. There seems little in the general situation of a really disturbing character, money being easy and corporation earnings continuing to show an increase. But at the moment, notwithstanding these strong factors, the public appetite for speculative ventures seems somewhat abated, and it will take a little time, after the big interests have reaccumulated their stocks, to get the public again interested for a new rise in securities.

***

ROBERT GOODBODY of Robert Goodbody & Co.—It must be remembered that special causes are at work in the market. The character of the anthracite coal combination is quite clearly defined. It has not been completed, and it is not probable that the work will be left half finished. It is a certainty that Mr. Hill and Mr. Morgan anticipate a very decided improvement in the earning capacity of Erie. In spite of all denials, St. Paul is being absorbed on the decline. The buying in Southern Pacific, in Missouri Pacific, and in Chicago Great Western indicates that changes are contemplated in connection with each of these properties. If there are deals unfinished, and this seems to be questioned, those who have stocks to buy will welcome decline as facilitating purchases. A moderate amount of gold is going abroad, but it is worth more to this country abroad than here for the time being. Money is coming in freely from the interior, the bank reserves are increasing, and no apprehensions are felt in regard to money rates for a time.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call, 2 per cent.

Time money, 3½ per cent. for thirty days, 3¾@4 per cent. for sixty days to six months. Mercantile paper, 3½@4 per cent. for sixty to ninety days' indorsements, 3¾@4¼ per cent. for choice four to six months' single names, and 5@5½ per cent. for others.

Clearing House statement: Exchanges, $276,915,532; balances, $12,079,841; Sub-Treasury debit balance, $1,491,575.

Money on call in London, 2@2½ per cent. Rate of discount in the open market, 4 per cent. for short and 4@4⅛ per cent. for three months' bills.

Foreign exchange was firm. Nominal rates were $4.84 for sixty days and $4.88 for demand. Rates for actual business closed as follows: Sixty days, $4.83½; demand, $4.87¼@$4.87⅝; cables, $4.88⅛@$4.88¼; commercial bills, $4.82½@4.83¼.

Continental exchange was quoted as follows: Francs, 5.18 and 5.15 less 1-16@5.15⅝; reichsmarks, 94 9-16@94⅝ and 95 5-16@95¼, and guilders, 40⅛ and 40⅜.

Exchange on New York at domestic centres: Chicago—5c premium. Boston—Par@5c premium. New Orleans—Commercial, 25c premium; bank, 50@75c premium. San Francisco—Sight; 15c premium; telegraphic, 20c premium. Charleston—Buying, par; selling, 1-10c premium. Savannah—Buying, ⅛c discount; selling, par. Cincinnati—Between banks, 14½@15c premium; over the counter, 50c premium.

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—Discounts to-day were easy and difficult to maintain, in view of the plenitude of money and foreign competition for bills.

On the Stock Exchange very little business was transacted, as operaters waited, first, for the sound of the hammer, but there were no failures. Prices improved, especially for West Africans. The reports regarding the health of the Queen, though more reassuring than yesterday, had an adverse effect. Home Governments were very weak, and home rails were depressed. Americans began dull, but subsequently rallied. Southern Pacific and Union Pacific were the features. Later news of the Queen's condition caused irregularity in prices and depression extending to Street dealings.

The silver market was depressed, further realizations of State bills and the absence of demand from China, usually urgent at this season, affecting the market. The chances of inquiry for three months to come are remote.

The Stock Exchange has surmounted the settlement. It was attended with much apprehension, but the troubles are by no means past. According to The Investors' Review, an abyss of insolvency lies beneath the smooth surface, portentous of many afflictions approaching. The London and Globe Finance Corporation, Limited, the paper adds, is not the only rotten spot. The miscellaneous market contains numbers of excessively capitalized concerns, whose securities are quoted far above their intrinsic value. The continued enormous expenditure in South Africa steadily undermines the value of even the most trusted and solid securities. The Continent continues to sell Kaffirs, the tired-out holders, despairing of the future, selling steadily. Prices would be much lower but for the necessity of finance houses and market leaders to buy and avert a crisis.

The efforts of the Bank of England during the week to clear off the surplus money were neutralized by the reflux of currency from the provinces. The Government continued paying out its borrowings from the Bank, bringing the Treasury's entire floating debt, including Treasury bills, up to £33,533,000. While the disbursements continue it is impossible for the Bank to control the rate. A Paris demand would ordinarily induce large shipments of gold thitherward. Paris, however, is gold glutted, and takes the metal only in driblets as it comes into the open market.

Pointing out indications of an early reduction of the bank rate, The Statist mentions that an unusually large inflow of gold from the country is swelling the bank's reserve; that, probably, next week it will be £21,000,000, and that the following week it will be higher.

The rise in New York exchange has caused an unprecedented quantity of American securities to be shipped to New York, increasing the possibility of considerable shipments of gold thence to London or Paris, as the superabundance at New York is likely to increase.

With the inflow from the interior, besides the approaching issue of a Government loan, and with a 5 per cent. bank rate, the Government, doubtless, will have to submit to more onerous terms than if the rate were 4 per cent. If the strength of the reserve and the condition of the money market admit a reduction, the rate will probably be lowered, to facilitate the issue of the loan. What form the loan will take is not yet determined, but it is likely to resemble the war loan of 1900, and the amount may be £10,000,000. Should the price induce American applications this would be an additional reason for the shipment of gold later.

Consols for money, 96⅝; consols for the account, 96⅝; Atchison, 45¼; Canadian, 91¼; St. Paul, 152¾; Illinois Central, 123; Louisville, 90; Union Pacific preferred, 85; New York Central, 144½; Erie, 28¼; Pennsylvania, 75; Reading, 16⅞; Erie first preferred, 64¾; Northern Pacific preferred, 87½; Grand Trunk, 7⅞; Anaconda, 8⅝; Rand mines, 37⅛.

Bar silver, steady at 29 1-16d per ounce.

Spanish fours closed at 71.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Buenos Ayres, 132.30; Madrid, 35.75; Lisbon, 41; Rome, 5.80.

Money, 2@2½ per cent. Rate of discount in the open market for short bills, 4 per cent., and for three months' bills, 4@4¼ per cent.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—Business opened dull and undecided on the Bourse to-day. Transactions were checked by uneasiness regarding the internal political situation and the state of the English markets. The reported illness of Queen Victoria has little influence. Spanish 4s were affected by the rise in the rate of exchange. Later there was a brisker tone, influenced by more favorable London advices, and Spanish 4s and Kafirs rallied.

Three per cent. rentes, 101f. 92½c. for the account. Exchange on London, 25f. 12c. for checks.

Spanish 4s, 71.75.

BERLIN, Jan. 19.—On the Boerse to-day the tendency of Internationals was toward dullness. Spanish 4s were lower. Mines declined in consequence of unfavorable manufacturing reports. Americans reacted in response to New York. Canadian Pacifics were depressed on the decrease in the traffic returns.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 45 pfennigs for checks.

Discount rates, short bills, 2½ per cent.; three months' bills, 3½ per cent.

BID AND ASKED QUOTATIONS.

The following were the closing quotations for Government bonds and for stocks in which there were no transactions:

	Bid.	Asked.		Bid.	Asked.
2s, r., 1930	105⅜	106	K. & D. M. pf.	20	25
2s, c., 1930	105⅜	106	King. & P.	..	8½
3s, r., 1918	109½	110½	Lacl. Gas	72	72½
3s, c., 1918	110	111	L. E. & W. pf.	..	..
3s, 1918, am.	110	111	Long Island	108	112
4s, r., 1907	113½	114½	Lake Shore	210¼	230
4s, c., 1907	113½	114½	Long Island	67	70
4s, r., 1925	136½	137	Mah. C. R.	195	..
4s, c., 1925	137½	138	Man. Beach	12	15
5s, r., 1904	111¾	111½	Met. Coal pf.	70	80
5s, c., 1904	111¾	112½	Mo. Pac.	95	96
D. C. 3-65s	125	..	Mut. Un. Tel.	67	80
Alb. & Sus.	195	..	N. Y. Air Brake	168	175
Alle. & W.	120	..	N. Y. C. & St. L.	26	28
Am. Coal	190	200	N. Y. C. & St. L. 1st pf.	..	..
Am. Coal of Md.	87	90	N. Y. C. & St. L. 2d pf.	76	78
Am. Dist. Tel.	33	35	N. Y. & Harlem	275	..
Am. Exp.	173	180	N. Y

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

Trading in the market for outside securities yesterday did not show a larger total than has been usual of late on the closing day of the week. Practically no change in the course of the market showed, and prices moved along the lines which they assumed earlier in the week. Very few issues showed any activity at all, and in none were the transactions on more than a moderately large scale. New developments of importance were entirely lacking, and the day brought little or nothing to materially affect prices or to relieve the market of the rather monotonous condition into which it has fallen.

***

NEW YORK TRANSPORTATION, profiting by the strength which is derived from the denial of the unfavorable rumors that were current in regard to the stock, continued its advance of Friday, and rose still further, to 5. Trading in the stock was fairly active, but it did not amount to more than half of the previous day's total. The setting at rest of the assessment story did a good deal to increase confidence in the property.

***

PITTSBURG, BESSEMER AND LAKE ERIE began the day by a rather sharp advance of about 1 point, but later lost all of its gain. It rose to 31, and several hundred shares changed hands at that price, but later there were offerings of the stock as low as 30½. The early strength of the stock seemed to be due to a desire to mark up the quotation.

***

RUBBER GOODS common sold down to 27, and closed at 27 bid, a net loss of 1 point. The preferred stock remained unchanged.

***

BRITISH COLUMBIA COPPER was again under pressure, and declined nearly a point. The lowest sale was made at 18, and the stock was in demand at this price at the close. The drop in the stock was apparently due to the withdrawal to a certain extent of the support which has been given by insiders.

***

DISTILLING OF AMERICA was very dull, but again showed a net loss for the day. The common stock closed at 5¾ bid, and the preferred stock at 27½ bid, the latter showing a net loss of half a point.

***

Closing quotations yesterday compared with those of the previous day were as follows:

Industrial and Miscellaneous.

	Jan. 19. Bid.	Asked.	Jan. 18. Bid.	Asked.
Am. Agricultural Chem.	29	30	29	30
Am. Ag. Chem. pf.	90½	92	90	91½
American Bank note	50	55	50	55
American Bicycle	59¾	60	59¾	60¾
American Bicycle pf.	24	26	24	26
American Bicycle bonds.	72	73	72	73
American Blding Trust	90	92	90	92
American Chicle	91	91½	91	91½
American Chicle pf.	79	81	79	81
American Chicle pf.	77	82	77	82
Am. Hide & Leather	10	11	10	11
Am. Hide & Leather pf.	35½	38	35½	39
Am. Hide & Leather bds.	96½	98	96½	98
American Thread pf.	5	8	4	8
Am. Tobacco	57	62	57	62
Anthracite Coal	88	88	88	88
Arbuckle Coffee	4	5	4	5
British Columbia Copper	18	19	18	19
British Exch. 4s	98½	99	98½	99
California Copper	1	1¼	1	1
Cast-Iron Pipe	6	8	6	8
Cast-Iron Pipe pf.	32	35	32	35
Central & So. Am. Tel.	102	105	102	105
Central Fireworks	22	25	22	25
Central Fireworks pf.	70	75	70	75
Compressed Air	38	42	40	45
Consolidated Equipment	11	11½	12
Con. Rubber Tire	3½	4	2½	4
Con. Rubber Tire pf.	22	24	22	32
Continental Tobacco	104	105	104	105
Cruelble Steel	23	23½	22½	23
Cruelble Steel pf.	77	81	76	81
Cramps' Shipyard	30	32	30	32
Dist. Co. of Am. (r. rcts.	5¾	5¾	5¾	5¾
Dist. Co. of Am. pf. (r. rcts.	28	28	28	28½
Electric Boat	27	29	28	28½
Electric Boat pf.	50	52	50½	51
Electric Vehicle	14	17	14	17
Electric Vehicle pf.	30	40	30	40
Electric-Pneumatic	1¾	2	1½	1¾
Empire Steel	5	7	5	7
Empire Steel pf.	28	48	29	48
Flemington Coal & Coke	29	33	29	33
General Carriage	25	30	25	30
General Chemical	60	65	60	62
General Chemical pf.	95½	97	95½	95½
German Treasury 4s	100½	100¾	100½	100¾
Havana Commercial	10	11	9½	10½
Havana Commercial pf.	44½	46	45	46½
Hudson River Tel.	117	119	117	119
Illinois Transportation	¾	1	¾	1
International Silver pf.	42	47	42	47
Inter-State Oil	50	60	50	55
Iron Steamboat	2	3	2	3
Iron Steamboat bonds	55	65	55	65
Joseph Ladue Mining pf.	1½	1	1½	1
Lorillard pf.	100	103	100	103
Markeen Copper	2	3	1½	2
Mex. Nat. Construct. pf.	13½	14¾	13½	14¾
Nat. Enamel & Stamp.	17	20	17	20
Nat. Enam. & Stamp. pf.	80	84	80	84
Nat. Sugar pf.	100	102	100	102
New England Transport.	30	35	30	35
N. Y. Transportation	4½	5	4½	5
Otis Elevator	27¾	28	28½	29½
Otis Elevator pf.	91	91¾	91	91¾
Pens., Dec. & Evans	½	1	½	1
Phys., Boss. & L. Erie	30½	31	30½	30¾
Retsof	32	35	32	35
Retsof bonds	78	85	78	85
Royal Baking Powder pf.	94	95	94	95
Royal Copper	11	12	11	12
Rubber Goods Mfg.	28	28	28	29
Rubber Goods Mfg. pf.	70	81½	70½	70½
Safety Car Heat & Light	121	125	120	125
St. Louis Transit	19	19½	19	19½
Seaboard Air Line 4s	70	71	70	71
Seaboard Air Line	10	10½	10	10½
Seaboard Air Line pf.	25	27	25	27
Short Stuff Co.	70	81	70	81
Singer Mfg.	270	275	250	275
Southern Light & Trac.	32	35	32	35
Standard Coupler	37	38	37	38
Standard Coupler pf.	120	125½	120	125½
Standard Oil of N. J.	760	790	760	760
Sterling Comfort	5¾	6	5¾	6
Storage Power	12	15	12	12
Tennessee Copper	17	18	17	18
Tel. Tel. & Co. of A., $15
paid	6	8	6	6
Theater Supplies	5	8	5	6
Theater Sup. pf.	55	60	55	60
Union Copper	4½	5	4½	4¾
Union Typewriter	40	41	40	41
Union Typewriter 1st pf.	113	114	112	114
Union Typewriter 2d pf.	111	115	114	114
United States Oil	87	88	89½	89½
United Cos. of St. L. pf.	71½	72	70½	72
Va. Coal, I. & C.	3½	4½	3½	4½
Va. Coal, I. & C. bonds	33	35	33	35
Westinghouse Air Brake	350	370	350	360
Washington Pump pf.	111	114	110	114

*Selling: dollars per share. Par value $5.
†Selling: dollars per share. Par value $100.

Street Railways.

Broadway & 7th Av.	230	235	230	235
Brooklyn & 7th Av. 1st	102½	102¾	102
Broadway & 7th Av. 2d	112	116	112	113
Broadway Surface 1st 5s	115	116	115	116
Broadway Surface 2d	102½	103	102½	103½
Brooklyn City R. R.	230	235	232	234
Brooklyn R. & W. P. 5s	101½	102	101½	102
Cent. Park, N. & E. R.	200	202	200	201
Cent. Park, N. & E. R. 5s	104½	105¼	104½	105¼
Columbus Railw.	37	38	37	37
Columbus Railway pf.	90	92	90	92
Con. Traction of N. J.	58	60	58	60
Con. Traction 5s.	100	108	100	100
Eighth Avenue Railroad	390	400	390	400
42d St., M. & St. N. Av.	112½	115	113½	115
42d St., M. & St. N. Av. 2d	90	100	99	100
Grand Rapids St. Ry.	28	31	28	31
Grand Rapids St. Ry. pf.	80	82½	80	82½
Jersey City, Hob. & Pat.	20	21¾	20	21¾
Jersey City & H.	220	225	220	225
Nassau Electric 4s	94½	95½	94	95
New Orleans Traction	22	25	22
New Orleans Traction pf.	91	98	94	98
9th Av. R. R.	198	205	198	205
North Jersey St. R. R. 4s	82½	83½	82½	83½
North Jersey St. R. R.	25	27	25	27
Second Av. R. R. consols	118	119	118	119
Sixth Av. R. R.	205	210	200	210
Sixthway Ry. Co. 1st 6s.	116½	118	116½	118
Syracuse Rapid Transit	15	20	15	20
Syracuse Rap. Transit pf.	42	45	42	45
34th & 42d St. 5s. 1906	114½	115	113¾	114½
Union Ry. 1st 5s.	111	113½	111	113½
United Trac., Providence	109	111	109	111
United Traction bonds	113½	115	113½	115
Worcester (Mass.) Trac.	34	36	34	36
Wor. (Mass.) Trac. pf.	105	108	105	108

Gas Companies.

Bay State Gas	1¾	1¾	1¾	1¾
Buffalo (N. Y.) Stock	9	9	9	9
Buffalo (N. Y.) 1st	74	76	74	76
Central Union 5s, gtd.	106½	108½	106½	109½
Columbus Gas 5s.	106	107	106	107
Con. Gas of Newark	53	55		55
Con. Gas of Newark bds.	104	114	109	114
Con. Gas of New Jersey	10	15	10	15
Con. Gas bonds of N. J.	80	85	80	85
Con's'rs Gas (J. C.) bds.	105¼	106	105¼	106
Denver Gas	26	28	25½	28
Denver Gas 5s	87	90	87	90
Essex & Hudson Gas	35	40	35	40
Indianapolis Gas	45	50	45	50
Indianapolis Gas bds. 6s.	95	95	95	95
Mutual Gas of N. Y.	295	299	295	299
Madison (Wis.) stock	70	75	70	75
New Amsterdam Gas	100	100½	100	100½
N. E. Gas & Coke	12	13	12	13
N. E. Gas & Coke 5s	65	68	65	68
N. Y. & F. R. Gas Co. 1st	112½	114	111	114
N. Y. & E. R. Gas Co. con.	105	109	106	109
Northern Union 5s.	103½	106	103½	106
Nor. Hud. Lt., H. & P. Co.	55	56	55	56
Nor. H. L., H. & P. Co. bds.	107	109	107	109
Peo. Gas & Chi. (Oswego)	25	30	25	30
Peo. G. & C. (Ga.) 5s, 1930	99	101	99	101
St. Joseph (Mo.)	38	38	31	38
St. Joseph (Mo.) 5s	91	93	91	93
St. Paul Gas stock	50			50
St. Paul Gas bonds	75	80	75	80
Standard Gas, New York	131	133	130	133
Standard Gas, N. Y., pf.	151	153	150	153
Standard Gas 1st	115	117	115	117
Syracuse Gas stock	8	10	8	10
Western Gas	98	100	96	100
Western Gas 1st 5s	105	107	105	107

Ferry Companies.

Brooklyn Ferry	17¾	19½	17½	18½
East River Ferry	69	71	69	71
East River Ferry 5s	96	98	96	98
Hoboken Ferry con. 5s	94	95	94	95
Hoboken Ferry 1st	110½	112½	110½	112½
Hoboken Ferry	80	81	80	81
Union Ferry	32½	33	32½	33
Union Ferry bonds	91	92	91	92

THE BANK STATEMENT.

The weekly bank statement of the New York City banks showed an increase in the surplus reserve of $4,858,550. The banks now hold a surplus of $27,256,600 above the legal requirements.

The following is a comparison of the statement issued yesterday with that of the previous Saturday:

	Jan. 12.	Jan. 19.	Increase.
Loans	$808,032,400	$830,873,400	$22,841,000
Deposits	885,336,200	921,787,200	36,451,000
Circulation	30,970,000	30,973,200	2,300
Legal tender	70,574,800	73,050,600	2,476,000
Specie	173,157,500	184,652,800	11,495,300
Reserve	243,732,100	257,703,400	13,971,300
Reserve req'd	221,334,050	230,446,800	9,112,750
Surplus	22,398,050	27,256,600	4,858,550

The following table shows the amounts of surplus reserve held by the Clearing House banks at the end of each week in the present year and the corresponding dates in 1900 and 1899:

	1901.	1900.	1899.
Jan. 5	$14,150,075	$11,757,725	$23,530,375
Jan. 12	22,202,050	16,707,350	28,263,075
Jan. 19	27,256,600	24,185,675	34,693,075

The following shows the surplus reserve at this time for a series of years:

1901	$27,256,600	1896	$37,078,500
1900	24,185,675	1895	45,495,075
1899	34,693,675	1894	102,754,450
1898	24,185,675	1893	22,529,600
1897	37,067,800	1892	33,002,000

BULLION AND MINING.

Silver bullion certificates were quoted on the Stock Exchange at 64½@65½. There were no sales.

Bar silver was quoted in London at 29 1-16d per ounce, and in New York at 63c. Mexican silver dollars at 48c.

On the Consolidated Exchange, 500 shares of Amazonia Gold sold at .40, 500 Comstock at .04½, 200 Consolidated California and Virginia at 1.65, 1,500 Cripple Creek Consolidated at .10, 50 Horn Silver at 1.20, 200 Jack Pot at .62, and 100 Ontario at 6.50.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE SALES.

Stocks.

Sales.		First.	High.	Low.	Close.
3,100	Amal. Copper	89½	90½	85¾	88
50	Am. Steel Hoop	25	25	25	25
22,100	Am. St. & Wire	42	42	39¾	39¾
17,800	Am. Sugar Ref.	134¾	134¾	132¾	132¾
100	Am. Tobacco	112¾	113	112¾	112¾
200	Anaconda Cop.	42½	42½	42¼	42¼
450	At., T. & S. F.	44¾	44¾	42¾	43
600	At., T. & S. F. pf.	84	84¼	82¾	83
300	Balt. & Ohio	88¾	88¾	86¾	86¾
62,200	Brooklyn R. T.	74¾	75	74¾	75
150	Ches. & Ohio	38½	38¾	38½	38¾
1,250	Chi., Bur. & Q.	143¾	143¾	142	142¾
4,100	Chi., M. & St. P.	149¾	149¾	147	147
240	Chi., R. I. & P.	120¾	121¼	119	119
110	Col. Fuel & I.	45¾	45¾	45¾	45¾
310	Colo. Southern	42¾	43¾	42¼	42¼
2,250	Erie	28¾	28¾	27½	27½
710	Erie 1st pf.	64	64	61½	61¾
14,700	Federal Steel	48½	48¾	46¾	46¾
220	Louis. & Nash.	88½	88½	87	87
19,240	Manhattan	113¾	114¾	112¾	112¾
50	Mo., K. & T. pf.	46½	46½	46	46
22,910	Mo. Pacific	88¾	89¾	86	86½
20	N. Y. Central	141	141	141	141
850	N. Y., O. & W.	29¾	31	29¾	29¾
40	Nor. & West.	43¾	43¾	43¾	43¾
3,200	N. Y. Pacific	92¾	93¾	92¾	93¾
1,750	People's Gas	98¾	98¾	97	97½
900	Reading	31¾	31¾	30¾	30¾
1,020	Reading 1st pf.	70½	71	69¾	69¾
170	Rep. Iron & St.	14	14	13¾	13¾
10	St. L. Southw. pf.	50¾	50¾	50¾	50¾
1,710	Sugar Refining	43¾	43¾	41¾	41¾
480	Southern R'way.	19	19¾	19	19¼
20	South. R'way pf.	69¾	69¾	69¾	69¾
30	Stand. R. & T.	35	35	35	35
400	Tenn. Coal & I.	55¾	56¼	55	55
320	Texas Pacific	28½	28½	28¼	28¼
2,550	Union Pacific	83½	83¾	81¾	81¾
200	Union Pac. pf.	83	83	82¾	82¾
350	U. S. Leather	11½	11½	11¾	11¾
100	U. S. Rubber	21	21	21	21
50	Wabash pf.	24¾	25¼	24¾	25½
188,100

Bonds.

Sales.		First.	High.	Low.	Close.
$3,000	Cent. Fee. 4s	100¾	100¾	100¾	100¾
5,000	Wabash deb. B.	42¾	42¾	42¾	42¾
$8,000

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 19.—There was active selling of Amalgamated in Boston, but the price did not get so low as in New York. It closed at 87½ in Boston, a net loss of 4¾ for the week. Montana sold up 3 to 313 ex-dividend, later dropping to 304, and closing at 308, which makes a net gain of 1 for the week allowing for the dividend. Other mining stocks, save Old Dominion, were dull. That specialty fell 1¼ to 29½, closing at 30, a 2¾ net loss this week. Dominion Coal lost 1½ to 35½; Mergenthaler rallied 5, to 160, against 175 a week ago to-day; Parrot lost 1¼, to 46, closing at 46½; Isle Royale 4¾, to 35¾; Cochiti ½, to 9½. Home Railroad shares were strong, notably Maine and Fitchburg; Elevated was up 1¾, at 162.

At the local Clearing House this morning money between the banks loaned at 2½ and 2 per cent., and was offered freely at the latter rate, and New York funds sold at par and five cents premium. Money on call is quoted mostly at 3½ per cent., although rates range from 3 to 4½ per cent. Time money, on the best names, is selling as low as 3½, and from this figure quotations range up to 4½ per cent. Mixed loans command 4 per cent. Year money, 4@4½ per cent.

Mining Stocks.

	Bid.	Asked.		Bid.	Asked.
Adventure	9½	9¾	Old Colony	3	3½
Allouez	2¼	3¼	Old Dominion	29½	29¾
Arcadian	11½	12	Osceola	90½	91
Arnold	4	4¼	Parrot	46	47
Ash Bed	.25	.37½	Quincy	173	176
Atlantic	27½	28½	Rhode Island	4½	5
Baltic	33½	34	Santa Fé	6	7
Bost. & Mon.	305	310	Santa Ysabel	2	3
Butte & Bos.	78½	80	Shoe	31½	32
Cal. & Hec.	850	855	Tamarack	330
Centennial	21½	22	Utah Cons.	32	32½
Franklin	15¾	16	Washington	.50	1
Humboldt	.50	1	Winona	5	5½
Isle Royale	34½	34	Wolverine	473	480
Mohawk	22

Railroad Stocks.

Bost. & Alb.	254½	Cent. M. pf.	92
Bost. & Low.	242	Fitchburg pf.	130½
Bost. & Me.	195	N. Y. & N. H.
Bost. & Prov.		E. 6s	109¼
Bost. Elev.	162	N. Y. & N. H.
Bost. G. 5s.	81	E. 7s	113¾
Cent. Mass.	15	West End	93
	15½		96½

Miscellaneous Stocks.

A. T. & T.	157	Mex. Tele.	2½
Chi. Stk. Y.	145¼	N. Eng. Tel.	135
Dom. Coal	35½	U. S. Oil	11¾
Dom. C. pf.	108	Westinghouse
Erie Tel.	65	Elect. pf.	70½

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 19.—Strength characterized the opening of the market, with Philadelphia Electric the most active stock. In view of the assessment on Monday, the stock showed surprising buoyancy and continued strong. It opened at 6, and kept this figure throughout the day, except for one small transaction. Lehigh Valley was an encouraging feature. It opened at 31¾, rose to 32¾, and closed at 32⅝, as against 31½, yesterday's closing price. Reading did not keep pace with the advance in Lehigh Valley, and still showed the effects of hammering. It opened at 13½, and after a fractional decline advanced to 13¾, the high figure for the day, but from that time dropped gradually to 13¼, at which it closed.

The steel stocks were fairly active. There was a better demand for the Asphalt issues, in view of the expected settlement of the trouble in Venezuela.

The money market was without activity to-day, there being very little demand for loans of any kind. Call money was at 4 per cent. at the banks, and time money at 4½ per cent. upward, according to the nature of the collateral and the name of the borrower. The close was weak, at the following bid and asked prices:

	Bid.	Asked.		Bid.	Asked.
Am. Ry. Lt.	33	34	H. & B. pf.	48	49½
Cambria	17	17¾	Lehigh Nav.	64	65
Citizens' Ry.			Lehigh Val.	32¼	32⅝
Ind., 5s	108½	110	Marsden	6¾	6⅝
Choctaw	37½	38½	North. Penn.	104	106
Cons. Trac.			Penn. Steel.	67	70
N. J.	61	61½	Penn. St. pf.	87	97
Cons. Trac.			Peo. Tr. 4s.	108½	110
N. J., 5s	100¼	109½	Phil. & Erie	33	34
Cons. Trac.			Phila. Trac.	99⅝	100
Pittsburg	27	28	Union Trac.	34½	34¼
El. & P. 4s.	100¾	101	Un. Co.'s, N.
El. St. Bat.	77	80	J.	274	276
El. S. B. pf.	77	82	U. Gas Imp.	123	124
El. Co. of A.	57¾	57¾	Welsbach Lt.	40	45
Hunt. & Br.	17	20

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—Business on the stock market to-day was inconsequential and prices were scarcely changed from yesterday. Metropolitan Elevated common brought 28½. Diamond Match 133@133¼, and Northwestern Elevated preferred 77. The list:

Sales.		Open.	High.	Close.
30	Linseed	6¼	6¼	6¼
20	Radiator pf.	107	107	107
145	Strawboard	33½	33½	33½
150	Diamond Match	133½	133	133½
60	Metropolitan L. common	28½	28½	28½
750	National Biscuit common	38	37½	37½
133	National Biscuit pf.	93	92½	92¾
10	Northwestern L. pf.	77	77	77
74	West Chicago	100	99¾	99¾

NEW YORK CLEARING HOUSE BANK STATEMENT.

The following is the New York Clearing House bank statement for the week.

Capital.	Net Profits.	Banks.	Loans.	Specie.	Legals.	Deposits.	Circulation.
$2,000,000	$2,074,300	Bk. N. Y., N. B. A.	$15,065,000	$2,525,000	$1,072,000	$14,453,000	$499,600
2,050,000	2,114,400	Bk. of New York	6,986,000	2,073,000	24,690,000	.....	.....
2,000,000	1,190,900	Merch. Nat.	14,432,000	2,922,300	1,541,200	17,005,300	.....
2,000,000	2,251,400	Mechan. Nat.	12,335,000	1,885,000	845,000	12,260,000	.....
1,500,000	2,980,900	Bk. of America	22,100,200	4,224,800	2,284,400	25,615,700	45,200
1,000,000	241,300	Phenix Nat.	4,311,000	1,305,000	249,000	5,282,000	.....
10,000,000	5,490,300	National City	109,001,000	30,872,000	6,752,700	128,006,400	4,282,600
300,000	6,881,700	Chemical Nat.	4,768,800	6,226,100	2,505,000	26,039,000	.....
500,000	224,600	Mer. Exch. Nat.	5,082,500	938,300	549,800	5,735,100	45,300
1,000,000	1,878,300	Gallatin Nat.	8,243,200	726,700	940,700	6,417,600	986,000
300,000	85,500	Nat. B. & Drov.	1,053,700	345,300	50,200	1,212,500	43,300
400,000	124,800	Mech. & Trad.	2,409,000	266,000	213,000	2,707,000	.....
200,000	173,900	Greenwich	954,900	100,200	158,000	835,000	48,200
900,000	486,100	Leath. Mfs' Nat.	4,775,200	1,262,200	404,700	5,244,700	482,800
300,000	210,400	Seventh Nat.	3,302,300	429,000	448,400	4,249,200	298,800
1,200,000	543,300	Bk. State N. Y.	4,652,200	588,600	286,100	4,092,200	.....
5,000,000	2,940,100	Amer. Exch. Nat.	28,332,000	4,814,000	1,551,000	22,770,000	4,884,000
10,000,000	6,956,000	Nat. Bk. Com.	68,648,100	7,118,000	6,516,200	56,239,000	7,539,700
1,000,000	1,903,900	Nat. Broadway	5,616,100	1,253,800	300,700	5,072,900	199,900
1,000,000	1,230,200	Mercantile Nat.	13,420,100	2,002,500	1,016,700	13,024,900	990,600
422,700	484,700	Pacific	2,656,500	514,400	492,800	3,560,100	.....
1,500,000	1,140,800	Nat. Bk. of Rep.	18,818,300	4,253,800	1,121,500	20,832,300	1,436,500
450,000	954,500	Chatham Nat.	6,069,300	902,400	1,098,600	6,713,600	50,000
200,000	307,100	People's	1,931,600	301,600	745,700	2,909,700	.....
1,000,000	734,100	Nat. Bk. N. A.	12,479,200	2,398,100	1,019,700	13,732,600	732,300
5,000,000	5,178,900	Hanover Nat.	40,723,000	8,083,700	5,106,200	50,373,600	2,786,400
500,000	458,100	Irving Nat.	4,131,000	729,200	695,100	4,660,000	242,100
600,000	407,300	Nat. Citizens'	3,117,700	657,200	297,600	3,457,600	295,900
500,000	274,300	Nassau Nat.	2,570,200	273,700	483,200	2,952,200	.....
900,000	1,047,500	Mar. & Ful. Nat.	6,588,900	1,210,200	826,200	7,141,000	229,100
1,000,000	296,800	Nat. Shoe & L.	3,517,800	749,500	303,100	3,911,000	49,300
1,400,000	1,807,200	Corn Exchange	18,886,000	4,382,000	2,076,000	23,143,000	.....
1,000,000	518,400	Continental Nat.	4,283,800	1,020,800	525,000	5,560,000	330,300
300,000	491,000	Oriental	2,000,000	253,000	400,000	3,163,000	155
1,500,000	6,317,800	Imp. & Trd. Nat.	25,407,000	4,847,000	1,064,000	24,085,000	48,400
2,000,000	3,568,300	National Park	45,834,000	10,141,900	4,077,000	64,573,000	49,500
250,000	101,100	East River Nat.	1,175,100	303,100	225,800	1,504,500	50,000
3,000,000	2,467,400	Fourth Nat.	24,057,300	4,448,000	2,246,100	23,817,500	50,000
1,000,000	537,500	Central Nat.	9,275,000	3,037,000	1,874,000	13,078,000	60,000
300,000	888,200	Second Nat.	2,223,000	1,549,000	1,025,000	10,070,000	286,000
750,000	709,800	Ninth National	2,971,200	691,400	257,500	3,422,000	49,800
500,000	9,220,600	First National	39,957,400	12,188,200	1,997,300	44,208,700	495,100
500,000	109,400	N. Y. Nat. Exch.	3,042,300	534,900	305,400	3,224,300	258,700
250,000	724,700	Bowery	3,231,900	373,000	330,000	3,540,000	.....
200,000	330,600	N. Y. Co. Nat.	3,085,700	703,000	251,000	4,090,000	50,000
750,000	1,000,700	German-Amer.	13,444,500	541,200	268,200	3,547,600	.....
1,000,000	2,110,500	Chase National	38,820,900	10,439,000	1,895,000	47,110,200	800,000
100,000	1,320,700	Fifth Avenue	8,984,400	2,328,100	433,200	10,291,400	.....
200,000	638,600	German Exch.	2,240,100	222,400	907,500	3,590,500	.....
200,000	818,500	Germania Bank	3,032,400	401,400	613,000	4,587,300	.....
200,000	919,700	Lincoln Nat.	12,209,800	1,343,200	1,065,000	14,392,700	247,000
1,000,000	1,019,200	Garfield Nat.	6,475,500	292,200	1,635,200	7,550,000	49,700
200,000	348,000	Fifth National	2,091,200	429,100	155,900	2,262,000	185,300
300,000	1,018,200	Bank of the Met.	7,931,400	1,280,100	611,200	8,517,500	.....
200,000	426,400	West Side Bank	2,941,000	352,000	355,000	2,778,000	.....
500,000	813,800	Seaboard Nat.	13,395,000	2,620,000	1,070,000	16,167,000	490,000
2,100,000	1,871,700	Western Nat.	34,896,400	8,362,600	2,231,400	41,430,100	50,000
300,000	310,300	First Nat. B'k'n	4,041,000	475,000	722,000	4,276,000	75,000
500,000	604,100	Liberty National	6,398,000	1,051,800	425,000	6,225,000	407,000
1,000,000	379,200	N. Y. Prod. Ex.	4,457,000	586,400	355,300	3,846,600	.....
250,000	444,600	E'k of N. Am

SPARKS FROM THE MAGAZINES

EXCERPTS IN PROSE AND VERSE FROM CURRENT LITERATURE.

1901.

An age too great for thought of ours to scan,
A wave upon the sleepless sea of time
That sinks and sleeps for ever, ere the chime
Pass that salutes with blessing, not with ban,
The dark year dead, the bright year born for man,
Dies, all its days that watched man power and climb,
Frail as the foam, and as the sun sublime,
Sheep sound as they that slept ere these began.

Our mother earth, whose ages none may tell,
Puts on no change; time bids not her wax pale
Or kindle, quenched or quickened, when the knell
Sounds, and we cry across the veering gale
Farewell—and midnight answers us, Farewell.
Hail—and the heaven of morning answers, Hail!

ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE.
—The Saturday Review.

A Shot at Golf.

From "F. G. Tait: A Record."

There was a northwesterly wind blowing down and across the course, and Tait had played his second shot well out to the left into one of the grassy hollows which lie to the left of "hell." He had got so far to the left that the pot bunkers at the foot of the plateaulike green were directly between him and the hole; the green was very keen, and Tait's play lay on the downward slope of a rather steep hill. To play the ball straight for the hole from such a lie it was necessary for him to cut it; but no amount of cut would have enabled him to pitch the ball on to the narrow tableland and yet stop it from going down the slope beyond. The hole was about 120 yards off, and Tait, taking all risks, picked the ball up almost clean, with but sufficient slice on it to counteract the wind, and drove it hard and low over the bunkers against the face of the green; the ball struck the face and never once bounded into the air, the life was taken out of it, and it lay dead at the side of the hole. One foot lower or higher and the shot must have been a complete failure.

The Almanac Maker.

From The Gentleman's Magazine.

It is related of Partridge, a celebrated almanac maker, that he once received a rude rebuff, administered unwittingly by an ostler to whom he applied for information. While on a journey the old-time almanac maker put up at an inn for refreshments. On setting out again he was advised by the rustic to tarry a while, inasmuch as rain was certain. Partridge laughed to scorn the unlettered ostler. Yet the prediction proved faultless, and Partridge, intent on obtaining a weather wrinkle for future editions of his almanac, hastened back to interrogate the apparently weather-wise yokel. Having received a crown, the latter freely explained his modus operandi. "Sir, we have a Partridge's Almanac, and the fellow is such a notorious liar that whenever he promises us a fine day we know it will be the contrary. To-day is put down as settled, fine weather, and this is the reason I urged you not to set out." An old English proverb might aptly have compelled assent from the startled seer: "The almanac maker makes the almanac, but God makes the weather."

"The French Shore."

From Chambers's Journal.

Misery, squalor, and wretchedness, accentuated by an almost ceaseless struggle with hunger and cold, are the portion of these "livyeres" in Newfoundland. Their little hamlets are perched in the rifts in the almost unbroken hills, and the fierce storms sweep the surf almost to their doorsteps; while for seven months of the year their coast is blockaded with ice, and they are cut off from all communication with the outside world. The only industry is codfishing, and cod is the sole medium of exchange. The people rarely see money, and barter is the system of trading, a quintal of cod being the unit of value. The needs of the fish-folk are only supplied by the itinerant trader, his schooner being laden with provisions, clothing, and fishing appliances. Thus have these people lived for generations. They are ignorant, for the means of education are non-existent; the children being content with what satisfied their fathers. The common objects of everyday life are unknown to them; they have neither horses nor cattle; only a few of the older folk who have ventured south have any knowledge of these things. There are no roads, and, therefore, no vehicles; travel is by boat during the Summer, and over the ice-floes during the rest of the year. The few letters for the clergy and others who can read are conveyed to the settlements by dog teams during Winter; and, save for the fortnightly visit of the mailboat during the period of open navigation, a steamer is never seen by the residents. With such marvels as electric telegraphs, telephones, and electric light they are, of course, unfamiliar, and their standard of intelligence is best indicated by stating that it is not unusual to find a Justice of the Peace who cannot write his own name.

Titles for Sermons.

From The Homiletic Review.

That eccentric preacher, Lorenzo Dow, once preached to thoughtless young women who with their gorgeous bonnets had taken the highest seats in the room, from the text, "Topknot, come down." One of the most brilliant preachers of a generation ago, now a "castaway," preached to young people from the text, "Let her drive." Such perversions of Scripture are even more objectionable than the stupid preacher's announcement of his text, "Saddle me, the ass." These are very likely to indicate, judging from observation, something of meanness in the man's piety.

But there are things probably much worse than these, in themes constantly appearing in the advertising column. Several years ago a bright preacher advertised to enlighten his people, on Sunday morning, by "Lessons from Croquet." Last year it was "Lessons from Golf." And this was the topic for the opening of the Autumn campaign for probably the most important season of the year: Born Too Late; the World Has the Start of Him," is the form of an offer of enlightenment to young men. "A Love Song," "A Love Adventure," and "Lessons in Courtship," of course attracted instant attention. But it seems clear that such themes, however well meant, aim a deadly blow at piety in the Church, and are likely so to discredit the religion they claim to represent as to make it a stench in the nostrils of all decent people.

Hereditary Vagrancy.

From The Fortnightly Review.

Who shall wonder that our past indulgent treatment of the vagrant has had the effect of perpetuating and multiplying this class of social parasite? The dictum of wise Sir Matthew Hale, uttered just two and a half centuries ago, is irrefutably true:

"A man that has been bred up in the trade of begging will never, unless compelled, fall to industry."

But that is not the whole of the truth. Every one of these men creates imitators. On the highways he is a walking advertisement of the advantages of idleness; in the model lodging house, or wherever else the workhouse-shunning tramp seeks nightly shelter, he acts the part of recruiting sergeant for the great army of sloth and vice. But the vagrant's capacity for mischief—the only capacity which he has yet been encouraged by our laissez faire State to cultivate—is not even here exhausted. Oftentimes he has both wife and children, and unless a benevolent public again interposes and relieves him of their maintenance they accompany him on his wanderings. Who is not familiar with the sight of children being dragged at the heels of their tramp parent? Perhaps he has begged a worn-out perambulator, and in this the youngest of the family is wheeled along, while sympathetic passers-by wonder and weep at the virtuous devotion thus displayed, and reflect that if the tramp be really a savage he is a noble one. Passing over the humane aspect of the question, for I desire to base my contentions rigidly upon demonstrable social principles, let me ask, What does this ghastly parody of family life mean? It implies that where there is one vagrant now there will in all human probability be two, three, four, a few years hence. They recognized that vagrancy was hereditary two and a half centuries ago, for an act of 3 and 4 Edward VI., c. 16, (1550,) reciting that "many men and women going begging [impotent and lame, and some able to labor] carried children about with them, which, being once brought up in idleness, would hardly be brought afterward to any good kind of labor or service," gave carte blanche to any person so willing to appropriate such children and bring them up to honest labor till the age of eighteen years if boys, or fifteen if girls.

The "Whin" of a Rattler.

Will Sparks in Ainslee's.

No matter where a man may go or what may befall him, he will never feel the same throb as when he first hears the "whir" of a rattlesnake, followed by the blood-curdling hiss that denotes the terrible creature is about to strike. The danger from the rattlesnake is as great to-day as it ever was, and the man who starts alone down any rock canyon is liable to meet one or more. Generally speaking, the rattlesnake gives warning when it is ready for business, but it happens that this warning is seldom given until the man is quite close—often too close to escape. Of almost the same color as the rocks, the snake lies practically concealed from view, and the first the traveler knows of its presence is the deadly singing of the rattles. Unless the man has heard it before, he will not be able to locate it. The terrible sound seems to mingle with the sunshine, and the bewildered man is as likely to walk into the jaws of death as to run in the direction of safety. Unless medical aid is at hand very shortly after the bite, death is sure to follow. An awful death it is; the Indians say the most awful death a man can die.

Besides the rattlesnakes, the New Mexico and of the Rocky Mountains is blessed with the tarantula, the scorpion, and the centipede. Then there's the gila monster and many poisonous lizards. Of all these the centipede is, perhaps, the most to be feared, because it is the most plentiful, and has a habit of living among the ceiling rafters of old adobe houses. At night, when a man is sleeping, it drops, and if it strikes his body it leaves a wound that takes months to heal, provided some blood disorder does not develop and kill the man. The gila monster generally does not bite unless teased. The scorpion and tarantula inflict wounds more painful than dangerous.

Rabelais.

From The Monthly Review.

Tradition has it that Rabelais died saying, "Je vais chercher le grand Peut-être." Another story (which was known soon after his death) tells how the Bishop of Evreux possessed a Galen, annotated by Rabelais. By the side of a passage in which the elder doctor denied the immortality of the soul, the younger and greater had written, "Hic vero se Galenus plumbeum ostendit." The Bishop, according to report, made use of the note to undeceive Henri IV., who had always looked upon Rabelais as an atheist. But, quite apart from these tales, true or apocryphal, we have, in his great book, his own testimony as to his creed.

"I believe," says Pantagruel, "that all thinking souls (toutes âmes intellectives) are beyond the power of fate's scissors. All are alike immortal, whether they belong to angels, demons, or human beings."

And elsewhere he bids us await death like the good poet, Rominagrobis, "with joyful bearing, frank countenance, and radiant looks," that we may here have a foretaste of "the sweet felicity that the good God has prepared for His faithful, His chosen servants, in the life beyond—the life of immortality."

What the nature of a future life might be Rabelais did not try to define; the hair-splittings of theology were the object of his greatest scorn, and he had no wish to belittle infinity by formulae. When his company of pilgrims, led by Prince Pantagruel, enter the great Temple of Bacbuc, the priestess gives to every man wine from the same cup and the same fountain, but in each one's mouth it tastes differently and becomes another wine. This allegory represents Rabelais's whole attitude toward truth; to him it was an absolute reality, taking a million forms in a million minds. Yet no one could find such words as he with which to blazon forth the Infinite; they seem the very emblems of truth.

"Go, my friends," says the priestess, when she has given the wine, "go, in the keeping of that intellectual sphere whose centre is everywhere, whose circumference is nowhere, and whom we call God. The Egyptians hail their sovereign Deity as the abstruse—the hidden one. And because they invoked Him by this name, entreating Him to reveal Himself to them, He widened their knowledge of Himself and His creatures, guiding them by His bright lantern."

Under Shelling.

From Blackwood's.

The writer's first taste of fire was an unexpected shelling of the camp when dinners were being prepared, and all men were in a peaceful frame of mind inseparable from the fragrant smell of cooking meat. A high whistle, like an escape of gas in the air, a heavy thud upon the ground between two rows of tents, an appalling crash and a leap into the air of clods of earth, and a whirring and groaning of fragments of jagged iron—these were signs amid which the faint boom of the gun responsible for them was almost unnoticed. Another and another, while men still gaped at the first—the camp was under fire sure enough. How very like the pictures was the bursting of the forty-pound shells!

All hands were ordered to seek shelter under the lee of a bit of rising ground in front; how were all hands taking it, considering that they were men who had only landed from the transport three days before? Apparently they were not "taking it" at all, in the sense of being affected by it. I have seen soldiers make more fuss over the upsetting of a perambulator than they did over the shouting of those grim messengers from the far-off kopje. Some slept, others lay grumbling at the spoiled dinner, a few took a mild interest in the destination of the shells, and laughed a little when they fell and burst in a totally different spot to what they had expected, or laughed a good deal when they fell and did not burst at all.

Epigrams.

DISPARITY.

My eyes have seen you, yet they know you not.
Our toils how similar, how wide apart!
You labor in a healthy garden plot,
I plow bare furrows in the fields of Art!

HAPPINESS.

He loved, when weary threw his love away,
Nor ever found it more, but every day
Happier he grew, light-hearted, sound, and whole,
For with his love he cast aside his soul.

LOVE.

You gave me what you had; the gift was small
And worthless, yet though one more worthy came,
I, when he gave me his tremendous all,
Kept yours, and cast his treasure to the flame.

FAME.

A poet sang, "All hail"; the world said, "Stay.
We crown you"; yet still feebler, more dim,
His worn-out life consumed itself, and they,
Finding but ashes, scarcely buried him!
—From The Academy.

The Czar's Grip Around China.

From The Fortnightly Review.

The Siberian Railway (it is true, a merely pioneer line) traverses, roughly speaking, some 7,500 square miles of agricultural and other good arable lands. There is something like 100 square miles on each side of the line where corn can be grown. The line also runs through vast coal deposits, through goldfields, through land teeming with silver, copper, and many other highly valuable minerals, and last, but by no means least, through incalculable masses of iron ore. It is in fact a vast empire in itself. Its destiny is in the womb of the uture, and who shall say what that may not be?

For strategic purposes the Siberian Railway is the same gauge as extends throughout the Russian Empire, and a truck can run from, say, within a few miles of Herat to Northern Persia, thence to the Caspian, to Odessa, to Moscow, to St. Petersburg, and, in a short time, to Peking. And every yard over which it travels will be Russian. Not only from the military aspect of the question does this give matter for reflection, but from the commercial also it is one whose importance to England it is impossible to overestimate. When the Eastern Chinese Line is completed, it will bring Shanghai within eighteen days of Antwerp—now the mart of the world, since the Port of London, through strikes, the incredible blindness of our Governments (all equally to blame in the matter,) and the pitiable ineptitude of the dock companies, has lost that position.

It seems practically certain that in the course of a few years at least 80 per cent. of the whole tea and silk trade of China will reach Europe over these Russian lines, for, though at present unable to compete with sea-borne freights, still the immense gain in time, which means everything in trade, will soon indicate the overland as the best route; while if war breaks out, as the line lying all the way in Russian territory, would be safe from attack, it would at once absorb it all. But though these Russian lines are still only in the elementary stage of construction, a single line with very light superstructures and indifferent bridges, all necessitating a very low speed, (about twenty miles an hour,) still there is little doubt the mail and passenger traffic will soon find its way over them. They, however, are not likely to compete seriously for some time with our own Hongkong steamers, for we could reach that port quicker by sea for many years.

Life's Colours.

There's many a hue and some I knew,
In the skeins of a weaver old;
Ah! there are the white of the lily hand,
The glow of the silky gold,
And the crimson missed in the lips I kissed
And the blue of the maiden's eye,
Just look at the strands in the web of life
And see—the weaver's dye!
—IRVING BACHELLER in The Bookman.

Flavor.

Prof. H. W. Corn in The Popular Science Monthly.

Chemists tell us that cheese is one of the most nutritious and, at the same time, one of the cheapest of foods. Its nutritive value is greater than meat, while its cost is much less. But this chemical aspect of the matter does not express the real value of the cheese as a food. Cheese is eaten, not because of its nutritive value as expressed by the amount of proteids, fats, and carbohydrates that it contains, but always because of its flavor. Now, physiologists do not find that flavor has any food value. They teach over and over again that our foodstuffs are proteids, fats, and carbohydrates, and that as food flavor plays absolutely no part. But, at the same time, they tell us that the body would be unable to live upon these foodstuffs were it not for the flavors. If one were compelled to eat pure food without flavors, like the pure white of an egg, it is doubtful whether one could, for a week at a time, consume a sufficient quantity of food to supply his bodily needs. Flavor is as necessary as nutriment. It gives a zest to the food, and thus enables us to consume it properly, and, secondly, it stimulates the glands to secrete, so that the foods may be satisfactorily digested and assimilated. The whole art of cooking, the great development of flavoring products, the high prices paid for special foods like lobsters and oysters—these and numerous other factors connected with food supply and production are based solely upon this demand for flavor. Flavor is a necessity, but it is particularly important what the flavor may be. This is shown by the fact that different peoples have such different tastes in this respect. The garlic of the Italian and the red pepper of the Mexican serve the same purpose as the vanilla which we put in our ice cream; and all play the part of giving a relish to the food and stimulating the digestive organs to proper activity.

Whip-poor-will and Katy-did.

Slow de night's a-failin',
An' I hyeah de callin'
Out erpon de lonesome hill;
Seun' is moughty dreary,
Solemn-lak an' skeery,
Sayin' fu' to "whip po' Will."
Now hit's moughty cryin'
Fu' to hyeah dis cryin',
'Deed, hit's mo' den I kin stan';
She' wid all our sippin',
Dey's enough of whippin'
'Dout a bird a-visin' any man.

In de noons o' Summah
Dey's anothah hummah
Sings anothah song instid;
An' his ta'nt's a-sw'ellin'
Wid de joy o' tellin';
But he says dat "Katy did."
Now I feels onsuhtain;
Won't you raise de cu'tain
Ovah all de t'ings dat's hid?
W'y dat feathahed p'isen
Goes erbout a-visin'
Whippin' Will w'en Katy did?
—PAUL LAURENCE DUNBAR in The Ladies' Home Journal.

Chinese Introductions.

From Blackwood's.

Some guests have already arrived, and we are duly presented to each other—I by the friendly sobriquet of "Tze Chin," "Son of music," (on account of a bad habit of whistling.) The formula observed on first introduction is usually as follows:

A—Your honorable name is * * * ?

B—My obscure patronymic is Hu. You have not honored me (with yours) * * * ?

A—My insignificant appellation is Ma. Your palace is situated * * * ?

B—My wretched hovel is in the Bamboo-Bourn alley. What. (if the other wear a mustache,) may be your honorable old age?

(If he be still clean shaven, and, therefore, below forty, another form is used.)

A—Alas. I have wasted forty-three years of life! &c.

During the quarter of an hour before dinner the guests (only male, of course,) sit or stroll about, eating cakes—a favorite being a sort of hot fruit puff (which each orders for himself)—and sipping tea. Melon seeds and salted almonds are also in demand for desultory nibbling.

When our number is complete a tremendous encounter of good manners ensues. Though the question of precedence is of course all cut and dried beforehand, each man must be polite enough to simulate an irrevocable resolve not to accept any but the lowest place until the host's "friend, go up higher," promote him.

Fresh Air.

From The Spectator.

There is no doubt that in long calms of mild weather the Londoners suffer from "slackness" in a far greater measure than country people are known to do, even when engaged in sedentary work, and that there is a universal complaint that sleep does not refresh. The same people will, after a short journey into the country, sleep through the night without a break, and awake with a sense of vigor and freshness to which they have been strangers for months. The reason is that the carbonic acid gas and other impurities, being heavier than the air, sink down on to the ground level where the London millions crowd and breathe it just as the same destroying gas sinks to the bottom of a brewer's vat. Animals fresh from the country actually die from the bad air. At one of the fat stock shows before last Christmas, in a period of calm and heavy fog, numbers of the overfed animals were killed "by the fog" as it was thought, but more probably by the foulness of the air they breathed. It is not easy to distinguish the benefits of the fresh-air cure from those derived from the exercise which is part of the natural suggestion of the country life. But many of those who have just returned from South Africa say that in parts of the campaign, when food and drink were so scarce that they starved all day and made the poorest of bad meals at night, the exhilaration caused by the splendid air, taken "neat" as they slept out on the veld, was such that though they were wakened every morning before dawn by the freezing cold, they often did not feel inclined to sleep when they turned in, but kept awake "telling stories" in sheer lightness and vivacity of spirit as they lay under the stars.

If the open air of South Africa did this for the ill-fed, overworked troops, steady outdoor life supplemented by adequate indoor comfort in England cannot fail to produce something of the same exhilaration. People who in London regard the phrase "enjoying the fresh air" as another name for catching cold, and do not take exercise even in the country, are sensible of the energy and enjoy the benefits which air plus exercise confer on more robust subjects.

Noel in Paris.

From The Saturday Review.

You might be in Holloway or Camden Town, or in the Edgware Road; the only difference in Paris is that the people are less depressing, more amiable. "Noël," says the strip of white cloth stretched across the entrance "Noël," announce the cards posed upon the goods; "Voyez, voyez—pour Noël," cry the attendants, red-handed youths. And milliners and mechanics, washerwomen and workmen, servants and concierges hover over the stalls; and carry off brilliant-faced dolls for "les gosses"; and bright blue bow ties studded with spangles, at 60 centimes, for "le vieux"; and boxes of scented soap (three cakes in each)—possessing the perfume of the violet, the lilac, the rose—for "Amélie, ma fille"; and packets of pink face powder, sparkling atoms of jewelry, sets of liqueur glasses, musical clocks, "bijou" lamps, illustrated cigarette cases, tortoiseshell combs, vivid watercolors, pictures of fires, wrecks, funerals in oils—all "marked in plain figures," all ranging in price from 35 centimes to 3f. 95c., all for "Noël." Then the booths—they that rise on the curbstone of the boulevards, cheap stalls facing splendid shops. Already they are being put together; on Christmas Eve their commerce will have begun. And they will stretch from the Madeleine to the Faubourg Montmartre, on either side, an amazing avenue. And before each booth spectators will assemble—so that you, from the top of an omnibus, may look along a line of Parisians divided into groups, fifty or sixty groups bathed in the yellow light of flaming lamps. And the groups will dissolve and form again, bewildering you; and the groups will pass on and on until your eyes blink; and the groups will only grow smaller when it is time to attend the midnight mass conducted impressively, splendidly, in almost every church.

Parisian Fashions.

From "Life in Paris." By Richard Whiting.

Theoretically, there is now no season in Paris, just as, theoretically, there are no fashions. This means that one section of society is still sulking with the republic. The idea is that it will be inconsolable until the King comes back, and that it disdains all those mundane vanities in which it has no better leader than a President and his wife. I remember once seeking out M. Worth, now long since gone to his account, to inquire of him, in a spirit of philosophic investigation, how the fashions were started. I had imagined that it would be interesting to discover the very fount of inspiration in these matters, to find out exactly how a new skirt or a new bodice was revealed to the race. He satisfied my curiosity in the most obliging manner, though at the outset he assured me that, under the republic, the fashions were not started at all. They simply occurred, in a more or less fugitive fashion, because there was no one to set the needful example.

In the old days, he said, it was simple enough. He hit upon an idea, and submitted it to two or three ladies of taste in the Court of the Empress. They liked it, or did not like it, and taking counsel with him, they shaped it into something which they might feel justified in laying before the throne. It was then further modified on its way to perfection. At length came the great day, say the opening of the Spring races, when one or two of them imposed it on the mass of womankind as a sort of edict from above. With that it started on its travels round the world.

But, virtually, of course, life has to be lived, just as women have to be dressed, and so, no matter what the régime, things get themselves done after a fashion. The science of sulking with the republic has to own certain limitations.

Winter Dawn.

A ridge of dark dismantled trees; below
A ruined wall and yellow bands of dawn;
Gray-blue the sky, from whence all stars are gone
Save one, that, like a forgotten candle, burns—
Left for some soul that nevermore returns
And finds no track across a waste of snow.
—ALBERT BIGELOW PAINE in The "New" Lippincott.

Yellow Humanity.

From The Spectator.

The sweltering mass of yellow humanity which we call China is visibly in the throes of a terrible convulsion, the end of which no man can foresee. Her endless peoples are panting to be rid of the Manchu tribe, which, for all its bloodthirstiness, is more nearly worn out than its kindred tribe, the Turk; panting to be rid of the foreigner; panting, above all, to find a dynasty which can rule them well upon the lines to which they cling; which can, for example, rid them of unbearable corruption in their officials without breaking up the method of selection. As they know of no method but massacre, yet have never been taught to fight, they are shedding blood in all directions aimlessly. In a month or two there probably will be an aim, some Chinese Emperor being proclaimed, and then the southern movement will be a rush, as in 1863, of Chinese upon the Manchus. Why, with our bitter experience of the Manchus, who are as bloodthirsty as Turks and much more faithless, should we even attempt to interfere? "Oh, because there will be anarchy," Let there be anarchy for a time.

The whole history of China shows that the drift of the people is not toward anarchy, but toward a fossilized regularity of life controlled and guided by a head who is imagined to represent the Fatherhood of God; but suppose that China does split up, why should it not split up? The new problems a pulverized China would present could not be more difficult than the problem she present under the Manchus. "But in anarchy trade will suffer so much." We greatly doubt whether the people of China in their ten thousand green villages will walk about naked, or cease to eat opium, or give up buying any of the few things they wish for because of anarchy; but even if they do, we had better bear the loss than pay away the profit of years in an attempt to acquire countries we cannot rule. A few concessionaires and railway promoters and the like may be ruined, but is the policy of an empire to be deflected for them?

Allah and America.

From Harper's Weekly.

In Persia, on a morning after the vermin had been particularly vigorous, I said something caustic about getting back to God's country. An Armenian, who had reposed in utter comfort in the same caravanserie, heard it and smiled. Being an Armenian, he hated the Persians, probably. Incidentally, the Persian reciprocates.

Well, this Armenian, rubbing his hands and with his head skewed over on one side, said: "The Persians, they have a legend for everything. They have a legend for what you said just now. It is this:

"Allah—that is God—once said to his Angel: 'I will see this world which I made.'

"And so Allah and the Angel descended, invisible, in a cloud, to the earth, and the first place at which they arrived was Iran—that is, in Ferenghistan. And there they saw the railroads and the tramways and the theatres and the great picture galleries. And Allah looked in disappointment and said: 'Alas! no. This is not the world which I made. I made none of these things.'

"So they journeyed to Inglezistan—that is, England—and there were mighty ships in the harbors and huge mills which make all sorts of things, and food in plenty. And again Allah said: 'Alas! no; this is not the world which I made.' And everywhere they traveled in the cloud Allah looked upon the land and said: 'No, this is not it.'

"At last, in despair, the Angel led the way to Persia, and Allah sat Himself down upon a very high mountain, and, looking far on every side, He saw neither railroads, nor tramways nor theatres nor picture galleries nor ships nor mills nor schoolhouses nor plenty to eat.

"And Allah said: 'Yes, at last. This is the world which I made. Not a thing is changed. The people whom I put here have done nothing.'

"Why didn't He come to America?" I asked.

"Sir," answered the Armenian, "in Persia they had not even heard of America."

His Reproach.

Are you too tender-hearted to be true?
True to your love, to me, and your own soul?
Will you for pity give what is love's due
And leave love lern and begging for a dole?
Then pity is a thief, that steals love's purse
To squander in dishonest charity;
Then love is outcast, with the exile's curse
Who sees his varlets loot his seigneury.
Is love so hard it recks not where I lie,
While pity melts at aught that he endures?
I deserve nothing, save that you ensky
No other with those vesper lips of yours—
I deserve nothing; but your love of me
Deserves of you the courage to be free.
—RICHARD HOVEY in Scribner's.

France—Social Parasitism.

M. de Blowitz in The North American Review.

Each of the attempts made by France, since the beginning of the nineteenth century, to obtain, if not repose at least stability, has left behind it a certain quantity of floating wreckage, tossed hither and thither as events change, and often accumulating in vast sargasso seas of obstruction at the entrance of every port of refuge. Each régime has left behind it a dangerous plague which I shall define the plague of social parasitism. And no sooner, vanquished by the years, does one generation of these parasites disappear, than another rises to take its place, and to continue its devastating corrosive work. This is the ill from which France has suffered for a century, and from which it is still suffering. Each successive régime has absorbed the privileged persons of the régime that preceded it, who had changed their convictions without tempering their appetites, or discarding their presumption and audacity. The "Old Régime" left behind it the privileged classes who claimed the right to live at the expense of the nation. These persons were gathered up by the Empire, which, in absorbing them, fancied that it legitimized its own Government by their adhesion, whereas it had merely perpetuated the social parasitism resulting from the exaggerated privileges accorded by the old régime to its favorites. When the Empire disappeared, it in turn bequeathed its privileged classes, its own parasites, mingled with those of the old régime, to the "legitimate royalty." And so, from government to government, from régime to régime, has been growing and extending the parasitic mass; so that today, over a France which fancies itself democratic and which aspires to be so, stretches like an immense, constantly shifting biotch, this social parasitism, these throngs of individuals always discontented, always with unslaked thirst, always ready to upset existing things on the chance of finding a place or reaping an advantage by a possible upheaval.

I have insisted at this length upon what I have called social parasitism in France—and which, indeed, exists in many other countries as well to a greater or less degree—because it seems to me to constitute for France the veritable danger against which she will have to do battle during the coming century, and which she must learn to conjure away if she would escape the perils which beset the existence of nations.

Haru-Same.

(Early Spring Rains in Japan.)

Before the strongest cherry-bloom
Has burst its silver coat of mail,
From sky to earth is spread a loom
To weave the Springtime's bridal veil.

The loom is hung from star to star;
The threads are silver wires of rain;
And tender winds the handmaids are,
Who, sighing, weave, then pause again.

I hear their shuttles in the trees;
The sunshine lends them strands of gold;
While light and high above their knees
Rise bridal garments, fold on fold.

And now among the misty bowers
The loom has stopped—the cuckoos sing—
On airy paths of cherry flowers
Comes viewless—yet so sure—the Spring!
—MARY M'NEIL FENOLLOSA in The Critic.

The X-Rays and Exploration.

Prince Kropotkin in The Nineteenth Century.

In the hands of an able surgeon—as Prof. E. Bergmann illustrated before the Association of German Naturalists and Physicians in 1890—the X rays become a most precious means of exploration. The growth of the bones, from birth till matured age, could be studied with their aid, and the various causes which retard growth (rachitism, tuberculosis) or produce midgets could be ascertained. The fearful splintering of the bones by the modern bullets, and especially by the English dum-dum bullet, became known, and the radiograms of Bruns showing the effects of the dum-dum provoked on the Continent a unanimous indignation against this bullet. Many limbs were saved during the last Greek-Turkish war by Nasse and Küttner continually resorting to radiography. So also in the Soudan war. "In fractures of the kneecap the Röntgen rays have proved simply invaluable. But perhaps the best service they have rendered was to demonstrate that in many cases it was far preferable to leave pellets of lead, small revolver bullets, and even Peabody-Martini bullets where they were lodged in the tissues instead of trying to get them out. In fact, Dr. Bergmann's radiograms prove that a bullet may sometimes remain even in the lungs without occasioning any trouble. Such was the case of a German soldier who had carried a bullet in his lungs for twenty-nine years, since 1871, without knowing it. The German professor goes even so far as to maintain that there are cases when a small bullet lodged in the white mass of the brain will remain there firmly imbedded, without producing any noticeable trouble, and that there is less danger in leaving it there than in extracting it.

Animals in Japanese Art.

From Our Animal Friends.

In portraits of people taken reading or writing a letter, (a favorite pose,) a crane almost invariably appears—cranes being trained by the Japanese to play the part of carrier pigeons. Of course, a far more bulky correspondence can be intrusted to them, and one of the most charming sights the country offers is the arrival or departure of such feathered postmen. The white swallows of children's portraits are to be accounted for by a time-honored native custom. At the doors of the temples always sit old crones with cages containing these birds, and it is the children's delight to spend their pocket money in buying swallows, which they immediately set free.

Hokusai, greatest of all Japanese artists, is famed for his animal jokes. One of his finest pictures represents a swallow surprised by a mole just emerging from the ground at its feet. In the outstretched wings and attitude of the bird, so well expressing surprise and alarm, there is irresistible drollery. But Hokusai was also a master of pathos, and some of his little sparrows shivering in the snow bring tears to the eyes.

Sosen, another master of the last century, is celebrated for his inimitable monkeys. The monkey is indeed a favorite subject with both ancient and modern Japanese artists. In all conceivable attitudes he constantly figures in embroideries, carvings, and paintings. In ivory carvings he often covers eyes, ears, and mouth with his paws, and a little "net-suki," or umbrella handle, may thus serve to remind one that evil should not be looked upon, listened to, or spoken.

The tiger, in popularity as a subject, ranks next to the monkey, and these artists excel in depicting his lithe power. A wonderful medallion of tigers ornamenting the entrance of one of the Nikko temples is so carved that the grain and knots of the wood give the effect of stripes and thick velvety fur. At Nikko may also be seen the carved likeness of a white cat which has attained almost world-wide fame. Marvelously lifelike it certainly is, and the natives declare that when a storm is approaching it winks.

What Workmen Are Most Productive?

From The Engineering Magazine.

Is it more to the profit of the employer to have dirty, ignorant, unhealthy, and discontented than clean, intelligent, able-bodied, and contented workers? Is it more to his interest to erect shops in which everything is ignored that might be desired by intelligent, progressive men than to have shops so planned and fitted that they will be attractive to only the best class of employes? The most productive and skilful workers will seek shops which are clean, warm, ventilated, and well-lighted, which have the best sanitary arrangements and facilities—which are conducive to comfort and cleanliness—where it is thought worth while to instruct in the best methods of manufacturing and designing, where machines and tools are provided which assist in doing the best grade of work with the least manual exertion, and where a management prevails which not only expects men to be interested in doing good work and in reducing costs, but, in return, shows some interest in cultivating a spirit of suggestion and criticism, and in giving rewards for improvements. Works planned in which the above items were looked upon as worthy of a place in the organization would have little to do with the factory acts of trades union restrictions.

Travelers' Guide—Railroads.

BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD

Leave New York City, Liberty St. South Ferry.

Chicago, Pittsburg	* 4:30 AM.
Chicago, Pittsburg	*12:15 Nt.	*12:10 Nt.	Diner.
Chicago, Columbus	* 1:30 PM.	* 1:25 PM.	Diner.
Pittsburg, Cleve.	* 1:30 PM.	* 1:25 PM.	Diner.
Pittsburg Limited.	* 7:00 PM.	* 6:55 PM.	Buffet.
Cincinnati, St. Louis	*12:15 Nt.	*12:10 Nt.
Cincinnati, St. Louis	*10:00 AM.	* 9:55 AM.	Diner.
Cincinnati, St. Louis	* 7:00 PM.	* 6:55 PM.	Buffet.
Norfolk	* 1:00 PM.	*12:55 PM.	Diner.

ROYAL BLUE TRAINS.

Washington, Balto.	* 8:00 AM.	† 7:55 AM.	Buffet.
Washington, Balto.	*10:00 AM.	* 9:55 AM.	Diner.
Washington, Balto.	*11:30 AM.	*11:25 AM.	Diner.
Washington, Balto.	† 1:00 PM.	*12:55 PM.	Diner.
Washington, Balto.	* 1:30 PM.	* 1:25 PM.	Diner.
"Royal Limited".	* 3:40 PM.	* 3:35 PM.	Diner.
Washington, Balto.	* 5:00 PM.	* 4:55 PM.	Diner.
Washington, Balto.	* 7:00 PM.	* 6:55 PM.	Buffet.
Washington, Balto.	*12:15 Nt.	*12:10 Nt.

*Daily. †Daily, except Sunday.

B. & O. Electromobile Service to and from trains. Offices: 113, 172, 261, 434, 1,800 Broadway, 25 Union Square W., 391 Grand St., N. Y.; 243 Fulton Street, Brooklyn; Whitehall Terminal and Liberty Street. Baggage checked from hotel or residence to destination.

Travelers' Guide—Railroads.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

STATIONS FOOT OF WEST TWENTY-THIRD STREET AND DESBROSSES AND CORTLANDT STREETS.

☞ The leaving time from Desbrosses and Cortlandt Streets is five minutes later than that given below for Twenty-third Street Station, except where otherwise noted.

7:55 A. M. FAST MAIL.—Limited to two Buffet Parlor Cars New York to Pittsburg. Sleeping Car Pittsburg to Chicago. No coaches to Pittsburg.

9:25 A. M. FAST LINE.—Pittsburg and Cleveland.

9:55 A. M. PENNSYLVANIA LIMITED.—Pullman Compartment Sleeping, Dining, Smoking, and Observation Cars. For Chicago, Cleveland, Toledo, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Louisville, St. Louis.

1:55 P. M. CHICAGO AND ST. LOUIS EXPRESS.—For Toledo, Nashville (via Cincinnati and Louisville,) Indianapolis, Chicago, St. Louis. Dining Car.

5:55 P. M. ST. LOUIS EXPRESS.—For Pittsburg, Indianapolis, Louisville, St. Louis. Dining Car.

5:55 P. M. WESTERN EXPRESS.—For Chicago. For Toledo, except Saturday. Dining Car.

7:55 P. M. PACIFIC EXPRESS.—For Pittsburg and Chicago. For Knoxville, daily, via Shenandoah Valley Route. Connects for Cleveland except Saturday.

8:25 P. M. CLEVELAND AND CINCINNATI EXPRESS.—For Pittsburg, Cleveland, Cincinnati.

WASHINGTON AND THE SOUTH.

7:55, 8:25, 9:55, 10:10 (Desbrosses and Cortlandt Streets, 10:20) (Dining Car,) 10:55 (Dining Car) A. M., 12:55, 12:55 (Dining Car,) 2:10 (Desbrosses and Cortlandt Streets, 2:20,) (3:25 "Congressional Lim.," all Parlor and Dining Cars,) 3:25 4:25 (Dining Car,) 4:55 (Dining Car,) 9:25 P. M., 12:10 night, Sunday, 8:25, 8:55, 10:55 (Dining Car) A. M., 12:55, 12:55 (Dining Car,) 2:10, (3:25, "Congressional Lim.," all Parlor and Dining Cars,) 3:25, 4:25, (Dining Car,) 4:55, (Dining Car,) 9:25 P. M., 12:10 night.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY.—"Florida Limited," 12:40 P. M. (Desbrosses and Cortlandt Streets, 12:40 P. M.) week days. Express, 3:25, 4:25 P. M., 12:10 night daily.

NORFOLK AND WESTERN RAILWAY.—For Memphis and New Orleans, 3:25 P. M. daily.

ATLANTIC COAST LINE.—"Florida Special," 2:10 P. M. (Desbrosses and Cortlandt Streets, 2:20 P. M.) week-days. Express, 8:55 A. M. and 9:25 P. M. Daily.

CHESAPEAKE & OHIO RAILWAY.—8:55 A. M. and 4:55 P. M. daily.

SEABOARD AIR LINE.—"Florida and Metropolitan Limited," 12:55 P. M. daily. Express, 12:10 night daily.

FOR OLD POINT COMFORT and NORFOLK.—7:55 A. M. week days and 8:55 P. M. daily.

ATLANTIC CITY.—9:55 A. M. and 2:55 P. M. week-days. Through vestibuled Trains, Buffet Parlor Cars, and Standard Coaches.

CAPE MAY.—12:55 P. M. week-days.

For points on New York and Long Branch Railro

PLANS IN WASHINGTON FOR THE INAUGURATION

Preparations to Secure Big Attendance of Visitors.

Work at Pension Bureau Will Be Interrupted for Some Days—The Government's "Rubber Shoe Chart."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Mr. McKinley's second inauguration is not to be a dull affair, if enterprising preparation and liberal announcement of the inducements offered can draw a crowd to this city. Almost everybody who can help to perfect the divers plans for making the occasion a great one has been put upon a committee, and the various committees have gone about the work of organizing with a zeal that ought to bring a successful display and many visiting spectators.

Already there is promise of a large attendance of organizations that will participate in the parade, and the Government will, of course, see to it that the army and navy are properly represented in the procession that will escort the President back to the White House and then be reviewed by him. There has been the customary offer of lodgings by a vast number of householders. The hotels, including the new Willard, not yet nearly completed, but to be used at inauguration time for lodgers, will accommodate but a part of the throng that will be here. For the economical there will be an abundance of low-priced rooms to be had during the few days preceding and following the inaugural ceremonies.

Many persons who have been here before and have been obliged to pay grand opera prices for seats in the stands along the avenue will be interested to know that it is almost settled that the prices of seats will be regulated by the committees, and that speculators will be prevented from running the orders up at the last moment to any figure they may choose to demand. With regard to the attractive appearance of the leading thoroughfare, the stands for spectators are to be all constructed on the south side of the avenue only upon plans having the approval of the committees in charge, the expectation being that the rude variations observed heretofore will be prevented. There is to be a "Court of Honor" extending from Fifteenth to Seventeenth Street, on Pennsylvania Avenue, or from the Treasury to the State, War and Navy Department Building. The decoration of this arrangement of columns and steamers is to correspond with the design of the reviewing stand from which the President will see the procession, and, judging from the impression left by the court arranged for the Peace Jubilee following the Spanish war, the feature will be a very impressive one, the avenue and the buildings upon it lending themselves well to any such method of decoration. Already the Committee of Arrangements is boasting that the crowd will be the largest ever seen at any inauguration.

***

If there should be an interruption of the pension-granting machinery for a week or ten days, it will probably be known to some of the pension applicants that business has stopped, but the blame is much more likely to be put upon the Commissioner of Pensions than upon Congress and the inauguration. The consent of Congress to the use of the Pension Bureau as a ballroom and concert hall will compel the Commissioner to shut up his shop. During the next to the last week in February he must move out of the lower floor and immense library of papers that is in use all the time when the bureau is running in promoting the adjudication of pension claims. Then the rooms on the floor above must be vacated, and this is a moving job of serious importance. The decorators are to have full possession for several days before March 4, beginning on Feb. 26, and the local inaugural committees are to be allowed to give concerts at an admission fee for several afternoons following inauguration day, to afford the people a chance to see the decorations of the ballroom, and to hear some music. Incidentally, the committees will secure some money with which to make good to subscribers the money advanced to the amount of $50,000, to guarantee the success of the show.

For ten days, at least, the pension business will be at a standstill. All the employes will have vacations, and after the ten days of rest are ended it will take several more days to get the bureau back into working order again. If this could be avoided by the Pension Commissioner, he would be glad to escape the interruption and confusion inseparably incidental to the business, but there is no other building in Washington that will so admirably suit the needs of the occasion. To the clerks of the Pension Bureau it is a delight to contemplate, for, as they are obliged to quit work and are idle through no fault of their own, they have ten days added to that valued thirty days' leave and thirty days' "sick leave" that every Government clerk regards as his just due. It will be found that there is no demand in the Pension Bureau for a longer Presidential term.

***

The private citizen who dislikes to be deprived by the mob of his opportunity to see the inaugural parade, and who therefore shares the desires of those who wish to make everything in the celebration seemly and nice, is making objection to the practice, common here as well as in New York, of the use along the line of march of extemporized stands of dry goods and other boxes. The whole length of Pennsylvania Avenue will be roped or wired off on inauguration day, but the curbstones will not be reserved where there are no stands. Already an army of boys and men, black and white, are hunting up boxes of all sizes, with which on the morning of inauguration day, they will patrol the line of march, offering the boxes for sale, first at half a dollar each and later at a nickel.

The indignation of the writers to the papers is intense as they recall former experiences, and implore the authorities to prevent a recurrence of them. The boy or man with sufficient assurance and a liberal supply of boxes will seize upon a stretch of space twenty-five to fifty feet long and with the aid of youthful coadjutors, will hold on to them until sold. The occupation of these boxes by people who will insist upon standing robs the real standing people on the sidewalk behind of all opportunity to see, which the sagacious "Senex" or "Daily Reader" says is both "hoggish" and unnecessary, for if there were no boxes, or the boxholders were compelled to go to the rear, all could see.

What is desired is that there shall be an early regulation announced by the Commissioners, and then a rigid application of the regulation by the police, who must confiscate every box found on the curb, if there is anybody behind the box who wants to see. A vast number of grocery men and dry goods dealers would be glad to hear of this rule, to say nothing about the careless owners of ash barrels, for the raiding upon cellars and storerooms by the conscienceless boys is as provoking as are similar forays about New York.

***

A recent visitor to the Treasury Department, who chanced to have business calling him there before 9 o'clock in the morning, was interested to observe how large a number of clerks straggled in at intervals of from three to ten or fifteen minutes after that hour, when, under the law, every employe should not only be in the building but at his desk and at work, if he or she is to give the Government the seven hours of labor for which he or she is paid. This common tardiness seems to have been officially noted, for there has been a "sensation" in the Treasury by the issue of an order from Assistant Secretary Vanderlip to have all watchmen at the doors report the time of arrival of every employe reaching the building after 9 o'clock.

There was no announcement of the intention to offer this "grievous insult" to the clerks. There was a common feeling that vested rights had been trampled upon, and that an Assistant Secretary had been guilty of "inexcusable brutality." Nothing had happened since the removal of the self-registering apparatus to so humiliate the people who were in the habit of "pinching" the Government by arriving at a time to suit their own convenience. All the information collected at the doors was sent to Mr. Vanderlip, and he has taken it under consideration. No one knows exactly what is to come next, but it is certain that the tardy ones will not gain anything in their efficiency records. It is mentioned that there was only one division in which there was not one tardy clerk or other employe. That was in the office of the Auditor for the Navy Department. That office was formerly under the direction of the late Frank H. Morris, who was killed by an indignant discharged employe, who then committed suicide. In that office there is an arrangement of cards in a box, and each employe is required, on his arrival, to make such disposition of these cards as to show just when he arrives, when he goes out at the close of the day, or if he takes an hour or two in the middle of the day to attend to other business than that of the Government.

***

"A Rubber-Shoe Chart" is issued by the Government Weather Bureau here once a week, on Tuesdays, and it interests a large number of business men all over the country. It is not called by that name officially, but is known as the "Snow and Ice Bulletin." It is a broad sheet, half as large as a page of THE NEW YORK TIMES. The number issued on Tuesday last showed a map of the United States, traced with a winding line indicating the snow limit, and with smaller almost parallel lines marked to show the approximate depth of snow along those lines.

When this bulletin is issued, it is eagerly sought by the manufacturers of and jobbers in rubber shoes, at whose instance, it seems, it was first published. As the news reaches them of the advance of the snow line, they see to it that agents representing the rubber-shoe houses are pushed into the snow area. The result is supposed to be a prompt renewal of rubber-shoe supplies where they are most needed, the map in the bulletin guiding agents in their particular territories. Besides the information given of snow fall and area, this bulletin carries news about ice that is interesting to those who wear rubber shoes, as well as those who have no use for them. It gives the ice area, with the thickness and condition of ice at different points.

New York does not seem to be threatened by an ice famine, if the information from the ice observer at Albany, sent for Tuesday's bulletin, is correct. He reports: "Ice in Hudson proper varies from 9 inches at Albany to 5 inches at Coeymans and 7 inches at Hudson. Ice behind dikes in Hudson River, 11 inches thick, and its quality leaves nothing to be desired. Ice in Mohawk is 13 inches thick and of first quality. In lakes in vicinity of Wappinger's Falls it is 12 inches thick, and harvest there is two-thirds complete."

James Berry, the Chief of the division that issues this bulletin, says there is considerably more ice now than at the corresponding date of 1900 in the rivers of New England. That all sounds like encouragement to the patron of the independent iceman.

***

A writer in a Washington newspaper, in a column devoted to instructive and entertaining chat about the Capitol, expresses surprise because in the basement of the building are portraits of "worthy old gentlemen" forgotten by "nine-tenths" of the visitors to the building, presumably including the writer of the paragraph, who wonders somewhat why Richard Montgomery, Thomas Mifflin, Charles Thomson, and Francis Hopkinson should find a place in the memory of the painter and on the wall of the Senate basement. The writer had looked in Fiske's "History of the United States," and could not find either Thomson or Hopkinson. When he goes to Quebec he may find the mark to indicate where Montgomery fell while trying to capture the citadel, and the house in which he died. At St. Paul's Church, New York, he can find his tomb. Mifflin he can find as the President of the Congress that received Washington's resignation, and Thomson he will discover to have been regarded as one of the brightest men of the Revolutionary time; while he has but to look at the original Declaration of Independence to see "Chas." Hopkinson's name, one of the best known of all signers because of the brilliancy and variety of his accomplishments.

E. G. D.

NEW YORK JOURNALISM.

Lecture Delivered by Francis W. Halsey Before the Students of Columbia University.

"New York Journalism: How It Had Its Rise and What It Stands For," was the subject of an address delivered before the students of Columbia University by Francis W. Halsey on Thursday. The lecturer traced the development of the New York newspaper from its earliest beginning to its present state. In regard to the early state of the newspaper, he spoke as follows:

"The first thought that the subject suggests is how little there was of New York journalism 100 years ago. As we understand the term now—and by journalism we mean the conduct of a daily newspaper—it hardly existed except as a name. Papers were published every day in the week except Sunday, but they were not newspapers in our sense of the word. They did not print what is now called news. They told of the arrival and departure of ships, dealt with city trade, were organs of commercialism, media of advertising, and when they gave chronicles of anything they dealt with the prosaic, commonplace facts in politics and business affairs. Nothing was printed of the picturesque, the pathetic, the personal, the vital side of human life. They never throbbed with the human heart beat—the sorrows, the aspirations, the triumphs, the defeats."

In illustration of these conditions, the lecturer recalled the fact that Washington had been buried before New Yorkers knew that he was dead, and that Andrew Jackson's great victory was unnecessary, since articles of peace had been signed in Europe fourteen days before the first fight occurred. When Gen. Daniel Morgan, the hero of the battle of Cowpens, died, in 1802, The New York Evening Post printed for its only account nine lines from The Westminster Gazette.

The advances in mechanical appliances for making newspapers, Mr. Halsey explained, has been even greater than the advance in facilities for news gathering. In 1800 the presses were of wood and had a capacity of about 200 copies an hour. Now every New York morning paper has presses of 50,000 capacity, while in one case a newspaper printed and delivered for mailing 500,000 copies between the hours of 2 A. M. and 10 A. M. At the beginning of the century no daily paper had a circulation of 2,500, while now at least three dailies have reached a regular daily circulation of 100,000. There are at present forty dailies printed in this city, of which eighteen are in a foreign tongue.

Of the fundamental cause of the rise of the newspaper the lecturer said:

"Interest in the affairs of one's neighbors is probably coeval with the existence of human society. We know that it was an active factor among the Romans, as among Englishmen and Americans. We also know that the Greeks were great gossips. Recent finds in the Valley of the Nile and the Euphrates have shown that the men of Egypt, Assyria, and Babylonia were keenly alive to the events that went on in the houses next door to them. Back to the dawn of history, back probably to the beginnings of the gregariousness in man, runs the dynasty of Mrs. Grundy.

"But it was reserved for the later span of the last century to introduce the fashion of printing with impunity the plain, familiar, wholesome facts that men ought to know about each other. Herbert Spencer has shown, in chapters on the origins of institutions, how the astronomer has come down to us from the astrologer; how the physician has developed from the medicine man, the author from the fireside story teller, the humorist, and perhaps the lecturer, from the Court fool. But I believe that he has never been able to account for the journalist. The nearest approach to him was the courier—the man who arrived from distant places on horseback; or, in a country like our own, where the horse was brought in from Europe, the man who arrived in a boat or on his own legs."

After treating of the rise and early history of several of the early newspapers of the city, many of which have long since passed away, Mr. Halsey spoke as follows of the pecuniary aspect of journalism:

"A well-known publisher tells me that the average cost of issuing a morning newspaper in a creditable way and with good judgment should not be less than $25,000 per week; some cost more and some cost less, but the cost ought not to be far from that figure for a paper that should be worthy of the New York public. This is exclusive of the cost of white paper. One newspaper during the war with Spain spent $9,000 in telegraph tolls for a dispatch 3,000 words long describing the battle of Santiago. Dispatches from Manila cost more than $5 per word. The income from advertisements makes possible these large expenditures."

Speed Trial of the Bailey.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Jan. 19.—The final speed trial of the torpedo boat Bailey has been postponed until Monday on account of the prevailing snowstorm. It will be held in Long Island Sound.

Brooklyn Advertisements. | Brooklyn Advertisements. | Brooklyn Advertisements. | Brooklyn Advertisements. | Brooklyn Advertisements.

The Best Restaurant in Brooklyn.

Frederick Loeser & Co.

BROOKLYN.

The Best Candy in Brooklyn.

A Combination of Shrunken Prices.

There's nothing about this store's methods which consists in rushing prematurely to showy feats that catch the eye and satisfy the spectator. But its real practical merchandising events—particularly of the past year—have concentrated upon it the ceaseless attention of every manufacturer and every seller in this country, or we might say in the world. Factories that have been overstocked—importers that have miscalculated—firms that are adjusting new partnerships—concerns that need immediate cash, are constantly knocking at our doors to gain admittance to our almost limitless facilities for distribution. The picking and the choosing of the best are guided by our knowledge of your needs—the price can mostly be our making—the benefit we pass on to you with its full measure of advantage.

Probably there is no month in the year when the combination of these circumstances with the regular clearing sales incident to January affect in so great a degree economic advantages to the alert shopper.

But the force of these circumstances seems to have focused itself in a phenomenal manner on to-morrow. You will find it absolutely true, that you can't take a step in this great store without being more than usually crowded by matchless merchandise at matchless prices.

Semi-Annual Clearance Sale of Carpets.

25,000 Yards at One-Third Less Than Usual.

This is a happening previous to our regular stock taking—but our regular stock has been supplemented—some of the best makers were laying in wait for this January sale of ours—and have tempted us, for your good, with some of the nicest goods we've ever shown you and at extraordinary prices. You'll find this sale one of the most important carpet events of the season. If you want carpets—well, let some of the prices speak, but they don't half tell the story—look at the carpets first.

49c. for 75c. Best Extra Super Ingrains.
43c. and 59c. for 65c., 75c. and 85c. Tapestry Brussels.
69c. and 89c. for $1.10 and $1.25 Wilton Velvets.
89c. and $1.05 for $1.25 to $1.50 Body Brussels, famous brands.

89c. to $1.29 for $1.25 to $1.75 Bigelow, Savonnerie and extra quality Axminster.
$1.09 for $1.35 to $1.50 Wilton Velvets, extra quality.
$1.49 for $2.50 Royal Wiltons, best makers.
17½c. for 30c. Mattings, damask patterns.

And Rugs Included in the Sale.

This is also a just-befo re-stock-taking event, and affords you price opportunities in Oriental and Domestic Rugs that may never occur again.

Reversible wool Smyrna mats, 50 & 79c.
Reversible wool Smyrna mats, bureau size, $1.15 and $1.35, instead of $1.45 and $1.85.
Bordered ingrain rugs, reversible, 30x 60 inches, 49c.
Bordered ingrain rugs, reversible, 36x 72 inches, 65c.
Only a few art squares, 2½x3 yards, $4.10 instead of $5.65.
Wilton velvet rugs, 3x6 ft., $3.50 instead of $5.00.
Reversible Smyrna rugs, beautiful designs and colorings.
6 x 9 ft., $4.95 and $7.95 instead of $6.75 and $9.50.
9 x 12 ft., $16.75 instead of $22.50.
Axminsters and Moquette Rugs, known the world over for their quality and their rich artistic designs.
6 x 9 ft., $13.95 instead of $21.00.
7.6x10.6 and 8.3x10.6, $14.75 and $21.00, instead of $19.75 and $33.00.
9x12 ft., $16.65 instead of $22.95.

Surpassing Silks---Surpassing Prices.

It is said that history repeats itself,—but here's a case where history surpasses itself—for our unparalleled silk offers of the past are eclipsed by this event for to-morrow.

98c. for Regular $2.00 Satin Crepe de Chene.

Ivory, pearl, mais, turquoise, gray, reseda, old rose, tan, national navy blue and black.
A beautiful quality, 24 inches wide, and sold regularly at $2.00. At 98c. this is the greatest bargain yet. They will be sold subject to weavers' slight imperfections, hardly perceptible, but which partly accounts for the extraordinary price.

79c. for Regular $1.50 Satin Crepe de Chene.

Plain black and white. These also have slight imperfections, but it will trouble you to find them.

39c. for 65c. Plain Colored Taffeta—Full line of the best shades.
Printed Foulards and India Silks—The largest assortment to be found in Greater New York, 29c., 39c., 49c., 59c., 69c., 79c., 89c., 98c., $1.00 and $1.25.
20,000 Yards of Fancy Silks—49c., 59c., 69c., 79c. and 98c. for regular $1.00 to $2.00 qualities.
79c. for $1.00 Black Dress Taffeta—Extra wide, in fact, 27 inches.

All Our Men's Suits at Half.

Saturday morning we offered all our stock of Men's Clothing at exactly half. The rush came and took everything, leaving only some of the suits. The sale continues to-morrow Suits only as follows:

$6.25 for our $12.50 Suits. | 10.00 for our 20.00 Suits. | 12.50 for our 25.00 Suits.
7.50 for our 15.00 Suits. | 11.25 for our 22.50 Suits. | 15.00 for our 30.00 Suits.

Boys' Clothing Below Cost.

A January happening of moment to every boy. Those who have waited for our regular reduction sale can almost get two suits for our very lowest price of one.

$2.98 FOR $4.98 SUITS.—About three hundred suits in the lot. A splendid assortment of fine double-breasted ones, sizes 8 to 16 years, and some vest suits. And quite a lot of sailor suits for the smaller boys, not all sizes in any style, but all sizes in the collection.
$3.98 FOR $5.00 AND $6.00 OVERCOATS.—The remainder of our late purchase; they are new and stylish box coats, of fine quality all-wool frieze, navy blue and dark brown; well-made and perfect-fitting coats, sizes 4 to 16 years.
59c. FOR 98c. AND $1.25 TROUSERS.—Four hundred pairs, sizes 3 to 16 years, strongly made from fine quality all-wool cloths, brown and gray mixtures; no better trousers for service.

Muslin Underwear Echoes.

Just a few hints from our great sale of muslin undergarments—still largely in force, with opportunities lesser only in assortment and extent.

Good muslin gowns, tucked and hemstitched, 49c.
Good muslin gowns, embroidered, some Empire shape, 79c.
Fine cambric and nainsook; a variety of styles, 98c.
Muslin drawers, embroidered ruffle, 29c., 39c. and 49c.
Cambric drawers, embroidered and lace bound, 79c. and 98c.
Fine nainsook drawers, embroidered, 98c. and $1.39.
Good muslin petticoats, deep embroidered flounces, 98c., $1.19 and $1.39.
Cambric corset covers, 29c., 39c. and 49c.
Cambric corset covers, fine nainsook, 59c., 79c. and 98c.
Flannelette underskirts, crochet edge, 29c.
Still showing a large lot of fine sample garments of all kinds at greatly reduced prices.

Chiffoniers Greatly Reduced.

To pay a little price for a poor piece of furniture is like trying to save the pounds by wasting the pennies, but to pay a little price for a good piece of furniture is saving the pennies to enjoy the pounds, and here's a latter example. These thoroughly good chiffoniers—all oak, beautifully polished finish—some with and some without mirrors. We mention some of the prices—there are others at similar reductions. To see them is to buy, if you want a chiffonier:

$17.50 Chiffonier $11.75 | $12.75 Chiffonier $8.50
$15.00 " $10.00 | $12.00 " $8.00
$13.50 " $9.00 | $7.75 " $5.15

A Great Lot of Books at 29c.

A One-Price Clearance Sale.

Here's another innovation in our Book Store. A list worthy close perusal and every item speaks for itself. Three tables heaped with books all reduced to 29c.

$1.50 books reduced to 29c.
$1.25 books reduced to 29c.
$1.00 books reduced to 29c.

And hundreds of volumes ranging in value from 34c. to 75c. all marked 29c. There are over 1,000 titles, but space forbids our mentioning as many as 100.

	Publisher's Price.	Loeser's Price.
Zola. Attack on the Mill	$1.25	29
Richebourg. Old Racelot's Millions.	1.25	29
Jamieson. Story of an Enthusiast.	1.50	29
Clara Morris. Silent Singer.	1.25	29
Mrs. Clifford. A Wild Proxy.	1.25	29
Letters of Horatio Greenough, (sculptor)	1.50	29
O'Connor. Three Tales.	1.25	29
Murfee. Felicia.	1.25	29
Jackson. Story of a Prophet.	1.25	29
Brown. The Petrie Estate.	1.25	29
Dougall. A Question of Faith.	1.25	29
Mitchell. Two Strings to His Bow.	1.25	29
Curtis. Queer Luck.	1.00	29
Strachey. Talks at a Country House.	1.25	29
The Guardian.	1.25	29
Crellin. Romance of the Old Seraglio.	1.25	29
Boyd. Shellback.	1.50	29
Thickstnn. A Mexican Girl.	1.25	29
Francis. Story of Dr.	1.25	29
Capt. King. A Wounded Name.	1.25	29
Capt. King. Warrior Gap.	1.25	29
Capt. King. Garrison Tangle.	1.25	29
Capt. King. Fort Frayne.	1.25	29
Capt. King. Army Life.	1.25	29
Dickens. Old Lamps for New Ones.	1.50	29
Memoirs of Caroline Baucr.	1.50	29
Helen Hnnt Jackson's Year Book.	1.50	29
Superfluous Women.	1.25	29
Merriman. Young Mistley.	1.00	29

REDUCED FROM 45 CENTS. GILT TOPS.
Cooper. The Pilot. 29
Cooper. Wing and Wing. 29
Cooper. Two Admirals. 29
Lord Dufferin. Letters from High Latitudes. 29
Eliot. Spanish Gypsy. 29
Eliot. Romola. 29
Eliot. Theophrastus Such. 29
Nevin. Travels in England and Italy. 29
Doyle. The White Company. 29
Mitchell. Planetary and Stellar Worlds. 29
Hutton. French Literature. 29
Verne. Fur Country. 29
Ailison. Arctic Discovery. 29
Undine and Picciola. 29
REDUCED FROM 65c. HOLIDAY BINDING.
Dumas. Company-of Jehu. 29
Dumas. First Republic. 29
Domas. Last Vendee. 29
Oliphant. Makers of Venice. 29
Oliphant. Royal Edinburgh. 29
Ruskin. Sesame and Lilies. 29
Caine. The Deemster. 29
Caine. Shadow of a Crime. 29
Marlitt. Old Mamselle's Secret. 29
Austen. Pride and Prejudice. 29
Hugo. Notre Dame. 29
Carey. Not Like Other Girls. 29
Kingsley. Westward Ho! 29
Eliot. Romola. 29
Yesterday, To-day, and Forever. 29
REDUCED FROM 44 CENTS. GIFT BOOKS.
De Quincey. Confessions of an Opium Eater. 29
Milton. Paradise Lost. 29
Milton. Paradise Regained. 29
Ruskin. Crown of Wild Olives. 29
Ruskin. Queen of the Air. 29
Mill. On Liberty. 29
Scott's Marmion. 29

COURT ORDERS A VERDICT.

Jury Could Not Agree in the Blinn Case and Justice Truax Directs a Finding.

The jury which has been considering the case brought by Christian Blinn, in the Supreme Court, against Julia Schwarz for the recovery of property at Eightieth Street and Broadway, which it is alleged he conveyed to her while he was insane, announced to Justice Truax yesterday that it could not agree. Justice Truax, it being absolutely certain that the case would be carried to a higher court, no matter what the verdict directed a verdict in favor of the defendant. By directing this verdict the Justice saves the costs and time involved in a new trial in a lower court and expedites justice by transferring it at once to a higher court. It is one of the few instances on record where such a course of procedure has been adopted.

The question on which the verdict in favor of Mrs. Schwarz was directed was as to whether Blinn, by bringing his action to set aside the deeds, had not acknowledged his liability and was not debarred from pleading insanity.

Blinn declared that he was mad when he disposed of the property, which he said was worth $120,000, and besides asking that the deeds be canceled, demanded the return by Mrs. Schwarz of $26,000 which she had received as rent. Mrs. Schwarz asserted that she paid $78,000 to Blinn for the property, which was its full value at the time she bought it, in 1892.

An effort was made to prove that Mrs. Blinn was a party to the conveyance of the property, but she swore that when her husband executed the deed he was ill.

Larceny Charge Against Foreman Wick.

The members of the Catalpa Local Assembly of the Society of City Gardeners had Frederick G. Wick, a foreman in the Department of Parks, arraigned in the West Side Court yesterday charged with larceny. Wick was Treasurer of the Assembly in the Summer of 1899, when the association conducted an excursion which netted $156.72. At a subsequent meeting of the assembly Wick was instructed to deposit the amount in a bank to the credit of the organization. This, it is alleged, he never did. The warrant for his arrest was obtained by August J. Rydholm, President of the assembly. Wick was paroled by Magistrate Hogan until to-morrow afternoon.

To Celebrate a Battle Anniversary.

The thirty-ninth anniversary of the battle of Roanoke Island, which took place Feb. 8, 1862, will be celebrated by the survivors of the Burnside expedition at the Arena, Thirty-first Street, Friday evening, Feb. 8. This battle was one of the first decisive victories of the war. Gen. Burnside was in command, and the survivors under the name of the "Roanoke Associates," have for many years celebrated the event with hearty bumpers of "Burnside Punch." Gen. Parke, the last surviving General, died but recently in Washington.

THE FIND AT MUKDEN.

Hope that Works Hitherto Lost May Be Among the Classical Manuscripts Discovered.

Foreign Correspondence NEW YORK TIMES.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 7.—A scientific expedition, organized by the Russian Government, has just left St. Petersburg for China. This expedition, which consists principally of archaeologists, includes some Greek and Latin scholars.

It seems that the famous libraries of the holy city of Mukden, now in the hands of the Russians, contain, among many other valuable manuscripts, a number of Greek and Latin books.

Whence came these books? This is the question which the classical scholars of the expedition will be called upon to answer. The opinion of archaeologists here is that the works were gathered by the Mongolian Tartars, at the time of their great invasions in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, and taken back to China by them. According to this theory the manuscripts were stolen from libraries at Kiew, at Warsaw, and in various cities of Germany.

They would, therefore, be of the greatest interest from a historical point of view: and it is hoped that among them may be found certain works of great writers which have always been thought to be lost.

B. C. DE W.

HIS COSTLY ROUND OF DRINKS.

Waiter's Check Handed to Col. Gaynor Was for a $44 Dinner.

Col. John F. Gaynor, ex-Treasurer of the Democratic State Committee, intends to be more careful hereafter in signing hotel waiters' checks for charges.

When he received his bill at the Hoffman House recently it contained one item of $44 for "dinner," to which his attention was called by Mrs. Gaynor with the query, "Whom have you been giving a dinner to, John?"

"Dinner? Dinner? I have given no dinner," was his reply.

But when he made an investigation he soon discovered he had been made the victim of a practical joke. He took his medicine and paid the charge.

Frequenters of the hotel were enjoying a laugh at the Colonel's expense, and in response to repeated requests as to how it all happened Col. Gaynor remarked:

"Well, it was this way: I was going to my room when I was hailed by a party in the dining room. In it were Tony Brady, 'Gene Wood, 'Billy' Sautter, and Andy Hamilton. I joined them and we had a drink. I then called for a round. When we were about to part the waiter handed the checks to one of the party. He passed me one of them and I signed it. That was the dinner check for $44. But they won't catch me again."

LEGAL NOTES.

COMBUSTIBLE MATERIAL ON RAILROAD RIGHT OF WAY.—A spark from the locomotive of a train of the Port Jervis, Monticello and New York Railroad Company, in May, 1898, after a prolonged drought, caused a fire to be kindled on the right of way of the road through a woodland in Deer Park, Orange County, N. Y. The fire extended through dry brush which had accumulated along the track to the property adjoining, and then to premises of Charac J. Van Inwegen, resulting in the destruction of growing timber, burning of the soil, and the demolition of 200 cords of wood belonging to him. In two suits against the railroad company, Mr. Van Inwegen secured verdicts for $1,500 damages. The Appellate Division, in Brooklyn, affirmed the judgment, but the Court of Appeals has now directed a reversal. Judge Werner, giving the opinion of the court of last resort, says that there being no dispute as to the essential fact that there were intervening owners between the lands of the plaintiff and the defendant, the question whether the fire which was started upon the premises of the defendant was the proximate cause of the injury to the plaintiff's land was a question of law for the court, and not a question of fact for the jury. There was therefore nothing to do but to follow the recent decision of the court in the case of Hoffman vs. King, (160 N. Y. 619,) where it held that the Erie Railroad Company, which had negligently set a fire on its right of way, was not liable to the owner of lands not abutting on its premises, caused by fire communicated through the abutting and intervening woodlands of a third person, over which the railroad company had no control, and without which the fire could not have been extended.

***

INJURY TO PASSENGER FROM COLLISION BETWEEN CAR AND WAGON.—A verdict for $3,000, awarded to Alexander Keegan in his suit against the Third Avenue Railroad Company, and John Hunt, which the First Appellate Division upheld, has now been also affirmed by the Court of Appeals. Mr. Keegan, on Aug. 30, 1898, got on a southbound Third Avenue car, taking a seat on the east side, near the rear. At Fifty-eighth Street this car met a wagon belonging to Mr. Hunt, going north, on the east track. Behind the wagon was a north-bound car. In attempting to get out of its way, the wagon crossed to the west, and collided with the rear of the south-bound car, striking it and injuring the plaintiff. The Appellate Division and the Court of Appeals hold that a street railroad company is not necessarily free from liability to a passenger injured in a collision between one of its cars and a wagon because the wagon struck the car, instead of the car striking the wagon. The question whether the street railroad company was called upon to exercise "great care and vigilance, all that human foresight might suggest," as was charged in this case, was held to depend upon the conditions existing at the time. Presiding Justice Van Brunt, in the Appellate Division, and Chief Judge Parker and Judge Haight, in the Court of Appeals, dissented.

WANTS SON'S MARRIAGE ANNULED

Caspar Becker's Complaint Set Aside on Grounds of Non-Residence.

The service of the summons and complaint in the action brought by Caspar Becker, a wealthy resident of Philadelphia, as guardian ad litem of his eighteen-year-old son, John Bernhard Becker, for an annulment of the youth's marriage with Rosa Gutman, who had been a servant in the Becker household, was yesterday set aside by Justice Beach in the Supreme Court.

Young Becker left his home on Sept. 27 last, and came to this city, with the girl. They were married and returned to Philadelphia. Becker was only seventeen years and seven months old at the time. Mr. Becker alleges in his suit that his son and Rosa have never lived together since the marriage, and that the marriage should be annulled, as, according to the laws of the State of New York, the ceremony was invalid, his son being under the age of eighteen, the legal age of consent here.

Justice Lawrence granted the order for the service of the summons and complaint by publication on the ground that Mrs. Becker was a non-resident. Justice Beach says he considers both the parties non-resident of this State and that the Court, therefore, has no jurisdiction.

STABLE NEAR A SCHOOL.

Principal Winslow Says the Health of Children Is Endangered.

Residents in the neighborhood of Public School No. 114, at 73 Oliver Street, are complaining of the odor of a stable in James Street at the rear of the school, which is especially offensive in muggy weather. An attempt was made during Mayor Strong's administration to have the nuisance abated, but without result. Miss Winslow, Principal of the school, said yesterday:

"I have spoken to the School Commissioners about this stable, and they have promised to do what they can to have the nuisance done away with. During school hours the odor was terrible, and a source of danger to the health of the children."

Soldier Bennings Shoots a Deserter.

Richard Bennings, attached to the Libert Island garrison, is an enthusiast in the service of his country. While drinking in a saloon at Thirty-eighth Street and Eighth Avenue late Friday he was introduced to William Clarkson of 210 West Sixty-second Street, who some one said was a deserter from the army. From that moment Clarkson became such an abomination in the sight of Bennings that the latter whipped out a revolver and shot his new acquaintance in the leg. Clarkson was taken to the Roosevelt Hospital and Bennings was arrested. The soldier was arraigned later in the West Side Court on a charge of felonious assault and held in $1,000 bail for examination on Tuesday.

THE UNITED SERVICE.

Army.

The following-named officers will report to Col. Jacob B. Rawles, Third Artillery, President of the examining board appointed to meet at the Presidio of San Francisco, at such time as he may designate, for examination as to their fitness for promotion: First Lieut. John P. Hains, Third Artillery, and Second Lieut. Harry L. James, Third Artillery.

Lieut. Col. William P. Hall, Assistant Adjutant General, is detailed as a member of the board of officers appointed to meet at Fort Sheridan, Illinois, for the examination of officers for promotion, vice Major Theodore F. Forbes, Fifth Infantry.

Major Walter Reed, Surgeon, will, upon the adjournment of the Pan-American Medical Congress at Havana, proceed to Washington and report to the Surgeon General for the purpose of continuing his investigation at the Army Medical Museum with reference to the cause and prevention of yellow fever.

The following-named officers will report to Col. Francis L. Guenther, Fourth Artillery, President of the examining board appointed to meet at Fort Monroe, Va., at such time as he may designate, for examination as to their fitness for promotion: First Lieuts. Henry D. Todd, Jr., Seventh Artillery, and Thomas W. Winston, First Artillery; Second Lieuts. Malcolm Young, Second Artillery; Percy P. Bishop, Fourth Artillery; Elmer J. Wallace, First Artillery; Guy T. Scott, Third Artillery, and Arthur F. Cassels, Seventh Artillery.

A board of survey, to consist of Lieut. Col. Charles A. H. McCauley, Quartermaster's Department; Major David J. Craigie, Twenty-fifth Infantry, and Capt. Robert Sawell, Quartermaster's Department, will assemble at the general depot of the Quartermaster's Department, Philadelphia, from time to time, for the purpose of ascertaining and fixing the responsibility for any deficiencies or damage to Quartermaster's property received at that depot during the remainder of the present calendar year.

Capt. Orin B. Mitcham, Ordnance Department, will proceed from New York City to the works of the Dittmar Powder and Chemical Company, near Farmingdale, N. J., on official business pertaining to the inspection of the works of that company.

Navy.

Paymaster R. T. M. Ball is ordered to the Indiana, Jan. 31.

Capt. N. M. Dyer is detached from the Boston yard, Jan. 23, and ordered home and wait orders.

Movements of Naval Vessels.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The training ship Buffalo, en route to Manila, arrived at Gibraltar yesterday.

The New Orleans left Chefoo to-day for Nagasaki.

The Standish has arrived at Norfolk.

The Essex probably will leave Newport on the 24th inst.

Fourth-Class Postmasters.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The following fourth-class Postmasters were appointed to-day:

NEW JERSEY—Audubon, Eugene Corwin; Hamilton Square, Capt. Robbins; Mountainville, C. P. Farley.

PENNSYLVANIA—Fyan, A. E. Fyan.

Chicago Firemen Injured.

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—Four firemen were injured and $50,000 worth of property destroyed in a fire last night in the Boynton Block, 84-86 State Street. Mrs. James Lehman, wife of the janitor, and her infant child were carried out by firemen. The injured firemen are Capt. E. J. Buckley, Dennis Driscoll, Michael McFadden, and Patrick Smith, all badly cut by falling glass.

"All the News That's Fit to Print."

The New York Times.

THE WEATHER.
Occasional rains, warmer; brisk southerly wind.

COPYRIGHT, 1901, BY THE NEW YORK TIMES COMPANY.

VOL. L...NO. 15,924. NEW YORK, MONDAY, JANUARY 21, 1901.—Twelve Pages and Supplement. ONE CENT In Greater New York, Jersey City, and Newark. Elsewhere, TWO CENTS.

QUEEN VICTORIA IS SINKING FAST

A Collapse Last Night Hastens Her End.

HER DEATH IS VERY NEAR

Now in a Comatose Condition with Little Hope of a Rally.

PRINCE OF WALES IS ILL

Meets the Kaiser in London and Is Unable to Return.

A Day of Terrible Anxiety at Osborne House — British Press Comments on the Character of the Queen and Praises the Kaiser.

At 5:15 o'clock this morning Queen Victoria was still alive, but her death was expected momentarily. The greatest anxiety prevailed, and the members of the royal family, except the Prince of Wales, were assembled in a room adjoining the Queen's bedchamber.

At 10 o'clock last night a collapse occurred unexpectedly, and the Prince of Wales, who had gone to London to meet Emperor William, was notified to return at once.

The gravity of the situation was increased by the inability of the Prince of Wales to obey the summons at once. He was seriously indisposed, and could not promise to leave London until 8 o'clock this morning.

The Kaiser and the Duke of Connaught arrived in London shortly after 6 o'clock and were met by the Prince of Wales.

The Queen resolutely refused to see any one during the day except her nurses and doctors. The Prince of Wales was the only exception, and his interview lasted but a few minutes.

The London newspapers this morning for the first time realize the situation. They publish more or less extended sketches of the Queen's career and tributes to her character.

Nearly all the papers comment also on the presence of the Kaiser and express satisfaction.

END EXPECTED MOMENTARILY.

COWES, Isle of Wiht, Jan. 21.—5:15 A. M.—The Queen is in a comatose condition, and is regarded as passing away. She is unconscious.

The worst is expected at any moment, and the members of the royal family, except the Prince of Wales, are now assembled in a room adjoining the Queen's bedchamber. Everybody is up in Osborne House, and terrible anxiety pervades all quarters. No official bulletin has been issued since midnight.

The official bulletin given out then said that the Queen's condition late this evening became more serious, with increasing weakness and diminished power of taking nourishment.

A collapse, or what the physicians feared was a collapse, occurred unexpectedly about 10 o'clock last evening. Arrangements were hurriedly made to provide special telephonic and telegraphic facilities.

Details are not obtainable at this hour, but it is asserted that her Majesty's condition is chiefly due to a severe sinking spell and an increase of the paralytic symptoms. It is understood that the physicians have resorted to artificial methods to prolong life such as are used only in cases of persons in extremis.

Her Majesty's physicians hope that she may rally by o'clock this (Monday) morning. If she does, it is expected that she will live through the day. If she does not, all hope will be abandoned.

Immediately on the occurrence of the Queen's collapse about 10 last evening a message was sent to London summoning the Prince of Wales and Emperor William.

Doubts are expressed as to whether the Prince of Wales and Emperor William will arrive here before the end.

An enormous crowd of newspaper representatives and others, with carriages, bicycles, and lanterns, has collected at the lodge gates, waiting in intense excitement to convey the news, momentarily excepted, that the Queen has breathed her last.

It is learned that the paralysis is chiefly evident in the face, one side of which appears to have lost all nerve and muscular power. At 6 o'clock last evening the malady had not reached the vital organs, although it had naturally caused an almost total loss of the power of speech. What was so much feared was that the brain might be attacked.

Keenly sensitive of her affliction and appearance, the Queen has absolutely refused to see any one but her nurses and doctors, and it is understood that the Prince of Wales is the only exception to this rule.

TO-DAY.
TWELVE PAGES,
WITH FINANCIAL REVIEW AND QUOTATION SUPPLEMENT.

INDEX TO DEPARTMENTS.

Amusements.—Page 5.
Arrivals at Hotels and Out-of-Town Buyers.—Page 5.
Court Calendars.—Page 10.
Losses by Fire.—Page 5.
Marine Intelligence and Foreign Mails.—Page 9.
Real Estate.—Page 11.
Weather Report.—Page 5.
Yesterday's Fires.—Page 5.

Old Point Comfort and Richmond Tour.
Royal Blue Line, Jan. 26, via Washington, $34 round trip from New York, expenses included. Leave Liberty St. 8 A. M. Full information B. & O. R. R. Offices.—Adv.

and that his interview with the Queen lasted but a few moments. Hence the exact nature of the malady is known only to a very few, and it is the royal wish that the public should not be informed of the existence of paralysis.

Arrangements have been made with a local undertaker to have all the preliminaries to burial ready in case of an emergency.

The Daily Chronicle has received the following dispatch from Cowes, dated Jan. 21, 12:46 A. M.:

"The Queen is reported to be sinking fast. The rector of Whippingham was summoned at midnight and he has just arrived in one of the Queen's carriages."

Her Majesty's extreme weakness causes almost more alarm than the paralysis. Much difficulty has been experienced in administering nourishment, for she appears quite unable to masticate. To this weakness are probably due the long spells of unconsciousness through which she has been passing, although it is almost impossible to distinguish these from the insidious encroachments of paralysis.

For more than a week the Court officials have had hard work to keep her from sleeping at the wrong time. The last time she drove out the villagers were astounded to hear the clear treble of the son of the Princess of Battenberg trilling out popular songs from the royal carriage. The explanation is that he was singing to keep his grandmother awake. Now and again she dozed, wakening to tell the boy to continue his chant, which to the initiated onlooker contained a world of pathos.

PRINCE OF WALES EXHAUSTED.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—In the closing moments of Queen Victoria's life another grave portent arises, namely, the serious indisposition of the Prince of Wales.

So worried, tired, and exhausted was he last evening that he could not respond immediately to the summons from Osborne House. The most he could do was to promise that he would leave London at 8 o'clock this morning if possible. He is spending the night at Marlborough House, and Emperor William is at Buckingham Palace.

YESTERDAY AT OSBORNE.

COWES, Isle of Wight, Jan. 21.—Yesterday at Osborne, hedged around with intense secrecy, began with a touching scene. Amid the bright sunshine, in marked contrast to the gloomy skies of Saturday, there drove out from the palace grounds a carriage containing wreaths for the tomb of Prince Henry of Battenberg, in the little church at Whippingham, about ten minutes' ride from the royal residence. Then followed carriages containing the Princess of Wales, the Princess of Battenberg, Princess Louise, and others, all dressed in the deepest black. The face of the Princess of Wales showed signs of the anxiety she was undergoing.

The annual memorial service for Prince Henry, always a sad occasion, was more than usually sorrowful, for the shadow of a still greater bereavement was uppermost in all minds. The Princess of Wales and the Princess of Battenberg sobbed bitterly, and there was scarcely one of those royal heads bent in prayer that did not shake with a grief which could not be suppressed.

The departure of the Prince of Wales for London shortly after 12 o'clock to meet Emperor William was quietly accomplished. The Queen had been informed of the Kaiser's coming and had signified her desire that the Prince should go to meet him. Rather against his will, the man who for the moment was practically the King of England, obeyed his mother's wishes. It was rumored that the Queen wanted the Emperor to postpone his visit to Osborne House, as she did not wish to receive him in her present condition. Apparently, in her lucid moments, she believed that she would be able to conquer the dread disease which had fastened itself upon her.

During the afternoon the long, hilly road to the palace grounds was crowded with people, particularly young men and women arrayed in their Sunday garb, dotting the landscape with vivid patches of color. The local gentry, after church service, wrote their names in the visitors' book at the lodge, which contains no signatures that would mean anything to the world outside of the Isle of Wight.

Inquiries of importance all came by telegram, and these were legion. Hundreds of people, all sorts and conditions of men, clergymen predominating, flooded Cowes with telegrams asking for the latest news.

A swarm of country people, among whom correspondents from all quarters of the globe mingled, ceaselessly converged toward the lodge gates. Their inquiries generally took the form of a timid "How is she?" addressed to the policeman who barred all comers; and an inquirer who had been answered would be immediately surrounded by others less bold who sought the news.

When night fell, the country side became deserted, save for the newspaper watchers, who waited wearily in the lodge. In the distance was seen the faint glimmer of the lights of the palace. Strict injunctions have been given to the Court attendants and to the Osborne House employes to make no answer to any inquiries except by referring to the official bulletins. Nevertheless, any yokel who has ever been on an errand to the castle is willing to detail minutely what is wrong with the Queen. In fact, the most circumstantial stories of various ailments are currently accepted here, where the fact of the Queen's paralytic stroke is generally unknown.

AN ANXIOUS SUNDAY IN LONDON

LONDON, Jan. 21.—Throughout the United Kingdom yesterday was a Sunday of anxiety and suspense. No one in England outside the circle of the Court knew the real condition of the Queen or the nature of her disease. The bulletins threw but little light on the universal question whether death was imminent. The London newspapers had not learned that her Majesty had suffered a shock of paralysis. Extra editions of the Sunday papers contained no information beyond the official bulletins, but there were many of them, and they were eagerly bought.

There were small gatherings in the vicinity of Buckingham Palace and Marlborough House, as well as other centres where the bulletins were posted. Crowds assembled to witness the arrival of Emperor William. Apart from such incidents, however, the customary quiet of a London Sunday was not disturbed.

The most alarming reports of the day came in the form of telegrams from the Princesses at Osborne House. The coming of Emperor William and the news that King Leopold was about starting for London inspired fears that death was at hand. On the other hand, the fact that the Prince of Wales was able to leave Osborne House had an encouraging effect. When the Prince arrived from Osborne at Victoria Station, London, at 4 o'clock, with Sir Francis Knollys attending, several hundred people were there to greet him. But there was no demonstration beyond a respectful raising of hats. The Earl of Clarendon and the Earl of Pembroke received the Prince. When they inquired regarding the Queen's condition, he replied, "You see they have let me come away."

During the day the members of the Diplomatic Corps and other notable persons entered their names in the Visitors' Book at Buckingham Palace.

The rumors that the Marquess of Salisbury and the Archbishop of Canterbury had been summoned to Osborne House were incorrect.

In churches of all denominations prayers were offered at the morning services, and in most of them the latest bulletin regarding the Queen's condition was read. The Chief Rabbi requested special prayers. The following notice was read in the Roman Catholic Pro-Cathedral at Kensington:

The prayers of the congregation are asked for her Majesty, the Queen, the condition of whose health is a cause of anxiety and sorrow to us all. We pray that by God's help her Majesty's recovery may be speedy and complete.

The Dean of St. George's Chapel, Windsor, read the prayer for a sick person when there is little hope of recovery, beginning: "Forasmuch as in all appearance the time of her dissolution draweth near."

EMPEROR WILLIAM'S ARRIVAL.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—Emperor William and the Duke of Connaught, with their suites, who left Berlin Saturday evening, arrived here last night shortly after 6 o'clock, and were received by the Prince of Wales, who came here from Osborne House for the purpose.

The Government had arranged to sent the fast cruiser Minerva to bring Emperor William, but he embarked on a mail packet for England before he learned of the plans. The steamer had a rough passage, and on entering Sheerness Harbor, she went by the warships without any ceremonies. Admiral Kennedy and Count von Mirbach of the German Embassy, received the Emperor and escorted him to a special waiting room.

Two hours before his Majesty's train was due in London people began to gather about Charing Cross Station. The crowd included not only the usual hangers-on, but many fashionable people and hundreds of Germans, anxious to see the Emperor on his first appearance in London for years. The throng became so large that the railroad authorities erected wooden barriers, and a hundred of the tallest policemen of the metropolitan force, with squads of mounted men, lined up the people on the streets, forming a lane for two blocks to Nelson's Monument in Trafalgar Square. Through this lane moved a procession of royal carriages, each bearing two footmen in yellow liveries behind. The carriages entered the railway station and drew up near the track.

The Prince of Wales arrived just before the train entered the station, which was at 6:20 P. M. The Duke of York, Prince Christian, Prince Albert of Schleswig-Holstein, and Prince Arthur of Connaught completed the group of royal personages.

Emperor William stepped out of a saloon car, wearing a traveling suit and a soft hat. He saluted the Prince of Wales by kissing him on both cheeks and the Prince returned a similar salutation. He then embraced the Duke of York, and shook hands with the others.

The people who looked on as the carriages drove off uncovered their heads, and Emperor William and the Prince of Wales acknowledged the courtesy by raising their hats. No cheers broke the mournful silence.

The crowd in the vicinity of Buckingham Palace maintained the same demeanor when the Emperor and the Prince of Wales entered the grounds.

At 10 P. M. the Prince of Wales began a conversation by telephone with Osborne House which lasted nearly an hour. As a result of this, the Emperor and the Prince decided to start for Osborne this morning. Orders were given that a royal yacht should be kept in waiting to convey them to the Isle of Wight.

According to The Daily Telegraph, Emperor William, who has expressed a desire to be received at Osborne House not as Emperor but as grandson, said on hearing of the Queen's illness:

"I am my grandmother's eldest grandson, and my mother is unable from illness to hasten to her bedside."

German Warships Prepare for Sea.

BERLIN, Jan. 20.—The Lokal Anzeiger says the German Imperial yacht Hohenzollern, the cruiser Nymphe, and the torpedo boat Sleipner, now at Kiel, have received orders to prepare for sea, and that it is understood the orders are connected with the condition of Queen Victoria.

DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE AT PARIS.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—The Duke of Cambridge, who arrived here last evening on his way to the Riviera, received a telegram asking him to return at once.

He was preparing to start when another dispatch reached him this evening of a more favorable character, and he decided to await further advices before returning to England. When seen at the Hotel Bristol by a correspondent, his demeanor indicated that he thought the outlook was more hopeful.

TRIBUTES TO HER MAJESTY.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The London papers this morning review her Majesty's long and illustrious reign, and dilate upon the wonderful influence she wielded in European politics for so many years. "We all know," says The Daily Mail, "that there is danger of losing perhaps the greatest personal force of our times." The Daily News recalls the fact that even Bismarck, who detested feminine interference in politics, formed an estimate of the Queen after a personal interview with her which bordered on the idolatrous, and it adds:

"This is one of the most striking tributes ever paid to a great character."

A bright spot in the universal gloom was the unexpectedly prompt sympathy displayed by Emperor William in giving up important engagements to come to the deathbed of his grandmother. "This," says The Daily Mail, "is calculated to endear his name to every Englishman, and we feel at such an hour what true sympathy means."

The Times says: "There is but one sentiment to-day in the hearts of English-speaking people throughout the world. Their eyes are turned in keen anxiety to the sickbed where lies the venerable sovereign, who commands not merely the loyalty but the personal affection of countless millions."

"It needs no great medical knowledge to understand the meaning of the latest bulletin. We must admit, however, that all our hopes and fears are alike based upon very imperfect knowledge. We can only await the result and bear the painful suspense with such calmness and fortitude as we are able to summon to our aid.

"History affords but few examples of rulers who have won the deep personal affection and regard enjoyed by our beloved Queen. Even among those not of our blood or speech, even among those who have little that is kind to say of the British people, there are unstinted sympathy and warm regard for the British Queen.

"Were we more like her, were our official and individual relations with foreigners carried on with more of her catholic urbanity and graciousness, who knows but that we, too, should win something of the kindly regard testified to-day in every foreign capital?"

Referring to the presence of the Kaiser, The Times says: "His presence is Germany's homage to those very human feelings and sympathies so uniformly displayed by the Queen. As such it will be understood here and be all the more honored and appreciated because it involves a certain lofty disregard of mere politics. As such we do not doubt it will be understood in all other countries, and it will be watched with respectful sympathy."

Similar testimony to Emperor William's touching action finds place in almost all the editorials.

The Standard says: "If the Queen were aware of the German Emperor's arrival, the circumstances could hardly fail to bring some satisfaction to her mind. It is a consolation in this hour of national distress to listen to the universal chorus of respectful esteem which her Majesty's illness has evoked abroad. In the United States the progress of the patient has been watched as anxiously as in London, and the bitterest critics of England have only words of respect for England's Queen."

The Morning Post says: "Out of the most reverent and profound respect for our sovereign we must stand silent before the sorrow which holds us. The love and admiration of her subjects are, unhappily, of no avail. Nothing in these dark days when sorrow is heavy on us will have so sweet an effect on the minds of the Queen's subjects throughout the world as the arrival of Emperor William."

The Daily Telegraph says: "A precious and beloved existence hovers at last upon the brink of the great mystery. A life of lives is drooping toward the valley of the shadow, and the empire waits in its silence and its sorrow.

"But beyond the empire are the unexampled sympathy, concern, and wonderful homage of mankind. Emperor William above all has expressed this wonderful feeling, not in word but in act, with a truth and fervor of natural affection which England will never forget. It is one of the saddest circumstances of the hour that Empress Frederick is not able to be present. Therefore Emperor William's presence is doubly dutiful, and at Osborne House it will be doubly dear."

Proceeding to refer in detail to the sympathy displayed in all parts of the globe, it says: "For the American people the character and domestic example of the Queen have been a consecration of the Anglo-Saxon ideal. They have been regarded as hardly less the possession of the United States than of ourselves, and they have gone far to restore the moral unity of the race and to heal the worst effects of its political separation."

It is worthy of note that even to-day the London papers do not mention by even the most veiled allusion the fact that the Queen has had a paralytic stroke. Pages are devoted to the mournful scenes at Osborne House and to descriptions of occurrences here, as well as to telegrams from the colonies and foreign countries, testifying to the sympathy everywhere evoked.

The South African war, the Chinese situation, and every other topic have been thrust aside and forgotten in the universal suspense

DEEP SYMPATHY IN IRELAND.

DUBLIN, Jan. 21.—A deep and very painful sensation followed the receipt of the alarming news from Osborne House. The newspapers yesterday published frequent editions, and their offices were besieged all day by anxious inquirers. The shock to the Irish people was all the greater because Queen Victoria, on her visit to Ireland last April, gave many instances of surprising vitality, and she was understood to have been greatly benefited by the tour.

The city yesterday wore an unwonted aspected of gloom, the streets being swept with continuous gusts of wind and rain.

The Nationalists have been generous in their expressions of sympathy, and the Nationalist press, on the whole, is respectfully silent. Only The Dublin Evening Telegraph offers an exception by making the Queen's illness the text of an attack upon the South African policy of the British Government.

Consternation in Cape Town.

CAPE TOWN, Jan. 20.—The news of Queen Victoria's illness caused consternation in Cape Town. Sir Alfred Milner and his staff attended service this morning in the cathedral, where prayers were offered for her Majesty's recovery.

DR. ANDREWS'S PROPHECY.

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 20.—Dr. E. Benjamin Andrews, Chancellor of the University of Nebraska, preached to-night at the First Baptist Church on the life of Queen Victoria. "She hath done what she could," was the text chosen.

The Chancellor spoke first of the Queen's great influence in elevating womanhood. He said she became a great woman power in the political world as well as in the home world.

The Chancellor predicted that after her death the empire would gradually disintegrate. Australia would first seek independence, and then South Africa, and perhaps Canada would follow. This, he thought, would come to pass because there was no likelihood of such another ruler as the Queen.

THE POPE SENDS A MESSAGE.

ROME, Jan. 21.—The Pope yesterday telegraphed Cardinal Vaughn in London to express to the British royal family the feeling of sorrow which all Christendom shared with England regarding the illness of Queen Victoria, adding:

"The liberal reign of the Queen, which has permitted the Catholic Church still to increase in the United Kingdom, will leave an indelible trace upon all Christian hearts."

Empress Frederick Much Depressed.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—A telegram from Kronberg, Prussia, announces the arrival there yesterday of Prince and Princess Henry of Prussia and the hereditary Princess of Saxe-Meiningen to stay with Dowager Empress Frederick, who is described as "terribly depressed" by the news of her mother's condition.

CONSTERNATION IN VIENNA.

VIENNA, Jan. 21.—The announcement of the dangerous illness of Queen Victoria caused a feeling of consternation in Vienna. Emperor Francis Joseph, who was profoundly moved, sent messages to the British Embassy yesterday for news.

It is believed that the great Court ball, fixed for to-day, (Monday,) will be countermanded. The Emperor, on receipt of a telegram from London last evening, immediately broke up a circle which had formed after the banquet at the Hofburg.

The Austrian papers publish touching tributes to the Queen's wonderful place in the affections of her people and the politics of the world.

"There can be no question," says the Neue Freie Presse, "that England is now on the eve of a great turning point in her fate. Russia is pressing her closely in Asia. France is inveterately hostile, while a fresh rival has sprung up in the shape of Imperial North America. Emperor William's visit to England, however, will inspire a hope that she need not fear the hostility of Germany."

PRAYERS FOR THE QUEEN.

At Grace Church yesterday the Rev. Dr. W. R. Huntington offered a special prayer for the speedy recovery to health of Queen Victoria, and in his sermon at the morning services paid a high tribute to her qualities as a woman and a Queen. The prayer follows:

"O Father of Mercies and God of all comfort, our only help in time of need, look down from heaven, we humbly beseech Thee, behold, visit, and relieve Thy sick servant Victoria, Queen of England. Look upon her with the eyes of Thy mercy, comfort her with a sense of Thy goodness, and for as much as in all appearance the time of her dissolution draweth near, so fit and prepare her, we beseech Thee, against the hour of death, that after her departure hence in peace and in Thy favor her soul may be received into Thine everlasting Kingdom, through the merits and mediation of Jesus Christ, Thine only Son, our Lord."

At the conclusion of his sermon Dr. Huntington alluded to the illness of Queen Victoria and what he characterized as the "Victorian age." He said:

"Of the great departments of human life, is there a single one to which Christ's word of power has failed to give a deeper tint and richer flavor? The family, the nation, science, art, literature, worship—these are the great institutes of human life—which of them has not the miraculous touch of the Son of God availed to fill with a richer meaning and to endow with an enhanced preciousness? Nor can we fail at this hour, when a whole world stands watching by a deathbed, to remember how wonderfully all these lines of movement have converged toward what will be known as the Victorian age.

"These three score years and three last passed—what miracles have they seen, what mighty works beheld! And at the centre of the group of leaders, ringed about as by a nimbus of discoverers, founders, pioneers, masters of statecraft, missionaries, theologians, conquerors in many fields, both of action and of thought, has stood a woman, a simple-hearted woman, a mother of children and of children's children, Queen and loyal wife.

"The mourning that attends upon her departure out of this life is a more impressive spectacle by far than was the military pageant that signalized the sixtieth anniversary of her accession.

"When historians look back, as, should the world last, look back they will, to these times of effort and struggle, of clouded belief and yet unfaltering hope, it were no strange thing to hear them say: 'The days of Victoria were as the days of both. The gates of a new world were opened, and man heard God's voice bidding him go in and possess the land promised of old time unto his fathers.'

"Because of all this we, a mingled company, gathered in a quiet church for timely worship, desire to join ourselves to the uncounted multitude of those who at this moment reverently await the passing of a soul, and in a deeper sense would cry aloud:

"'God save the Queen!'"

IN ST. ANN'S CHURCH, BROOKLYN.

In St. Ann's Protestant Episcopal Church-on-the-Heights, Brooklyn, prayer was offered for Queen Victoria at the service last evening. Just before pronouncing the benediction, the Rev. Dr. Reese F. Alsop, the rector, said:

"Let us join in offering prayer for Queen Victoria, who, if the last news I hear is correct, is in the article of death." He then prayed as follows:

"O Father of Mercies and God of all comfort, our only help in time of need; we fly unto Thee for succor in behalf of this Thy servant here lying under Thy hand in great weakness of body. Look graciously upon her, O Lord; and the more the outward man decayeth, strengthen her, we beseech Thee, so much the more continually with Thy grace and holy spirit in the inner man. And forasmuch as in all appearance the time of her dissolution is nsar, so fit and prepare her, we beseech Thee, against the hour of death that after her departure hence in peace, and in Thy favor, her soul may be received into Thine everlasting Kingdom; through the merits and mediation of Jesus Christ, Thine only Son, our Lord and Saviour. Amen."

VICTORIA AND WASHINGTON.

President Schurman of Cornell University and Bishop Potter addressed a large assemblage of students and college men in Calvary Church, at Fourth Avenue and Twenty-first Street, last evening, on "The Fundamental Factors in the Making of Manhood." The church was packed, principally with young men, to hear the two speakers. The auditorium had been elaborately draped and festooned with evergreens for the occasion, and college men wearing their gowns led the worshippers to seats.

During his address Bishop Potter, when leading up to the power of character merely, compared Queen Victoria to Washington.

"I was passing one of the great newspaper offices to-day," said he, "and observed the bulletin on one of the bulletin boards that the Queen was dying. What sad and startling news! Greatness does not mean always what one does. It sometimes means what one is.

"The Queen has not achieved great things in the line of literature, science, or art, and yet she has been a great factor in this world for good. It was so with Washington. Washington was not a man of genius, you know. His greatness was in his strength of character. Nelson said that the greatest achievement of war was 'to do his duty.' The Queen did her duty."

Prof. Schurman began by impressing upon the students the value of taking care of their health.

"The student should take care of his health," he said. "We have come in our time to hear of a physical war. Nothing could be more in the line of Christian education.

"The connection between good morals and health is a close one. Nothing emphasizes this better than the rules of living required for oarsmen. If a man fails to live correctly, fails to be regular in his habits or his meals, nobody notices it quicker than does the trainer of a crew.

"Another factor requisite in the making of manhood is work. We are here not merely to enjoy ourselves, but to work. It's a great mistake to call work a curse; it's a blessing. The adage that 'Satan finds work for idle hands to do, is a very old but a very true one.

"I wish to emphasize also fidelity to ideals—the placing of the useful above the pleasant. This is an age of insatiable pleasure. Make for truth and righteousness."

PRINCE OF WALES INTERVIEW.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—The following is the substance of an interview with the Prince of Wales, which is to appear shortly in a London magazine. There is every reason to believe it is perfectly genuine, and it is understood to be the first interview in which his Royal Highness has been directly quoted:

A correspondent who had been privileged to meet the Prince of Wales on more than one occasion had an interview with him at Marlborough House, his Royal Highness's London residence, some days ago. The Prince talked with great frankness concerning himself and his views on various subjects.

If any one ever deserved the appellation of "a busy man," the Prince does. There are few city merchants or business men who work harder than he does, and even the London public has no idea of the quantity of work he gets brought in the course of a day. It is only by following a most methodical arrangement that he is able to do so much as he does in the time. As a matter of fact, all his engagements are made weeks and sometimes months ahead, and every hour, almost every minute, is mapped out for him.

When the correspondent was ushered into his study at Marlborough House the Prince was seated at an old-fashioned pedestal writing desk, the fac simile of the one used by his father, the Prince Consort, which was piled high with papers and documents of all descriptions. He wore a black morning coat and vest, dark-gray trousers, square-fronted collar, with a white-spotted black bow tie and patent leather shoes, and in his fingers he held the inevitable cigar. His greeting was kindness in the extreme. It was like an elderly business man smiling a kindly welcome to some young and daring intruder.

"Well, what do you want me to say?" was his Royal Highness's query as soon as the preliminary greetings were over.

The correspondent launched forth his questions, beginning with inquiries about the numerous public dinners which the Prince attended, and alluding to the published statement that the Prince held the record for obtaining the largest sum of money ever collected at one banquet.

"Yes. That's quite correct. I certainly hold the record in that respect," said the Prince. "And presiding at dinners for the benefit of charities, especially Masonic ones, is almost a pleasure to me; the only part which I do not like about the proceedings is when the dinner drags itself out to a considerable length. That I do not like, and when dining in private at home the meal seldom takes more than an hour."

"I have read many times in reports of dinners, &c., at which you Royal Highness has been present," said the correspondent; "that you were continually smiling during the proceedings and seemed to be enjoying yourself very much."

"Yes," replied the Prince, a shade of weariness creeping into his eyes, "that is where I act. If only you knew how terribly bored I am by the inordinate length of some of these dinners and the speeches, and how I am all the time longing to get away, you would be really sorry for me. But, there—I musn't say too much on that subject."

"With regard to horse racing and betting, your Royal Highness?"

"I think horse racing is the finest sport in the world, and I only regret that it should be harmed by the amount of betting which goes on. Personally, I am strongly averse to the practice, and I always use what influence I possess to discountenance it among my personal friends, especially when it is made a regular practice and the stakes are large."

"There are many people who think your Royal Highness has a very easy life of it, and that the hardest duties which you have to perform are attending State functions, &c."

"Now, here is some information for you," said the Prince. "Do you know that I myself see every letter which is addressed to me, and in the majority of instances dictate the reply? When the mail arrives in the morning it is opened by my secretary's staff and sorted into three groups—letters from personal friends and relatives, those bearing on State affairs, and, thirdly, begging letters and petitions, &c.—and I make it my business to make myself aware of the contents of each. This of itself is no light task, when you take into consideration the fact that each morning's mail consists of some hundreds of letters. So that those who say mine is an idle life malign me."

Asked his opinion on the South African war, his Royal Highness smilingly shook his head and refused to be drawn out, but he said that he should always remember with the deepest affection and regard the heroic conduct of the troops in the campaign.

"One more question," said the correspondent; "what is your Royal Highness's favorite recreation?"

"Shooting," he replied, unhesitatingly. "There is nothing I like better than a good day's shoot. It seems the only thing which takes me out of myself and makes me forget the cares and responsibilities of my position."

There was one more remark that the Prince made, which will be of interest, as it bears on the America's Cup, for, although his Royal Highness has not taken so much interest in yacht racing since he sold the Britannia, he openly confesses that "there are few things which I would like better than to see the America's Cup come home again."

DUCK HUNTER FINDS DEATH.

Jumped from His Boat as It Was Going Over Niagara Falls.

Special to The New York Times.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Jan. 20.—Another river fatality must be added to the already horrible record Niagara has made, the result of boating accidents above the falls. The latest victim is John Weisen, a machinist, aged about thirty-five years, married, who leaves a wife and three children to mourn his death and his foolhardiness in going duck hunting on such a dangerous stream as the Upper Niagara in mid-winter.

This morning Wiesen and a companion named Joseph E. Marsh started out from Schlosser Dock in a small rowboat after ducks. They headed toward midstream and were well out in the river when they had their first shot. Some of the birds were brought down, and they pulled hard to save them from the current. In their rush one of the oars was lost and they could not recover it, so fast did the current carry it away from them.

With the one oar they tried their best to reach the New York shore, and the high wind helped them. However, they were too low down in the river to beat the current's force in speeding them toward the falls, and when opposite Fort Day it was evident to them and to people on shore that their lives were in danger.

One of the men was seen to leave the boat and try to make his way over the floating ice. Time after time he fell into the water, but each time he regained his feet and worked nearer shore. When within 75 or 100 feet, he came to an opening, and people on shore called to him to swim. Into the water he fell and swam toward the shore. Just as he was about to sink a long pole was reached out to him, and he was pulled out on the ice more dead than alive. He was carried into a house on the river bank and revived.

The rescued man was Marsh. His companion, Wiesen, still clung to the boat when Marsh leaped out, and it has been learned that he could not swim. Down the river the boat and Wiesen went, he watching Marsh's efforts. When he saw him pulled out he leaped into the ice and water, thinking he, too, might be able to save himself that way. It was a vain hope. He made a heroic fight for life in full view of a number of persons on shore, but being unable to swim, he soon disappeared under the ice floe, to the horror of the onlookers but 100 feet away.

Some who witnessed the tragedy are of the opinion that had Wiesen clung to the boat he would have been saved before reaching the falls. The boat was seen to pass under the island bridge, and the men who saw it claim they could have thrown a line to an occupant had there been one at that time. The boat rode to the brink of the American Falls, over which it passed in good shape but somewhat broken. The spot where Wiesen sank from view makes it certain that he was carried over the falls within a few minutes. Bodies that pass over the falls are seldom recovered, especially at this season of the year, when there is so much ice on the rocks below.

The boat plunged over the falls very close to where Peter Schemm of Philadelphia went over a few years ago.

GIRL'S MYSTERIOUS DEATH.

Her Body Found in Hotel Room with Apparently Demented Man.

Margaret Travis, a nurse in St. Luke's Home, at One Hundred and Fourteenth Street and Amsterdam Avenue, was found last night lying dead in Tryboid's Hotel, at One Hundred and Twenty-second Street and the Boulevard, while the man with whom she entered the hotel the night before, who is supposed to be Clarence A. Davis, who had been engaged to her, was wandering about the room in which she lay apparently insane.

The couple entered the hotel at 11 o'clock on Saturday night. The man registered as A. L. Smith of Troy. Nothing was seen of them about the hotel all day yesterday, and at 10 o'clock last night Tryboid, the proprietor began to wonder what had become of them. After repeated knockings at their door had failed to elicit any response it was forced open.

The woman was found lying across the bed partially dressed, while the man was wandering about the room in an aimless way muttering to himself in an undertone. When questioned as to who the woman was he gave no answer, but continued muttering to himself. A policeman was called in who took the man in charge after he had summoned an ambulance from the J. Hood Wright Hospital.

GOLDFISH FROZEN AT A FIRE.

The fine colonial mansion at the corner of One Hundred and Forty-sixth Street and Girard Avenue, the home of Olin J. Stevens, was heavily damaged last night by fire caused by a defective flue. The loss is said to be $7,000.

Mr. Frazer, a brother-in-law of Mr. Stevens, was sitting at an open fireplace in the library reading, when he noticed smoke in the room. Next he saw a tiny tongue of flame playing about the picture molding. Mr. Stevens was notified and he telephoned to Police Headquarters, which notified Engine No. 41, at Third Avenue and One Hundred and Forty-seventh Street. In the meantime the members of the household, eleven in all, did what they could to carry out valuable things, but the smoke finally compelled them to desist, and they found refuge at the home of Mr. Stevens's brother, G. W. Stevens, on Girard Avenue.

Engine No. 41 was delayed, as it had to go all the way up to One Hundred and Forty-ninth Street to get over the New York Central Railroad track bridge. More delay was caused by a frozen hydrant.

Capt. Holahan set some of his men to thaw out the frozen hydrant, and with others rescued what property he could. Some of the men carried out a splendid aquarium of goldfish and carefully deposited its on the lawn. They did not spill a drop of the water, which speedily froze into a block of crystal ice with disastrous results to its finny tenants.

Policeman Mallon of the Alexander Avenue Station slipped up on some ice and cut his hands so badly that he had to go to Harlem Hospital to have his wounds dressed.

BANK DIRECTORS IN DANGER.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Jan. 20.—The little town of Wathena, Kan., just across the Missouri River, is in a panic over the wrecking of the State bank, whose cashier, Frank Harpster, blew out his brains and thus escaped lynching at the hands of the townspeople, more than 250 of whom are rendered penniless by the wild-cat speculations of the cashier with the bank's funds.

It is definitely known that Harpster squandered $130,000 of the money in the bank, and how much more it is impossible to tell at present. The feeling against the Board of Directors of the bank is very bitter, and it only requires a leader to attempt to inflict capital punishment upon them because they permitted Harpster to loot the bank. When the statements for the Bank Commissioner were prepared by the cashier the Directors signed them without ever instituting an inquiry as to their correctness.

The Directors, in a statement issued today, say they owned but ten of the fifty shares of the bank, and that the head cashier owned the other forty. They aver that it was not their business to question the acts of the cashier.

Bank Commissioner Briedenthal will endeavor to get the Directors together tomorrow to agree on a receiver for the institution. Some of the Directors are terror-stricken, and it may be difficult to hold a meeting in the town for fear of vengeance at the hands of the ruined depositors.

Harpster squandered nearly the whole of the bank's funds in bucket shops of this city. Fred Dubach, who gave Harpster his start in life, had $2,000 in cash Saturday and deposited it half an hour before the bank closed forever. Harpster had no confidants. His intimate friends knew nothing of his speculations.

PROPOSED TAX MEASURES

Trust Companies, Banks, and Insurance Companies Affected.

MAY YIELD ABOUT $3,600,000

To be Laid on Surplus and Undivided Profits—Mortgages to be Relieved If These Bills Pass.

ALBANY, Jan. 20.—A bill will be introduced by Merton E. Lewis of Monroe to relieve mortgages from taxation, and it is known that Gov. Odell will sign it immediately if the Legislature, in addition, passes the proposed bills to tax the surplus and undivided profits of trust companies, banks, and insurance companies. Such bills probably will be introduced in the Senate and Assembly during the current week. The measures will provide for an annual tax of 1 per cent. on trust and insurance companies and one-half of 1 per cent. on banking corporations.

Basing computations on the latest returns by the State Banking and Insurance Departments, it is estimated that the total revenue from this source, if the State proves able to reach all the surplus and undivided profits, will be in the neighborhood of $3,600,000 each year. Added to the excise collections, the fund gathered from the transfer tax on estate and the tax for organization of corporations, the total will pay the State tax and do away with direct taxation for State purposes.

It is estimated that revenue will be collected from the several classes of banks and corporations as follows:

Trust companies	$898,259
State and private banks	144,326
Savings banks	576,908
Life insurance companies	1,647,259
New York State Fire and Marine Insurance Companies	320,882
New York State Mutual Insurance Companies	7,359
Total	$3,594,993

The revenue may be greatly reduced, as the insurance companies claim that their surplus is of a character entirely different from that of a banking corporation or a trust company, and therefore should not in equity be taxed under the same conditions. Both the life and fire insurance company representatives maintain that position and announce that they will fight any attempt to tax what they declare to be a reserve fund for the protection of persons who carry insurance in their companies.

The only company, it is said, which reports a surplus, as such, to the State Insurance Department, is the Equitable Life Assurance Company. The other companies declare their surplus to be reserve funds kept for the benefit of depositors and to be drawn from when grave emergencies arise; in the case of large conflagrations, with fire companies, and epidemics with life companies.

Furthermore, they hold that the surplus is held for and contributed to by not only the insured of this State, but of other States and countries and that it is unjust to tax the money of non-residents which is only held in trust in this State. They likewise point out the possibility of other States following the example set and imposing multi-

POSTAL TUBULAR SYSTEM

Merchants' Association Protests Against Its Discontinuance.

President King Sends a Letter to the New York Delegation in Congress Asking for Its Maintenance.

The daily papers printed a dispatch on Thursday from Washington to the effect that the Post Office Committee of the House of Representatives had reported the Post Office bill carrying appropriations for the current year, but that they had declined to report any appropriation for even the maintenance of the postal tubular system now in use in this city, Brooklyn, Boston, and Philadelphia, thus entirely ignoring the reports in favor of the extension of the system in the cities where it is already in operation and the installation of it in other cities.

A report covering this subject was made recently by a special committee appointed by the Postmaster General, consisting of Theodore C. Search, President of the National Association of Manufacturers; Prof. R. H. Thurston, Director of Sibley College, Cornell University, Ithaca; S. Cristy Mead, Assistant Secretary of the Merchants' Association of New York; Alfred Brooks Fry, Chief Engineer and Superintendent of Repairs of United States Public Buildings, New York; Frederick A. Halsey, M. E., associate editor of The American Machinist, New York; William T. Manning, C. E., Baltimore, and Lymon E. Cooley, C. E., Chicago.

The committee met in Philadelphia under orders of the Postmaster General and held sessions covering a period of ten days, working day and night. The committee examined all the testimony which had been given to committees on the subject of pneumatic tube service, and made a report to the Postmaster General covering 258 printed pages of a pamphlet, in which all details concerning this subject were set forth with great particularity.

So far as New York is concerned, this committee recommended that the proposed extensions be undertaken. The extensions proposed were fully set forth in a previous report made by the Second Assistant Postmaster General. The committee also reported in favor of extensions in other cities in which the service is in operation, and for its installation in some cities where it has not yet been placed. The entire report was indorsed unqualifiedly, first, by the Second Assistant Postmaster General, and subsequently indorsed by the Postmaster General, the latter official transmitting the entire report to Congress, under date of Jan. 4, 1901.

Notwithstanding this, the Post Office Committee of the House of Representatives apparently failed to take the provisions of this report into account, or else ignored the report altogether.

On the day on which the action of the Post Office Committee of the House of Representatives was made public, the Merchants' Association wrote to the Hon. Eugene F. Loud, member of Congress from California, Chairman of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, protesting emphatically against the failure of his committee to provide for the maintenance of the present postal tubular system, to say nothing of its extension. A summary of the protest is contained in the following paragraph of that letter, dated Dec. 16:

We desire herein to protest emphatically against the discontinuance of the service, and hope that your committee will see its way clear to reconsider this matter or to recommend any amendment which will cover the subject.

ARGUMENT FOR THE SYSTEM.

The Merchants' Association of New York has prepared an argument in favor of the maintenance and extension of this postal tubular system in New York. The principal points and arguments are embodied in the following letter, which has been sent by mail to all the members of the New York delegation in Congress, including T. C. Platt and Chauncey M. Depew, Senators from this State. Copies are also being mailed to all members of Congress in both houses, to the President of the United States, to the members of his Cabinet, to all trade publications issued in this city, and to the leading commercial bodies in over sixty cities throughout the United States. The letter is signed by William P. King, President of the Merchants' Association of New York, and is as follows:

To the Members of the New York Delegation in Congress:

Gentlemen: We notice by the accounts in the daily press that from the Post Office Appropriation bill, as reported by the Committee on Post Office and Post Roads of the House of Representatives, has been eliminated all appropriation not only for the extension, but likewise for the maintenance of the present postal tubular system now in use under contract by the Post Office Department.

The Merchants' Association of New York includes in its membership about 1,100 business and manufacturing concerns in the City of New York and nearly 35,000 such concerns throughout the country, exclusive of its New York membership.

As a commercial organization representing such vast and diversified interests, we most emphatically protest against the action of the House committee in failing to provide for the maintenance and proper extension of the pneumatic tubular service in connection with the Post Office Department.

The Government of the United States has assumed, and very properly, to create for itself an absolute monopoly of the postal business. As competition in this business is impossible, the citizens and business men of this country have a right to expect and demand that the most approved, most accurate, and most speedy methods of transportation of mail shall be furnished by the Government for the benefit of the country as a whole.

The Government has been every energy to the improvement of the railroad and steamship transportation of mails and has succeeded admirably. Vast sums of money are spent for the purpose of securing such speedy transportation, but the time thus gained is oftentimes absolutely lost through delays arising in the transportation through the large cities, which are practically postal clearing houses for the whole country. This condition of affairs has been proved by actual experience to be best eliminated by the employment of the pneumatic tubular service in such cities. Without such service in these large cities, delays occur with great frequency, due not only to the loss of time in transmission, which the pneumatic tubes prevent because of the constancy as well as rapidity of such transmission, but further due to the fact that the transmission of such mails by wagon service a vast bulk is dumped upon the Post Office at a given time, which creates a congestion in the Post Office and prevents the highest degree of efficiency and the greatest return to the Government from the labor employed.

Business conditions in this country have changed tremendously in recent years. Competition has grown keener and keener, and profits have necessarily grown smaller and smaller. New trade centres have sprung up all over the country, and the sections in which these trade centres must find their markets have grown wider and wider in extent. This has resulted in the absolute necessity of transacting a large proportion of the business of the country by correspondence. Any delay in the correspondence means loss of time in commercial transactions; loss of time means loss of money.

Speaking locally, an exclusive wagon service, with its slower methods and its inability to blockades on the street due to parades, mobs, inclement weather, &c., taken in connection with the operation of the mandatory eight-hour law, causes frequent delays in the delivery of local mail. It has been no uncommon thing in the past to have a letter in New York City require twenty-four hours for delivery at a point not more than twelve or fifteen blocks from the point of origin.

Speaking in regard to the domestic commerce, primarily from the standpoint of New York, we desire to call your attention to the fact that this city is located on the seaboard; that its domestic market must be sought practically in one direction, namely, westward, that in order to find a market for the tremendous commercial interests centred in this city the business must be transacted at great distances, and largely through the use of the mails. The same thing applies with similar force to other cities and trade centres on the seaboard, and, with perhaps a little less force, to all trade centres in the interior of the United States.

Speaking concerning our foreign commerce, we further invite your particular attention to the recent growth and progress of our manufacturing industries, which, producing in general more than the markets of this country can consume, must, in order to maintain its prosperity and future success, and to insure the development of our country, seek and obtain markets in foreign fields. The proof of this lies in the fact that during the past two to three years tremendous strides have been made in our export business. Practically all of this foreign business must be transacted by mail. It is in connection with foreign mail matter particularly that the pneumatic tube service is of immense importance in this city, and of equal importance in every other city which acts as a postal clearing house. The manufacturer or merchant residing in a small town in the interior is just as largely benefited as one residing in a city in which the tubular service is established, because the speed and accurate transmission of his mail matter to other portions of the country, and to foreign countries is dependent upon the accuracy and speed of the transmission of that mail matter through the postal clearing houses in the large cities. Therefore it is that the establishment and proper extension of pneumatic tube service is essential to the development and transaction of the commercial business of the whole country, and it is futile for the Government to spend the vast amounts of money it is spending for speedy railroad and steamship transmission of mail if it does not strengthen and put on an equal basis as to speed and accuracy the connecting links existing in the large cities through which the bulk of the mail of the country passes.

We therefore call upon you, as representing in Congress the Empire State of New York and the Imperial City of New York, to bend every energy to obtain a proper appropriation not only for the maintenance of the present tubular service in the Post Office Department, but also for its proper extension, as set forth in the report of the General Committee transmitted to Congress as a part of his report by the Postmaster General.

As to the terms and conditions upon which the Government should provide these facilities we have no interest. We feel that we have the right to demand that the Government supply them, leaving to the Government, through Congress and the Post Office Department, the solution of the question as to how they should be provided and upon what terms.

We consider the elimination of this service from the Post Office Department not only as a step backward in the development of the department, but as a direct and tremendous blow to the growing trade and commerce of our country—local, domestic, and foreign. We therefore most earnestly urge you to do everything in your power to cause to be inserted in the Post Office Appropriation bill the necessary appropriation for the maintenance and extension of the postal tubular system, leaving to Congress and to the department all questions as to terms and conditions.

IN FOREIGN LANDS.

THE THREATENING ASPECT OF MACEDONIA.—A summary of advices from Vienna and St. Petersburg presented in these columns a fortnight since, and interpreted in the light of certain revelations made by an agent of the Macedonian Committee in Paris, tended to show that while Russo-Austro-Hungarian intervention in the affairs of the Balkans probably prevented war, at the time, between Bulgaria and Roumania, the anti-Turkish feeling in the Balkans had by no means subsided, but was being constantly augmented by the misrule of the Ottoman authorities in Macedonia. It is now learned that the Belgian Government has communicated to St. Petersburg the fact that it would no longer be held responsible for the alarming condition of affairs in the Turkish province, since the Macedonian committees can no longer be controlled from Sofia, but it also informed the Czar that the first change made in the status of Crete, the Sultan will seize the opportunity to massacre the Greek inhabitants of Macedonia. And it is added that it is to prevent such a calamity that the Greeks in the province are now arming themselves. It is also reported in Sofia that within the last two months the Turkish garrisons in the province have been almost doubled, and that on every occasion Greeks are humiliated and persecuted.

The tone of the Bulgarian note is interpreted in Vienna to mean that an outbreak is likely to occur before the Spring, which may result in the destruction of the status quo in the Balkans unless the Russo-Austro-Hungarian entente undertakes to elaborate its policy and to make representations in Constantinople which shall cause the Ottoman authorities to cease persecuting their Hellenic subjects. The Roumanie, one of the leading organs of Bukharest, recently contained an inspired article which, while laying bare the Turkish scheme in Macedonia, added that the influence of the Kingdom of Greece was in part responsible for the condition of affairs there, just as it had been for the revolution in Crete four years ago. And it significantly adds:

"In former years the inhabitants of the Ionian Islands, although well governed and fairly prosperous under the sceptre of her Britannic Majesty, constantly looked toward the centre of Hellenism, and, forgetting what they owed to England, manifested their earnest desire for union with their mother country. History repeats itself. It appears that the protecting powers have realized this historic necessity, and that they have, perhaps with certain reservations, consented to its accomplishment. Thus nothing else is spoken of in Athens but the approaching departure of the foreign contingents from Crete and the dispatch of Greek troops for the maintenance of order in the island. This will practically amount to union."

Coincident with this intelligence Athenian papers are declaring that while having full faith in the ultimate designs of the powers in regard to Crete, the Greek Government will not remain inactive should a massacre of men of Greek blood occur in Macedonia.

***

DEATH OF THE ORIGINATOR OF THE ALABAMA.—There died in Liverpool the other day a well-known broker on the local Cotton Exchange, named Capt. J. D. Bulloch. His death took place at the home of his daughter, who is married to a Liverpool Alderman. His son is an officer in the British Navy. This is the Capt. Bulloch who in 1861 resigned a Captaincy in the United States Navy, in order to go to Liverpool as the naval representative of the Confederate Government, and, owing to whose efforts the notorious Alabama was built and then commissioned under the Confederate flag. In 1883, Capt. Bulloch published a book under the title of "The Secret Service of the Confederate States in Europe; or How the Confederate Cruisers Were Equipped."

Capt. Bulloch was born in Georgia in 1823, his great-grandfather having been the first Governor of that State. His early years were spent in the American merchant marine, and in the early forties he entered the United States Navy and performed valuable service on the Pacific Coast.

On reaching Liverpool after the outbreak of the war between the North and the South, his first intention was to fit out a fleet that should be equal to any force that the United States Navy might send against it. This was finally abandoned. He then attempted to secure a fleet of swift cruisers, but found nothing suitable for sale. At length he succeeded in negotiating with Messrs. Laird of Birkenhead for the building of the Alabama. The vessel was almost completed before the British Government attempted to interfere, and when it was momentarily expected that the vessel would be apprehended, Capt. Bulloch himself, with his brother, Ingram Bulloch, took the Alabama out of the Mersey, and with a small crew navigated her to the Azores, where she was equipped with guns, stores, and coal from the Agrippina, which had preceded her from London.

***

THE ROBBERY OF UNITED STATES REGISTERED MAIL IN ITALY.—A cable dispatch dated Rome, Jan. 6, reported the robbery of five bags of registered mail while on the way between Turin and Rome, and that three of the stolen bags had come from New York. Inquiry at the New York Post Office showed that no official notification had been received in regard to the matter.

The Italian papers of the date in question present few additional details of the robbery, but declare that the robbers must have had aid from the guards, and that the Government has instituted a rigid investigation which is likely to lead to the apprehension of the robbers and the recovery of the booty.

The registered mail was particularly heavy, it is said, with the new year, many Italian immigrants in this country are accustomed to send remittances to those who are dependent upon them in the old country, and the form that these remittances usually take consists in lira notes purchased here and transmitted in registered letters.

The bags pillaged contained correspondence from Paris for Palmero and from New York and Boston for Naples and Palermo. When the mail was made up at Turin it was found that the ordinary van was full, so that thirty-nine bags, including one containing letters for the British Mediterranean Squadron, were placed in a second-class compartment, the doors of which were regularly sealed. The theft was discovered only upon the arrival of the train in Rome, when the contents of nearly 100 registered letters from America, valued at between $40,000 and $60,000, were found to have been abstracted from the second-class compartment. The bag containing the British mail was untouched.

***

ENCOURAGING STATE OF THE SPANISH REVENUE.—The Madrid Gazette of recent date contains a statement which, it is said, cannot fail to give satisfaction to all persons who have financial or commercial relations with Spain. It is the report of the revenue returns between Jan. 1 and Dec. 1, 1900, which amount to 850,850,565 pesetas, (about $130,000,000,) a sum which exceeds the collections for the same period of 1899 by 36,183,035 pesetas. It is thus computed that the total revenue for the entire year will yield nearly 1,000,000,000 pesetas.

Commercial and financial circles on the Continent consider that these figures are worthy of attention, as they show a considerable increase over the income of 1899, and do away with the apprehension felt during the Barcelona troubles last Summer. But more particularly is the report deemed of importance because of the notable excess of the revenue over the budget estimates, and Dec. 1, 1900, it is believed that the total returns for the whole year, while they may not reach 1,000,000,000 pesetas, cannot fall below 967,000,000 pesetas, which would show a surplus for last year of 36,000,000 pesetas.

***

THE BELGIAN POST OFFICE TO BE A CLEARING HOUSE FOR MERCHANTS.—The Belgian Postal Department is about to institute a system by which it will undertake to settle differences between debtors and creditors which are now adjusted by the interchange of numerous remittances back and forth. It aims at establishing a sort of public Clearing House under State control, which, while for a time it may be only availed of by merchants of acknowledged standing, is capable of expanding so as to include all moneyed transactions, such as between landlord and tenant and between the Government, its employes, and third parties. For several years the Belgian Post Office has been successfully used as a collecting agency, but the new system, it is believed, will be a great improvement even on this convenience.

For example, a merchant has 200 small accounts due to him in various parts of the country, amounting to some $5,000. Instead of sending him, as at present, a separate advice as each amount is paid, or, as we would say, as each draft is honored, the Post Office will simply carry the total amount of $5,000 to his credit in the National Bank of Belgium. He will not be required to give separate receipts to his debtors, as the original schedule filled in by him at the Post Office serves as a formula for completing all record of the transactions to which the separate items refer.

SUPPOSED DEAD MAN RETURNS.

James O'Neill of Plainfield Was Away at Work, and Not Buried.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Jan. 20.—Friends of James O'Neill in Plainfield, who supposed him to be dead and buried, were startled yesterday by his appearance in town in good health. O'Neill formerly worked as a molder in the Pond Machine Tool Company's shops, but had not been in town in several weeks, when one morning, three months ago, the remains of a man who had been struck by a train on the Central Railroad were found near Clinton Avenue. Several of the shopmates of O'Neill called at the Morgue and identified the dead man as O'Neill and a former sweetheart of the latter, living at High Bridge, also came to Plainfield and positively identified the dead man as O'Neill. The latter's family in Philadelphia were notified and the remains were sent to that city and interred in the family plot in the cemetery.

All this time O'Neill was in Mount Carmel, Penn., working at his trade as molder. After the remains supposed to have been his were interred by his sorrowing relatives, O'Neill learned of the episode, and started for Philadelphia to let his folks know of the mistake. At Germantown O'Neill was mistaken for a soldier who had deserted from the army, and was arrested and locked up. It took him several days to correct this error, but he finally got to Philadelphia and explained the mistake that had been made.

Since that time he has been stopping with his relatives, and yesterday he appeared in Plainfield and called upon his old friends. Many of them who did not know that the dead man identified as O'Neill was another person were dumfounded when the supposed dead man paid them a visit.

SHOT IN HIS STATION HOUSE.

Policeman Fell and Pistol Was Discharged—Died of the Wound.

Policeman James Holton of the Eightieth Precinct, died at the S. R. Smith Infirmary at New Brighton, S. I., last night as the result of an accidental wound of a pistol bullet which he received Tuesday morning.

Holton was descending the stairs in the station house at Stapleton to answer early morning roll call when his revolver slipped from his pocket and fell on the stairs. A cartridge was discharged and the bullet lodged in his groin. Holton was fifty-four years old, and had been a policeman for eighteen years. He leaves a wife and one daughter.

TRAMP THIEF'S ADVENTURES.

Caught with Handcuffs On, and His Pockets Full of "Tutti Frutti."

WALDWICK, N. J., Jan. 20.—On Friday night a tramp broke into the Allendale station and was caught in the act of robbing the chewing gum machine. While a heavy freight was rumbling past the station he jumped out of a window and ran toward the village. A passenger standing at the station fired several shots at him which failed to reach him.

The ticket agent was aroused and a search was made for the offender. He was caught in the switchman's shanty at Waldwick yards. Constable Goldscheins, who is also the village blacksmith, took the thief to his house for the night, as the nearest lock-up was at Ridgewood, too far to walk, as the officer was sorely afflicted with rheumatism. After giving the prisoner a hearty meal in the morning he told him to get ready for the trip to the lockup. The prisoner asked permission to go outside for a moment. He jumped over the back fence, telling the officer to shoot if he wanted to. The Constable leveled an ancient revolver at him, but it would not go off.

Last night the Erie detectives recaptured the tramp at Suffern with the handcuffs still on and his pockets full of "tutti frutti." He was safely lodged in the Hackensack Jail. He gave his name as John Bright.

SAYS IT LEFT HIM PIEBALD.

Frank Britton Wants $25,000 Damages from Manufacturers of a Hair Vigor.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Jan. 20.—Frank Britton, a well-known insurance agent of this city, has brought suit against a chemical company which manufactures a hair vigor. He asks $25,000 damages for alleged injuries.

Mr. Britton's story of the affair which leads up to the suit is that he went to a local drug store and purchased a bottle of a much advertised preparation for use on the hair. His hair was turning gray and falling out. The vigor was supposed to stop the loss of hair and cause gray hair to return to its natural color.

When he applied it, Mr. Britton says, some of it ran down the cheek from in front of his ear to his chin and burned a red streak there which he has not been able to get rid of. That portion of the preparation which he rubbed on his hair, he claims, caused it to turn a dark red. Later in spots the hair turned gray, giving him, as he says, a decidedly piebald appearance.

He also claims to have rubbed some of the stuff on a couple of spots on his chin where the beard did not grow well, and he says the result was that the "vigor" destroyed his beard and left his chin as smooth and devoid of hair as a billiard ball.

He also alleges that a chemical analysis of the contents of the bottle showed it to contain an excess of one ingredient as shown by similar tests of the contents of a number of other bottles.

CHASED HIM IN SLIPPERS.

Manager Reilly Catches an Alleged Thief After a Cold Run.

John Bradley, colored, twenty years old, who said he had no home, was held for trial in bail of $1,000 in the Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday on a charge of larceny. The complainant in the case was John T. Reilly, manager of the Waldau, a fashionable apartment house at 38 Washington Square West, who charged the prisoner with having stolen a package of laundry and a bundle of letters from the rack in the office of the building shortly before midnight Saturday night.

After the janitor had gone home, Manager Reilly started on a tour through the building. He was down in the basement when he heard a noise on the first floor. He went upstairs, where he saw Bradley leaving the office in the vestibule. The boy darted out the front door into the street, and Reilly, clad only in bathrobe and slippers, followed. The chase led into Fourth Street and down Sixth Avenue to a saloon, into which the prisoner ran. He ran out the side door, and followed by Reilly, started back on his tracks, going up Sixth Avenue again.

In the bitter cold of Saturday night the chase lasted for some minutes. Reilly was about to reach out and grasp the fleeing colored boy when Bradley suddenly stopped, dodged, and started back down Sixth Avenue. Reilly slipped and fell full length on the sidewalk, and Bradley continued his run. Policeman Henry of the Mercer Street Station appeared and Bradley was arrested.

Good Health means broad-soled shoes—a living out of doors, and—naturally enough—a bottle of

Evans' Ale

with the well-earned dinner. Right living and Evans' Ale go together.

A NEW HOTEL BRUNSWICK.

Ex-Secretary Olney and Other Prominent Men Said to be Interested in It.

It is proposed to erect an eighteen-story hotel on the site of the old Hotel Brunswick, at Fifth Avenue and Twenty-sixth Street. The task has been undertaken by the Brunswick Hotel Company, of which Richard Olney, ex-United States Secretary of State; Oliver Ames of Boston, and Charles T. Barney of 101 East Thirty-eighth Street are the Directors.

The building will take in the entire frontage on Fifth Avenue from Twenty-sixth Street to Twenty-seventh Street, and also the I. Townsend Burden house on Twenty-sixth Street and a stable on Twenty-seventh Street. Plans prepared by Henry Ives Cobb have been approved. The building will be absolutely fire-proof and contain 900 rooms.

Charles T. Barney said to a NEW YORK TIMES reporter last night: "I believe the hotel will be built, but just how soon work will be begun will depend upon how subscriptions come in. The books will close on Feb. 15 at the offices of the Knickerbocker Trust Company, in this city, and the American Loan and Trust Company of Boston. One-half of the sum subscribed is to be paid in when the title to the land is approved and the balance in installments upon the call of the Directors. Four per cent. interest will be allowed on all payments until the building is completed.

"The Hotel Touraine, in Boston, was constructed on similar plans, and the undertaking has proved very successful. The stock is quoted at 120, and has always paid 6 per cent. One million dollars of the money raised will be used in furnishing the hotel and providing a working capital.

"No hotel men are thus far interested in the scheme, and the company will select a man to manage the property. We think the site an excellent one for hotel purposes."

According to the prospectus issued by the company, the financial plans are: Total investment, land, buildings, &c., $4,750,000; mortgage, $2,500,000; 22,500 shares at $100 each, $2,250,000; rental, $285,000; 4 per cent. interest on $2,500,000 mortgage, $100,000; 5 per cent. interest on $2,250,000 stock, $112,500. Under this plan the total interest on mortgage and stock would be $212,500, thus leaving a surplus of $72,500.

A second plan which the Directors reserve the right to adopt if in their judgment it seems advisable is as follows:

Investments, land, building, &c., $4,750,000; mortgage of $3,000,000 at 4½ per cent.; stock, $1,750,000; net rental, $285,000; interest on mortgage, $135,000; interest on stock at 5 per cent., $87,500.

If this plan be adopted the surplus would be $62,500.

KIDNAPPERS GET $500.

Alabama Father Gives Up the Money, but His Son Does Not Return as Per Agreement.

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 20.—N. H. Fraser of Union Springs, Ala., whose son Bass was kidnapped several weeks ago while a student at the Technology School here, has apparently lost $500 by a decoy letter sent him.

Mr. Fraser received a letter stating that if he would place $500 in gold, the amount he offered for his son, in a sack with a peck of potatoes and proceed along the road near the United States Federal Prison, several miles from this city, he would be met by a negro who would ask, "Massa, has you got dem potaters?"

He was to deliver the sack and its contents to the negro, and his son would appear at a hotel in this city looking for his father at an early hour Sunday morning.

The letter was signed "Packard," mailed in Atlanta, Jan. 16, and the instructions were minute and specific.

Mr. Fraser's son, a brother of the kidnapped boy, carried out the plan of the letter, met the negro as arranged, gave him the money and potatoes Saturday night. This morning early he was at the hotel mentioned and has remained there all day, but Bass Fraser has not appeared and no trace of him or the persons who received the $500 can be found.

SHOT HIS WIFE'S LAWYER.

Cleveland Man Heard Woman Was Looking for a Divorce.

LA PORTE, Ind., Jan. 20.—Ellsworth E. Weir, a prominent attorney of this city, was shot and probably fatally injured tonight by Joseph W. Brill of Cleveland, Ohio. Brill, who had become estranged from his wife, who is well known here, had been advised that Mrs. Brill had consulted the lawyer with reference to bringing an action for divorce.

He came to La Porte and secured an interview with A. Weir, during which Brill became angered and shot the lawyer, the bullet passing through the body above the heart.

Mrs. Brill and her two children reside in Cleveland. Brill is said to have acquired a fortune in Mexican silver mines.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 20.—Joseph W. Brill, who is under arrest at La Porte, Ind., for shooting Ellsworth E. Wier, lives in a fine house on Euclid Avenue in this city. He has been in Cleveland about three years. The neighbors credit him with considerable wealth, and he is said to be the owner of a silver mine in Mexico. He has never been prominently known in business here. His family consists of his wife and three little daughters. His wife is prostrated by the news from Laporte.

Western Railway Deal Under Way.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—Plans for a complete absorption of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha Road by the Chicago and Northwestern system and the purchase of the Chicago Great Western by the Vanderbilt-Harriman-Morgan syndicate are under way. Controller Robinson of the Omaha has been summoned to New York by the Vanderbilts, who, it is understood, have sought his advice as to the absorption of the Omaha by the Northwestern. The Omaha system forms an important part of the Western lines of the Northwestern, and the idea in consolidating the two companies is to reduce operating expenses and simplify the bookkeeping.

Fear Judge Committed Suicide.

SUNCOOK, N. H., Jan. 20.—The family of Judge John B. Haselton, the Presiding Justice of the police court at Pembroke, have come to the conclusion that he committed suicide during Monday night by jumping from the steamer Tremont on the way from Boston to Portland. Several of Judge Haselton's effects were found in his stateroom. He went to Boston Jan. 10, promising he would return on the boat on the 12th. It is understood that Judge Haselton was despondent because of financial losses sustained through unfortunate investments in Western securities.

To Take Part in Asphalt Dispute.

SYRACUSE, Jan. 20.—Ex-Senator Frank Hiscock and Patrick Sullivan of this city leave to-morrow evening for Washington, where, before the State Department they will represent the Warner-Quinlan Asphalt Company of this city, to ascertain the course the Government is taking and will take in the asphalt dispute and to protest against the alleged partial attitude of Minister Loomis toward the trust.

Utah Man Accidentally Killed.

SALT LAKE, Utah, Jan. 20.—A special to The Tribune from St. George, Utah, says that Martin Wright, late Socialist candidate for Governor of Utah, who was

TWENTY-SIXTH ANNUAL STATEMENT OF THE

Provident Savings Life Assurance Society

OF NEW YORK.

EDWARD W. SCOTT, President.

JANUARY 1, 1901.

Total Payments to Policyholders Since Organization and Amount Now Held for Their Benefit

$22,655,892.00.

ASSETS.
Real Estate, Bonds and Mortgages	$890,357.61
United States, City and Railroad Bonds and Stocks	837,490.53
Loans to Policyholders on their Policies within the Legal Reserve	975,381 07
Loans on Collateral Securities	205,584.37
Deposits in Trust Companies and Banks at Interest	468,528.18
Quarterly and Semi-Annual Premiums (Deferred) not yet due. Reserve charged in Liabilities (net)	234,811.00
Premiums in Transit, Reserve charged in Liabilities (Net)	341,282.00
Accrued Interest, Rents, etc.	71,900.33
	$4,025,335.09

LIABILITIES.
Reserve for Policyholders (as per Certificate of New York Insurance Department)	$3,236,560.00
All other Liabilities	181,176.10
Total Liabilities	$3,417,736.10
Surplus as regards Policyholders	607,598.99
	$4,025,335.09

INCOME IN 1900.
Premiums	$3,429,537.86
Interest, Rents, etc.	160,829.38
	$3,590,367.24

DISBURSEMENTS IN 1900.
Payments to Policyholders	$1,630,557.53
Taxes, Rents, and all other Expenses	1,268 848 30
Excess Income over Disbursements	690,961.41
	$3,590,367.24

ADDED TO RESERVES FOR POLICYHOLDERS (1900) $755,099.00
DEATH LOSSES DUE AND UNPAID NONE
NEW INSURANCE WRITTEN $3,210,425.00

CERTIFICATE OF THE VALUATION OF POLICIES FOUR PER CENT.

State of New York Insurance Department.

Albany, January 9th, 1901.

I, FRANCIS HENDRICKS, Superintendent of Insurance of the State of New York, do hereby certify that the PROVIDENT SAVINGS LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY of the City of New York, in the State of New York, is duly authorized to transact the business of Life Insurance in this State.

I further certify that in accordance with the provisions of Section eighty-four of the Insurance Law of the State of New York, I have caused the policy obligations of the said Company, outstanding on the 31st day of December, 1900, to be valued as per the Combined Experience Table of Mortality at Four Per Cent. interest, and I find the net value thereof, on the said 31st day of December, 1900, to be Three Million, Two Hundred Thirty six Thousand, Five Hundred and Sixty Dollars, as follows:

Net value of Policies, Additions, Annuities		$3,241,109
Less net value of Policies reinsured		4,549
		$3,236,560

SEAL.

In Witness Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, and caused my official seal to be affixed at the City of Albany, the day and year first above written.

FRANCIS HENDRICKS, Superintendent of Insurance.

LIVE MAN TAKEN TO MORGUE.

Negro Who Shot His Wife and Himself Found to be Living After Being Pronounced Dead at Hospital.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 20.—There was considerable comment here to-day over the discovery that Charles Crawford, the negro who shot his wife, Sarah, and then himself at his brother's home, at 232 Central Avenue, last night, and was pronounced dead and was taken to Mullin's morgue, was there found by Joseph Murphy, an assistant, to be alive.

Crawford after the shooting was placed in the police ambulance and taken to St. Michael's Hospital. The policeman in charge of the ambulance told a sister of the hospital that he believed Crawford was dead. Sister Soherta went out to the ambulance and made a hasty examination. She found no signs of life, and also expressed the opinion that the man was dead. Crawford was then driven to Mullin's morgue. A truck on which bodies are removed from the wagon to the morgue was rolled out to the curb and the supposed corpse placed on it. Assistant Murphy saw at a glance that Crawford was not dead; in fact, he says the man spoke as he was placed on the truck. The negro was put back in the ambulance, which returned to the hospital, and he was still alive to-night.

The morgue in which Crawford would have been placed had not Murphy noticed that he was still alive is in the rear of 105 Washington Street. It is a one-story building standing alone, and is without heat. Had Crawford been rolled into it he would undoubtedly have frozen to death during the night.

There are no surgeons on the police ambulances, and there is no doctor on duty at the hospital at night, and when one is needed he is summoned from his home.

KILLED WHILE PLAYING HOCKEY

James Kent Falls on the Ice and Fractures His Skull.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Jan. 20.—James Kent, one of the wealthiest residents of Dutchess County, met his death this afternoon as a result of playing hockey on the ice. Kent resides on a magnificent estate overlooking the Hudson at Fishkill-on-Hudson. This afternoon he and a party of friends took their skates and went for a game of hockey, the first of the season. There were several in the party, but only Kent, his daughter, Helen, Mrs. William Stewart of New York, a sister-in-law, and G. Hunter Brown, Vice President and Manager of the Newburg, Dutchess and Connecticut Railroad, participated in the play.

After skating for a time the game of hockey was begun. Kent seemed to be unusually interested in the game, and made a number of excellent plays. Finally, while making a rush for the ball he slipped. In an endeavor to regain his balance, he fell backward, striking his head with great force upon the ice. When his friends reached him he was unconscious.

Mr. Kent was taken home at once and messengers were dispatched for physicians. Dr. Moith of Fishkill-on-Hudson responded promptly, but an examination showed that Mr. Kent had sustained a severe fracture of the skull. He died within an hour without having regained consciousness.

Mr. Kent was a member of one of the oldest and best known families of New York. His grandfather was Chancelor Kent. His brother, William Kent, married one of the Lorillards and resides at Tuxedo. He leaves a widow, formerly Miss Stewart of New York, and two children.

LOW VITALITY,

weakness, and a lingering cough, which nearly always results from the Grippe, is helped by SCOTT'S EMULSION of Cod Liver Oil. It is the natural remedy for those conditions. It will heal the inflammation of the bronchial tubes, give strength and vitality to the sufferers, and restore them to their usual health.

CHARGE AGAINST A POLICEMAN.

George Musson Says that a Brooklyn Officer Insulted His Wife on a Car.

George Musson, the cashier in William Berri's Sons' carpet warehouse, on Fulton Street, Brooklyn, who lives at 114 South Elliot Place, Brooklyn, is at present looking for a witness upon whom he can call in bringing charges against Patrolman John Berry of the Classon Avenue Police Station, who he says insulted his wife last Thursday.

Yesterday the following advertisement appeared:

Will the passenger on a Greene Avenue car who saw a police officer take a fur collarette from a lady last Thursday afternoon kindly communicate with George T. Musson, 114 South Elliot Place, Brooklyn.

Mr. Musson was questioned yesterday about his advertisement, and said that he intended to bring charges against a police officer.

"Last Thursday," he said, "my wife noticed a fur collarette lying in the gutter when she was waiting for a Greene Avenue car at St. James Place. She picked it up, and, after looking about in vain for an owner, boarded the car with it. When she had traveled two blocks Policeman Berry boarded the car and demanded it from her. When she asked him what right he had to it he threatened to arrest her. Rather than make a scene in the car she turned it over to him. He insulted my wife, and I intend to bring charges against him. I have already complained to Capt. Eason of the Classon Avenue Police Station."

Patrolman Berry said that he had not insulted Mrs. Musson at all. He said that while on post a Miss Alice Cleveland, whose address he does not know, told him that she had lost a fur collarette which was worth $75. He started to look for it, and saw Mrs. Musson pick it up and board the car. He overtook the car after a chase of two blocks, he says, and asked Mrs. Musson for the collarette in a respectful way, and on receiving it returned it to its owner.

A NEW CUDAHY SUSPECT.

Omaha Police Are Looking for a Robber, a Friend of "Pat" Crowe.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, Jan. 20.—There is a new suspect in the Cudahy kidnapping case. This time it is Frank Sherckleff, alias Eddie Burke, the outlaw who robbed William F. Pollock on a train near Missouri Valley, Iowa, in 1892 of $15,000 worth of diamonds. Some time in November Sherckleff was paroled from the Iowa Penitentiary, to which he had been sentenced for seventeen years, and is said to have been in Omaha early in December. The police are looking for him.

Before Sherckleff's trial for the diamond robbery Pat Crowe went up to Logan, retained the attorneys, and then attended the trial every day, manifesting extraordinary interest in the case.

DR. JOYCE BURNED OUT.

His Cottage Destroyed by Fire While Family Was at Church.

The home of Dr. Richard Joyce, a surgeon in the Fire Department, at 1,892 Washington Avenue, was destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The damage is estimated at $5,000. All the members of the family save Richard Joyce, Jr., were at church at the time the fire started. It was probably caused by a defective flue.

Young Joyce was in his room. He got out and gave an alarm, but the fire was already well advanced before the firemen got their streams into play. The building was a two-story frame cottage, and, while the frame remains, the interior is practically wrecked.

NEGRO LAWYER SHOT.

Policemen Lawless and Evans of the West Thirtieth Street Station were passing Annie Lacey's negro saloon, at 283 Seventh Avenue, last night when they heard the sound of angry voices. A moment later they hesrd three shots fired, and negroes, men and women, came pouring out of the place like black ants from their nest.

The policemen ran in and lying on the floor with a bullet wound in his thigh they found George Nelson, twenty-three years old, a negro lawyer, of 269 West Thirty-sixth Street.

"Don't know who shot me, and Ah wouldn't tell if Ah did," said Nelson, who later said he had been in a political argument with a "colored gentleman" and a fight had followed.

Nelson was sent to the New York Hospital. Bartender Joseph McCosa was locked up for violating the excise law. He is a negro. Another negro, the waiter, Rolley Gibson, was held on suspicion of firing the shots. Ten others taken to the station house were released. Not one of them

FOUR GOLD MEDALS

Awarded at Paris Exposition for Milk, Cream and Butter produced at

The Briarcliff Farms.

Quality the best. Service excellent.

NEW YORK OFFICES:

53 Madison Ave., 26th St.
200 Amsterdam Ave., 74th St.
2061 Seventh Ave., 123d St.

METZGER'S TRAGIC SUICIDE.

Andrew Metzger, thirty-seven years old, a cabinetmaker, who lived at 1,122 Willoughby Avenue, Brooklyn, committed suicide yesterday in the presence of his wife and three children by swallowing carbolic acid.

The suicide had been out of employment for several weeks, and became despondent. He was in a particularly depressed frame of mind when he arose yesterday morning, and while his wife was preparing dinner he declared that he wished he was dead.

JAMES BUTLER CHOICE GROCERIES

NEW YORK:

Borough of Manhattan,

EAST SIDE.

217 First Ave., cor. 13th St.
340 First Ave., cor. 20th St.
506 Second Ave., bet. 28th & 29th Sts.
641 Second Ave., cor. 35th St.
857 Second Ave., cor. 46th St.
1042 Second Ave., cor. 55th St.
1143 Second Ave., cor. 60th St.
1462 Second Ave., cor. 76th St.
1670 Second Ave., cor. 87th St.
2047 Second Ave., cor. 105th St.
2241 Second Ave., cor. 115th St.
1696 Third Ave., near 95th St.
1828 Third Ave., cor. 101st St.
2005 Third Ave., cor. 110th St.
2223 Third Ave., cor. 121st St.

WEST SIDE.

2175 Fifth Ave., cor. 132d St.
2170 Eighth Ave., cor. 117th St.
2288 Eighth Ave., cor. 123d St.
2391 Eighth Ave., cor. 128th St.
2466 Eighth Ave., cor. 132d St.
2566 Eighth Ave., cor. 137th St.
2696 Eighth Ave., near 142d St.
353 Ninth Ave., cor. 30th St.
522 Ninth Ave., cor. 39th St.
702 Ninth Ave., cor. 48th St.
169 Tenth Ave., cor. 20th St.
451 Tenth Ave., cor. 35th St.
614 Tenth Ave., cor. 44th St.
669 Tenth Ave., cor. 47th St.
750 Tenth Ave., cor. 51st St.
851 Tenth Ave., cor. 56th St.
322 West 125th St., cor. St. Nicholas Ave.
26 Amsterdam Ave., near 60th St.
74 Amsterdam Ave., cor. 63d St.
109 Amsterdam Ave., near 65th St.
175 Amsterdam Ave., cor. 68th St.
520 Amsterdam Ave., cor. 85th St.
774 Amsterdam Ave., cor. 98th St.
867 Amsterdam Ave., near 102d St.
1610 Amsterdam Ave., cor. 141st St.
1795 Amsterdam Ave., cor. 149th St.
754 Columbus Ave., cor. 97th St.
506 Hudson St., near Christopher St.
286 Bleecker St., cor. Commerce St.

Borough of Bronx.

2756 Third Ave., cor. 146th St.
3367 Third Ave., near 166th St.
240 Willis Ave., cor. 139th St.
753 Tremont Ave., cor. Bathgate Ave.

QUALITY IN GROCERIES

is, of course, the first consideration—after that, price. Look sharp to the quality of every article of food which comes to your table, as that is a duty you owe yourself and every member of your family. What a happy combination is to be found in all of our 93 stores—Groceries of the highest quality, yet at prices lower than the lowest anywhere.

SPECIALS FOR MONDAY, TUESDAY, AND WEDNESDAY.

SPECIAL NO. 1.
One pound very best Tea, (all kinds,)
One pound very best Mocha and Java Coffee,
Five pounds Granulated Sugar,
One box Violette Toilet Soap,
ALL FOUR FOR $1.00

Pride of St. Louis Flour
Barrels, $4.40 24 1-2 lb. Bag, 55c. 7-lb. Bag, 18c.
Freight Added at Suburban Stores.

SPECIAL NO. 2.
One pound best Combination Coffee,
Half pound very best Tea,
Three and a half pounds Granulated Sugar.
ALL THREE FOR 50c

Salmon, Rainbow brand, fancy red Alaska, 1-lb. tall can 11c
Salmon, Sport brand, fancy sock eye, 1-lb tall can, 15c, ½-lb. flat cans 10c
Peaches, Grebbs Belle brand, Baltimore standards, a can 14c
Pears, Defense brand, Baltimore standards, a can 14c
Baked Beans, Booths, Oval or Housekeeper brand, 3-lb. can 8c
Corn or Succotash, Essie brand, finest of Maine packing, a can 10c
Tomatoes, Essie brand, choicest Jerseys, extra size cans, a can 10c
Plum Pudding, Greenabaum's brand, light and flaky, 1-lb can 8c
Clam Chowder, Burnham's famous brand, 1-lb. can 8c

Buckwheat, Peerless prepared 3-lb package 8c
Molasses, best New Orleans, quart bottle 10c
Maple Syrup, our best bottling, a pint 12c
Honey, very fine, our bottling, 1 lb 13c
Mustard, best English, ¼-lb can 6c
White Pepper, special ¼-lb can 6c
Extracts, best Peerless brand, lemon or vanilla, a bottle, 12c.; Eagle brand extract, a bottle 4c
Preserves, all fruits, Johnson's extra packing, 5-lb. crocks 43c
Blue Ribbon Baking Powder, 1-lb. can, 28c.; ½-lb. can, 15c.; ¼-lb. can 8c

Germea, the famous breakfast cereal, a package 12c
Coarse Barley, new goods, 1 lb 4c
Dried Lima Beans, best imported, a quart 9c
Macaroni or Spaghetti, Peerless brand, 1-lb. package 7c
English Spiced Pickles, Gherkins or Chow Chow, new style bottling 10c
Walnuts, best French, new goods, special, 1-lb 11c
Dates, finest quality, new goods, in 1-lb. packages 6c
Ivory Starch, a laundry luxury, regular 5c. packages, for 3c
Mince Meat, home-made style, 3-lb. crock 23c

NEW YORK:

Borough of Brooklyn.

12 Bridge St., near Prospect St.
11 Smith St., cor. Pacific St.
24 Smith St., cor. Douglass St.
30 Columbia St., cor. Woodhull.
38 Van Brunt St., cor. Walcott.
51 Court St., cor. 9th St.
118 Third Ave., cor. 49th St.
131 Third Ave., cor. 56th St.
9 Atlantic Ave., near Hicks St.
7 Fifth Ave., cor. Prospect Place.
18 Fifth Ave., cor. Berkeley Place.
42 Fifth Ave., cor. 8th St.
56 Fifth Ave., cor. Prospect Ave.
68 Fifth Ave., cor. 21st St.
17 Myrtle Ave., cor. Prince St.
22 Myrtle Ave., cor. Division St.
46 Myrtle Ave., cor. Washington.
60 Myrtle Ave., cor. Spencer St.
84 Fulton St., cor. Vanderbilt Ave.
110 Fulton St., cor. Ormond Place.
26 Atlantic Ave., cor. Pennsylvania Ave.
2 Grand St., cor. Roebling St.
7 Manhattan Ave., near Meserole St.
9 Manhattan Ave., cor. Huron St.

Borough of Queens.

1 Main St., cor. Willow St., Astoria.
1 Vernon Ave., cor. 5th St., Long Island City.
1 Main St., Flushing.

Borough of Richmond.

1 Castleton Ave., cor. Elizabeth St., West New Brighton.

Jersey City.

1 2 Newark Ave., near Grove St.
2 2 Newark Ave., near Coles St.
6 5 Newark Ave., near Five Corners.
1 2 Pavonia Ave., cor. Grove St.
3 3 Jackson Ave., cor. Forrest St.
3 5 Central Ave., cor. Griffith St.
1 3 Ocean Ave., cor. Pearsall Ave., Greenville.

Hoboken and Union Hill.

10 7 Bergenline Ave., Union Hill.
1 7 Washington St., bet. First and Second Sts., Hoboken.

Suburban.

Freight Added.

Avenue D, cor. Andrew St., Bayonne, N. J.
2 First St., bet. Fulton and Franklin, Elizabethport, N. J.
2 Main St., cor. Smith St., Paterson, N. J.
Main St., Yonkers, N. Y.
1 7 South Fourth Ave., Mount Vernon, N. Y.
58 Orchard St., Tarrytown, N. Y.
2 Main St., New Rochelle, N. Y.
1 Railroad Ave., cor. Lexington Ave., White Plains, N. Y.

REPORT ON FAILURE OF W. L. STRONG & CO.

Creditors Advised to Accept Forty Per Cent. of Claims.

STATEMENT OF THE LIABILITIES

Strong and the Stotts Owe $1,600,000, and Have Available Assets Worth Approximately $800,000.

The joint report on the failure of William L. Strong & Co. and of C. H. & F. H. Stott of Stottville, N. Y., was made public yesterday by Edward A. Treat, receiver for the ex-Mayor's firm, and Smith Thompson, receiver of C. H. & F. H. Stott. Accompanying this are detailed statements of assets and liabilities of both concerns, and a circular issued by the Advisory Committee, comprising Cornelius N. Bliss, A. D. Juilliard, and John Claflin, addressed to the creditors of both firms, recommending them to accept an offer of 40 cents on the dollar as the best practicable arrangement for settlement.

The joint statement of the receivers addressed to the Advisory Committee is dated Jan. 15, and is the result of continuous work for about two months and a half.

Ex-Mayor Strong died suddenly on Nov. 2, 1900, and his death was followed by that of F. H. Stott two days later. At the time of Mr. Strong's death no suspicion prevailed that the firm of which he was the head was in anything but a prosperous condition, and the announcement that a receivership had been applied for created considerable surprise in this city, except in inner financial circles, where it had been known for some time that the affairs of Strong & Co. were in somewhat of a shaky condition.

APPLICATION FOR A RECEIVER.

Application for the receivership was made to Justice Andrews of the Supreme Court on Nov. 13 by Putnam Bradlee Strong, the ex-Mayor's son, and Albert R. Shattuck, his son-in-law, who with Mrs. Strong were named as executors of the estate. Edward A. Treat of Treat & Converse was appointed receiver.

From the papers filed in court there was no indication that the application was on account of the firm's embarrassment, and it was not until several days after that Receiver Treat would consent to the use of the word "failure" in discussing the firm's affairs. It soon became apparent, however, that Strong & Co. were seriously involved.

Mr. Stott's death at Stottville precipitated the crisis. Both he and Mr. Strong had been heavily interested in the Stott Woolen Mills, and there had been a mutual interchange of notes involving both concerns to a large amount. Several of the wholesale dry goods men in and around Worth Street, principally the members of the committee and Mr. Treat, when they began to realize the condition of Mr. Strong's firm, made efforts to save it, but soon saw that the task was too large for them.

STATEMENT OF THE RECIEVERS.

In the statements signed by the receivers jointly and addressed to the Advisory Committee, no schedule of creditors is filed. The statement is as follows:

The statements herewith submitted to you show approximate unsecured indebtedness of the firms of W. L. Strong & Co. and C. H. & F. H. Stott of $1,600,000, and available assets worth approximately $800,000. This includes the indebtedness of each firm, and also that for which both firms are liable. The estimated assets include an item of $305,386.94, claimed by each receiver to belong to the estate in his charge, and also an item of $100,000, the amount which it is estimated can be realized upon the Stott Mills, at Stottville, N. Y. No allowance has been made in these statements for losses incident to delay or expenses of administration. The assets of W. L. Strong & Co. consist mainly of accounts receivable, and the assets of C. H. & F. H. Stott consist mainly of goods unsold and goods in process of manufacture at Stottville, N. Y., together with accounts receivable. We believe that these assets in the usual course of trade could not be made available as a basis of the cash offer hereinafter proposed in less than six months.

The plant at Stottville consists of four mills, and is so arranged that the finishing work for the entire plant is done in a single mill. The receivers are advised that these mills are not partnership property, although, of course, liable for partnership debts after payment of individual indebtedness of the owners. Two of them were owned by Mrs. Catharine A. Stott, and the other two (one of which is the finishing mill) were owned by F. H. Stott, and both of them were partners in the firm of C. H. & F. H. Stott.

Both Mrs. Catharine A. Stott and F. H. Stott have died within the past few weeks, and since the death of W. L. Strong. We are informed that Mrs. Stott left fourteen descendants interested in her real estate, and that some of them are minors. We are advised that this real estate is, of course, subject to any personal indebtedness of partners. We know of no personal indebtedness of Mrs. Stott. We are informed that F. H. Stott's personal indebtedness is more than $78,000, and that he left no estate other than the mills and his residence and ten shares of stock of the Farmers' National Bank of Hudson of the par value of $1,000, and worth, as we are informed, in the market, approximately $1,200. There may also be other personal debts of which we are not now informed. Substantially the whole amount of this personal indebtedness, aggregating more than $78,000, must be made out of this real estate, consisting of the mills and Mr. Stott's residence, before that property can be available for the payment of any partnership indebtedness of C. H. & F. H. Stott; and this involves proceedings for the settlement of the estates of these two decendents in the Surrogate's Court of Columbia County, and many months of delay.

We are informed that an arrangement can be effected by which the sum of $100,000 can be raised on this property within a comparatively short time and made available toward the proposed settlement. We understand that this is the largest sum that can be raised, and, in view of the facts which we have stated, we believe that it is more than can be realized by the creditors in any other way.

Considering the possibility of realizing more than $100,000 above all claims against the mill property, it must be borne in mind that these mills made net losses aggregating more than $850,000 in the years of depression following 1892. These losses fully account for the present deficiency in quick assets. This record of disaster and the necessity of spending further money now to bring the mills to the necessary standard of efficiency seem to us to justify our present low estimate of the available value of the mill property.

The relations between the receivers have heretofore been harmonious and we are confident that it is for the interest of all concerned that such relations should continue. In case either of us, as receiver, should be compelled to enforce a separate settlement of the estate in his charge, these relations would necessarily be disturbed, and our respective rights in the $305,386.94 hereinbefore referred to would necessarily be the subject of litigation, for neither of us would be justified in assuming the responsibility of a settlement of this question, involving so large a sum, without an adjudication of the court. Such a litigation would be expensive and would take considerable time. On a joint settlement of the two estates this question of ownership becomes practically immaterial.

The earlier a settlement can be made, unquestionably the better it will be for all interests. To force the last cent out of the assets would take the greater part of the year at least, and we believe from the information which has been furnished to us that, by sacrificing something from the value of the assets as shown by the statements, enough can be realized to enable us on joint settlement to pay 40 per cent. in cash by March 15, 1901, and the expenses of the receivership. We do not believe that more than this could be paid under any circumstances.

It is eminently desirable that the date of payment should not be fixed later than March 15th, for the reason that the stock now in the hands of the undersigned receiver of C. H. & F. H. Stott will enable him to run the mills until about that date. If the settlement cannot be completed by that date, it would become necessary to shut down the mills.

We therefore recommend for your consideration the expediency of effecting a joint settlement by the payment of 40 cents on the dollar in cash upon all claims against either firm by March 15, 1901.

Subjoined are the schedules of the two firms:

Statement of W. L. Strong & Co.

LIABILITIES.

Unsecured creditors, including open accounts for sales of goods and general indebtedness	$421,307.50
Secured creditors, being amounts due for goods sold on commission and collections made which the consignees of the goods are able to trace and identify, and which under the decision of the courts they are entitled to collect	359,561.82
Rents, wages, &c.	540.49
Total	$781,415.61

ASSETS.

Total book accounts appearing on customers' ledger	$680,357.04
Cash in special deposit at the date of appointment of receiver	78,752.60
Various claims represented by note, interest in the Norway Plains and Otrobando Mills, (estimated)	10,000.00
Insurance upon life of a debtor of the firm, (estimated)	12,000.00
Total	$781,110.54
Secured creditors as above	$359,561.62
Bad debts and returned goods on book accounts, (estimated)	20,000.00
Total	379,561.62
Balance to pay claims	$401,548.92

There are also $1,000,000 of notes made by C. H. & F. H. Stott and indorsed by W. L. Strong & Co.

EDWARD A. TREAT,
Receiver of W. L. Strong & Co.

C. H. & F. H. Stott.

Hudson, N. Y., Jan. 14, 1901.

Messrs. Cornelius N. Bliss, A. D. Juilliard, and John Claflin:

Gentlemen: For the purpose of enabling you to advise the receiver and the creditors of the two firms of W. L. Strong & Co. and C. H. & F. H. Stott to adopt such a course of action as shall seem to you best calculated to conserve the interests of all concerned, I beg leave to hand you the annexed summary of the affairs of the firm of C. H. & F. H. Stott, showing their available assets. You will observe that I have stated the following item at the foot of the credits, viz.:

"Amount available from mills, $100,000."

I include this item because the owners of the mills, which were not firm property and never came into my hands as receiver, have informed me that they propose to raise the sum of $100,000 upon them for the purpose of enabling me to unite with the receiver of W. L. Strong & Co. in a joint offer to pay the creditors of both firms 40 per centum upon the joint indebtedness.

SMITH THOMPSON,
Receiver of C. H. & F. H. Stott.

LIABILITIES.

Notes in New York, indorsed by W. L. Strong & Co.	$1,000,000.00
Notes in Hudson banks	35,000.00
Due W. L. Strong & Co.	372,167.10
Merchandise debts	73,212.17
	$1,540,379.27

ASSETS.

Cash First National Bank	$168.86
Cash in safe	63.68
Goods in New York	126,047.14
Inventory at mill, (available)	153,590.00
Miscellaneous accounts receivable, (good)	1,888.28
Amount available from mills, as per letter	100,000.00
	$381,757.96

An item of $305,356.94 in the hands of the receiver of W. L. Strong & Co. is claimed by me as receiver of C. H. & F. H. Stott. It is also claimed by the receiver of W. L. Strong & Co. Reference will be made to it in a joint letter by the receivers to the Advisory Committee.

SCHEDULE B.

Liability note of F. L. Stott, indorsed by C. H. & F. H. Stott	$8,000.00
Note of C. H. & F. H. Stott	9,500.00
Note of C. H. & F. H. Stott	8,000.00
Paid	3,200.00
	5,800.00
		$23,300.00
Assets. Wool to secure above notes		$21,300.00

This wool was paid for by the proceeds of these notes and the payment made was on account of wool withdrawn.

CIRCULAR TO THE CREDITORS.

The circular addressed to the creditors of W. L. Strong & Co. and C. H. & F. H. Stott, and signed by the Advisory Committee, is as follows:

We have carefully considered the accompanying statements and letter of the receivers, and, after an investigation into the affairs of the firms, we advise the creditors to accept the offer of 40 cents referred to in the joint letter of the receivers.

The loss of $850,000 stated to have been made by the mills since the panic of 1893 and the losses of the present season fully account for the existing deficiency in active assets as compared with liabilities. It is evident that if this amount of $850,000 could now be added to the active assets, the combined firms could pay their combined indebtedness and have the mills practically free from debt.

The Audit Company of New York has examined the books of both firms, and reports no irregularities or discrepancies. The losses aforesaid seem to have been made in the regular course of business, and appear to have been due partly to the bad times and partly to the failure of the mills to produce goods that could profitably compete with other goods made by better machinery and under more favorable conditions.

This record of disaster during the years of depression not only explains the deficiency in assets, but it also justifies the extremely low estimate which the receivers of C. H. & F. H. Stott makes of the available net value of the mill properties. The mills being divided, and one portion of them being subject to individual claims against the estate of F. H. Stott, while the other portions seem to need additions of machinery to enable them to turn out first-rate merchandise, it is doubtful whether any one other than the friends of the Stotts can be found who will take the mill properties at any but a nominal price. It is a great sacrifice to give up property which cost more than $1,000,000, and is subject to claims of perhaps $80,000, for $100,000 above such claims, but a mill is almost valueless if not running, and we do not know any one but the friends of the Stotts willing to undertake to continue manufacturing at Stottville.

The assets of W. L. Strong & Co. and C. H. & F. H. Stott would, in our judgment, pay nearly 50 cents on the dollar to all the unsecured creditors, if sufficient time for leisurely realization on the assets could safely be taken. There are, however, many creditors who insist on a prompt settlement. The necessity of making a compromise in which all shall join is imperative. If litigation should be begun, it would probably be necessary for the receivers to make conflicting claims on the assets, which claims would have to be adjudicated by the highest courts. This would surely result at the end of long litigation in a greatly reduced dividend to all the creditors.

We are, therefore, constrained to recommend to the creditors of both firms the acceptance of the offer of 40 per cent. cash as the best arrangement practicable under the unfortunate conditions existing. This offer will be available when all creditors shall have assented. If all creditors do not assent it is difficult to see how litigation and a waste of assets can be avoided.

WEST POINT HAZING REPORT.

Congress Committee, It Is Said, Found that Cadets' Deaths Were Not Caused by Ill-Treatment.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Jan. 20.—The Congressional committee left here to-day for Washington after having concluded the mission of investigating hazing at the United States Military Academy. It will hold the next meeting in the room of the Committee on Inter-State and Foreign Commerce at Washington, D. C., at 10 o'clock on Tuesday morning.

The members of the committee expect to make their report in about ten days, and it is said on good authority that they will recommend that the number of tactical officers at the West Point academy be increased. It is also reported that they will say that the deaths of former Cadets Booz and Breth were not caused by the hazing they received at West Point.

In the case of Booz, it is said, the testimony showed that he was not very strong at any time, and some of the members of the committee believe that his health had been injured by his treatment at the hands of his fellow-cadets in the academy. At the same time it is claimed that the committee has failed to discover any connection between the swallowing of tabasco sauce and the subsequent death of Booz from tuberculosis.

EGAN LEASES COAL LANDS.

Retired Army Officer Gets Over 100,000 Acres in Mexico.

Special to The New York Times.

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 20.—A dispatch from Hermosillo, State of Sonora, Mexico, says:

"Negotiations have just been closed for the lease of over 100,000 acres of the coal lands in this State to Gen. Egan, the retired United States Army officer, who is now living in California. He will develop the coal field extensively. It adjoins the coal properties owned by the Southern Pacific Company."

TRACTION COMPANY ENJOINED.

Passengers for Hackensack Forced to Walk Two Miles.

HASBROUCK HEIGHTS, N. J., Jan. 20.—The Newark and Hackensack Traction Company has been endeavoring for two years past to get a right of way into Hackensack. On Dec. 3 it succeeded in running its first car up to the village limit of the county seat. It was necessary, however, for passengers to get off twice and cross farms owned by parties opposed to the trolley company.

The company strung wires on high poles across these farms, and thus secured power to run the cars on the other side of the farm. On Friday the Chancellor granted a permanent injunction restraining the company from carrying its feed wire over the farms. In consequence, the company had to shut down operations north of Hasbrouck Heights. Since Friday evening passengers for Hackensack have been forced to walk two miles or take the railroad.

Mission Open to the Public.

The Galilee Mission, Free Reading Room, and Boys' Club of Calvary Parish, as well as the Galilee Restaurant and Olive Tree Inn at 338 to 346 East Twenty-third Street, will be open to the public this afternoon from 3 until 6 o'clock. No cards of admission are required.

FIERCE DUEL WITH KNIFE AND NIGHTSTICKS

Big Policeman Breaks Two Clubs on Equally Big Negro's Head.

Coat Button Saves Officer's Life, but His Uniform Is Cut to Ribbons—Man and Woman Stabbed.

Policeman John Tomany of the Adams Street Station, Brooklyn, felt yesterday that a bone button on his peajacket had saved his life in a fierce battle he had at midnight Saturday with a big negro, armed with a knife, in the rear room of a saloon at Johnson and Prince Streets. The button, which was just over Tomany's heart, met the sharp point of the knife, deflecting the blade and breaking the force of the blow. The policeman received but a slight wound in the breast. Two persons, a man and a woman, were seriously, one perhaps fatally, wounded in the fight, and the negro's head was badly battered by two clubs which were broken over his skull by the policeman.

The battle, which was principally between Tomany and the negro, was a struggle of giants, both men being over six feet in height and built in proportion. The rear room of Edward Wittiman's saloon, where the battle occurred, resembled a shambles when it was all over.

It appears that the fight resulted from a dispute in the saloon over money between Robert Beverly, a negro, forty years old, of 40 Prince Street, and Mary Finnerty, a white woman, thirty-four years old, of 115 Vanderbilt Avenue. The negro declared that the woman had taken a dollar from him, and there were hot words between them. Finally, it is alleged, Beverly attacked the woman. Several white men in the place went to the woman's assistance and a terrific fight followed. The negro drew a big clasp knife, and backing up against the wall struck out right and left with the weapon. The Finnerty woman was cut four times in the side and fell to the floor shrieking. John Mahoney, thirty-three years old, of Twentieth Street, Windsor Terrace, in seeking to save the woman, received an awful wound in the abdomen, and the others fell back in fear of the negro's knife. Some one ran out and called in Policeman Tomany.

When the policeman entered the room he found Mahoney and the woman lying, bleeding and groaning, on the floor, and the negro swinging his knife about wildly. Tomany rushed at him, and caught a terrific lunge with the knife in the left breast. The blade ripped through his uniform coat, but the point struck a bone button on the policeman's peajacket underneath, and, as stated, was deflected. Tomany receiving only a slight cut on the breast. That was the beginning of the struggle between the giants.

